PREFACE

THIS translation of the Brāhmanas of the Rigveda was prepared in the winter of 1914-15, and in the following autumn Professor C. R. Lanman added to the many obligations which I owe to him by undertaking to find a place for it in the Harvard Oriental Series. Interruption of correspondence, due to submarine activity, delayed arrangements for printing, but substantial progress was made in 1917. Thereafter, however, the increasing pressure of war conditions rendered work difficult, and when, on the conclusion of the armistice, an active resumption of printing took place, my absence in London, while serving on Lord Crewe's Committee on the Home Administration of Indian Affairs, postponed for a considerable period the correction of the proofs.

The plan followed in this work is that adopted in the case of the translation of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, vols. xviii and xix in this series, and it gives me sincere pleasure to express once more my indebtedness to the works of Professors A. A. Macdonell; T. Aufrecht and J. Eggeling, my predecessors at Edinburgh; W. Caland, V. Henry, A. Hillebrandt, H. Oldenberg, W. D. Whitney, and, last but not least, C. R. Lanman. Dr. F. W. Thomas, as ever, facilitated the use of the resources of the Library of the India Office, including the MS. of Vināyaka's commentary on the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, from which are derived the renderings ascribed in my translation to the commentary. My wife shared with me the task of correcting the proofs and preparing the indexes. To Mr. Frederick Hall and his staff my best thanks are due for the care which they have taken in the production of the work.

ADDITIONS

Introduction. P. 42. S. K. Belyalkar (Systems of Sanskrit Grammar, pp. 15-19) defends the view which places Pāṇini in the seventh century B.C., but without adding any argument of weight. K. P. Jayaswal (Ind. Ant. xlvii. 138) holds that Kātyāyana's date may be ascribed to 248-200 B.C., on the ground of his Vārttika on ii. 1. 60 (çākarpārthivāḥśinām upasamkhyānam), and argues that, as Pāṇini holds (vi. 3. 21) that the genitive case-ending is retained in compounds in a disparaging sense, he cannot have known the imperial title devanāmpriya, which Aśoka attributes to his predecessors. The cogency of the argument is imperfect, since there is no real proof that the title was actually used before Aśoka's time as an imperial title. On the other hand, S. Lévi's effort (Journal Asiatique, sér. 8, xv. 234-240) to bring down Pāṇini's date to c. 300 B.C. on the strength of his mention of Sāṃkala, Bhagāla, and Takṣaṣāla, and of the occurrence of Āmbhi in the Garapāṭha equally lacks cogency.

P. 45. P. D. Gune (Bhandarkar Commemoration Volume, pp. 46, 50, 51) inclines to favour the view of the priority of the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa to Yaska, but adduces no new evidence of weight, the similarity of Nirukta iv. 27 to Gopatha v. 5 being one of substance alone.

P. 46. The publication by W. Caland of Das Jaiminīya-Brāhmaṇa in Auswahl (Amsterdam, November 1919), renders available proof of the posteriority of the Jaiminīya to both the Aitareya and Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇas. Thus the account of the Gavām Ayana (ii. 374) is plainly later than AB. iv. 17, and that of the consecration of Keçin (ii. 53, 54) than KB. vii. 4. Many proper names in the Jaiminīya have parallels in the other two texts, the former presenting some of these names in inferior forms; of special interest are Vasiṣṭha Sātyahavya, Aikādaçākṣi, Rjicvan Vātavāta, Nagarin Jānaçruteya, Saujāta Ārāti, Vṛṣaçuṣma Ārjicvana, Somaçuṣma Sātyayajñi, Hiranyadant Veda, Buḍila Āçvatarāçvi, Kratujiṭ Jānaki, and the Abhipratāraṇas. The comparative epoch of the Jaiminīya is suggested by such names as Yājñavalkya, Janaka Vaideha, Çvetaketu Āruṇeya, Kahola Kauṣitakeya, Kṣatra Prātardana the confusion of Keçin Dārbyha and Keçin Sātyakāmi, &c.

Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. iii. 43. That the verse was early unintelligible is shown by JB. i. 258, where a quite irrelevant story of one Çakala Gaupāyana is told in order to illustrate it.

iv. 17. In the parallel in JB. ii. 374: tāsāṁ dvādaçe māsi çrṅgāṇi prāvartanta Caland renders 'Deren Hörner begannen (erst) im zwölften Monate hervorzukommen', but this sense of prāvartanta is in itself unlikely, and, what is more important, is not consistent with the following phrase: tasmāt sattriṇo dvādaçe māsy api çikḥāḥ pravapante, where the parallelism of pra- proves that the Brāhmaṇa understood prāvartanta as 'fell off'; the horns existed as the result of the first ten months, but were lost through the next two, just as the çikḥāḥ are removed. But that this was the original sense is most implausible.

vi. 1. Caland (ZDMG. lxxii. 23) suggests evopodāsarpan, a correction already made by O. Böhtlingk (*Chrestomathie*², p. 21) to eliminate ha sma with the imperfect; at its second occurrence he omits sma rather than adopt Delbrück's suggestion (Böhtlingk, p. 350) sa ha sma yenopodāsarpati. But these conjectures do too much violence to the text, and it must be remembered that in vii. 16 is found ha sma . . . mumuce and at v. 30 ha sma . . . uvāca, which is not probably to be taken with Delbrück (Altind. Synt. p. 503) as equivalent to the normal ha smāha.

vi. 35. The conjectures of Weber as to the end of the Devanītha are borne out by JB. ii. 116, where the reading is ahā ned asann apurogavāṇi, yajñā ned asann avicetanāsaḥ.

vii. 18. The Udantyas here are clearly the same as the Udantas in JB. i. 197, as Caland (JB. p. 80) rightly suggests. His further suggestions (pp. 99, 104) that the Udantas include the Kurus and Pañcālas, or the Kurus only (JB. i. 256, 262) and are northerners generally is quite inconsistent with his first identification. Nor are the Kurus and Pañcālas northerners proper; cf. Vedic Index, i. 168.

Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa. vii. 4. There is a variant in JB. ii. 53, 54, where the text as it stands does not make sense. The same Brāhmaṇa (i. 285) converts Keçin Dārbhya from a king into a Purohita of Keçin Satyakāmi, which contradicts its own version elsewhere, and is doubtless a product of secondary tradition.

ADDITIONS

Introduction. P. 42. S. K. Belyalkar (Systems of Sanskrit Grammar, pp. 15-19) defends the view which places Pāṇini in the seventh century B.C., but without adding any argument of weight. K. P. Jayaswal (Ind. Ant. xlvii. 138) holds that Kātyāyana's date may be ascribed to 248-200 B.C., on the ground of his Vārttika on ii. 1. 60 (çākarpārthivādinām upasaṁkhyānam), and argues that, as Pāṇini holds (vi. 3. 21) that the genitive case-ending is retained in compounds in a disparaging sense, he cannot have known the imperial title devanāmpriya, which Aśoka attributes to his predecessors. The cogency of the argument is imperfect, since there is no real proof that the title was actually used before Aśoka's time as an imperial title. On the other hand, S. Lévi's effort (Journal Asiatique, sér. 8, xv. 234-240) to bring down Pāṇini's date to c. 300 B.C. on the strength of his mention of Sāṁkala, Bhagāla, and Takṣaṣilā, and of the occurrence of Āmbhi in the Gaṇapāṭha equally lacks cogency.

P. 45. P. D. Gune (Bhandarkar Commemoration Volume, pp. 46, 50, 51) inclines to favour the view of the priority of the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa to Yaska, but adduces no new evidence of weight, the similarity of Nirukta iv. 27 to Gopatha v. 5 being one of substance alone.

P. 46. The publication by W. Caland of Das Jaiminīya-Brāhmaṇa in Auswahl (Amsterdam, November 1919), renders available proof of the posteriority of the Jaiminīya to both the Aitareya and Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇas. Thus the account of the Gavām Ayana (ii. 374) is plainly later than AB. iv. 17, and that of the consecration of Keçin (ii. 53, 54) than KB. vii. 4. Many proper names in the Jaiminīya have parallels in the other two texts, the former presenting some of these names in inferior forms; of special interest are Vāsistha Sātyahavya, Aikādaçākṣi, Rjicvan Vātavāta, Nagarin Jānaçruteya, Saujāta Ārāti, Vṛṣaçuṣma Ārjicvana, Somaçuṣma Sātyayajñi, Hiranyadant Veda, Buḍila Āçvatarāçvi, Kratujiṭ Jānaki, and the Abhipratāraṇas. The comparative epoch of the Jaiminīya is suggested by such names as Yājñavalkya, Janaka Vaideha, Çvetaketu Āruṇeya, Kahola Kauṣitakeya, Kṣatra Prātardana the confusion of Keçin Dārbyha and Keçin Sātyakāmi, &c.

Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. iii. 43. That the verse was early unintelligible is shown by JB. i. 258, where a quite irrelevant story of one Çakala Gaupāyana is told in order to illustrate it.

iv. 17. In the parallel in JB. ii. 374: tāsām dvādaçe māsi çrṅgāṇi prāvartanta Caland renders 'Deren Hörner begannen (erst) im zwölften Monate hervorzukommen', but this sense of prāvartanta is in itself unlikely, and, what is more important, is not consistent with the following phrase: tasmāt sattriṇo dvādaçe māsy api çikḥāḥ pravapante, where the parallelism of pra- proves that the Brāhmaṇa understood prāvartanta as 'fell off'; the horns existed as the result of the first ten months, but were lost through the next two, just as the çikḥāḥ are removed. But that this was the original sense is most implausible.

vi. 1. Caland (ZDMG. lxxii. 23) suggests evopodāsarpan, a correction already made by O. Böhtlingk (*Chrestomathie*², p. 21) to eliminate ha sma with the imperfect; at its second occurrence he omits sma rather than adopt Delbrück's suggestion (Böhtlingk, p. 350) sa ha sma yenopodāsarpati. But these conjectures do too much violence to the text, and it must be remembered that in vii. 16 is found ha sma . . . mumuce and at v. 30 ha sma . . . uvāca, which is not probably to be taken with Delbrück (Altindl. Synt. p. 503) as equivalent to the normal ha smāha.

vi. 35. The conjectures of Weber as to the end of the Devanītha are borne out by JB. ii. 116, where the reading is ahā ned asann apurogavāṇi, yajñā ned asann avicetanāsaḥ.

vii. 18. The Udantyas here are clearly the same as the Udantas in JB. i. 197, as Caland (JB. p. 80) rightly suggests. His further suggestions (pp. 99, 104) that the Udantas include the Kurus and Pañcālas, or the Kurus only (JB. i. 256, 262) and are northerners generally is quite inconsistent with his first identification. Nor are the Kurus and Pañcālas northerners proper; cf. Vedic Index, i. 168.

Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa. vii. 4. There is a variant in JB. ii. 53, 54, where the text as it stands does not make sense. The same Brāhmaṇa (i. 285) converts Keçin Dārbhya from a king into a Purohita of Keçin Sātyakāmi, which contradicts its own version elsewhere, and is doubtless a product of secondary tradition.

x. 2 and xvii. 9. Caland (ZDMG. lxxii. 1, 2) suggests 'eindringen' for anvavapātoḥ, but this is not necessary; for yadi na cf. ÇĀ. i. 8.

xxi. 1. Caland (ZDMG. lxxii. 24) conjectures for nānvavāyanāya the more natural 'nanvavāyanāya.

xxiii. 2. Caland reads hatvāyantam, which is an improvement, though yantam is unobjectionable unless referred to Indra's attack on Vṛtra.

xxiii. 5. Caland accepts M's reading of Paruchepāt in the second clause, and restores it in the first; this makes the sentence so simple as to render the corruption unaccountable, and M, while often showing a good tradition, is also not without obvious efforts at correction. In this case the correction, unfortunately, ruins the meaning of the passage; the one-day form has 1 Parucchepa hymn.

xxv. 10. For saṁsthāpayiṣeyuh Caland suggests saṁtiṣṭhāpayiṣeyuh; ver possibly saṁsthāpayeyuh is correct.

xxv. 13. Caland suggests that for ned . . . antariyām should be read antarayāma, since there is a variant antaryāma, and the subjunctive required. But the injunctive would be correct (Delbrück. Altind. Syn p. 360), and the conjecture is therefore needless. The plural, however, a difficulty, though not impossible; antarayam, injunctive of the verb found i xii. 4 and xxiii. 4, may be read, and would explain the divergent reading since it would be a rare and easily misunderstood form. If iyam is correct then the passage is comparable with AB. viii. 23.

xxvi. 4. Caland deduces from xvi. 9 and xxv. 14 the suggestion hiyate i lieu of dhīyate, but from PB. xvi. 1. 2: kartapatyam taj jīyate vā pra va mayā concludes that jīyate is original. But dhīyate can stand.

xxvi. 7. Caland's suggestion to omit smāha is open to the objection that its insertion is not easy to explain, and the text can be translated.

xxviii. 1. Caland reads etāvate, 'so wichtig sind'.

xxviii. 2. Caland suggests that apajajñire is a misprint for apajajñir. The Ānand. ed., however, has the same reading, but the sense must be as rendered below.

§ 2. THE RELATIONS OF THE TWO BRĀHMAṆAS.

It is certainly the case¹ that the two Brāhmaṇas represent for us the development of a single tradition, and that there must have been a time when there existed a single Baḥvca text.² The detailed account of the contents of the two Brāhmaṇas shows clearly how considerable is their difference. Not only does the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa contain much less material than the Āitareya, but it has a wider scope. It includes all the Çrauta sacrifices of the first rank, omitting the less normal offerings such as the Rājasūya and the Açvamedha. Thus the first four Adhyāyas cover fully enough for a Brāhmaṇa the Agnyādhāna, the Agnihotra, the new and full moon sacrifices, the special sacrifices, and the four-monthly sacrifices, and then follows a section on the function of the Brahman priest before the seventh Adhyāya carries us to the discussion of the Soma sacrifice which occupies the rest of the book. In the case of the Āitareya, on the other hand, the Soma sacrifice alone forms the real subject of the book, for the remarks on the Agnihotra, found in the Āitareya v. 26-34, are clearly a later addition to the main text, and the whole of Adhyāyas vii and viii, which carry us into the field of the Rājasūya under a special and peculiar aspect, are also certainly later than the first twenty-four Adhyāyas (i-v. 25).

In the parts which they have in parallel versions the normal rule is that the Kauṣītaki is at once far more closely and carefully arranged, and much less discursive than the Āitareya, which never shows any desire to cultivate brevity and is rather fond of excursions into legends. A striking instance of this tendency can be seen in the accounts of the function of the Grāvastut priest and the origin of his use of the Arbuda hymn as contained in the Āitareya (vi. 1) and the Kauṣītaki (xxx. 1). In the former case the story is told for its own sake as well as for its bearing on the ritual, in the latter as little as possible is made of the episode. Or again, in the account of the prattle of Āitaça the Āitareya (vi. 33) is far more detailed than the Kauṣītaki (xxx. 5), while the long account of the conflict of the Aṅgirasas and the Ādityas over the question of sacrificing first in the Āitareya (vi. 34 and 35) shrinks into an almost unintelligible version in the Kauṣītaki (xxx. 6). Or again, while the Āitareya (v. 14) has a long account of Nābhānediṣṭha Mānava and the mode in which after his unfair treatment by his brothers in the division of the joint property in the lifetime of their father, and the recovery of prosperity by his connexion with the Aṅgirasas, the Kauṣītaki (xxviii. 4) has a bare allusion to the fact of his application to the Aṅgirasas, showing that, while the story was well known, it was not desired to develop the idea in detail. Nor is the distinction less marked in the parts of the two texts which have no point of contact. Thus the elaborate tale of Rāma Mārgaveya and Janamejaya which is found in the Aitareya (vii. 27-34), the legend of Çunaḥçepa (vii. 13-18), the list of anointed kings (vii. 34), and the list of those who performed the great anointment of Indra (viii. 21-23) are in perfect keeping with the spirit of the older part of the text, but have nothing similar in the Kauṣītaki.

While again the Aitareya does contain a good deal of information in detail as to the Çastras of the priests, the main object of the text is not to enumerate, but to explain, as is the proper function of a Brāhmaṇa. On the other hand the Kauṣītaki is specially careful to enumerate and the explanation often dwindles indefinitely. Moreover, in its enumeration the Kauṣītaki is far more complete than the Aitareya and is more definitely systematic. The best instance of this perhaps is the detailed treatment of the Abhiplava Śaḍaha in Adhyāyas xx and xxi. But there are many other cases, such as the detailed treatment of the cups for Āditya and Savitr which prelude the Vaiçvadeva Çastra at the third pressing (xvi. 1-3), the Pātnīvata cup which follows it (xvi. 6), the concluding rite of the Soma sacrifice such as the Hāriyोजना (xviii. 6), the Çākalaś (xviii. 7), the concluding bath (xviii. 9), and the offering of a barren cow (xviii. 11-14). The Abhijit (xxiv. 1, 2), the Svarasāmāns (xxiv. 3-9), the Viçvajit (xxv. 11-15) are treated in far greater fullness than in the Aitareya, while the Vişuvant (xxv. 1-10) though not ignored by the Aitareya is yet comparatively briefly treated.

In its character as a systematic treatise the Kauṣītaki makes almost interminable use of the phrase tasyoktaṁ brāhmaṇam, by which it avoids the need of giving over again an explanation, while on the other hand it recites the texts and thus makes its exposition more satisfactory and complete. This phrase is foreign to all the older part of the Aitareya and is alien to its spirit, which takes no exception to repetition of explanation on the one hand, and on the other makes no attempt to mention all the texts for the Çastras, thus adhering to the true Brāhmaṇa as against the Sūtra style of composition.

The more catholic nature of the Aitareya is further indicated by its frank acceptance of the magic powers of the priest and his right to exercise them by way of punishment on his employer, the sacrificer, if he sees fit, as well as in procuring for him benefits. Thus in the description of the powers of the vaṣaṭ call (iii. 5-8), a passage which has no parallel in the Kauṣītaki as it is not in any way necessary for the exposition of the rite, we learn how the priest can injure the sacrificer by the mode in which he pronounces the call (iii. 7). Again the Hotṛ can ruin the sacrificer by misplacing the parts of the Praūga Ṣastra at the morning pressing (iii. 3), and can deprive a Kṣatriya of his lordly power by placing the hymn at the first or Ajya Ṣastra of the morning pressing within the Nivid instead of vice versa (ii. 33). Nor even in its most original portion (iii. 22) does the Aitareya refrain from giving an amusing spell for the defeat by a king of an enemy army by means of the employment of the natural shyness of a daughter-in-law before her husband's father, while the very last chapter of the work (viii. 28) uses as a spell for a king against his enemy an application of the mystic doctrines of the disappearance of fire, the sun, the moon, rain and lightning, and of their rebirth.

It is a matter of some interest to wonder whether this difference in the outlook of the two texts is merely due to the greater system of the Kauṣītaki in which the spells would be out of place and needless, or whether it reflects a moral difference of tone. For the latter theory may be set the fact that the Ṣāṅkhāyana Ġrauta Sūtra (xvii. 6. 2) expressly reprobates¹ as purāṇam utsannam na kāryam a certain fertility rite which the Aitareya Āraṇyaka mentions without hint of disapproval. Nor is there a priori the slightest ground to doubt the probability of moral differences in the attitude of the schools. It is notorious that Āpastamba in his Dharma Sūtra is strenuously puritanical in practically all the questions involved in marriage, such as adoption of sons, the levirate, and so forth.

Finally, as an outstanding point of distinction must be noted the fact that the Aitareya unlike the Kauṣītaki does not cite authorities. The name Aitareya never occurs in its whole text, whereas the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa constantly cites Kauṣītaki, and twice the Kauṣītaka, while though much less often it cites the views of the parallel school of Paīṅgya.² It is one of the many clear proofs of the unauthenticity of a brief chapter (vii. 11) of the Aitareya that it cites the authority of Paīṅgya and Kauṣītaki. It is impossible of course to decide the question whether these views were already expressed in formal text-books, whether committed to writing as suggested by Roth,³ or merely handed down by oral tradition as is more probable,⁴ or whether the views were merely current as views on the several points raised. But there is nothing inherently improbable that the text of the Brāhmaṇa represents a work based on existing Brāhmaṇas, and the constant citation of authorities rather suggests that this was the case.

On the other hand the resemblances of the two texts are in many respects fundamental. The Çastras differ according to the two schools repeatedly in minor and meaningless details, the one taking certain verses for a special portion, the other different verses. But the fact remains that the essential similarity of the Brāhmaṇas is so great that it cannot be doubted that they both represent the tradition of one school, but that the tradition has received different handling by the branches of that school. Nor can we derive the two versions directly from the one source, for the evidence of the Kauṣītaki shows clearly that it is only a branch of a school which divided into the Paiṅgya and the Kauṣītaka sub-schools, so that if a title of descent is to be drawn up we must place in it as a common ancestor of these two versions the tradition from which the two are offshoots. In the case of the Aitareya no such intermediate stage is capable of proof. The common source no doubt contained the same sort of material as is given in the extant texts, for it is significant that the legends shared by the two texts contain much similarity of wording. Thus in the Kauṣītaki (xxx. 5) in the tale of Aitaça we have yad vai me jālma mukhaṁ nāpy agrahīṣyaḥ çatāyusaṁ gāṁ akariṣyaṁ sahasrāyusaṁ puruṣam, while the Aitareya (vi. 33) has alaso 'bhūr yo me vācam avadhīḥ. çatāyusaṁ gāṁ akariṣyaṁ sahasrāyusaṁ puruṣam where the sense is precisely the same. The tale of Kavaṣa as given in the Kauṣītaki (xii. 3) and the Aitareya (ii. 19) illustrates very well both the degree of similarity due to the use of one source, and the different mode of developing the topic followed by the two schools.

Another important sign of the homogeneous character of the tradition of the school is the attitude of both texts to the gods. Beside the formal pantheon is found clear proof of the great importance of the figure of Rudra. In the Aitareya (iii. 33) we hear of the incest of Prajāpati and the determination of the gods to punish him, which led to the decision to create from their most dread forms the figure of Bhūtapati, who pierced Prajāpati and for his act received the name of Paçupati. To avoid mention of his name, Rudra, even a R̥gvedic verse (ii. 33. 1) must be altered, or if not altered omitted (iii. 34). A man in a black garment appears on the scene of sacrifice when Nābhānediṣṭha was given a share by the Aṅgirasas, and claims as his own all that is left on the place of sacrifice, a claim allowed to be valid by the father of Nābhānediṣṭha (v. 14). The Kauṣītaki contains a long section (vi. 1-9) where we find the distinctive names of Rudra as Bhava, Çarva, Paçupati, Ugra Deva, Mahān Deva, Rudra, Īçāna, and Açaṇi. There is therefore no doubt that Aufrecht¹ is right in his declaration that the period of the Brāhmaṇas was one when the old polytheism was in a condition of decline and the new faith which presents itself in Indian religious history as Ājīvism was gaining ground. It is impossible not to feel in both Brāhmaṇas, as also in the Ātapatha, that the figure of Rudra has a very different reality from that possessed by the more normal members of the pantheon, or by Prajāpati as creator, with whom as lord of creatures he successfully contends.

Moreover, on the whole, the order of exposition of the two texts agrees. There are a good many minor alterations, but the chief difference only arises in the treatment of the Sattras: the Āitareya proceeds from the Caturviṅṣa day to an account of the general composition of the Gavām Ayana Sattrā as consisting of sets of days and certain special days, the Abhijit, Svarasāmans, Viṣuvant, Svarasāmans, and Viṣvajit (iv. 15-22) and then takes up the Dvādaçāha as a general type of Sattras and as incidentally giving the details of the Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍahas of the Gavām Ayana. The Kauṣṭaki, on the other hand, while dealing with the Caturviṅṣa proceeds to the Ṣaḍahas and deals in detail with the Abhiplava (xx and xxi) to which the Āitareya devotes only a brief mention (iv. 15), and then with the Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha (xxii and xxiii) and only then does it turn to the special days which make up the Gavām Ayana, the Abhijit, Svarasāmans, Viṣuvant, Viṣvajit (xxiv and xxv), and the Chandomas are reserved for xxvi.

The comparative age of the two Brāhmaṇas is suggested by the facts above set out. The Kauṣṭaki is essentially the more scientific composition: its arrangement alone is a token of that, as the arrangement which it chooses is the logical one of setting out the various elements, single days, and sets of days of which the Dvādaçāha as the model of the Sattrā is composed, and of which the longer Sattras may be made up. The Āitareya, on the other hand, takes the opposite and more naïve course of dealing serially with the Gavām Ayana, and thus the Abhiplava Ṣaḍaha escapes full and due treatment. The condensation and completeness with which the Āstras are given and the dislike of diverging into legends for their own sake all tend to point to a more recent origin. Another consideration which points in the same direction is the fact of the citation of authorities as diverging, pointing clearly to a prolonged school tradition.

This general reasoning can be strengthened by other considerations. The position of Rudra in the Āitareya is one of high importance, but more significance attaches to the names given to the god in the Kauṣṭaki. There are two of these of special importance, Mahān Deva and Īçāna, which, as

Weber¹ long ago pointed out, involves quite a special prominence of the deity as compared with the other gods and indeed indicates a sectarian worship. The names occur in the Vājasaneyi Samhitā (xxxix. 8 and 9), but not in the Çatarudriya in Adhyāya xvi of that text, nor in the Taittirīya Samhitā (iv. 5. 1). It is true that Mahādeva occurs in the Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā but only in a passage² which von Schroeder³ long ago pointed out as spurious. The names further occur in the Atharvaveda (xv. 5) in the Vrātya hymn, but that also is late, so that it is clearly legitimate to treat their occurrence in the Kauṣītaki as a sign of later date than the Aitareya. Nor is there any ground on which we can assume that these names are an addition to the text of the Kauṣītaki, as Weber⁴ suggested. The view that there is no connexion between the passage and the following is an error, as the creative activity of Prajāpati and its results is the common bond of connexion, and therefore the passage is quite in place. Nor is it the case that Rudra is not elsewhere prominent in the text, as passages like iii. 4, 6; v. 7 clearly show his importance.

A further sign of the advanced religious view of the Kauṣītaki is seen in the occurrence in it, and not in the Aitareya, of the term punarmṛtyu,⁵ implying the conception of repeated deaths from which the idea of transmigration in due course comes to full development. The idea is another link between the Kauṣītaki and the Çatapatha Brāhmaṇa, which has, like the Kauṣītaki, the names of Rudra as Īçāna and Mahādeva.⁶ Possibly also as signs of later date are to be reckoned the indications noted above of the more puritanic character of the Kauṣītaki, and while both texts are very sparingly supplied with materials affecting normal life it may be significant that *rājamātra*⁷ is found in the Kauṣītaki, but not in the Aitareya. Importance also attaches to the occurrence in the Kauṣītaki of the personal Brahman,⁸ while the Aitareya has only the neuter.

In language the two texts stand broadly speaking on the same level. There are several matters in which the Aitareya has more variety of form than the Kauṣītaki; thus it has more varied uses of the infinitive in a greater variety of forms and so forth, but the different extent of the texts of the two works must duly be borne in mind; similarly the Aitareya has a fuller list of subjunctives, but that is natural in its greater use of narrative form. What is however significant is the use of the perfect and the imperfect in the narrative sense.⁹ The Kauṣītaki has according to the reckoning of Whitney 263 narrative imperfects to 149 perfects, or say 5:3: the Aitareya as a whole has 1080 to 266, or say 4:1, but these figures are misleading without qualification. In the original part of the Aitareya (i-v), roughly speaking, the proportions are 34:1 (viz. 929 to 27), and it is absolutely clear that the use of the perfect is normally in it motivated. It is therefore a reasonable conclusion that the Kaṣṭhikī is the younger in style as in content. It is significant in this connexion that all the older texts, such as the Brāhmaṇa portions of the Taittirīya Saṃhitā, the Maitirīyaṇī Saṃhitā, the Kāṭhaka Saṃhitā, and the Pañcarīṇa Brāhmaṇa have little evidence of the narrative use of the perfect,¹ while the Īṣaṃbra has in i-v, xi, xii, xiv a large use of perfects. What is also of interest is that the last three books of the Aitareya, which are no doubt later in origin, show a free use of perfects which in the narrative of Ṣaṃhita exceed by far the imperfects. It is also worthy of note that the last chapter of the fifth book of the Aitareya, which begins to show a marked use of the narrative perfect and which is probably a later addition to that book, contains in its account (v. 29) of the views of Vṛṣaṣṭma and the maiden seized by a Gandharva on the time of performance of the Agnihotra what is clearly a superior and more correct version than that of the Kaṣṭhikī (ii. 9).

§ 3. THE COMPOSITION OF THE AITAREYA BRĀHMAṆA.

The whole of the present text of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa is recognized by tradition as handed down to us by Sāyaṇa as the work of one man, to whom alone the tradition ascribes the composition of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka. This legendary author is Mahidāsa Aitareya, who like another seer recorded in both Brāhmaṇas, Kavaṣa Ailūṣa, is stated to have been disregarded, in this case by his father who preferred sons of other wives to the son given him by Itarā. The devotion of that lady to the goddess earth secured her son's elevation to due honour. The story is, of course, worthless, but the name of Mahidāsa Aitareya is preserved for us in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka (ii. 1. 7; 3. 8), the Chāndogya Upaniṣad (iii. 16. 7), and the Jaiminīya Upaniṣad Brāhmaṇa. There is no reason to doubt that to him may be ascribed the redaction of the present Brāhmaṇa, but there is no conclusive reason to make us accept the tradition to that effect; and it is open to the obvious objection that it cannot be treated as perfectly accurate, since the Āraṇyaka which cites him is a very composite work, and it is most improbable that the editor of it would cite himself as is done twice in the second book. Still it is not improbable that if the Brāhmaṇa were redacted by him, he would have ascribed to him the Āraṇyaka also.

What is really important is that, whoever the redactor was, the work is not of one hand or time. The contents and comparison with the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa show clearly that the Soma sacrifice is the real theme of the text, and anything that does not concern that sacrifice and has no parallel in the Kauṣītaki is certainly suspect. This at once leads us to regard as later such parts as Pañcikās vii and viii, which deal in the main with the anointing of the king at the royal consecration and the drink ascribed to him in place of the Soma, reserved for the priests. The chapters which deal with the rite commence with the legend of Çunaḥçepa (vii. 13-18), which is appropriate because it is recited to the king after his anointing, then it is elaborately proved (vii. 19-26) that the royal power is dependent on the priestly power and that the king must not drink the Soma, and finally (vii. 27-34) the proper drink for his use is explained by means of a legend emphasizing the dependence of kings on the priesthood. Then come, after a description of the Stotras and Çastras of the Soma day (viii. 1-4), a description of the anointing of the king (viii. 5-11), a description of the great anointing of Indra (viii. 12-14), and of its application to kings (viii. 15-23), ending with an exaltation of the office of Purohita (viii. 24-28). The whole passage is full of a spirit of Brahmanical self-assertion, which is at any rate not prominent in the rest of the Aitareya, and it is also marked by the important part played by Janamejaya, who is mentioned in vii. 27, 34; viii. 11, 21, and whose pre-eminence in the eyes of the composer is perfectly obvious. The account of the consecration, it should be noted, has really nothing parallel in the other texts dealing with the subject, but the ascription of the great consecration of Indra to certain kings¹ is parallel to the description in the *Çatapatha Brāhmaṇa*² of the Aṇvamedha as performed by these kings. The whole rite stands in no real relation to the Brāhmaṇa as a whole.

In the *Çāṅkhāyana Ġrauta Sūtra*³ there is a parallel version of the story of Çunaḥçepa, which is introduced without any connexion whatever with the context and which diverges merely in a few words from the version of the Aitareya. It is not altogether easy to see how the passage came to be received in that text without even the slight modification necessary to make it fit in, but the fact of its presence is probably simply due to the desire of the Çāṅkhāyana school to have within its text-books so splendid a narrative, and the slight changes are no doubt merely due to the natural alteration in form of a story when transferred from one school to another. It is clearly the case that the changes are not signs of earlier, but of later date. Thus the Çāṅkhāyana version adds a seventh year to Rohita's wanderings and a new verse (xv. 19): in another passage (xv. 24) it has tried to improve the simple asvāndheyaṃ iti Viçva-mitra upapapāda into asvāndheyaṃ iti vī avocāt iti Viçva-mitra upapapāda, while it has completely altered the sense of the last of the Gāthās (xv. 27). It has indeed been ingeniously¹ argued that the occurrence twice of āmantrayām āsa as a periphrastic perfect is a sign of an incorrect and modern version, since the Çāṅkhāyana has cakre, but the whole force of the argument disappears when it is borne in mind that the Çāṅkhāyana has *īkṣām āsa*² in place of īkṣām cakre.³ It is therefore necessary either to assert, as Liebhich, had he observed the forms īkṣām cakre and īkṣām āsa, presumably would have done, that both forms were incorrectly handed down, or as is much more probable that the use of āsa was a careless innovation which was creeping into use. The text is in other respects marked by bad forms like sāmnāhukah (for sāmnāhukah) in vii. 14; açanayāparitah, vii. 15; nīniyoje (ÇS. has nigayojje), and nīhçina in vii. 16.

With the last section (viii. 24-28) the Brāhmaṇa passes to a quasi-philosophical doctrine of the resolution of the deities, lightning, rain, moon, sun, fire, in Brahman, here conceived (viii. 28) as Vāyu, but the doctrine is degraded to a mere practical device for enabling the Purohita to overcome the king's enemies. This combination is doubtless a sign of comparatively recent origin.

With the rest of Pañcikā vii must be classed as late the first twelve sections. The first section, which in a manner unparalleled in the rest of the text, consists of the whole of the first Adhyāya, is made up of an account of the due division of the sacrificial animal among the priests and their assistants; it commences athātah paçor vibhuktis tasya vibhāgaṃ vaksyāmaḥ. The new form is wholly unparalleled, and the possibility of its being original is disposed of by the occurrence of the whole passage in the Āçvalāyana Ġṛuta Sūtra.⁴ The division of the victim may conceivably have once stood in the text, but not as it now is handed down.

The second Adhyāya of the Pañcikā deals with the occurrence of mishaps of one sort or another to an Agnihotrin. It contains within it two passages of later and clearly non-genuine character. The first (vii. 10) deals with the question how the offerings of a man whose wife dies are to be carried on; it is far from clear in sense, and doubtless corrupt.

That the second passage is corrupt (vii. 11) does not rest, as in the former case, on mere reasoning; it is proved by the fact that it is obviously and palpably a mere working over of a passage in the Kauṣṭaki.¹ Finally there is the conclusive evidence that Sāyaṇa in his commentary admits that in certain places the texts had not these passages and that the passages had not been explained by previous commentators.

The other chapters are more of the Sūtra type, and in point of fact vii. 3 which repeats v. 27 is largely found in the Ācvalāyana Granta Sūtra iii. 11, and of the other sections portions have parallels in that book (iii) of the Sūtra. They have no real connexion with the rest of the texts, and the same remark applies to the last Adhyāya of the fifth Pañcikā, which (v. 26–34) deals with the Agnihotra and the time of its being performed (v. 26, 28–31), with expiations of mishaps in it (v. 27 = vii. 3), and with the office of the Brahman priest. These sections in themselves have no real connexion with the Soma offering; they have however some affinities in the Kauṣṭaki Brāhmaṇa, which discusses the time of the Agnihotra (ii. 9) and the duties of the Brahman priest (vi. 10–14), and no doubt they represent the Aitareya tradition of the performance of these rites in their school. Indeed, as has already been noted, the language of the Aitareya (v. 29) account of the disputes over the time of offering the Agnihotra is clearly older than that of the Kauṣṭaki (ii. 9). The portion regarding the Brahman also shows no trace of later origin than the corresponding Kauṣṭaki text. But the section cannot really have been originally part of the Brāhmaṇa of the Soma sacrifice.

The doubtful authenticity of even Pañcikā vi is suggested by the fact that it obviously is merely a supplement to the main text, which deals with the duties of the Hotṛ and which ignores his assistants. This argument was recognized by Haug² and accepted by Weber,³ who added to the general consideration the particular observation that in the first twenty-four Adhyāyas of the Aitareya the formula adopted for rejecting unapproved opinions is *tat tan nādṛtyam*⁴ and once only⁵ tat tathā na kuryāt. The rule in the rest of the text⁶ is to use the latter phrase with a variant⁷ of tad u punaḥ paricakṣate, although the root ā-dṛ is found elsewhere in the sixth book.⁸ But this is the only special point adduced by Weber in support of his theory.

The theory is however, no doubt, correct and it can be supported by other evidence than that adduced by Weber. The character of Pañcikā vi as of a supplementary character is indicated by its internal composition, which is much inferior to that of the first twenty-four Adhyāyas. Thus in vi. 5 and 17 there is repeated the rule of the use of the Stotriya verses of one day as the Anurūpa verses of the preceding day, and it is impossible to see any justification for the repetition of the statement, though there is no inconsistency in it. Again in vi. 26 there is a discussion of the question whether the Maitrāvaruṇa should combine the Dūrohaṇa with the normal Ṣaṣṭa, and the reply is in the negative; in vi. 36. 15 seq. the same question is put regarding the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin, the repetition being very clumsily carried out. In these cases there is no contradiction and in the second case the subject-matter actually is slightly different, but in vi. 8 and 23 there is direct contradiction. In the former we are told ekāṁ dve na stomam atīṣaṇset, and aparimitābhir uttarayoḥ savanayoḥ, and in the latter ekāṁ dve na dvayoḥ savanayoḥ stomam atīṣaṇset and aparimitābhir tṛtīyasavane, statements which no ingenuity will reconcile.

The treatment of the Vāḥkilyās is also confused and muddled. The natural place of treatment is in vi. 28 after the Nābhānoliṣṭha and Nārāṇsa of the Hotṛ, and de facto the hymns are there fully dealt with. But in vi. 24 they appear, and are followed by the description of the Dūrohaṇa as performed after them (vi. 25), and a discussion whether the ordinary Ṣaṣṭa is, or is not, to be omitted with the Dūrohaṇa. The matter is further complicated by the fact that the Vāḥkilyās in the first case (vi. 24) are to be recited in one (the Mahābalabhid manner of Aṣṭalāyana), in the second case in yet another manner. Nor is there any hint of the use of the two manners on distinct occasions either in the Brāhmaṇa or even in the Aṣṭalāyana Granta Sūtra (viii. 2). It is therefore impossible to avoid the conclusion that there is repetition and confusion. The same conclusion follows from the fact that in vi. 16 we have an odd chapter dealing with the Achāvāka's Ṣilpa Ṣaṣṭa and its lack of relation to the Nārāṇsa. There is no conceivable reason for its appearance at that place, while it clearly should come somewhere in vi. 30 and 31 where the Achāvāka's work is dealt with, and subsequent to the mention of the Nārāṇsa in vi. 27. The treatment of the Achāvāka is also decidedly confused in both vi. 30 and 31, the essential distinction of the use of the Ṣilpas at the evening pressing on an Ukthya and at the midday pressing on an Agniṣṭoma day not being made at all clear.

These are all signs of internal defects of construction, and have validity in so far as they show a much poorer workmanship than is to be found in the rest of the Soma books. What is still more convincing is the fact that the mention of the Ṣilpas and their treatment in vi. 27-30 is quite inconsistent with the treatment of the question of the Hotṛ's recitations in

v. 15. The two passages cannot possibly have stood in one work without some effort to bring them into at least intelligible relationship. Sāyaṇa evades the difficulty by his usual happy power of not referring in either case (v. 15 or vi. 27 seq.) to the problem, for which neither Āṇvalāyana nor the Īāñkhāyana Ġrauta Sūtra has any solution to offer. Therefore we can conclude with certainty that Pañcikā vi was really an addition to the main text. Presumably it was the first addition, and the insertion at the end of v of the portion dealing with the Brahman (v. 32-34) was an effort to make complete the account of the Hotr's sacrifice by adding to the account of the Hotrakas' work that of one who, like the Brahman, was to aid the sacrificer, but mainly by silence, and therefore in a way not recorded naturally in a full text as was done for the Adhvaryus and the Sāman singers in their text-books. The interpolation before the Brahmatva in v. 26-31 and the addition after vi in vii. 2-12 (omitting 10 and 11 which were never really parts of the text) of an account of the Agnihotra are only to be explained, if at all, on logical grounds by the fact that the Agnihotra is not to be omitted, even when the Soma sacrifice is being performed, while to the work thus filled up Pañcikās vii and viii were doubtless added on the strength of the fact that the rite was connected with the Soma sacrifice and was of special importance. vii. 1, which is borrowed from the Āṇvalāyana Ġrauta Sūtra, may have been interpolated at almost any time. It differs from vii. 10 and 11 in so far that the latter sections never obtained like it full citizenship in the text.

There remains one further passage, which lies open to doubt. Weber points out that the 14th Adhyāya (iii. 39-44), which handles the Agniṣṭoma in general, is in no way closely or naturally fitted into its context. Moreover, what is more significant is that the text (iii. 41), in place of the three Saṁsthās, Ukthya, Ṣoḍaṣin, and Atirātra, mentions the Ukthya, Vājapeya, Atirātra, and Aptoryāma, while the Vājapeya and Aptoryāma are never again mentioned in the Brāhmaṇa. It may be added that even the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa knows them only in the last chapter (xxx. 11). Moreover, in iii. 44 we have a somewhat novel account of the sun's apparent progress when the word nimrocati is used, and again that word occurs nowhere else in the Āitareya. The evidence is not, and cannot be, conclusive, but it is reasonably effective, and it should be noted that the Kauṣītaki has nothing parallel, so that the case against the chapter is practically certain. It is perhaps a point to note that the proverb of a horse sudhāyām ha vai vājī suhito dadhāti (iii. 39) occurs also in iii. 47.

The conclusions which are based on considerations of content and context are supported by certain facts of usage. There is no doubt that in the first twenty-four Adhyāyas (i-v. 25) the only tense of narration is the imperfect, and that perfects are extremely rare in any narrative sense. On the contrary, from v. 26 to the end the proportion of perfects grows steadily, and in the Ṣaṇḥṣepa narrative the perfect prevails. But even the narrative in vi. 1 and 2 is adequate to show the complete change of style, which cannot possibly be accounted for by anything save a change in taste. That the perfect in prose is a later development is beyond reasonable doubt, and on the strength of this the last sixteen Adhyāyas can be safely ascribed to a later period than the first twenty-four, to the period of the Kauṣītaki and the Ātapatha Brāhmaṇas.

Again difference in time is suggested by the use, as in the Sūtras, of the term brāhmaṇa in the phrase tas्योक्तान् brāhmaṇam, vi. 25. 1, and iti brāhmaṇam udāharanti, vii. 12. There is nothing to compare with the first phrase in the earlier part of the AB., though brāhmaṇa is used as 'explanation' in AB. i. 25, but it is in constant use in the Kauṣītaki.

Difference of authorship are also shown by the repeated use in vi (10. 1; 12. 1; 14. 1; 15. 1, &c.) of the phrase athāha, raising a series of points of discussion. The plural is used elsewhere, both earlier and later in the text.

On the other hand books vii and viii show a common hand in the curious phrase tat-tad iti 3 ṅ to assert a doctrine; it is found in vii. 22. 6; 25. 3; viii. 6. 5; 9. 13, and it is clear that it serves to prove unity in all the great section from vii. 19 to the end of viii, which deals with the consecration of the king.

A further difference of recension noted by Weber is that in vii. 2 is read haviṣṣu; vii. 5 niṣṣicya; viii. 23 Dauṣṣantiḥ, while in i. 25 we find catuḥṣaṁdhiḥ; iii. 48 catuḥṣaṣṭim; ii. 29 duḥṣamam. But the point seems to be without adequate foundation, as Aufrecht reads duṣṣamam and Dauṣṣantiḥ, and the MSS. do not show enough consistency to justify any conclusion being built upon them.

It is perhaps worth noting that the tradition of the last three Pañcikās appears somewhat inferior to that of the first five. Even in v. 30 we find so jahāra for yo jahāra; vi. 1 has apinadyuḥ; vii. 13: iti ha smā ākhyāya for iti hāsmā (or iti ha smāsmā); 14: sārināhukah; 15: aṣanayāparitah; 16: niḥṣānah; niniyoja; 5: vjapanayitum; viii. 15: ajāyethāh; vṛṇīyam; 23: avapadyeyam; 28: prajighyati, prajighyatu; jāgrīyāt. Some of these cannot be real forms, even if others are.

There are other minor points in which the texts vary, but it would be idle to rely upon any of them as decisive, and the evidence above cited is ample to show that the text consists of the following strata:

- (1) i-iv; v. 1-25, on the Soma sacrifice, with the possible exception of iii. 39-44.
- (2) v. 26-34; on the Agnihotra (26-31) and on the Brahman priest (32-34)
- (3) vi on the Hotrakas' performance at the Soma rite.
- (4) vii. 1; the division of the sacrificial victim, in its present form apparently borrowed from the Açvalāyana Ġrauta Sūtra, xii. 9.
- (5) vii. 2-12; on the Agnihotrin's errors and mishaps in sacrifice (10 and 11 being interpolations, 11 from the Kauṣītaki, iii. 1).
- (6) vii. 13-18; the tale of Çunaḥçepa.
- (7) vii. 19-viii. 28; the royal consecration and the Purohitaship (viii. 24-28).

The question which presents itself is whether the Brāhmaṇa ever consisted of a collection of the first thirty Adhyāyas (i-vi). This view has the authority of Aufrecht,¹ who points out that this is not at all inconsistent with the fact that Pāṇini (v. 1. 62) is generally held to have known of the forty Adhyāyas of the Āitareya. For that view may be set the fact that it explains in a reasonable manner the fact that there is a certain community of subject-matter between v. 26-31 and vii. 2-12, v. 27 and vii. 3 being identical, save for the addition of a sentence in the former and the prefixing of tad āhuḥ to the clauses of the latter. If the Brāhmaṇa were a fixed whole when the new matter came in, the fact is more naturally explained than if we have to invent a reason for the separation of matter essentially of one kind. This would accord also with the fact that the use of the narrative perfect is yet restrained in vi as compared with vii or viii (roughly in vi 1:2; in vii 4:1; in viii 5:3). There would be thus an intermediate stage in the composition of the text when it was extended and brought up to thirty Adhyāyas, and a final stage, still early, when it became forty Adhyāyas.

Another small point tells in the same direction; the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa in ii. 9 has a parallel to the discussion of the time of the Agnihotra in the Āitareya (v. 29-31), which seems clearly later in redaction. Moreover, if the Āitareya was fixed in its compass of thirty Adhyāyas before the Kauṣītaki was redacted we have a good and significant cause for the exact number of Adhyāyas chosen.² On the other hand, it is most unlikely that the Āitareya in its extended form was redacted before the Kauṣītaki, for then it would be very difficult to account for the fact that the Çunaḥçepa story was placed in the Sūtra only. The order of redaction seems therefore to have been (1) Āitareya, i-vi; (2) the Kauṣītaki; (3) the complete Aitareya; but even the latest form of the Aitareya must antedate the Ānkhāyana Ġranta Sūtra.

It is significant that in both cases the Brāhmaṇas leave alone the Mahāvratā day and its special rites, which must be looked for in the Ānkhāyana Ġranta Sūtra in its two supplementary books (xvii and xviii) and in the Ānkhāyana Āraṇyaka (i and ii), and in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka (i and v). It is practically certain that the Ānkhāyana in this case also represents a later version than the Aitareya. The cause of this discrimination of the treatment of the day is not certain, but it is at least possible that it is due to the fact that the Mahāvratā ceremony with all its special features¹ was only later taken up into the full Brahmanical system. There is nothing in either Āraṇyaka, Aitareya, or Ānkhāyana to render this theory improbable.

The question naturally presents itself whether in the fact of the increase in size of the Aitareya we have an explanation of the term Mahaitareya which occurs with Mahākauṣītaka in the Ācvalāyana Ġṛhya Sūtra (iii. 4. 4) and the Ānkhāyana Ġṛhya Sūtra (iv. 10; vi. 1). The suggestion is a possible one, but naturally it cannot be offered for more than a conjecture for which there is not, and is never likely to be, any independent evidence.

Nor have we any idea when the division of the text into Pañcikas was made; it is clearly not a natural division in any way, as the text does not fall into sets of five Adhyāyas, and it is unfortunate that the Pañcika division should have become usual in citations.²

It is of course possible that here and there slight additions were made to the original text of Adhyāyas i-xxiv in the course of the increase of the work. This is suggested by the occurrence of groups of perfects, unmotivated, in narration at i. 16 and iii. 48. 9 respectively; in both cases the passage may easily have been added in the final redaction, but it is dangerous to press such a point.

§ 4. THE COMPOSITION OF THE KAUSĪTAKI BRĀHMAṆA.

The composition of the Kausītaki Brāhmaṇa presents none of the complications of that of the Aitareya. It is, as we have it, a single, homogeneous text, which by its constant phrase tasmyoktaṁ brāhmaṇam indicates its purpose of avoiding repetitions and of carrying out its task in a simple and definite manner.

It has been suggested by Weber³ that the passage vi. 1-9, which describes the might of Rudra, is an interpolation, on the two grounds that there is du sacrifice dans les Brāhmaṇas is to be regretted.

no obvious connexion between the rest of the text and this passage, and that there is no special prominence of Rudra or Agni in the rest of the text. These arguments are, however, both inadequate, and neither is quite effective. In the first place the first nine chapters are linked with the rest, which deal with the activity of the Brahman priest, by their common concern with the activity in creation of Prajāpati; the passage regarding the Brahman cannot be disregarded as needless, as it has a parallel in the Aitareya (v. 32-34), and its insertion rendered it easy to place before it what is no doubt intended deliberately as a glorification of Rudra in his various forms. The second argument is equally incomplete, for we know that the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa treats Rudra as the great deity par excellence, and on the other hand the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa has several points of contact with the Ṣaṭpatha Brāhmaṇa, which is clearly like the Aitareya inclined to set a very high value on the Rudra cult. It is true that the stories of Rudra in the Aitareya and in the Kauṣītaki are drawn in bodily, and are no necessary parts of the whole texts, but that is merely to say that the new religion was pervading the old traditional worship; it does not show that the texts ever stood as they now are, but without those particular passages.

Much of the material of the Kauṣītaki, and especially the legends, has been taken over by the Brāhmaṇa from a source common to it and the Aitareya, but the whole has been worked up into a harmonious unity which presents no such irregularities as are found in the Aitareya. It is clearly a redaction of the tradition of the school made deliberately after the redaction of the Aitareya in its first thirty Adhyāyas (i-vi), and embracing in it the views of the schools of Kauṣītaki and Paiṅgya, but with a preference in any case of dispute for the views of Kauṣītaki. Whether written texts or texts orally transmitted or mere views were used by the compiler we cannot know, for the quotation of a Paiṅgi Brāhmaṇa by Sāyaṇa¹ tells us nothing of its comparative age.

That the Brāhmaṇa is not actually the product of a Kauṣītaki is proved by the mode in which he is referred to therein; his views are authentic and accepted, but it is not conceivable that he actually himself composed in this style. The MSS. of the book which show the title Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa as the normal title have as a variant here and there Ṣaṅkhāyana (Ṣaṅkhyāyana is a bad variant) Brāhmaṇa; the most exact version, that preserved in the MSS. in the Bodleian Library,² is Kauṣītakimatānusāri Ṣaṅkhāyana Brāhmaṇa. There is no mention of Ṣaṅkhāyana in the text, and Vināyakabhaṭṭa, the commentator on the Brāhmaṇa, never mentions it under the title Çāṅkhāyana, but we cannot reasonably deny that this is a case where tradition should be respected, and where we must admit that in all probability the version of the doctrines of the Kauṣītaki school is preserved for us in a Çāṅkhāyana tradition. This view receives solid support from the fact that the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra is so closely connected with the Brāhmaṇa. Nothing, however, turns on the fact, except the explanation of the title given in many of the MSS.

The Brāhmaṇa, though in itself complete, does not represent the whole of the Brāhmaṇa tradition associated with the Çāṅkhāyana school. That tradition appears in the Mahāvratā section of the Çāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka (i and ii), which stands in the same relation to the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa as does book i of the Aitareya Āraṇyaka to the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, and there is indeed some slight evidence, that of the commentary of Vināyaka,¹ that the two books were sometimes regarded as two books of the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa. There can be no doubt that these were not normally so reckoned, since Pāṇini (v. 1. 62) doubtless knew the Kauṣītaki as consisting of thirty Adhyāyas only, but it is possible that it was the presence of such additions which gave rise to the tradition of a Mahākauṣītaka as recorded in the Āṇvalāyana Gṛhya Sūtra (iii. 4. 4) and the Çāṅkhāyana Gṛhya (iv. 10; vi. 1). The relation of the Āraṇyaka (i and ii) to the Brāhmaṇa is probably one of a slightly later date; and it is difficult otherwise to see why it should have not been included in the principal text, for it has no special claim to secrecy in character, though the Āraṇyaka of the Aitareya in its Sūtra portion claims for it a special sanctity and importance, and the Çāṅkhāyana (i. 1) contains a notice to the same effect.

A second quasi-supplement to the Kauṣītaki is contained in the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra. That Sūtra is normally a well-arranged Sūtra text without pretensions to any other quality, but it contains in books xiv, xv, and xvi passages of a quasi-Brāhmaṇa character dealing with certain Savas and including the story of Çunaḥçepa.

Now these passages are quite out of harmony with the normal style of the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra and cannot possibly be brought into agreement with that style. It is indeed in a special form of its own; it is not in the proper and full Brāhmaṇa style, which does not seek to give in full the details of the sacrifice, though in the course of its exposition it often does so. But these books of the Sūtra are set on expounding the sacrifice in the details of its composition as regards recitations as well as giving the motives and explanations of the rites, and this combination is a new note, and one which can equally be seen in portions of the Baudhāyana and the Mānava Çrauta Sūtras. We have in fact a form of literature, anterior in development, in all probability, to the normal Sūtra of the type of Āpastamba and Kātyāyana, in which exposition and comment are much more blended than in the case of the Brāhmaṇas, whereas the Sūtras proper have lost this comment practically altogether.

The nature of the content of these books of the Sūtra suggests at once a later date than the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, just as in the case of the Baudhāyana Çrauta Sūtra the many new Savas described represent, beyond doubt, developments of the ritual beyond the period of the Samhitās of the Black Yajurveda. Nor otherwise is it easy to see why these rites should not be noticed in any way in the Brāhmaṇa. The same conclusion is strengthened when it is noted that in xiv. 40 there is a version of the conflict of the Aṅgirasas and the Ādityas which differs from that given in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa (vi. 34 and 35) and the Kauṣītaki (xxx. 6). The important point is that, after a long introductory paragraph in the Brāhmaṇa style, there comes trivṛt stomah; rathantaram prṣṭhum; trcakṣptam chastram; agniṣtomo yajñah; yavorvarā vedih; yavakhalā uttaravedih; lāṅgaleṣā yūpah, yavakalāpiṣ caṣālam; vjānasya kulād vasatī-varyah. This sort of style is not that normal in a Brāhmaṇa. The same phenomenon occurs repeatedly; thus in xiv. 32 after a Brāhmaṇa narrative of the gods and the Asuras comes aparapakṣe saurīṣṭih pūrvāhne; cāndra-masī sāyam, vidhum dadrāṇam navo navah; sauvarṇah ṣṭavalo dakṣiṇā pūrvasyām, rājata uttarasyām; Bhāradvājam prṣṭham; tathā sūkte. The same phenomenon recurs constantly in these books, and is quite unparalleled in the Brāhmaṇa. The real question of difficulty is whether the Sūtra was compiled by the use of a Brāhmaṇa text which was used to make up a complex result in these cases where there was nothing in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, or whether it generally represents a style of composition intermediate between Sūtra and Brāhmaṇa. While there is no adequate evidence to prove the correctness of either of these obvious alternatives as to the origin of this form, it is at least probable that the latter is the correct view of the facts. There seems no conceivable reason why the Sūtra-maker should have adopted this form in the last three books (xiv–xvi) if he did not find it necessary in the rest of the text where, as in most of xiii, there was no Brāhmaṇa preserved in the Kauṣītaki. xvi is really in the same position as xiv and xv, though in the case of the last book the proportion of Brāhmaṇa is small, owing to the elaboration of the rites to be described. These three books form a single whole, an account of a development of the ritual with its explanations.

The special character of these books is borne out by their contents: xiv begins with an account of the Haviryajñas, the Agnyādheya, the Punarādheya, the new and full moon sacrifices, the four-monthly sacrifices, as Soma sacrifices; chapter 11 deals with the Pratyavarohaniya: 12 and 13 the Sautrāmaṇi; 14 the Udbhid; 15 the Gosava; 16 the Rtapeya; 17-19 the bhūh, bhuvah and svah offerings; 20 the Çukrastoma; 21 the Tivrasava; 22 the Sūtasava; 23 the Rṣabha; 24 the Vyoman; 25 the Virāj; 26 the Svarāj; 27 the first Uçanastoma; 28 the second Uçanastoma; 29 the Indrāgnyoh Kulāya; 30 the Virātsvarāj; 31 the Jyesthastoma; 32 the Durāça; 33 the Apiciti; 34 the Tviṣi; 35 the Vṛṣti; 36 the Āditya; 37 the Svarga; 38 the Vinutty-Abhibhūti; 39 the Rāçimarāyau; 40 the Sādyahkra; 41 the Nṛjit; 44 the Pṛtanājit; 45 the Satrājit; 46 the Dhanājit; 47 the Svarjit; 48 the Sarvajit; 49 the Ujjit; 50 the Upahavya; 51 the Agnistut (described in great detail); 58 the Indrastut; 59 the Sūryastut; 60 the Vaiçvadevastut; 61 the Gotamasya Caturuttarastoma; 62 the Pañçaçara-diya; 63 the Rṣistomas of Gotama; 64 of Bharadvāja; 65 of Atri; 66 of Vasistha; 67 of Jamadagni; 68 of Prajāpati; 69 the Vratyastomas; 71 the Utkrānti; 74 the tenth day; 75 the Rtustomas; 76 the Māsastomas; 77 the Ardhamāsastomas; 78 the Nakṣatrastomas; 79 the Ahorātrastomas; 80 the Muhūrtastomas; 81 the Nimeṣastomas; 82 the Dhvaṇisistomas; 83 the Diçām stomāḥ; 84 the Avāntaradiçām stomāḥ. Book xv contains in 1-3 the Vājapeya; 4 the Bṛhaspatisava; 5-8 the Saṁsthās with especial stress on the Aptoryāma; 9, 10 the Yamastoma; 11 the Vāçahstoma; 12-16 the Rājasūya, and 17-27 the Çunaḥçepa legend. Book xvi contains in 1-9 the Açvamedha; 10-14 the Puruṣamedha; 15 and 16 the Sarvamedha; 17 the Vājapeya; 18 points regarding the Rājasūya and the Açvamedha including the expulsion of a scapegoat; 19-30 other Ahīnas.

There is a good parallel to the style of the Sūtra in the Bauddhāyana Çrauta Sūtra,¹ which in xvii. 55 to xviii. 53 contains matter parallel to the Çāṅkhāyana book xiv, and which is couched in a similar style. In both cases also that style on its verbal side is of a more recent type than the Brāhmaṇa style, though it is based on that style and therefore differs entirely from the style of the Sūtras in its passage of comment, while on the other hand in its enumeration of the Çastras it is precisely of the Sūtra type. Such a style is a perfectly natural development of the Brāhmaṇa style which here and there in the Kauṣītaki approaches to that of the Sūtras without ever going so far as in the books xiv-xvi of the Sūtra.

In these books xv. 17-27, which have the legend of Çunaḥçepa, have a special place and significance. They do not fit into the Rājasūya in the place where they occur, and they are equally not in place in the Puruṣamedha where a Çunaḥçepa narrative is prescribed by the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra.

¹ There is a good deal of similar matter in point of style in the Mānava Çrauta Sūtra;

cf. Garbe, Āpastamba Çrauta Sūtra, III, xxii-xxiv.

(xvi. 11. 1). There can be no doubt that the legend was recorded in the Āitareya text after the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa was completed, and that then the Çāṅkhāyana school, determined to save the masterpiece, took it over with a slight change here and there (including the addition of one more year of wandering and one more Gāthā), and stuck it in the Sūtra where least it seemed out of place, after a passage dealing with the Rājasūya, though not in a suitable place.

There is a point of some interest in the content of the Sūtra which shows that the Kurus had suffered a severe reverse of some sort. The episode is narrated of the King Vṛddhadyumna Ābhipratāriṇa, who made the error of sacrificing with the Kṣattrasya dhṛti with three Stomas instead of four, and because of that a Brahman cursed him saying the Kurus Kurukṣetrāc cyoṣyante (xv. 16. 10 seq.). No such disaster is recorded in the Brāhmaṇas, and it is probably a sign of a later date than the Brāhmaṇa period.

It is possible as asserted by Ānartīya in his commentary on xiv. 2. 3 that these books may have in some cases been reckoned as part of the Mahākauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, but there is no other proof of this and the quotations of that Brāhmaṇa in Vināyaka's commentary on the *Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa*¹ seem to throw no light on the matter.

It must also be noted that the Çrauta Sūtra had before it a wider range of opinions of Kauṣītaki than are recorded in the Brāhmaṇa. Thus there are citations of Kauṣītaki in the Sūtra at vii. 21. 6; ix. 20. 33; xi. 11. 3, 6, and of the Kauṣītaka at xi. 14. 20, all of which are at once recognizable in the Brāhmaṇa. But at iv. 2. 13 the Kauṣītaka and at iv. 15. 7 Kauṣītaki are cited. In the former case the passage is significant; it deals with the rite of the Anvādhāna and cites the views on one point of Prāgahi, Paiṅgya, Kauṣītaki, and Āruṇi (iv. 2. 10-14). This collection of authorities is parallel to the grouping in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa (xxvi. 4), nor can there be the least doubt that the Sūtra had before it a Brāhmaṇa text to this effect; the Sūtras do not, we may safely conclude, in such cases collate opinions. In iv. 15. 7 there is actually a verbal quotation nāghāhāni vardhayeyuḥ from Kauṣītaki. No doubt these notices refer to the Mahākauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, and from it may come varied notices in the commentary of Ānartīya on the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra which are not ascribed to any defined source.

It is uncertain whether any portion of the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa as we have it can be assigned to a later period than the completion of the whole work. The sixth Adhyāya certainly is not open to suspicion on any reliable grounds, but the last chapter (xxx. 11) of the work may be suspicious in that it mentions the Vājapeya and Āptoryāma rites elsewhere unknown to the Brāhmaṇa, just as the occurrence of these names in the Aitareya (iii. 41) helps to indicate the later date of the fourteenth Adhyāya of that text.

The Kauṣītaki seems for some reason or other not to have been a popular text-book.¹ We are expressly told by Agnisvāmin in his commentary on the Lāṭyāyana Śrauta Sūtra (i. 1. 6) that the Kauṣītakins did not fulfil the requisite of being able to answer rightly any difficult problem, as exemplified by their inability to deal with the curse of Luçākapi Khārgali recorded in the Pañcaviṅṣa Brāhmaṇa (xvii. 4. 3), and Dhānañjayya, as reported in the Nidāna Sūtra (vi. 12), declared that he considered the Kauṣītakis akuçalān and vyāhatān.

The geographical position of the Kauṣītaki school seems to have been in the west in later times, for the account of the location of the school in the Mahārṇava cited by Bühler² places the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa and the Çāṅkhāyana Çākhā in northern Gujarat. It is not impossible that in this fact of location lies the explanation of the comparatively little use made of the text by other schools.

§ 5. THE DATES OF THE TWO BRĀHMAṆAS.

(a) Relation to Pāṇini.

There can be no real doubt that the Kauṣītaki is a later work than the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. But it is clear that the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa and the Aitareya were both known to Pāṇini, who in his grammar (v. 1. 62) mentions the formation of the names of Brāhmaṇas with thirty and forty Adhyāyas, a fact which cannot but be brought into connexion as was done by Weber³ with the two Brāhmaṇas as known to us in their complete form. The same conclusion as to their relation to Pāṇini is clearly proved by their language which is decidedly older than the Bhāṣā of Pāṇini, as Liebig⁴ has shown in detail for its verbal forms, and as is not disputed by any scholar. This gives us a latest date of before 300 B.C.⁵

(b) Relation to Yāska.

The date can be carried further back by the undoubted fact that Yāska knew both the Brāhmaṇas. In the Nirukta, i. 9, he cites and explains the phrase paryāya iva tvad āçvinam occurring in the Kauṣītaki (xvii. 4).

by Haug and Aufrecht.

⁵ Keith, Aitareya Āraṇyaka, pp. 22 seq.

Though Yāska does not actually cite the Aitareya textually, he clearly knew it well as Aufrecht¹ shows. Thus in iv. 27: pañcartavaḥ samvatsarasasyeti ca brāhmaṇam hemantaçīçirayoḥ samāsenā, there is a clear echo of AB. i. 1. 14: pañcartavo hemantaçīçirayoḥ samāsenā; in iv. 27: sapta ca vai çatāni viṇçatiç ca samvatsarasasyāhorātrāḥ is exactly copied from AB. ii. 17. 4; in viii. 22: yasya devatāyai havir gr̥hitam syāt tām manasā dhyāyed vaṣatkariṣyan follows, save for the insertion of manasā, the text of AB. iii. 8. 1, while the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa (viii. 4) has tām manasā dhyāyan vaṣatkuryāt; i. 16 is exactly as i. 4. 9; the remarks on Anumati and Rākā in the Nirukta, xi. 29, and on Sinivālī and Kuhū in xi. 31, which are attributed to the Yājñikas are borrowed from vii. 11, or more probably perhaps its real source, the Kauṣītaki (iii. 1). In Nirukta, viii. 4, āpr̥bhīr āpr̥ñātīti ca brāhmaṇam is cited no doubt from AB. ii. 4. 1.

Other citations are less clear; in Nirukta, xii. 8, occurs saṁvitā sūryām prāyachat somāya rājñe prajāpataye veti brāhmaṇam, with which compare KB. xviii. 1: saṁvitā sūryām prāyachat somāya rājñe yadi vā prajāpateḥ. The reading there is odd and abnormal, but it is not clear that the citation is of the KB. In Nirukta, xii. 14, we read andho bhaga ity āhur anutsrpto na dr̥çyate prāçitraṁ asyākṣiṇī nirjaghāneti ca brāhmaṇam. In KB. vi. 13, speaking of the prāçitra, we are told tad bhagāya parijahrus tasyākṣiṇī nirjaghāna tasmād āhur andho bhaga iti. In Nirukta, vi. 31, it is said adantakaḥ pūṣeti ca brāhmaṇam, while the KB. vi. 13 has tasmād āhur adantakaḥ pūṣā karambhabhāga iti.

With the priority of the Brāhmaṇas to Yāska is in keeping the style of that author which is later than that of the Brāhmaṇas, as is seen for instance in his free use of the narrative perfect and of the conditional, and his developed use of grammatical terminology. The date of Yāska is clearly a good deal anterior to that of Pāṇini, for there must have been a great development of grammar between the two authorities.

(c) Relation to Çākalya.

Further evidence of date can be deduced from the mention of the number of syllables in the phrase in AB. iii. 12: uktham vācīndrāya where the number is given as seven, though the text is written as six. In the same passage uktham vācīndrāya devebhyah is given as eleven syllables. In KB. xiv. 3 we have uktham avāci as five syllables, uktham avācīndrāya as eight syllables, avācīndrāyoktham devebhyah as nine syllables. The conclusion from the AB. evidence, added to the fact that the Aitareya Āraṇyaka (i. 3. 4) recognizes the absence of Sandhi in what is given with Sandhi in the text of the R̥gveda Samhitā, is that the Aitareya was redacted before the period of the orthoepic diaskeuasis of the R̥gveda carried out before Çākalya, which doubtless was done in accordance with a growing demand for the adaption of the text of the R̥gveda to the theory of Sandhi, which again doubtless represented a real tendency of speech developed and elaborated. The evidence in the case of the Kauṣītaki, if it is not to be taken as by Oldenberg as merely due to liturgical convenience, points rather to the period of transition when either mode of use was acceptable enough. It is significant also that the AB. seems to contemplate decebhyaḥ as pronounced of four syllables, as against the three of the Kauṣītaki.¹

Çākalya is clearly anterior to Çaunaka whose Prātiçākhyā cites him, to Pāṇini who also cites him, and to Yāska who quotes in the past tense and criticizes his Pada text (vi. 28). His date therefore is reasonably fixed about the sixth century B.C.²

This evidence is supported by the priority of the two Brāhmaṇas to the Çrauta Sūtras of Āçvalāyana and Çāṅkhāyana respectively. There must have been a considerable interval of time in each case, for the Sūtras clearly contemplate a ritual more developed and extended and more definitely fixed than the ritual of the period of the Brāhmaṇas.

The Sūtra of Āçvalāyana is probably to be dated by its author's connexion with Çaunaka³ and his being referred to in the Bṛhadāraṇyaka,⁴ facts which suggest for him a date in the vicinity of 400 B.C.⁵ There is no reason⁶ to seek an earlier date for the Sūtra of Suyajña Çāṅkhāyana, and the result therefore is to support the date already obtained for the Brāhmaṇas on other evidence.

Again the two texts are free of all reference to metempsychosis in any form. This fact is significant and legitimately may be taken as placing them before the period of the Buddha and probably not later than 600 B. C. The Kauṣītaki, however, is rather the younger in its philosophic aspect, as it does contain the concept, punararmṛtyu (xxv. 1).

The early date thus arrived at for the texts is in perfect harmony with their references to contemporary and earlier priests and persons. There is abundant evidence of the milieu which produced the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa: it was that of the Bharatas in the middle country, and a time when the fame of Janamejaya was at its height. The Bharatas, the Kuru-Pañcālas with the Vāṣas and the Uçīnaras are the inhabitants of the middle country (AB. viii. 14), and we hear of the raids of the Bharatas upon the Satvants, and the custom of their cattle, and their practice in ritual matters, all as authoritative. We are told of the consecration of Bharata Dauṣṇanti (viii. 22), but the great king is Janamejaya Pārikṣita and his priest is Tura Kāvaseya, who anointed him (viii. 21), who proclaimed to him the proper drink at the royal consecration (vii. 34), and who talked with him on the nature of pasturage (iv. 27), and it is of him that the story of the Asitamṛgas is told (vii. 27). There is less evidence of place in the Kauṣṭhiki Brāhmaṇa as is natural in its condensation, but it knows of Daivodāsi Pratardana,¹ whose name connects him with the Tṛtsus and the Bharatas, and of the Naimiṣiyas,² whose name points to the Kuru country. Now the period of Janamejaya is doubtless that of the close of the earlier Vedic period of the Samhitās, and thus accords well with the position he holds in the Āitareya. The political references do not hint at any great kingdoms, but at a large number of petty princes, who despite their titles and claims to sovereignty were doubtless rulers of limited portions of territory. The social conditions are in full accord with this view, nor does it seem possible with Weber to see the conception of a real empire in the great consecration of Indra in the Āitareya. The Āitareya contains the first reference (vii. 18) to the Andhras and other tribes, but as outside the Aryan sphere of action.

(g) Relation to other Brāhmaṇa texts.

The relation of the two Brāhmaṇas to other texts of the same type does not throw any light of a decisive character on their date. Both texts are known to the Gopatha Brāhmaṇa,³ but the importance of that fact is diminished greatly by the doubt as to whether that text really is older than Yāska, as to which there is no certain evidence available.⁴

The Kauṣṭhiki, however, by its mention of Īcāna and Mahān Deva as names of Rudra is clearly on a footing of equality with the Ātapatha Brāhmaṇa, vi, and this view is borne out by the fondness of either text for the use of the narrative perfect, and the occurrence in both of the doctrine of punararmṛtya. It is fair therefore to class these two texts together, especially as they often agree on points of doctrine.

On the other hand the Āitareya at least in Adhyāyas i-xxiv seems to be of an earlier date than the Brāhmaṇa portion of the Taittirīya Samhitā.

³ See Bloomfield, Atharvaveda, pp. 102 seq.

⁴ See Keith, Taittirīya Samhitā, i. elxix, elxx.

This is a conclusion which rests on a comparison of a large number of passages (especially from the sixth book of the Taittirīya), and no absolutely conclusive result can be expected, but that the borrowing is by the Taittirīya seems to me most probable.¹ Similarly there is some evidence of the dependence of the Pañcaviṅṣa Brāhmaṇa (iv. 1. 1 seq.) on the Āitareya (iv. 17).² The Āitareya will then stand as one of the oldest of the Brāhmaṇas, and doubtless it is older than the Jaiminīya or the Ātapatha.

It is right however to note that a different opinion on this point has been expressed by Wackernagel,³ who has set above it the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa (and of course the Brāhmaṇa portions of the Saṃhitā) and the Pañcaviṅṣa, and even the Jaiminīya. The evidence is extremely feeble; it consists of the following points. In the first place there is the use of the narrative perfect which however applies only to the last sixteen Adhyāyas of the text, and which therefore proves nothing for the later date of the main text: on the contrary the argument is a proof against the placing of the Āitareya after the Jaiminīya. In the second place the use of āmantrayāṃ āsa is quoted; that occurs only in vii. 17. 7 and again proves nil for the older text: it is doubtful if it even proves much for the later text as the form is isolated and the ÇṞS. has cakre. In the third place stress is laid on the potential in ṛtu from a verbal bases; this is however a natural assimilation to the verbs of the second class, and is not capable of indicating date. In the fourth place saṃloketē in iv. 15. 6, where the k is noteworthy, but it comes from the k seen in roka and that is R̥gvedic and therefore no date can be deduced from the word. Fifthly reference is made to the Prākṛitism lajjamāna, iii. 22. 4, but the word cannot be relied upon, for as lajj is regularly used later on the change of lajjamāna to lojjamāna was inevitable, if the derivation from laj = raj is accepted,⁴ and if not there is no evidential value at all in the word. Sixthly, saciva stands in the same position as loketē: it is a legitimate formation and its occurrence in the AB. alone of early texts has no decisive value. Similarly, āvām in the AB. is not a valid criterion of date. Or again, if a compound like unmūla occurs first in the AB., still, as it is a legitimate and natural form, it cannot be used as a proof of later date. The same considerations apply to the use of expressions like anyo 'nya which occurs in AB. iv. 27 of chandāṇsi as in the Taittirīya Saṃhitā.⁵ So in KB. xxvii. 7; xxvi. 2 and ii. 8; in none of these cases is the further step taken which is found in the Ātapatha when anyonya can be used without a nominative in apposition (xi. 6. 2. 2). The development of use in the Ātapatha is indeed important, for it is a sign of the complete stereotyping of the phrase, and it is significant that it is not found until the Çatapatha which is certainly later than the Aitareya. But the use of anyonya of other than masculine subjects is natural in any text. Similarly ekaika is common to the two Brāhmaṇas with the Taittirīya Samhitā. Another case worth mention is the use of dvandvaṁ samāsyān in KB. xxvi. 7, which has a parallel in the Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā (i. 7. 3), while the Taittirīya carries the matter further by using the plural dvandvāni (i. 6. 9. 4).¹ But it would be unwise to deduce from this any chronological result, though it is right to set it off against the evidence telling for a later date for the Aitareya.

There is, however, an occurrence in the KB. (ii. 2) which would be valuable if correct: the text of Lindner has prāgudīcīm and prāgudīcīh which would be significant, as the rule in the literature before the Sūtras is to have not compounds² but the two adjectives, and the variation of the compound is first seen in cases like MÇS. i. 1. 1. 12. But the reading of the MS. M is prācīm and prācīr in each case, not prāg, and this should be inserted in the text.

It is of course the case that both Brāhmaṇas expressly mention the existence of the trayī vidyā, and it may be thought that this supposes the existence of the Black Yajurveda in its present form of prose and verse intermingled. This, however, would be a complete error, as what is recognized as the trayī vidyā is not any prose Brāhmaṇa passages, but the R̥ces, the Sāmans and the Yajus verses and formulae, the Brāhmaṇas dealing in both cases with the appropriate mode of correcting errors in the performance of those parts of the service. It is therefore quite natural that the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa should in one passage (iii. 6) cite a Mantra preserved for us only in the Maitrāyaṇī Samhitā (iv. 10. 3), for the Mantras of the Black Yajurveda are clearly far older than the prose, and existed independently as a collection before the prose was brought into existence.³ Neither text recognizes in any way the existence of the *Atharvaveda*⁴: the Kuntāpa hymns cited by both doubtless were taken from the Khilas of the R̥gveda.

For the date of the Kauṣītaki the evidence already cited suggests a period prior to the extension of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa. It stands in point of view of style as regards the use of the narrative perfect on much the same level as the Çatapatha Brāhmaṇa and it agrees with that text in its doctrine of punarmṛtyu. It also agrees with it in its mention of Āruṇi and Çvetaketu as authorities, and thus is brought into the sphere of the remark of Āpastamba that Çvetaketu was an Avara. The Āitareya has no allusion to Çvetaketu or the more famous Āruṇi, and therefore we have another suggestion in favour of its comparatively older date.

It is also worth mention that the Çatapatha, without indicating its source, opposes (x. 4. 1. 19) the use of a seventeenth priest at the sacrifice. This seems a clear reference to the practice of the Kauṣītakins, which is formally recorded for us by Āpastamba¹ and elsewhere referred to,² of having a seventeenth priest, the Sadasya, who was an overseer of the whole offering, and never left the Sadas alone.³ This priest is known to the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, as he is incidentally referred to in the Prāyaścitta section of that text.⁴

(h) Relation to Āpastamba.

Some information of interest as to the date of the Kauṣītaki might be obtained from the Āpastamba Çrauta Sūtra if it were true that, as Garbe⁵ states, that text,⁶ in one case at least, cites the Kauṣītaki.⁷ But this statement is hardly borne out by facts. The Āpastamba Çrauta Sūtra nine times cites a Bahvṛcabrāhmaṇa; in six of these cases the notices do not agree with the Kauṣītaki, in two⁸ they resemble but differ from statements in that text, and in one only is the correspondence almost but not quite complete.⁹ The evidence therefore points to a source for Āpastamba in another Brāhmaṇa of the Rgveda, but not the Āitareya. But there is not the slightest reason to doubt that Āpastamba knew the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, though there is no evidence that he actually cites from it, since he knows of the usage of the Kauṣītakins in one special regard and deems it worthy of mention.

Āpastamba's date is unknown, but is indicated by his remarkable fondness¹⁰ for forms which are unauthorized by Pāṇini whether Vedic (such as the ablative genitive ai; locative in an; potential in īta for eta; tmesis of prefixes) or Prākritic. This characteristic is not really consistent with a date after the full influence of Pāṇini became felt, and probably causes it to be necessary to place Āpastamba not later than 250 B.C. or 300 B.C. In favour of this fact it may be mentioned that Kātyāyana, the author of the Çrauta Sūtra of the White Yajurveda, who for the same reason has been placed before Pāṇini by Professor Macdonell,¹ was probably known to Pāṇini,² and that his rule as to *ekaṣṛuti*³ seems to have been borrowed by Pāṇini.⁴ In style and condensation of expression Kātyāyana is certainly more developed than Āpastamba, and this argument helps to give him a latest date of the third century B.C. and even probably the fourth century B.C. Garbe,⁵ with Bühler, indeed, does not hesitate to assign Āpastamba to the fifth century B.C.; but this seems to me to go beyond the necessities of the case.

(i) Astronomical data.

Note should finally be made of the statement in the Kauṣītaki (xix. 3) that the winter solstice took place at the new moon of Māgha. This notion is, however, clearly nothing more or less than the datum of the Jyotiṣa and thus yields us no date of any assured value for the period in question; Weber⁶ places the limits of the date of the initial fixing of the series of Nakṣatras in the Jyotiṣa at 1820 B.C.—860 B.C., and there is no reason to show for how long the order would be kept after it had ceased to represent the facts, apart altogether from any other considerations as to the origin of the Nakṣatras. If, as is most probable, the Nakṣatras were not an Indian invention at all, but were derived from some foreign—perhaps Semitic—source, it is clear that the date of their fixation would not have the slightest value, save as an upper date, for the Brāhmaṇas. At most the Māgha datum tends to render 800 B.C. a reasonable maximum date for the composition of the Brāhmaṇa literature.

(j) Date of later part of the Aitareya.

Of the date of the later parts of the Aitareya there is little further to be said. It is most probable that all of vii and viii were added after the completion of the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa. The use of the narrative perfect points to a period similar to that of the Ātapatha Brāhmaṇa, and other affinities with that text may be seen in the resemblances of the Prāyaścitta section in vii. 2–12 and the corresponding section in the later Ātapatha, book xii (4. 1 seq.); and of the account of the Aṣvamedhins in viii. 21–23 and the Ātapatha (xiii. 5. 4). That the two books were not added to the Brāhmaṇa before the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa was complete would be proved by the fact that vii. 11 is a bad version of the Kauṣītaki, iii. 1, but that section is probably enough not an old addition to the main text. No stress can be laid on the nature of the Rājasūya as described in the Aitareya as being more primitive in certain details (e.g. the amount of materials required for the anointing) than the versions of the Yajurveda, a point noted by Weber,¹ as pointing to a greater age than the Yajus texts: the development of the ritual in different schools doubtless was very uneven.

(k) Date of Metrical Portions of the Aitareya.

The Gāthās of the Aitareya and the occasional odd verses found therein are of decidedly antique form: the Ṣloka metre shows a form unquestionably later than that of the Rgveda, but equally clearly older than that of the metrical portions of the Upaniṣads, for instance the Kaṭha, Keṇa or Īcā, as has been fully shown by Oldenberg.² Unhappily this gives us no definite date: the Kaṭha Upaniṣad, for instance, cannot certainly be dated before the Buddha, because its context is obviously the reflex of a period when the views of the prose Upaniṣads such as the Bṛhadāraṇyaka and the Chāndogya had become a matter of common knowledge and could be summed up in allusive and epigrammatic verse. That this period antedated Buddhism cannot be safely assumed, and we must be content with the conclusion that the metre of even the latest parts of the Aitareya is old and tends to confirm the general impression of antiquity of the work, though it directly proves nothing, since it is open to argue that it was much older than the prose with which it is found.

§ 6. THE RITUAL.

(a) The Ānkhāyana Āraṇya Sūtra.

The ritual for the Brāhmaṇas is given in the Āraṇya Sūtras of Āṇvalāyana and Ānkhāyana, which are works of probably the fourth century B.C. There is not the slightest doubt that both these Sūtras knew the Brāhmaṇas and based their exposition on those texts. But in both cases the Sūtras go far beyond the present Brāhmaṇa texts, and it is not open to question that allowance must be made for a considerable development of practice between the Brāhmaṇas and the Sūtras.

The Ānkhāyana Āraṇya Sūtra coincides more completely with the Kaṣṭhāki than the Āṇvalāyana with the Aitareya. Thus the Ānkhāyana contains in—

- i. The New and Full Moon sacrifices = Kaṣṭhāki Brāhmaṇa, iv.
- ii. 1-5. The Agnyādheya and Punarādheya = Kaṣṭhāki Brāhmaṇa, i.

² GGN. 1909, pp. 219 seq.; ZDMG. xxxvii. 66 seq.

- iii. 1-12. The special offerings = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, iii.
- iii. 13-18. The four-monthly sacrifices = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, v.
- iii. 19-21. Prāyaścittas; cf. Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, xxvi. 3-6.
- iv. Minor points including the Piṇḍapitryajña and the Çūlagava.
- v-viii. The Agniṣṭoma = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, vii-xvi, xviii. 6-14.
- ix. The Ukthya, Ṣoḍaḥin, and Atirātra = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, xvi. 11-xvii. 9; xviii. 1-5.
- x. The Dvādaçāha = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, xx, xxi, xxvi. 7-17; xxvii.
- xi. The Caturviṇça, Abhiplava Ṣaḍaha, Abhijit, Svarasāmans, Viṣuvant and Viçvajit = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, xix, xxii, xxiii, xxiv, xxv.
- xii. The Çastras of the Hotrakas = Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, xxviii-xxx.
- xiii. 1-13. Certain Prāyaścittas, conflicting sacrifices.
- xiii. 14-29. Sattras, Gavām and other Ayanas.

With xiv a new section of the Sūtra opens, which is partly Brāhmaṇa in style, and of which full details have been given above. xvii and xviii are no real part of the Sūtra: they deal with the Mahāvratā ceremony and are really supplements to the Çāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka i and ii, which represent the Brāhmaṇa of that text.

It is somewhat striking that the order of the sections should be so different in some respects from that of the Brāhmaṇa. The essential features are the placing in the forefront of the new and full moon sacrifices, which are the real model of Iṣṭis, and which therefore in a logical arrangement should come first. The second point is the bringing together in book x of the whole elements of the Dvādaçāha, the Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha, the Chandomas, and the tenth day: the Brāhmaṇa has the material in books xxii and xxiii, xxvi. 7-17, and xxvii respectively. Again the Sūtra very naturally deals with the final rites of the Agniṣṭoma before the Ukthya, not as in the Brāhmaṇa after the Atirātra. These changes explain the altered order of the two texts, and all of these prove the improved order of the Sūtra.

(b) The Āçvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra.

The Āçvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra contains a great deal more than the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa. Thus for the first three books which deal with the new and full moon sacrifices, the Agnihotra, the Agnyādhāna, the four-monthly sacrifices, the Prāyaścittas and the animal sacrifice, there are but few real parallels in the Āitareya except the section (ii. 1-14) regarding the animal sacrifice, and that relating to the Agnihotra (v. 26-31), and the section on Prāyaścittas (vii. 2-12) which is very closely connected with the Çrauta Sūtra (iii. 10 and 11). The rest of the Aitareya agrees with books iv. 1-viii. 13 of the Sūtra. The arrangement is briefly as follows:

- iv. The preparations for the Soma pressing day = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, i. 1-ii. 18.
- v. The Agniṣṭoma proper = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, ii. 19-iii. 48.
- vi. 1. The Ukthya = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iii. 49, 50.
- vi. 2, 3. The Śodaçin = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 1-4.
- vi. 4-6. The Atirātra = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 5-11.
- vi. 7-10. The Prāyaçcittas and rites in case of death or disease.
- vi. 11-14. The concluding rites of the Agniṣṭoma = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iii. 47, 48.
- vii. 1. General observations.
- vii. 2-4. The Caturvinṣa = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 12, 14.
- vii. 5-9. The Abhiplava Śadaḥa, &c. = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 13, 15, 16.
- vii. 10-12. The Prṣṭhya Śadaḥa = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 13, 15, 16, 27-v. 15.
- viii. 1-4. The Çastras of the Hotṛ and the Hotrakas on the sixth day = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, vi.
- viii. 5. The Abhijit and Svarasāmans = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 19.
- viii. 6. The Viṣuvant = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 19-22.
- viii. 7. The Viçvajit and Svarasāmans = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 19.
The Abhiplava forms.
The Chandomas in the sumūḍha form.
- viii. 8. The vyūḍha Dvādaçāḥa = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, iv. 27.
- viii. 9-11. The Chandomas = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, v. 16-21.
- viii. 12. The tenth day = Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, v. 22-25.
- viii. 13. The concluding rites of the tenth day.
- viii. 14. The rules for recitation.
- ix-xii. Ahinas and Sattras.

To the last four books there is hardly anything in the Aitareya to correspond. x. 5 contains an account of the Dvādaçāḥa; xi. 7 of the Gavām Ayana, and xii. 9 is verbally the same as AB. vii. 1, which seems to be derived from it. On the other hand the concluding words of the Çunaḥçepa episode (vii. 18) are repeated as a Sūtra in ix. 3, and in this case the borrowing must be from the Aitareya.

The Açvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra is by no means so well arranged as the Çāṅkhāyana, and its superiority to the Brāhmaṇa is not very marked. It is very much less comprehensive than the Çāṅkhāyana as it contains nothing really corresponding to book xiv. It has an account of the Aṇvamedha in x. 6-10, but it has nothing of the Puruṣamedha or the Sarvamedha, and its account of the Rājasūya (ix. 3 and 4) is very brief compared to that of the Ānkhāyana text, and it is always strictly a Sūtra text. Of its twelve books only about half are really represented in the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa as against about twelve out of sixteen in the case of the Ānkhāyana.

The Ānkhāyana has one great merit in comparison with the Āṣvalāyana; it gives Mantras in cases where the Āṣvalāyana is silent, as for example the Nivids for the Agniṣṭoma hymns, and it sets out in detail the complicated Ṣilpa Śāstra of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin at the third pressing on the sixth Pr̥ṣṭhya day, which the Āitareya mentions and the Āṣvalāyana also merely mentions.

(c) The Soma Sacrifice.

The two Brāhmaṇas agree in treating of only four forms of the Jyotiṣṭoma, the Agniṣṭoma, the Ukthya, the Śoḍaṇin, and the Atirātra, distinguished by the possession of twelve Śāstras and Stotras, fifteen, sixteen, and twenty-eight or twenty-nine respectively.

Of the Ukthya form of sacrifice fairly complete accounts are given in both the Brāhmaṇas. Its essential feature is the three Uktha Stotras and the three Uktha Śāstras of the Hotrakas, and from this feature possibly its name is borrowed, as suggested by Eggeling¹ in view of the remarks in AB. vi. 13. There is also a he-goat to Indra and Agni as a second victim in addition to the ordinary victim for Agni and Soma prescribed on the day before the pressing day, and the victim for Agni on that day. The Ukthya cup is also drawn at the third pressing.

The Śoḍaṇin adds a third victim, a ram to Indra, and another cup with an extra Stotra and Śāstra. As pointed out in the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa (iv. 1), the name is derived very probably from the sixteen Stotras and Śāstras used, but the Śāstra is also specially developed in a peculiar manner described in iv. 2, where also the name is appropriate.

The Atirātra adds twelve Stotras and Śāstras in three rounds, chanted through the night and accompanied by libations and potations; these are followed by the Sandhi Stotra (Sāmaveda, ii. 99–104) chanted at daybreak, and followed by the recitation by the Hotṛ of the Āṣvina Śāstra. The difficulty arises whether the Śoḍaṇin is included in the Atirātra. The view of the Ānkhāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (ix. 1. 10) is clearly that it is; there is nothing to contradict this in the Kausītaki Brāhmaṇa, and it is assumed by the Āṣvalāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (v. 11. 1) that an Atirātra contains a Śoḍaṇin.² This is also the view of the Kātyāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (ix. 8. 5), while the Pañcaviṃśa Brāhmaṇa (xx. 1. 1) recognizes both modes of usage.¹ The Āitareya (iv. 6) clearly contemplates only the form without, i.e. with twenty-eight Stotras, or as it reckons them, by making three out of the Sandhi Stotra, thirty Stotras. It is clear also that to the Āitareya (iv. 1) the Ṣoḍaḥin is essentially only a rite used as part of a Dvādaçāha or similar rite, for it is expressly stated that on the fourth day is the Ṣoḍaḥin used, i.e. on the fourth day of the Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha which follows the Atirātra.² Similarly the Ukthya from its position is doubtless mentioned mainly because it is an essential feature of the Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha. The Atirātra has a victim for Sarasvatī as a fourth victim.

The two combinations of days which they dwell upon are the Dvādaçāha and the Gavām Ayana, as these two act as models for the other prolonged Soma rites.

The Atyagniṣṭoma is not mentioned in either of the Brāhmaṇas nor is the tenth day treated as being of this class.³ Its real existence as a sacrifice (being a Ṣoḍaḥin minus the Ukthyas) is very doubtful, its main purpose being doubtless to fill up the number of forms of the Jyotiṣṭoma to seven. But in the extra Uktha of the tenth day of the Dvādaçāha in the school of Çāṅkhāyana may be seen a form analogous to the Atyagniṣṭoma.

The Vājapeya and Aptoryāma receive a brief allusion in the Āitareya (iii. 41) and the Kauṣṭaki (xxx. 11),⁴ in either case no other notice being taken of them in the texts. It is very doubtful if these references can be treated as primitive, and it is perfectly clear that neither rite was really considered as of importance by the Brāhmaṇas. But there are notices of the latter in the Āçvalāyana (ix. 11) and the Çāṅkhāyana Ġrauta Sūtras, the latter of which (xv. 5) calls it Āptoryāman. It is distinguished by having four extra (atirikta) Stotras and Çastras over and above those of the Atirātra. Moreover it is marked by having all the six Prṣṭhas distributed among the four Prṣṭha Stotras and the Mādhyamdina and Ārbhava Pavamāna Stotras, and in the case of all the Stotras save the three Pavamānas the performance conforms to the true Prṣṭha form, i.e. with one Sāman enclosed in two others. The Vājapeya is a special rite, preliminary to the Bṛhaspatisava, which is for the Brahman much the same thing as the Rājasūya for the king, and to the Rājasūya; it shows clear traces of a popular origin and once was available for Vaiçyas, but the ritual (Āçvalāyana, ix. 9; Çāṅkhāyana, xvi. 17) is not evidently known to the Brāhmaṇas or at least accepted by them. Both the Vājapeya and the Aptoryāma are not normally used as anything but independent rites; in Çāṅkhāyana (xvi. 15. 6 and 7) they are made the models of the sixth and seventh days of the mythical Sarvamedha. Similarly in the Mānava Āraṇyaka Sūtra (ii. 5. 3) the only forms given are the Ukthya, Ṣoḍaṇ and Atirātra; in the Baudhāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (xvii. 1, 2) these three only are mentioned; and it remains for the Āpastamba Āraṇyaka Sūtra (xiv. 1. 1) to add the Aptoryāma. On that passage Rudradatta has an elaborate comment from which he deduces the fact that the omission arises from the fact that the Atyagniṣṭoma and the Vājapeya are not the models on which any other offerings are based, for the Sūtra does not even know the name of the Atyagniṣṭoma.

While the greater part of both the Brāhmaṇas is devoted to the Agniṣṭoma as model of the Soma sacrifice, they do not contemplate its use merely as a one-day rite.

The Dvādaçāha consisted of a period of ten days with an introductory and a concluding Atirātra. Within this period of ten days three elements are to be distinguished, the first six days, which can be divided into two sets of three, the seventh to ninth days, the Chandomas, and the tenth or Avivākya day, to which the name was applied, because, according to the Brāhmaṇas, the day was one on which corrections of errors were not in place.

In the careful analysis of the *Çāṅkhāyana*¹ the Dvādaçāha is thus constituted as regards the period of ten days (Daçarātra):—

I. The Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha, consisting of—

- 1st day. Agniṣṭoma type; Trivṛt Stoma; Rathantara as Prṣṭha Stotra.
- 2nd day. Ukthya type; Pañcadaça Stoma; Bṛhat as Prṣṭha Stotra.
- 3rd day. Ukthya type; Saptadaça Stoma; Vairūpa as Prṣṭha Stotra.
- 4th day. Ṣoḍaṇ type; Ekaviṇça Stoma; Vairāja as Prṣṭha Stotra.

While the Dvādaçāha served as a model for all the other Ahina rites (that is, from two up to twelve days) and the Sattras (for twelve days upwards), the model of the year rite was the Gavām Ayana, which in both texts is constituted as follows¹ :—

1. Prāyaṇīya Atirātra.

2. Caturviṇça day; Agniṣṭoma or Ukthya type; Caturviṇça Stoma: both Sāmans with Brhat as Prṣṭha.

Mahāvrata day.

Atirātra day as Udayaniya.

The account of the Gavām Ayana given in the *Āçvalāyana Ġranta Sūtra*¹ differs in that it expressly places the Go and Āyus days in the normal order in the last month, though this offends against the rule that the last month should like the preceding months after the Viṣuvant be reversed in order of performance. But it is in harmony with the normal order, and the Divādaçāha itself according to Āpastamba is not reversed in performance. It is expressly stated that the sixth month is completed by adding the first two days, and the seventh by adding the last two days. Other possible arrangements are mentioned by Āçvalāyana, including the placing of the Go and Āyus in different positions and the alteration of allowing only the Ṣaḍaha or the Svarasāman days to be reversed and not as usual both. It is also suggested that the seventh month can be made complete, leaving four days over, that these can be added to the last month, giving 30 + 2 + 4 and that then twelve days, the Go and Āyus and the Daçarātra, can be deducted, and an Abhiplava added, giving 30 in all.²

The version of Baudhāyana³ agrees generally with that of the Aitareyins, but it makes the seventh month complete with a Prṣṭhya and four Abhiplavas and composes the last month of

2 Abhiplava Ṣaḍahas = 12 days

Go and Āyus = 2 days

3 Svarasāmans and Viçvajit = 4 days

Daçarātra = 10 days

Mahāvrata and Udayaniya = 2 days.

He explains that in the inserted Prṣṭhya the Trayastrinça Stoma and Āgrayana cup begin and so on, while in the Abhiplava the Āyus and Go days are transposed and the Sāmans alternate as Brhat and Rathantara.

In Āpastamba⁴ the scheme is more elaborate. Three forms are distinguished. In the Çātyāyanaka the first six months agree with Çāṅkhāyana and Āçvalāyana's accounts; the second with Baudhāyana. The Tāṇḍaka agrees with the Çāṅkhāyana. The Bhāllavika agrees with the Çātyāyanaka save that it places the Abhijit and Viçvajit before the last and after the first Prṣṭhya Ṣaḍaha in the two parts of the year respectively.

According to the *Āitareya Brāhmaṇa*¹ the Ayanas of the Adityas and the Aṅgirasas differ from the Gavām Ayana in that the former type has all its Śaḍahas in the Abhiplava and the latter all in the Prṣṭhya form. This account is found also in the Sūtra of Baudhāyana,² but both the *Āgryāyana Āraṇya Sūtra*³ and the *Ānkhāyana Āraṇya Sūtra*⁴ have elaborate accounts of these Ayanas which give other points of difference and not this one. The same remark applies to the Āpastamba Āraṇya Sūtra.⁵

The Abhiplava Śaḍaha is composed of six days of which the first and last are Agniṣṭomas, the rest Ukthyas. Further, the characteristic Prṣṭha Stotra, which corresponds to the second Častra of the Hotṛ at the midday pressing, is on the alternative days made up of the Rathantara and the Br̥hat Sāmans respectively, and not of a different Sāman each day as in the case of the Prṣṭhya Śaḍahas. Moreover, whereas in the case of the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha the Stomas vary from day to day, but only one applies each day, in the Abhiplava the usual four Stomas occur daily but in a divergent manner, which results in the description of the days as Jyotis, Go, and Āyus, thus:

Stotra.	Jyotis.	Go.	Āyus.
Bahiṣpavamaṇa	Trivṛt	Pañcadaça	Trivṛt
Ājya Stotras	Pañcadaça	Trivṛt	Pañcadaça
Mādhyamīnapavamāna	Pañcadaça	Saptadaça	Saptadaça
Prṣṭha Stotras	Saptadaça	Saptadaça	Saptadaça
Ārbhavapavamāna	Saptadaça	Ekaviṇça	Ekaviṇça
Agniṣṭoma Sāman	Ekaviṇça	Ekaviṇça	Ekaviṇça
Uktha Stotras		Ekaviṇça	Ekaviṇça

In the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha the sixth day is of quite special importance, and at its third pressing in its full form the Hotṛ, the Maitrāvaruṇa, the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin and the Achāvāka have to recite elaborate Častras, viz. the Nābhānediṣṭha and Nārāçaṇsa; the Vālahilyās; the Sukīrti and Vṛṣākapi and the Kuntāpa; and the Evayāmarut, full details of which are given in the two Brāhmaṇas.⁶ The Brāhmaṇas also give the Častras of the Hotrakas on other occasions; the most important are those performed by them at the midday pressing. On these occasions, whether the Śaḍaha be Prṣṭhya or Abhiplava, the Častra begins with

- (1) strophe and antistrophe; then follow
- (2) the kadvant Pragātha,
- (3) the Ārambhaṇiya,
- (4) the daily hymn (aharahaṇṣasya),
- (5) the Sāmpāta

in the case of the Maitrāvaruṇa, (4) and (5) being reversed in the other two cases.¹ The Sāmpātas are nine hymns, three for each Hotraka, which he recites one by one, day by day.

In the case of the days other than the Śaḍahas, viz. the Caturviṅṣa, Abhijit, Viṣuvant, Viṣvajit, and the Mahāvratā, for the Sāmpāta hymns are substituted others called Ahīnas. The name is confusing, as it is not of course really appropriate, since those days can hardly be said to be Ahīnas as opposed to Aikāhikas, and the two Brāhmaṇas both derive the word from a-hīnu, thus showing that they desired to obviate confusion with the ordinary Ahīnas (from ahas).

One point in the use of the Sāmpātas is the employment of insertions on the fourth, fifth, and sixth days, consisting of Virāj verses and verses by Vimada on the fourth, Paṅkti verses on the fifth, and Paruccheṣa's verses on the sixth day. For the Chandomas with their long Stomas other special verses are prescribed.

In the recitation of the Hotrakas special attention is given to the rule of atiṣaṅsana of the Stotra; apparently the practice was to restrict this atiṣaṅsana to one or two extra verses at the first two pressings, but to use an indefinite number at the third pressing, but the passages (vi. 8 and 23) of the Āitareya which deal with the rule somewhat conflict.

The other chief points regarding the Hotrakas which are dealt with are their opening and concluding verses, their use at the morning pressing in Ahina rites of the Stotriyas of the one day as the Anurūpas of the preceding, and the verses used by them as offering verses for the Prasthita libations, which are given in connexion with the Hotr's verses for the filling of the goblets from which all drink after libations have been duly made. There are also given in full the Castras of the Hotrakas at the Ukthya at its third pressing.

The Dvādaçāha is complicated by the fact that it is not merely performed in a simple (samvṛdha) form, but in a vyvṛdha form, that is, one in which the 'metres' are vyvṛdha, 'transposed'. These terms which occur in the R̥gvedic texts do not receive explanation there, but the sense of vyvṛdhachandas appears from the discussion in the Çatapatha Brāhmaṇa (iv. 5. 9) of the question of differing arrangements of the cups which are drawn on the several days of the Dvādaçāha. According to that version the cups begin with the Aindravāyava (after the Upāṅcu and the Antaryāma) on the first three, the fifth, the eighth, tenth, eleventh, and twelfth days, the Āgrayana on the fourth and ninth, and the Çukra on the sixth and seventh,

¹ Haug, Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, ii. 412, n. 8, gives a different account, but clearly it cannot be reconciled with the two Brāhmaṇas or the Sūtras. See ĀÇS. vii. 5. 20-22; 4. 8, 9; 10. 2, cf. Vait. xxxi. 25.

the Āgrayana being the first of the cups of the third and the Çukra of those of the midday pressing. This rule is entirely disapproved of by the Çatapatha, which does not think any variation of the order of the cups is needed although the metres be changed.¹

In the Āpastamba Çrauta Sūtra (xxi. 14) there is a distinction made between the tryanikā form if avyūḍha and if not: in the first case the order is—in the second case the order is—

Aindravāyava on 1st, 2nd, 5th, 8th, 11th, 12th ;

Çukra on 3rd, 6th, 9th ;

Āgrayana on 4th, 7th, 10th ;

Aindravāyava on 1st, 2nd, 6th, 10th, 11th, 12th ;

Çukra on 3rd, 7th, 8th ;

Āgrayana on 4th, 5th, 9th.

In the Baudhāyana Çrauta Sūtra (xvi. 10) the order is given as—

Aindravāyava on 1st, 2nd, 6th, 10th, 11th, 12th ;

Çukra on 3rd, 7th, 8th ;

Āgrayana on 4th, 5th, 9th,

thus agreeing with the account of Āpastamba of the vyūḍha form. Here it is expressly coupled with the corresponding change of the Stotras and Çastras under which the Daçarātra consists of three sets of three days which have respectively at the three pressings—

(1st) Gāyatrī, Triṣṭubh, Jagatī ;

(2nd) Jagatī, Gāyatrī, Triṣṭubh ;

(3rd) Triṣṭubh, Jagatī, Gāyatrī.

It is clear that the change of order of the metres in the Savanas does not correspond with that of the order of the cups, and that therefore the terms vyūḍha and avyūḍha cannot be explained adequately in the sense that they correspond to any arrangement of the cups, or of the metres, so far as their use in the Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa (xxii) and the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra (x) are concerned. In the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa the term vyūḍha of dvādaçāha appears in the compound vyūḍhachandas and the sense (iv. 27) is simply that of the change of metres according to which the days are arranged in sets of three. But in the Kauṣītaki there are two variant forms for the first six days and the tenth day given in detail as vyūḍha and sanūḍha, showing clearly a further development of distinctions of form beyond that of the Aitareya.

In the case of the tenth day, contrary to the usage in certain other texts,

there is in the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra (x. 13. 25) and in the Brāhmaṇa an atiriktoktha, which really makes the number of the Çastras (and doubtless of the Stotras) up to thirteen, the same number as that prescribed for the Atyagniṣṭoma, but without its characteristic, the Soḍaṇin Çastra and Stotra.

The Āçvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra on the other hand very clearly uses the terms samūḍha and vyūḍha in the sense that they correspond with the variations of the form of the three sets of days in the Daçarātra; this is to be seen with perfect clearness from the description of the samūḍha form of the Daçarātra given in viii. 7 and the variants of the vyūḍha in viii. 8 for the second three days, and 9-11 for the three Chandomas. The tenth day on the contrary has no variation of form as vyūḍha and samūḍha but is common to both forms of the Daçarātra. According to the commentary on x. 5. 4 the samūḍha is the model of the Ahinas, the vyūḍha for the Sattras.

In addition to the normal Dvādaçāha with its sets of three days each closely united, the Āçvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra (x. 5. 8-11) recognizes one in which there is no such connexion and the days are each taken separately as (1) Atirātra; (2) Agniṣṭoma; (3-10) Ukthyas; (11) Agniṣṭoma; (12) Atirātra, and this form is alluded to in the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa (iv. 23). It is ignored in the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra, and a different rite of twelve Agniṣṭomas with the Rathantara Sāman is given in the Āpastamba Çrauta Sūtra (xxi. 14. 14 and 15).

(d) The Rājasūya and the Story of Çunaḥçepa.

The ritual of the Rājasūya as presented in the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa is peculiar to it and is not recorded elsewhere, except to the limited extent that the Āçvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra (ix. 3) repeats textually the directions at the end of vii. 18 and the Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra (xv. 17-27) has a parallel to the Çunaḥçepa legend. But otherwise there is complete silence in the texts of the Rājasūya as to the mode of the preparation of the drink for the king, and the mode of the anointing of the king and the spells by which his success is secured. On the other hand the Āitareya is silent regarding the more normal features of the Rājasūya, such as they appear in the Çāṅkhāyana (xv. 12-16; xvi. 18). The Āitareya version shows further its peculiar character by its being brought into connexion with the Açvamedha, the great kings who are celebrated in viii. 21-23 corresponding with the list of Açvamedhins in the Çatapatha Brāhmaṇa (xiii. 5. 4), and it is clear that the Açvamedha was the original source of their fame and that the connexion of the Açvamedhins with the consecration is secondary, and probably induced by the desire of the redactor of the Āitareya to include in it as much as possible of the deeds of kings, which form the theme of all of vii. 13-viii. 28.

The most important part of the account is undoubtedly the story of Çunaḥçepa, and its occurrence in the Rājasūya is claimed by Hillebrandt¹ as proof that once human sacrifice marked that event. It is of interest to note that its occurrence in this use rests ultimately on the Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, for the other mention of the use of the legend in the Kātyāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (xv. 6. 1 seq.) is simply derived from the Āitareya, as an examination of the passage at once shows. It is, however, prescribed in the Çāṅkhāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (xvi. 11. 1) as recited in the Puruṣamedha, though the story as there recited seems to have been merely a portion of the tale as it occurs in the Rājasūya. But the argument from the Puruṣamedha use is not significant for the question of human sacrifice, for the Puruṣamedha as depicted in the Çāṅkhāyana and in the Vaitāna Sūtra (xxxvii. 10 seq.) has every appearance of being a theoretic and not a real sacrifice.²

But as evidence of a real human sacrifice at the royal consecration no stress can possibly be laid on the Çunaḥçepa tale. Its motive is inexplicable on such a theory, for it does not enjoin or approve a sacrifice of this sort, but expressly relates that the sacrifice was not carried out, and that the priest Ajigarta who was willing to sacrifice his son was deprived of him as a punishment. Moreover, the mere fact that the great priests alleged to have been engaged in the offering would not perform the slaying is a proof that the rite was not an approved one. If the rite was ever one practised at the royal consecration, the moral sense of the priests had repudiated it, and had expressed their repudiation in a striking form in the shape of the use of a narrative as a part of the Rājasūya intended to show that such a sacrifice was not to be performed. The most attractive theory³ of the rite from this point of view is that there once existed a practice of slaying the first-born sons of kings at their consecration, and that the Çunaḥçepa tale is a record of the removal of the practice of the slaying by the mercies of the gods, and for such a fanciful hypothesis we have not the slightest ground.

A further peculiarity of the legend is that it is employed as a device for obtaining sons as the two versions both assert. The legend itself deals with the obtaining by Hariçcandra of a son, and the adoption by Viçvāmित्रa of a son, but the means by which Hariçcandra obtained his are peculiar, as they consist of a promise to sacrifice what he obtains, a process of peculiar inutility, though not altogether unintelligible. Moreover, the hostility against the priest Ajigarta is seen perhaps in his very name which indicates his beggared condition, and in the names of his sons which cannot be called complimentary, and in his connexion with the Aṅgirasas who were responsible as it would seem for the use of a human head in the ceremony of the piling of the fire altar may perhaps be found, as suggested by Eggeling, the explanation of his appearance in this legend. In that case the legend would show nothing as to a practice of slaying a man at the Rājastūya, and it may possibly be considered a polemic against any form of human sacrifice even at the Agnicayana, worked up into a story in connexion with other motives, one of which at any rate was presumably the dependence of the royal power on the efforts of the priests, and the importance of Viçvāmitra and his family.

The Aitareya version claims to follow the text of the Rgveda and to find in the hymns the situation which it describes in its Gāthās and its prose. The version distinctly describes itself as being of 100 R̥c verses and Gāthās beside, and this is the form in which it is handed down. The question arises whether this form is its original form.

In the view of Roth¹ the version depends on an older metrical version, whereas Oldenberg² thinks that we have in the Gāthās and the prose a real example of the Ākhyāna type which he believes to exist. Two distinct questions are involved in the matter, (1) the relation of the narrative to the Rgveda and (2) the relation of the prose to the Gāthās.

In the Rgveda there are references to the case of Çunaḥçepa in the group of hymns associated with his name and in the fifth Maṇḍala. Varuṇa is implored in i. 24. 12 to release the singer, Varuṇa Çunaḥçepo yām āhvad gr̥bhītāh. In the next verse we read Çunaḥçepo hy āhvad gr̥bhītās triṣv ādityām drupadēṣu baddhāh. In v. 2. 7 occurs çūnaç cit chēpañ nīditam saḥsṛād yūpād amuñcah, addressed to Agni.

Now neither of these passages seems in any way to accord with the account of the Aitareya which has three main points at least, (a) the episode of Varuṇa, Hariṣcandra, and Rohita; (b) the episode of Çunaḥçepa and Ajigarta; (c) the episode of Viçvāmitra's sons and Çunaḥçepa. In the first passage, which purports at least to treat Çunaḥçepa as a figure of the present, there is no hint of anything but that Çunaḥçepa was bound to three pieces of wood (dru-pada). That these made up the sacrificial post, a sort of tripod, as suggested by Griffith in his translation, is the best mode of reconciling the Rgveda and the Brāhmaṇa, but it is wholly without any support from the passages where the sacrificial post is mentioned, always as a single post, never as a real tripod. Roth therefore seems clearly justified in taking it that Çunaḥçepa was tied to the three pieces of wood in preparation for martyrdom or punishment, much as Prometheus was bound to the rock so as to be helpless to avoid the vulture's onslaught.

In v. 2. 7 the reference to a yūpa does occur, but the phrase sahasrāl at once takes it into the sphere of the metaphorical. Griffith evades this difficulty by taking the sense as 'bound for a thousand' as the price, but, apart from the fact that the figure is inaccurate, the construction is rejected by every consideration of probability and has not even the authority of Sāyaṇa.

Of Hariṣcandra, of Rohita, of Ajigarta, and, in this connexion, of Viṣvāmitra we have no information in the Ṛgveda. In the face of these facts we can only dismiss the whole narrative as a later invention than the Ṛgveda, and ascribe its utilization of the Ṛgvedic verses, 100 in all, to a time when it was desired to find recitations for the Hotṛ at the Rājasūya in connexion with the tale of Ṣunaḥṣepa. In the opinion of Roth¹ the legend grew up into its present content during the period when the collection of the Ṛgveda was in process of being carried out, and it was due to it that the series of hymns in the first book to various deities was ascribed to the authorship of Ṣunaḥṣepa. He lays stress on the argument that the arrangement of the hymns in part depends on the theory of authorship. On the other hand, in the view of Aufrecht,² the authorships ascribed by the Anukramanī are compiled from the notices of the Brāhmaṇas, and, while this view is not altogether tenable, it would be impossible to come to any definite conclusion regarding the period of growth of the legend from the order of hymns in the Saṃhitā or the attribution to Ṣunaḥṣepa of the hymns in question.

But it is clear from the Gāthās of the Aitareya that there came into existence a legend of the saving of Ṣunaḥṣepa and his transfer to the family of Viṣvāmitra. This is clearly preserved to us in the text, and from vii. 17. 3 to the end of the verses it runs as a perfectly simple narrative requiring only the names of the speakers to be supplied to make it clear, just as they are supplied in the epic. The Aitareya, however, does make one very considerable addition to the verses; it tells us that only half the sons of Viṣvāmitra accepted the new position of Ṣunaḥṣepa. This is not told us by the verses, and seems to be inconsistent with the verses. For Viṣvāmitra addresses Madhuchandas and all his brothers, and the reply of Madhuchandas is that they accept his wishes, and three times sarve is applied to them in the following Gāthās, with never a hint at any division of opinion. Moreover, why should Viṣvāmitra have addressed the midmost of his sons to the omission of the older ones, when he wished to place Ṣunaḥṣepa not in the middle—perhaps his most natural place as he was the midmost of Ajigarta's sons—but at the very head? The explanation of the idea of two sets of Viçvāmitra's sons may quite possibly be the fact that Viçvāmitra says to them te vai putrāḥ paçumanto vīravanto bhaviṣyatha ye mānaṁ me 'nugrḥṇanto vīravantam akarta mām.

Of course te and ye do not mean 'those of you who', but 'ye because', but this point may easily have been lost, and have assisted the framing of the fiction of the origin of the Andhras, Pulindas, &c., from the rebellious sons of Viçvāmitra.

It appears to me that, since, in the first place, the prose adds nothing to the verses that is necessary for the sense, and since, in the second place, it contains a notice which is not in harmony with the verses, it is only reasonable to conclude that the prose is later, and that there was once a metrical version in Gāthās of this episode. But can we go further and believe that this episode included in it all the Brāhmaṇa story, including Hariṣcandra and Rohita? Roth evidently hesitated on this question, and there seems to me to be no evidence on which we can find a positive answer. The verses in chapters 13 and 15 are quite different from those in chapters 17 and 18, which are full of references to an individual and clear action, while those in the first two chapters are general in the extreme. Indeed, so inappropriate is the exhortation to the king to obtain a son in chapter 13 that it is addressed to Brahmins! There can therefore be only one logical conclusion, that the verses are not chosen out of a narrative made up apropos of Hariṣcandra, but are mere general maxims fitted into such a story. The same remark applies to the verses in chapter 15 on the benefits of energy, with the solitary exception that Rohita appears in one verse. This is of course capable of three explanations: (1) the verses may really belong to a narrative of Rohita and Hariṣcandra, as Oldenberg urges; (2) the name Rohita for the king's son may be borrowed from an older verse where Rohita denoted some other person altogether; (3) the name may have been put in place of some other word in a verse, in order to fit it more closely into the story. There is no evidence in favour of any of these views which is at all conclusive, and therefore the question must remain undecided whether the verses ever formed part of the narrative of Çunaḥṣepa.

It will be seen therefore that the present text is composite, and probably not primitive, and that an Ākhyāna in the sense of Oldenberg cannot be found in it. An Ākhyāna essentially requires to fulfil the type postulated that there should be a prose narrative explaining verses, which give the chief points and moments of the narrative, including especially the speeches of the parties.¹ The verses in chapters 17 and 18 would be an Ākhyāna if they really were accompanied by prose which did explain and connect them, but this as we have seen is not the case. The narrative in the preceding chapters stands in no such relation to the Gāthās; they are gnomic verses, not narrative, not dialogue proper, and they therefore are precisely like the form of literature common later in the Pañcatantra and allied literature, but that form of literature is not the Ākhyāna of Oldenberg.

The legend of Çunaḥçepa therefore presents itself in the following stages: (1) Çunaḥçepa is rescued from some great danger and stands as a specimen of the results of divine favour (RV. i. 24. 12, 13; v. 2. 7). (2) This tale is developed into the narrative of the proposal to sacrifice Çunaḥçepa and his rescue and adoption by Viçvāmītra, the latter being a very important element in the narrative. This stage is represented by the Gāthās in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, vii. 17 and 18.

(3) This story is brought to completion by the narrative of Hariṣcandra and Rohita which explains the reason for the intended sacrifice of Çunaḥçepa, as it appears in the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, vii. 13-16. It is impossible to say whether this narrative is presupposed by the Gāthās and whether it ever existed in Gāthā form. It is of course obvious that some reason must have existed for the offering of Çunaḥçepa, but that may merely have been an ordinary tale of the performance of the human sacrifice and not a tale of the extraordinary and almost ludicrous action of Hariṣcandra and Nārada. Very probably the two stories of Hariṣcandra and his son and Çunaḥçepa have been allowed to mingle, as they seem to belong to different strata of tradition, the first falling among the many stories of the sacrifice of children among the Semitic and other races, and the latter reprobating the practice of human sacrifice as a custom, perhaps one specially favoured by the Aṅgiras family, which was opposed by other Vedic families.

The Hariṣcandra and Çunaḥçepa legend, as we possess it, has no trace of hostility between Vasiṣṭha and Viçvāmītra, who appear amicably as Brahman and Hotṛ, at the sacrifice; it is left for later texts from the Harivaṇṣa onwards to find in the legend of Triçaṅku, which is a pale reflection of the fact of Çunaḥçepa's binding to these drupadas, an account of the growth of contention between the two sages.² But to these legends no possible faith can be given. What is, however, of interest is that we already find here traces of the royal character³ attributed to Viçvāmītra, since the young Çunaḥcepa is said to succeed to the lordship of the Jahnus as well as the divine lore of the Gāthinas. Without accepting the view that this idea of Viçvāmitra is primitive, it is clearly to be connected with the mention of Viçvāmitra as a king of the Jahnus in the Pañcaviṅça Brāhmaṇa.

According to the ritual as given in the *Āçvalāyana Çrauta Sūtra*¹ the sacrifice begins with a Pavitra Agniṣṭoma before the Phālgunī full moon, followed by a year in which the four-monthly rites are duly performed. Then follow the Abhiṣecaniya and the Daçapeya. The former is an Ukthya with the Bṛhat as Prṣṭha Stotra and both Sāmans (i. e. the Rathantara in the Pavamāna), and it is after the Marutvatīya on that day has been recited that the story of Çunaḥcepa is narrated to the king surrounded by his children and ministers. This is followed by seven days of Samsṛpeṣṭis, and then by the Daçapeya. Then in the bright half of Vaiçākha occurs the Keçavapaniya, an Atirātra with the Bṛhat as Prṣṭha. Then in the bright half of Aṣāḍha the Dvyaha called Vyusṭi, the first day an Agniṣṭoma, the second an Atirātra with all the Stomas. Finally a month later comes the Kṣatrasya Dhṛti, an Agniṣṭoma.

Much the same account with detailed differences is given by the *Çāṅkhāyana Çrauta Sūtra*² which however interpolates a Sautrāmaṇi before the Keçavapaniya. The *Baudhāyana Çrauta Sūtra*³ also follows the same general outline, but places the narrative of Çunaḥcepa during the cooking of an odana.⁴ Similarly the *Āpastamba Çrauta Sūtra*⁵ and the *Kātyāyana Çrauta Sūtra*⁶ include the episode in their texts. There is no mention of it in the account in the Kauçika Sūtra.⁷

The Aitareya confines its whole matter to the solitary Abhiṣecaniya day and adds a new form to those of the Adhvaryu texts. Hence the Abhiṣeka is called the Punarabhiṣeka (viii. 5) and an account is given in vii. 19–viii. 4 of the drink of the king on the occasion of the Abhiṣeka and of the litany of the day. Then comes an alternative form (viii. 12–20) of the Abhiṣeka, an account of those so anointed (viii. 21–23), and the text concludes (viii. 24–28) with the Purohita and his functions. It may be taken as certain that it was from the Aitareya that the Adhvaryu texts took their account of the Çunaḥcepa episode: all of them mention the response of the Adhvaryu, and Āpastamba characteristically fills out the story by allowing the Ākhyāna to have over a 100 or 1,000 verses, possibly by a tenfold recitation. The ceremony in the Aitareya (viii. 5-11) is in many respects less elaborate than that of the Yajurveda, but a conclusion as to a temporal relation would be risky.

§ 7. LANGUAGE, STYLE, AND METRE.

A. Language of the Muntras.

The two Brāhmaṇas present in essentials a common language, a living prose considerably anterior to the stage of the language presented in the grammar of Pāṇini. There are many distinctions in the use of phrases in the two works, and even between the different parts of the Aitareya, but these are of minor importance. On the other hand, the Mantra material must be carefully distinguished; it is comparatively brief in extent, and falls into two distinct divisions. The first of these is R̥gvedic citations, which are normally short, merely the first few words (Pratīka) of the verse meant being alluded to, though both texts to emphasize a point at issue do not hesitate to cite the whole of a verse. The second division is that of the prose formulae and the metrical formulae, which appear in a limited degree, and in the case of the Aitareya the Gāthās, of which there are a considerable number, mainly in the story of Ṣaṇṣepa, but also in the account of the Agnihotra, the great consecration, &c. There is no reasonable ground to doubt that this material is normally, if not absolutely always, older than the prose text, and it is certain that it yields a very large number of unusual and archaic forms.¹ Thus the Gāthās of the Ṣaṇṣepa episode are perfectly clearly from their content older than the prose text appended, and in their forms they show a prodigality of rarities compared with the prose text. The Kauṣītaki in keeping with the brevity of its style quotes very few verses indeed, and of these one (xxvii. 1) has long been treated by the editors as prose, and a similar fate has befallen some verses in the Aitareya (viii. 25 and 27).

Here and there in the prose of the account of the Purohita in the Aitareya (viii. 25, 27) can be detected signs of a metrical account, from which the prose has freely borrowed, but there is no possibility of recovering more than an occasional line of such verses. Prose Mantras are not numerous or important with the exception of those regarding the actual cutting up of the victim which are given in the Aitareya (ii. 6 and 7) with greater completeness than in the Kauṣītaki.

The forms in R̥gvedic verses need not here be noted, but in the other Mantra material mention should be made of the verbal forms smusi (AB.

vii. 18. 3); vidmasi (ib. 7); sthana (ib. 17. 7); çere (ib. 15. 2); and of the infinitives and subjunctives abhiçastāt and apaharāt (v. 30. 11) in a main clause and kṛṇavātha after yat (ii. 7). In AB. vii. 15. 3 the use of carāti with a number of presents is regarded as suspicious by the commentators, and Aufrecht goes so far as to suggest a metrical ground for the change, but the passage really allows or even requires a futural form. In vii. 17. 6 jñāpayā is regarded normally as an imperative with a lengthened, but this sense is very doubtful. On the other hand, the prose of the direction for the cutting up of the victim provides a large number of examples of the use of tāt* as an imperative ending of the second person, including nidhattāt, gamayatāt, anvavasījatāt, āchyatāt, utkhidatāt, kṛṇutāt, uccyāvayatāt, khanatāt, samsījatāt. This passage (AB. ii. 6) presents also the rare form vārayadhvāt for tāt*. In the second plural we have in AB. vii. 17. 7 ṣṛṇotana. The AB. has the irregular optative ṛñjīyam (cf. avapadyeyam in viii. 23) and the impossible ujāyethaḥ (viii. 15).

The aorist is represented by akarta (vii. 18. 5) and adarṣuḥ (vii. 17. 3) for which the Çāṅkhāyana version has adrākṣuḥ, and perhaps by alapsatu (vii. 17. 3).

The second future appears in upetā (vii. 18. 7), a variant of upaitā rather than a second plural, for which the context presents no legitimate use.

The perfect appears in çuçruma (vii. 15), a use which is never in the first person common and in Pāṇini is proscribed in normal cases.

The desiderative yields the form didāsitha (viii. 21. 10) for which the Çatapatha Brāhmaṇa substitutes manda āsitha, but which the Çāṅkhāyana Ġrauta Sūtra confirms. It also gives prasisṛkṣāṇi (after no) in KB. xxvii. 1 (Aufrecht¹ conjectures sisakṣāṇi).

Most interesting of all, perhaps, is the colloquial form yām-ak-i found in the last cited passage of the Kauṣītaki, which is a diminutive form of the verbal form yāmi.

The constructions of note are purū nābhyā apiçasaḥ (AB. ii. 6), and mā rāviṣṭa . . . ned vas toke tanaye ravitā ravat (ii. 7) where the first verb is from the root = 'cut', and the second from that = 'cry' and where the use of the negatives is of interest. In AB. v. 30 is found the use, frequent later, of the optative in similes: yathā ha vā sthūriṇaikena yāyāt . . . evaṁ yanti, and the regular verse use of the perfect in narrative in apa yo jahāra (v. 30. 11).

The normal forms offer some of interest such as janāsaḥ in AB. v. 30. 6, and the very curious form in AB. ii. 6 praçasā bāhū çalā doṣaṇī kaçyape-vāñçāchidre çronī kavaṣorū parṇasrekāsthīvantā. These forms are very striking in their antiquity and show that the prose Mantras are not recent. The Gāthās, however, yield (AB. vii. 18. 9) the remarkable form Gāthīnām which the occurrence of Gāthīnāḥ just before leads us to recognize as a real genitive plural in ām, for which, as for the duals in ā of the prose Mantras, the Brāhmaṇa text offers nothing parallel.¹

The case uses are not remarkable for novelty: the root sthā is found in close proximity with the locative in the sense of 'adhere to', 'accept' (AB. vii. 18. 3), and with the dative as 'acknowledge' (ib. 8). The ablative with vr has the natural sense of 'prefer to' in AB. vii. 17. 3. In AB. vii. 17. 7 saṃjñānāneṣu vai brūyāt would present difficulties, but brūyāḥ occurs in the ÇÇS. and the conjecture saṃjñānam is essential as the form saṃjñānāneṣu is quite impossible.

B. Language of the Prose.

In the case of the R̥gvedic verses cited not rarely the prose repeats them in the text while explaining the verse. It is impossible to regard the forms thus quoted as being valid examples of what the prose would use, and the point though obvious is not unimportant as it has in some measure misled Liebig in his account of the irregularities, i. e. deviations from Pāṇini, of the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa, although he himself quite properly treats the Gāthās as sui generis, and older than the prose. Thus we must not credit the Brāhmaṇa with mumugdhi (iii. 19. 17) for it comes straight from the verse RV. x. 73. 11. Nor is saṃçiçādhi (i. 13. 28) any value for the Brāhmaṇa as it is from RV. viii. 42. 3. Again in ii. 2. 21 we have kr̥dhī na ūrdhvān carathāya jīvaṣe explained in the identic words, but with caraṇāya; are we to believe that this shows that kr̥dhī was a form approved by the Brāhmaṇa for prose? The answer is clearly no, but that the only word changed in the version is the obscure one carathāya which is made simple by caraṇa being substituted, kr̥dhī being far too well known to need explanation, and the Brāhmaṇa not aiming at a philological commentary. The same phenomenon meets us again in iii. 22. 4 where yad im uḡmasi kartave karat tat (RV. x. 74. 6 d) is explained as yad evaitad avocāmākarat tat; whatever we may think of this version it seems that the Aitareya took the text as kartave 'karat, but in any case to take akarat as a Brāhmaṇa form on the strength of this passage cannot be justified. Another illustration of the importance of discrimination is to be seen in ii. 2. 5, when yad ūrdhvas tiṣṭhā draviṇeha dhattāt yad vā kṣayo mātur asyā upasthe (RV. iii. 8. 1) becomes in free rendering

yadi ca tiṣṭhāsi yadi ca ṣayāsai draviṇam evāsmāsu dhattāt. It is idle to treat these as Brāhmaṇa forms; it would else be incomprehensible that the forms should never occur in any Brāhmaṇa passage proper: the use of a subjunctive with yadi and the use of the imperative in tāt are not found elsewhere in the Aitareya, but they show that the compiler of the text knew the correct full forms of the subjunctive, and could replace them in the text.

Of the forms that are really characteristic of the Brāhmaṇa prose the most conform, of course, to the norms of Pāṇini; there are certain regular deviations, and also a small number of forms which cannot be regarded as anything but wholly irregular, and open perhaps to suspicion as being mere errors of a tradition which allowed almost any irregularity in the sacred text.

(1) Euphonic Combination.

1. The Sandhi of au is āv before vowels other than ū and ā before ū in both Brāhmaṇas as also in the Aitareya Āraṇyaka (i. 3. 5; 4. 2; 5. 1; iii. 2. 4, 6): so the AB. has aṣvinā udajayatām aṣvināv āṣṇuvātām (iv. 8. 4); aṣvināv indram (iv. 8. 2); aṣvinā ūcatuḥ (vii. 16); dvā ubhayoḥ (viii. 5). The KB. has barhiṣmantā utsrjati (v. 7); tā uktau (vii. 2); vyūḍhasamūdhā upayanti (xxvii. 7); devā upāhvayante (viii. 7), &c.

2. The Sandhi of ā with r is ā; thus in AB. prathama ṛk, iii. 35; pita ṛbhūn, vi. 12; yatha ṛsabham, vi. 18, 21, 22; yatharṣi, ii. 4; iv. 26; in the KB. there is only neṣṭa ṛtvijām, xxviii. 3. The ÇÇS. i. 4. 5 has,¹ however, praçāsta ātmanā and it is conceivable that in vacasa ubhe, KB. xxvi. 14, we have a case of Sandhi of ā = a, for the MS. M reads vacasā.

3. The Sandhi of a with r is ar, but sometimes r stands; thus ea ṛṣayah, AB. i. 27; ii. 1, 13; iii. 25; vi. 17, 32; asya ṛcam, iii. 17; nāma ṛk, iii. 23; Ḡrautarṛṣiḥ, vii. 1; sarpaṛṣiḥ, vi. 1. On the other hand, as Aufrecht² points out, in the Gāthā (vii. 17) Bharatarṛsabha is written but must be pronounced Bharatarṣabha.

4. The effect of r in linguāizing n is seen in AB. i. 13 and 30 in the phrase brahmaivāsmā etat purogavam akar ṇa vai. The use is very strange and Sāyaṇa does not comment on it. Parallel to this silence of Sāyaṇa's is his silence regarding mahāṇagnī in i. 30, which is read by the great weight of authority, though not by the Bibl. Ind. ed. and the Ānand. ed. (which admits it as read in five of its MSS.), but in the latter case the lingualizing has no excuse, and is really parallel to the forms nīṇyuh, a v. l. in KB. xxx. 6, and parinīṇyuh, a v. l. in xxviii. 2.

5. In yaças kīrtim in AB. vii. 23 and 24 the retention of s is noteworthy, but the phrase is taken from a prose Mantra and proves nothing for the Brāhmaṇa which does not use that Sandhi elsewhere. Similarly the forms urūkam and bahura in AB. ii. 7 and 18 cited by Aufrecht¹ for l being in place of r occur only in Mantras. But the other cases cited by him, romāṇi, ii. 9, and çithirāṇi, iii. 31, are clear cases.

6. The lengthening of final vowels of particles survives in the AB. in atī tu tam arjātai, iii. 42, where emphasis is meant; vy ā muñcante, vi. 23, and nā vīva nardet, vi. 32, where doubt as to the reading is needless. KB. has nothing parallel. Internally the lengthening is found in pratyavarūhya, AB. viii. 9; pariçesa, vii. 5, and in a compound in uttaravedīnābhi, i. 28, which contrasts with vedi regularly in the text. In KB. xxiii. 5 pratīsāram occurs.

7. The forms avāksam, AB. i. 28, and enksva, viii. 9, show k for t and are anomalous. The first is a verbal play on vāc,² the second possibly an incorrect restoration of a Prākritism for entsva.

8. In AB. iv. 17 paryāṇa is found, and in iv. 5 paryot in some MSS. In KB. xvi. 5 paryajet is a v. l.

(2) Accidence.

1. From stems in a is found in AB. iv. 15. 1 stomebhiḥ. This is an extraordinary form for prose.

2. From stems in ā the ablative and genitive are as in other Brāhmaṇas found in ai; but the normal forms in āḥ also occur; thus in the gen. apūtāyai, AB. vii. 27, but pathyāyāḥ svasteh, i. 9; and the abl. asyāḥ, i. 23; pratiṣṭhāyāḥ, iii. 14. So the KB. has jīrṇāyai (abl.) xviii. 7; vidyāyai (abl. or gen.), vi. 10; vidyāyai (gen.), vi. 11, and etasyai similarly.

The AB. has in vi. 15 the apparently contracted instrumental jagat-kāmyā, which is a very rare form in prose. Aufrecht³ cites a parallel mitrakṛtyā in iii. 4, but this is naturally taken as from mitrakṛti; KB. has no parallel form of this kind.

3. The stems in i and ī present as usual ai as the normal ablative and genitive form, but not the exclusive form of ablative and genitive. So abhibhūtyai rūpam, AB. viii. 2; gāyatryai ca jagatyai ca (gen.), iv. 27; tatyai, vi. 20; but gāyatrīyāḥ, jagatyāḥ (gen.), vi. 32; nirṛtyāḥ, iv. 10. The KB. has prajātyai (gen.), iv. 6; v. 4; xv. 4; abhikrāntyai, viii. 2; apracutyai, xxii. 1; bṛhatyai (abl.), xxiv. 5; but according to Lindner in xii. 1 īstyāḥ (abl.), but this is a very doubtful reading. In vi. 10 and 11 trayyai is abl. or gen. and gen. respectively.

4. The datives of stems in ī always have ai in both Brāhmanas; as in dhṛtyai, gūptyai, abhijityai, apahatyai, avaruddhyai, āptyai, upāptyai, saṁtatyai, saṁastyai and others; rarer forms are asāṁmugdhyai, KB. xxiii. 4; spṛṣtyai, xxiv. 8.

5. Stems in ī when feminine vary as to the use of the feminine endings in cases other than the dative; thus the AB. has as gen. svasteh, i. 9, as abl. vedeh, vi. 3; vii. 27; devayonyai, iii. 19; and as loc. not only āhutyām, kṛtyām, yonyām, but also īṣṭau, (svayonau, KB. xxv. 8); while bhūmyām in viii. 8 is followed by bhūman in viii. 9. The KB. has ātmasaṁskṛteḥ and prānasasṁskṛteḥ (abl.), xx. 3; ṣṛiyāḥ (gen.), xxiv. 9; ṣṛiyāḥ (abl.) with ṣṛiyām (loc.) in iii. 17; ṣṛiyām, xviii. 9; xxix. 5; vedyām, iii. 9, and apracutyām, xxv. 7 and often.

6. Other abnormalities in the ī declension are few; tiraçeṭḥ (nom.) in AB. iv. 25. 10 has a parallel in vi. 32. 3 and īṣṭih in KB. vi. 15. In AB. ii. 4. 2 āpriyaḥ is the nom. of āpri as elsewhere; in iii. 27 saṁāvajjāmibhyām and saṁāvajjāmibhiḥ both occur. In KB. v. 7 patnyaḥ is accusative in all MSS.; akṣarapaṅktayaḥ, xvi. 8; but paṅktih nom. in xviii. 3; dyāvāprthivī in AB. iv. 27 is traditional; dyāvā there seems used as a nom. fem.

7. Stems in ū yield only īṣvai saṁçityai, AB. i. 27; tanvaḥ as acc. in AB. i. 24 and ii. 4.

8. Of consonantal stems may be noted the fact that vichandāḥ is used as a neuter in AB. v. 4, and that in iii. 10 peças and peça alternate as bases, indicating the constant tendency of confusion between them. Similarly, while in KB. xxx. 5 the age of the cow and man contemplated by Aitaḥ are fixed at çatāyus and sahasrāyus, in AB. vi. 33 the terms are çatāyu and sahasrāyu. In AB. viii. 17 āpaḥ is as often accusative.

9. In stems in an the locative has either an or ani on no clear principle. Thus, beside ahan (especially with adjectives) as in saṁāne 'han, iii. 47; caturviṅçe 'han, vi. 23; parama vyoman, ātman, çīrṣan, sāman, occurs ahani, iv. 31, 32; v. 2. So the KB. has ātman, iii. 7; v. 4; vii. 1; ix. 6, and often, especially in the phrase ātman dhā; ahan, ii. 8; xxv. 9; xxvi. 7, and elsewhere, but also ahani; çīrṣan, ii. 8; parvan parvan (bis), xxiii. 4. But beside ātman occurs brahmaṇi.

The neuter occurs in the masculine form in AB. iv. 2, when bhrātrvyahā is applied to the Sāman.

10. From stems in añc the one form of note is the neuter parāñ as often, in AB. iii. 46 (ter). The proposal of Liebich to take it as an adverb in AB. viii. 28 in the phrase parāñ jighyati is not, however, probable. Both Brāhmaṇas use parāñcin as well as parāñc.

11. The superlative with double ending occurs in balisṭhatama in AB. iii. 46, whereas balisṭha alone appears in ii. 36 and vii. 16. Noteworthy are the comparatives upāptatarāṇi, KB. xv. 5; abhidhānatore, xiii. 5.

12. In numerals occur the irregularities trayastrinṅatyā, AB. v. 32; ṣaṭtrinṅatam ekapadāḥ, vii. 1. Here may also be noted the readings of the MSS., catuṣṣaṣṭim kavacina āsuh, AB. iii. 48, and parṇaṣarāḥ saṣṭis trīṇi ca ṣatāny āhṛtya, vii. 2, where the base parṇaṣar is very unusual and where the syntax is impossible.¹ Weber naturally suggests the necessary alteration in each case, and no doubt this is correct. The KB. has dvāpañcāṣṭya in xviii. 3 = 51st and 52nd as usual, and saptatim anuṣṭubhaḥ saptatim pañktih as a nom.

13. The pronoun shows few anomalies. yuvam occurs in AB. ii. 22. 10, and asmāka in kaḥ svit so 'smākāsti vīrah, vii. 27. 2, where there is no metrical necessity.² But elsewhere āvām only appears. enat occurs as a nominative in AB. vii. 22: tad enat prītaṁ kṣatrād gopāyati, and also in KB. xxii. 1: tasmād enau prathamau ṣasyete; in both cases of course perhaps erroneously.³

14. In the classes of verbs the chief irregularities are the use of tāṣṭi. AB. ii. 4. 13, in an etymology of Tvaṣṭr as a verb of the second class; the same is the treatment of kṣeti, v. 21. 2, 17, and parikṣeti, vi. 32. 11. 14. Possibly here must be reckoned prajighyati in AB. viii. 28, but Böhtlingk reads jigāti and Liebich⁴ desires to take the form as a third plural of hi as a third class verb. nihnavate in AB. i. 26 is a mere misreading for nihnivate, but nihnave occurs in a Gāthā in vii. 17, where Liebich⁵ would read nihnave.

15. The omission of the augment in the imperfect is fairly common in the Āitareya and is also found in the Kausītaki. The examples are īkṣata, AB. iii. 21. 4; 45. 8; nyubjan, vii. 30. 3; anvavayuh, vi. 14. 10; prajunayan, ii. 38; pratyuttabhnuvan, iv. 18. 5, 6; samsthāpayan, ii. 31. 4; visruisata, iii. 27. 1; viharanta, ii. 36. 2. Two other cases are not real examples, namely in vii. 1 for uccakrāmat must be read uccakrāma, and in iii. 30 for vāci kalpayiṣan must be replaced avācikalpayiṣan. In one case the augment is wholly misplaced, udaprapatat in iii. 33, where, however, Aufrecht's correction udapatat seems essential.¹ The KB. has vimadan, xxii. 6 (v. l.); pratyutkrumata, xxiii. 4 (v. l.); apaspr̥ṇvata, xxiv. 3; naṁnamuḥ, as a v. l. in xii. 1 (anaiṁnamuḥ, AB. ii. 20).

16. In the present indicative the AB. has the common forms īce, i. 16. 4; 30. 3; and duhe, vi. 3. 2; it has also çere (for çerate) in v. 28, a form occurring also in a Gāthā in vii. 15. anusmasi in AB. iv. 5. 5 is a very odd form for prose, though it occurs with vidmasi in Gāthās. In v. 2 the KB. has īce.

17. In the imperfect indicative there are more anomalies. The tendency to transfer roots to the first class is seen in upapṛāyata, iii. 39. 2; abhyahanat, iv. 3. 2; açayat, iii. 15. 1. From the third class come adīdet, iii. 34. 1, in an etymology and therefore not to be pressed; abhyasuṣavuh, iii. 32. 3. In the ninth class gr̥h has bh in pratyagr̥bhñan, vi. 35. 8, 9; samagr̥bhñāt, iii. 26. 2; 27. 1; upasamagr̥bhñāt, 26. 2. The KB. has ahr̥ñāt in a doubtful passage, xxiv. 1. The AB. text has the extraordinary form apāhata, iv. 25. 3, for the proper apāghnata found elsewhere in the AB. In AB. viii. 15 ajāyethāḥ in a quasi-Mantra is impossible. In v. 11 praupyantu occurs awkwardly as a passive for prāvapan.

18. In the optative the tendency to carry over the roots to the first class is seen in prāṇet, abhyapānet, AB. ii. 21. 3; pratirundhet, vi. 34. 4, and in minet, KB. x. 1. In AB. viii. 15 the most improbable Mantra forms vṛj̥j̥yām and in viii. 23 the prose avapadyeyam occur. Both Brāhmaṇas agree in the use of ī for e in the verbs of the first conjugation, especially in the causative form; the occurrences are āhvayīta, AB. iv. 7. 3; vyāhvayīta, iii. 19. 10; vi. 21. 12; kāmayīta, iii. 45. 7; āpayīta, KB. iv. 4; kalpayīta, xix. 10. They also agree in the use of īyuh for īyuh in AB. v. 9. 5; KB. xxx. 6. The precativ proper is seen in bhaksīṣṭa, AB. vii. 18; udyāsam, KB. xxviii. 1. In AB. viii. 28 jāgriyāt is read for jāgr̥yāt, which Böhlingk insists on reading.

19. Of the subjunctive there are a considerable number of forms, but those in the KB. are in comparison few. Those in the prose of AB. are tiṣṭhāsi, ii. 2, which is, however, as noted above, merely a paraphrase of tiṣṭhāḥ in the RV.; prajānātha, i. 7; juhavātha, v. 32; asat, ii. 87; 11. 12; 13. 8; iii. 43. 6; viii. 1. 5; 4. 5; atīkrāmāt, i. 24; pratitiṣṭhāt, iv. 25; gachān, ii. 12; nirhanan, viii. 6; çayāsai, ii. 2; arjātai, iii. 42; saṁgachātai, i. 24; saṁtiṣṭhātai, viii. 9; haratai,² v. 34; asyāthāḥ, vi. 30; for arjasi, iii. 42, Aufrecht suggests arjāsi.³ To this list, from which the Gāthā forms are omitted, should be added adan, viii. 22. 4. The KB. has asat, viii. 9;

20. The injunctive is rare in its use; it is normally used with mā, bibhāta, ii. 16; yātayan, i. 13. 12 (the only imperfects); anuvocaḥ, pravārīḥ, i. 13. 12; vadiṣuḥ, ii. 31. 4; parigāta, vi. 33; bhūt, vi. 1; hinsīḥ, K.R. xii. 3; mandhvam, xxx. 5; anupravadiṣma, AB. ii. 15. 13; anuvādiṣma, v. 22. 5, where the difference of quantity in vad' is noteworthy. Where the clause is positive the only probable case is anuparyāguḥ, iii. 28. 1, and prajānayan, ii. 38. 8, merely represents caṇsan in the Mantra.

21. The aorists are numerous and mainly regular; the following are in point of form noteworthy; ayāñsi, AB. ii. 40. 3; ajñāsam, vi. 34. 3; praty-aravtsi, vi. 34. 4; asakthāḥ, vi. 33. 4; ajñāta, vii. 14. 5, 7; prāvārīkṣīḥ, vii. 26. 6; adruḥṣaḥ, viii. 23. 10 (perhaps a misreading); strange are ajagra-bhaiṣam, vi. 35. 21; paryagrahaiṣam, vi. 24. 16,² in which the use of ai for i is strange, while the use of bh for h is paralleled by the imperfect forms noted above. In AB. i. 20. 3 nābheḥ is given as a derivation for nābhi: it cannot really be regarded as a genuine form for the AB., and the sense is uncertain. The KB. has asicāmahai, vi. 1, which is an impossible form. āpati, xiv. 2, may be noted. In the earlier part of the AB., while the irregular forms common later do not occur freely, there are found akar, i. 13. 4; 30. 5; ii. 33. 5; akrata, i. 23. 1; ii. 23. 3; iii. 33. 3; adrāk, i. 6. 11; in vi. 24. 13 akar by its parallelism with avadhīḥ is shown to be second person. In accordance with its later character is the fact that KB. shows hardly any of these short forms of the aorist in s without i (Whitney, Sansk. Gramm. § 888).

22. The perfect is not very common in the AB. i-v but is frequent thereafter and is very common in the KB. Rare or unusual forms are very rare; but the AB. has sam . . . vidre, i. 17. 15; saṁjahhruḥ, i. 18. 1; apinakyuḥ, vi. 1³; niniyoja,⁴ vii. 16. 1; the last phrase is impossible; and āmantrayām āsa, vii. 14. 8; 17. 7 (where the ÇÇS. has cakre). Further, for the absurd prāpat, vii. 14. 8, prāpa is necessary, and for uccakrāmat, vii. 1, uccakrāma. The AB. has dādḥāra, iv. 12. 8; v. 4. 15; 5. 3; 6. 12 and often; bibhāya, v. 25. 17; dīdhāya, i. 28. 9; ii. 40. 2; 41. 4; iii. 8. 2; iv. 11. 8.

23. Of participial forms are noteworthy çocatyaḥ, AB. iii. 36; udatyaḥ, vi. 27. 10; 32. 3; siṣāsatyāḥ, iv. 17. 2.⁵ In AB. vii. 16 nihçāna is recorded, but is clearly wrong. Of perfect participles are noteworthy beside cakruse,

AB. v. 24. 3, okuṣī, KB. xxvii. 1; sasṛjānam, AB. iv. 28. 1; vividānaḥ, v. 28. 5; riricānaḥ, KB. x. 3; viḡigyānāḥ, AB. iv. 31. 1; abhiṣiṣicāna, viii. 6. 11. In gr̥bh̥tataḥ, AB. ii. 1, bh appears for h.

24. The infinitive in tum occurs in both texts, but not freely; that in toḥ is common in the AB. and occurs in the KB. That in tavai is found in three forms only; the AB. has etavai, v. 15; startavai, ii. 6, 35; iii. 7; the KB. uddhartavai, iv. 14. The AB. has āsade, i. 29. 7, but purā . . . apiḡasah, ii. 6, is only in a Mantra. One irregular form is vyapanayitum, vii. 5, which Böhrtlingk¹ corrects on the ground that Sāyana does not note it, but without adequate ground.

25. The gerunds and gerundives show few new forms; Weber² cites as cases of the long vowel for the short udūhya, vii. 6; nirūhya, vii. 5; anūtsāram, iii. 45, but in the last case Aufrecht's correction anūtsāram is obviously correct, and in the two former ūh may be the root, not vah. pratyavarūhya, viii. 9, is different but doubtful. As usual there are many cases of the gerund in am, of which nyūñkham, KB. xxx. 5; pratisāram, xxiii. 5; abhigrāsam, xxii. 8; yathopapādam, xxv. 10, may be noted. The gerundive is seen in ḡaṇstavya, ii. 32; iii. 24, 35-37; iv. 2, like ḡaṇstvā, iii. 20. 2, where, however, the correct reading is ḡastvā. The KB. has pratiṣṭhānīyah, xvi. 7. To yathākāmaprayāpyaḥ in AB. vii. 29 Haug and Weber accord an active sense which is impossible.

26. The second future appear in a large variety of forms without irregularities. The first future shows the unique form klapsyete, AB. ii. 26. 4.

27. The passive is marked by two strange forms in the AB., pariḡriyete, i. 29. 21, and pravliḡeran, iv. 19. 2, where the ḡ is unaccountable, and perhaps a mere error. Perfects are atimumuce, atimumucire, KB. xiii. 3; atimumucānaḥ, xv. 5.

28. The secondary conjugations offer some peculiarities. Causatives include avajyotayati, KB. ii. 1, a v. l. for avadyotayati, found also in the AV. and MS. The MSS. differ also as to prasrāvayanti and prasrāpayanti in KB. ii. 2, and this text gives ninartayanti, xvii. 8, and the denominative utpāthayati, iv. 3, if the reading is accepted. The AB. has nābhayanti, iii. 24; svadayati, ii. 9. 10; iḡdayati, v. 25. 17, and both texts have nyūñkhayati. The KB. seems also to have converted the normal antar-i into a denominative in antarayanti, xxiii. 4.

The desiderative is not rare and offers the abnormal form ṭipsitavyam, AB. ii. 3; jīḡyūṣitah, vii. 29. The KB. besides more or less normal forms like jigīṣitam, xxiii. 6; tustūrṣamāṇa, iv. 7 (as in ĀpÇS. vi. 6. 2), has in ii. 9 parijigrahīṣyan, which is a monstrous form, and probably incorrect for hīṣan; in AB. vi. 35. 21 ajigrabhīṣan perhaps is necessary.

The desiderative of the causative presents in AB. v. 3 the form pravi-bhāvayīṣyanti which Sāyaṇa read and explains. Nevertheless Aufrecht's¹ restoration of prabibhāvayīṣyanti is certainly correct. In AB. iii. 30 vāci-kalpayīṣan is now read for vāci kalpayīṣan. It also gives the subjunctive form ālulobhayīṣāt, AB. i. 24, and three optatives in KB. xxv. 10.

The form atimokṣamāṇah is found in KB. xvi. 7; it must be either changed with the MS. M to °mokṣyamāṇah or taken as a denominative from mokṣa, which is not improbable.

29. Contrary to the rule of Pāṇini (i. 4. 80) prefixes are normally and regularly separated from their verbs in both Brāhmaṇas, examples being very numerous. But in AB. vii. 6 the traditional reading, kept even in the Ānand. ed., yady anānupaçyet, is clearly nonsense,² and Aufrecht's emendation yady u nānupaçyet puts all in order.

30. Adverbial forms are normal; there may be noted pratyaḥṣatamāt, AB. iv. 20. 18; udāyitatārām should, it seems, be read with the MS. M in KB. xv. 4, where udāyī nitarām is kept by Lindner. In the AB. paçcā regularly occurs before vowels only, i. 7; ii. 36 (bis); iii. 2; iv. 17. Adverbs in comparative and superlative forms are uttarām, AB. vii. 20; abhitarām, iii. 44; nīcaistarām, iii. 24; çanaistarām, 45; pratamām, i. 9; iii. 47; jyoktamām, ii. 8. None of the neuter forms used later, as in the Gṛhya Sūtras, are found.

(3) Compounds, Vocabulary, and Word Formation.

1. There are few anomalies in the formation of compounds. Both texts have the fully developed compounds ekaika (ekaikena, AB. iii. 42; ekaikayā, iii. 18; ekaikām, KB. xxx. 7; ekaikasyai, xvii. 1) and anyonya (anyonyasya, AB. iv. 27. 1; KB. xxvii. 7; anyonyasmin, xxvi. 2; apparently anyonye, ii. 8).

2. With forms of kr the KB. has krūrīkṛtam, vi. 4; tīvrīkārāya, xiii. 2; pragāthīkṛtya, xix. 10. In AB. i. 3 are found muṣṭīkūrute and muṣṭī vū kṛtvā.

3. The making of a word from a grammatical phrase is illustrated by yeyajāmahaḥ, yeyajāmahasya in KB. iii. 5. The same text has in xxviii. 3

² There is no case of the negative prefix to a verb in the Vedic literature, and any effort to find one in it is wholly illegitimate; Keith, JRAS. 1906, p. 495; Aufrecht, ibid. 993.

the odd phrase āgnipātnivatī, which is uncertain of interpretation. The term abrāhmaṇokta (AB. i. 16) is obscure in sense. In KB. ii. 1 supra-tyūdhān aṅgārān pratyūhet, the use of su is noteworthy and common in the Sūtras.

4. The AB. vii. 15 has the irregular aṇāyāparitah, for which either aṇāyayā paritah or aṇāyāparitah would be normally expected;¹ an old haplology is quite possible.

5. In KB. xxvi. 1 is found the normal but rare katiṣaḍaḥaḥ, 'containing how many periods of six days?' In AB. ii. 9 occurs the strange yat kiṁcītkam, which Weber² would alter to yat kiṁcīt kamsāram, but this is improbable. In AB. viii. 26 manuṣyarājñām is abnormal. In KB. xxv. 15 aphālakṛṣṭān pratigṛhṇan is as often (Wackernagel, Altind. Gramm. II. i. 78, 79) really equivalent to phālakṛṣṭān apratigṛhṇan. In xviii. 10 ṛtebarhiṣkān is a compound. yāvadaham occurs twice in the KB. In KB. xxvi. 2 goāyusī as a compound is retained even when the order is inverted, as often. In AB. viii. 17. 5 rajakartārah is a late form.

6. Word Formation offers few novelties; in KB. xxv. 13 is found nyūñkhamānaka, the ka being added to a present participle, and in AB. iv. 27 in Janamejayaka it is added to a king's name, on the analogy of putraka (AB. vi. 32; KB. xxx. 5). The KB. also has the curious nedīyastā, viii. 2, &c.; akūdhṛīcyah, viii. 5, as a name of verses, and devatyā or devakyā, both equally rare forms in xxvii. 3. The AB. in vii. 14 has sāmnāhuka with double Vṛddhi.³ In KB. xxvii. 3 vyākṣara is corrupt.

7. The names of hymns are variously given, but one common form is to substitute the author for the work; thus the hymn by Arbuda is regularly called Arbuda (KB. xvi. 1), and the hymn RV. x. 61 Nābhānediṣṭha (AB. vi. 29 seq.; KB. xxx. 5 seq.); the hymn RV. x. 86 is called Vṛṣākapi, the hymn RV. x. 62 Nārācaṇsa, the hymn RV. v. 29 Evayāmarut. This use explains the reading of all the MSS. in KB. xxv. 8 Pataṅgas tisrah where pataṅgam iti is needlessly conjectured by Lindner. So also Brhaddiva in AB. iv. 14, and Baru in vi. 25 to denote RV. x. 120 and x. 96 respectively. The KB. in xi. 8 uses aporevatyai as ablative to denote the hymn beginning apo revatīh; in xxv. 10 as genitive. In xxiii. 5 Parucchepa occurs as a name of a set of verses, and possibly with a play on the word in the plural to denote the users of these verses. The KB. also has sarvahari, xxv. 8, a name of RV. x. 96. To RV. i. 120. 1-9 the term akūdhṛīcyah is applied in KB. viii. 5.

8. Certain grammatical terms appear, of which the most important are the terms for the three tenses, which in the AB. iv. 29; 31; v. 1 are karīṣyat, kurvat, and kṛta, and in the KB. xxii. 1, 2, 3 karīṣyat, kurvat, and cakṛvat.¹ The AB. v. 32 resolves om in the three latter a-kāra, u-kāra, and ma-kāra, a passage not paralleled in the KB. Both use akṣuru as a syllable and varṇa as a letter. punarāvṛttam and punarninṛttam occur in AB. v. 1, 3, and it appears clear that the former refers to repetition of words or portions of words while the latter refers to what is normally called alliteration, the recurrence of similar sounds in different words, especially of vowels,² as Sāyaṇa, who gives two different renderings, takes it, in the first of which he vainly seeks to find some direct connexion with dancing, whereas the point is clearly the regular recurrence of a sound which is comparable with rhythm in dancing. The AB. has also in a clear grammatical sense vṛṣan and yoṣan, vi. 3, although Max Müller³ thinks that the distinction first appears in Pāṇini, and bahu as 'plural', v. 2, 15. In KB. xxvi. 5 pada and varṇa denote 'word' and 'letter' respectively. AB. has pragrāham, vi. 32; padāvagrāham, 33.

² Ind. Stud. ix. 247.

³ Böhlingk, p. 414, denies the possibility of this.

9. In this connexion interest attaches to the numerous devices adopted in order to indicate the sense 'containing a form of the root', which are found in the two texts. The past participle passive is frequently so used as in ratavat, 'containing a form of ram' in AB. v. 1 and 12, where KB. xxii. 3 has rathavat.⁴ paryastavat, AB. v. 1, 16, is supposed to be justified by pary . . . āsa (RV. vii. 32. 10); vṛlhanvat, AB. iv. 31. 3, is more strange, and is perhaps based on the preceding vṛṣanvat. On the other hand, in AB. iv. 29. 3 is found pibavat. The KB. in xxii. 1 has eṣavat, urṣavat, yuktavat, yuñjānavat; in xxvi. 15, ṣṛitavat; 17, kṣitavat; in xxii. 3 guta-vat, sthitavat, and many more. Another point of interest is yad viriphitam in AB. v. 3 where the reference is apparently grammatical, to the special pronunciation of the passage in question.

In other cases vat denotes certainly the word specified, or an equivalent idea, but usually the former is meant. antavat in AB. v. 1 is not, however, a case of the second sense as suggested by Weber⁵; his correction of Haug is necessary, but overlooks the fact that antarūpam also occurs in AB. v. 1, and gives the necessary explanation of the passages misunderstood by Haug. In some cases, however, the possession of the word is disclosed not by the possession of anything like it, but merely by the presence of the actual letters in some word or words in the text, a phenomenon interesting in the history of the attitude adopted by the Brāhmaṇas towards language and its analysis.

in KB; see xxii. 4 and 5.

² Not, as Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 285), 'with different vowels': svavarīṣeṣeṇa can have either sense, but Sāyaṇa's meaning is clearly shown by his examples. So ninṛtti

10. In KB. xv. 4 we find pratīkāminam annādyam in all the MSS. The form may be a development from the in declension to ina,¹ or a difference of gender, as is not rare in later Vedic texts.²

(4) Syntax.

The syntax of the AB. has received full treatment by Delbrück in his Altindische Syntax, but that of the KB. he was unable to deal with save in a few points, the text only becoming available to him when his work was practically finished. Therefore in the following account of the most striking features of that syntax special attention is given to the latter text.

1. The rules of concord are normally observed with the usual care of Sanskrit. In KB. vii. 1 is found etayā saha stotriyaḥ śaḍ anuṣṭubhaḥ saṁpadyaṁte where the predicate may be śaḍ anuṣṭubhaḥ or stotriyaḥ. In the case of attributive concord we have the usual abnormalities of īṣvara; thus the AB. has īṣvaro hāsya vitte devā arantoḥ iii. 48; īṣvaro hotāraṁ yaço 'rtoḥ ii. 20; i. 25; ii. 7; the KB. has twice īṣvarā yadi nāsurarakṣānsy anuvapātoḥ, x. 2; xvii. 9. These are really distinct from the other cases adduced by Aufrecht³ such as parān, bhrātṛvyahā, and vichandāḥ as neuter forms.

In AB. iv. 9 occurs vāhanānām anāciṣṭhaḥ.

The pluralis majestatis occurs in vaktā smaḥ in AB. v. 29; KB. ii. 9; so probably in AB. vi. 30 mā . . . çānsiṣṭa. The generic plural is common in ākuḥ.

2. The use of the cases is on the whole normal in character. The nominative seems to occur in an anacoluthon in AB. vii. 5. 6, where prān udāyan is taken by Weber⁴ as being nominative, but where that use is distinctly hard to justify as yasya, which precedes, seems clearly to refer to the same person. In KB. viii. 2 the reading Viṣṇur iti yajati is, no doubt, a mere error for Viṣṇum iti, the iti of enumeration being constantly used in both Brāhmaṇas. In AB. vi. 35 occurs the not unusual construction açvaḥ çveto rūpaṁ kṛtvā, while in v. 7 the nominative appears used as predicate vice the accusative, Ind o vā etābhīr mahān ātmānaṁ nīramimīta. In ii. 6 we have the natural anacoluthon paçur vai nīyamānaḥ sa mṛtyuṁ prāpaçyat. The nom. alone as introducing a topic of discussion is seen in KB. xviii. 9 avabhr̥thaḥ; i. 1 anubandhya; xxiv. 1 abhijit (bis).

3. The accusative shows some special uses. The ordinary inner or cognate use is seen in sarvaṃ jaraṃ dhāvati, KB. xviii. 1; the phrase gartapatyaṃ dhīyate, xvi. 9; xxv. 14, however, is prob. a nominative; sarvān kāmān ṛdhnvanti, xxv. 2; xxvi. 1, 15; xxvii. 6; by a bolder use the AB. has devān ṛdhnvanti, i. 1. 5, where the sense is not 'worship' as Sāyaṇa, or 'make to prosper' as Haug, or 'genügen' as BR. In the active bhūñjanti has the acc., KB. i. 5; in the middle the instr., xi. 3. In hitaṃ manyamānaḥ, KB. xviii. 2, the nom. would be legitimate and more normal, but cf. Kaṭha Upaniṣad, i. 19. The accusative in an exclamation is seen in all probability in AB. ii. 13: te 'bhītaḥ paricaranta ait paçuṃ nirantraṃ çayānam, where Aufrecht¹ sees an irregularity for āyan, but Weber² the particle et (misread ait). This leaves an anacoluthon, but not a very grave one. In ekaṃ dve na stomam atīçaṇset, AB. vi. 8. 7; 23. 10 there is a conflict between the grammar which demands that the sense should be '(he should recite) one or two verses; he should not overrecite the Stoma' and the sense which as already understood by the Āçulāyana Āraṇyaka Sūtra (vii. 12. 3) is that the Stoma is to be overrecited by one or two.

An accusative in apposition to a sentence seems clearly found in AB. vi. 21. 8: ḥṣatrāyaiva tad viçam pratyudyāminīm kuryuḥ pāpavasyasam: tām anulṛtīm, ii. 35, 37; tadanulṛtīm, vi. 1. 2, 4.

4. The instrumental though freely used shows no special irregularities: in KB. xxvii. 1 nandati . . . viduṣāgachatā the stress is as not rarely on the participle, 'in the coming of a learned man.' In xviii. 4 dhāpyet appears used without an acc. but with an instr.

5. The dative as used in Brāhmaṇa texts serves very freely to denote the purpose of the action, being much oftener thus used than for any other purpose and surviving even in Pāli. Instances of this use of less common order are amoghāya, KB. x. 6; anāvraṣkāya, xi. 8; saṃçaiṣāya, xxviii. 7; asyai bubhūṣāya syāt, xxv. 15; with double dative, sarvasmā eva çāntyai, AB. ii. 34. 7. The same use is seen with sthā is AB. iv. 25; tasmāi . . . jyaisthyāya . . . atisthanta (so in a Gāthā in vii. 18), and Weber³ seeks in vi. 5 to read, for tasmāi na tatsthānāni yad . . . kuryuḥ, tasthānāni, the second dative being represented by a yad clause. But the correctness of the text is proved by KB. xxvi. 8: na . . . etatsthāne . . . çasyāya.

The dative as indirect object appears with ā-vṛç in KB. xi. 4, and with pranayanti and a locative in the sense of 'give a lead to', used of the Sāman singers from whom the Stotriya is borrowed by the priests in KB. xvi. 11 and several times in xxx.

A double dat. is found with abhisaṃjñā, KB. xxvi. 9.

6. The ablative shows no special use ; the occurrence of it with vr̥ in a Gāthā (AB. vii. 17. 3) has been above noted.

7. The genitive is freely used in the KB. in the headings of chapters as in iv. 1 : athāto 'bhyuditāyai ; 2 : athāto 'bhyuddrṣṭāyai and so on. The use is found in AB. viii. 5. Other uses are pavamānasya kīrtayati, KB. i. 4 ; iii. 8 ; dvidevatyānām anuvāṣaṭkuryāt, AB. ii. 28. 2, and with bhakṣayati, KB. xiii. 6. The person for whom a sacrifice is being carried on is often put in the genitive ; in AB. ii. 17 : anūcyāny abrahmaṇoktasya may be used thus or less probably as a genitive of agency. The genitive is also used with juṣ in KB. xxvi. 3 ; ava-vad in AB. v. 22 ; prati-vadh, vii. 28.

The possessive genitive in the predicate appears with brū in KB. vi. 2, and in a special use in AB. ii. 9. 6 : na dīkṣitasyaññyāt where, of course, there is no question of eating the consecrated man.

In AB. vii. 15. 7 tasya ha ṣaṭam dattvā tasya may be 'for him' not 'to him', as usually taken. With upālambhya it means 'in addition to', AB. iv. 19, 22 ; KB. xxv. 10.

8. The locative denotes measure of distance in time in paçcā . . . ṣaṣṭyām vā varṣeṣu, AB. iv. 17. 5 ; in the sense 'at the end of' in samvatsare, KB. xix. 9 ; and of distance in sahasrāçvīne vā itaḥ svargo lokaḥ, AB. ii. 17. 8 ; sahasrayojane, KB. viii. 3. The common use of thing for which is illustrated in the KB. by asmīnt sahasre, xviii. 1 ; that of thing in which in na paçau na some, iii. 5. The person with whom one lives (vas) is expressed in the loc. in KB. xxv. 15. The dat. and loc. are found with saṃjñā in saṃasmai svāḥ çreṣṭhatāyām jānate, AB. iv. 25. 9 ; the acc. and loc. with rdh in KB. xxv. 2 ; xxvi. 1, &c.

The locative absolute is found, but not the genitive absolute.

9. The prepositions do not appear in many new uses. There is as usual often doubt to what extent prepositions or prefixes are meant and whether the case governed is governed by the preposition alone or the whole phrase. Thus in KB. ix. 2 : tā gāyatrīm abhisamṇpadyante it is clear that abhi causes the accusative and perhaps, as in the AB. on Aufrecht's plan, abhi here should be written separately. So abhi dīkṣate, vii. 3, 4.

The AB. has ā in iv. 24. 1 : ā daçamam āhar ā dvāv atirātrau, where Sāyana hesitates between the two senses of exclusion and inclusion, the former of which seems to be meant. In iii. 45 āntam can be taken as a compound, and so in ājarasam, iii. 19. 16 ; āratam, KB. xv. 4 ; xvi. 3. With the abl. ā is common in KB., as in ā haviṣkṛta udvādanāt, vi. 13 ; aṣṭamāt puruṣāt, vi. 9 ; mūlāt, x. 2 ; xxvii. 6 ; ii. 4., &c.

ati in AB. iv. 11. 6 has a personal object, atīva vānyān ; in KB. ii. 1 an impersonal, namaskāram, said of the gods, who are not above receiving it.

adhi has the acc. in adhi . . . paçūn tiṣṭhati, KB. xxvi. 17 ; the abl. in Agner evādhi gr̥hapater Ādityam kṣāṭhām akurvata, AB. iv. 7. 6, where perhaps Ādityam conceals ā but not probably. In KB. ii. 2 for ātmano 'bhi it seems necessary to read ātmano 'dhi.

abhi appears in yad etad bhūtam ivābhi, KB. xxi. 4, &c.

anyatra has the abl. in KB. xxv. 14; xxix. 5.

arvāk occurs in arvāk sahasrāt, KB. xviii. 3.

purā with the abl. occurs in KB. ii. 5; xviii. 3; in purā vāco visargāt, xi. 8, the modern tendency to use an abstract noun in the place of the infinitive is noteworthy.

prāg daṣamāt ahnaḥ is found in KB. xxix. 5.

10. The pronouns show few anomalies of use. There is, however, a tendency for the demonstrative sa to lose its full force and to become a mere particle. The placing of sa before a relative or particle is natural and is sometimes carried to other parts of the word, as in tā yā agnāv āhutaḥ hūyante tābhīr āhutiḥkāgāḥ prīṇāti; AB. ii. 18. 4. Hence the use extends to cases like sa yaḥ . . . vidyāt katham tam veder utthāpuyanti, AB. vii. 28. 1; sa yaḥ . . . tādrk tat, v. 31. 1; sa yaḥ . . . yathā . . . tādrk tat, i. 17. 14. So probably sa yadi somam, AB. vii. 29. 2, where possibly the second person is the subject, though Sāyaṇa supplies for sa a priest, and vii. 5. 1: sa yady ekasmīnn unnīte yadi dvayor eṣa eva kल्पah. In KB. xxv. 10 sa yas tam nirbrūyād yas tam tatra brūyāt shows sa without construction.

11. The interrogative pronoun shows one or two interesting forms; in AB. vii. 27. 2 is found kaḥ svid . . . asti vīraḥ, and in KB. xxi. 4: kadriyaṁ hi tata iḡyāt and so often. In AB. iv. 5. 1 is found kaḥ cāham ca with a dual first person verb as usual.

12. The indefinite pronoun shows certain peculiar forms. In AB. iii. 22. 5: yā no 'smīn na vai kam avidat, which Weber¹ renders 'welche hiebei keinen von uns genommen hat', and in which he takes na vai kam as = na kam api or a Sandhi for na vā (= vai) ekam as in AB. iv. 11. 6 vānyan has the sense of vai anyān. Liebich,² however, reads yā no 'smīnn avaikam avidat but without regard to the sense, which seems to be 'who has not obtained any (share) in this of ours' rather than as taken by Weber.

kaḥ cit occurs absolutely as 'some one' in AB. vi. 26. 5: kaḥ cid vai svarge loke sameti. The AB. has kim iva ca, vi. 16; the KB. bahu kim ca kim cid iva, ii. 2; etad vai kim cid iva reām, xviii. 3; and na kā cuna riṣṭih, viii. 1 and often. The adjectival yat kinīcitkam, AB. ii. 9, has been noted above.

13. As regards the use of the voices it is clear³ that there is a considerable degree of distinction between the Brāhmaṇas and the rules of Pāṇini. It is only necessary to note that in both texts apahate is normal; ā hvayate regularly means 'say the call (āhāva)'; the AB. also has an interesting distinction in its use of ā-pad, which is active in the future, but middle in imperfect and aorist, e.g. ii. 6. 1; iv. 7. 7. The KB. has the future in the middle also. In AB. iv. 30. 2 saṁpibasva is used with the instr. of those with whom drinking takes place. The neat distinction of yajati and yajate is seen in AB. ii. 24 where yajate yajatīti ca seems deliberately intended by the use of īti to mark out the use.

14. The present indicative has no abnormal uses. It repeatedly occurs and it is only necessary to note the use with ha sma of the habitual past, as in ha sma . . . tapanti, AB. vii. 34. In some cases the form is strengthened by purā; ha sma vai purā . . . gopāyanti, KB. xii. 1; xxvii. 2. Or again purā alone is used as in KB. xxviii. 4: purā . . . pariharāmaḥ.

15. The imperfect indicative is overwhelmingly the tense of narration in AB. i-v, but in vi it becomes less prominent, and in vii and viii yields to the perfect. In the KB. it is used frequently but the perfect is also freely used. On the other hand it is naturally not used freely in speeches, where the aorist is the natural tense for the past. It is however so used in AB. iii. 48. 9: amāduyam, no stress being laid on the recent character of the action; so in KB. vii. 4: sakṛd ayaḥ tasya kṣayād bibhemi; ÇÇS. xiv. 12. 2: agacham. In AB. iii. 18. 8 abhivyajānāma is curious especially as Aufrecht prints it as if it were abhivyājānāmaḥ, but as it governs ṣasyamānām, a present participle, the imperfect may be used to show that the action of the participle is past. The form anamnamuḥ, AB. ii. 20. 12; KB. xii. 1, in a quasi-Mantra is unexpected, but aorists of intensives are few, and hence an imperfect may be excused; in AB. it follows aveḥ: the Mantra usage was probably less strict than the later prose.¹ In AB. viii. 7. 9 the sentence runs sarvam āpnod vijayena . . . yam . . . abhiṣīncanti, but this is really impossible and āptor or āpnoti jayena can stand instead. Cf. in ÇB. iii. 7. 4. 2 the difficult adhṛṣnot.

The imperfect implies attempt clearly in AB. iv. 26: anvayurñjata. The sense of continuous action is seen in ha sma . . . udasarpāt in KB. vi. 1 (bis) in contrast with the perfect. In AB. vii. 14. 8 for the imperfect prāpnot the aorist is necessary.

16. The aorist is very freely used of the proximate past and naturally usually in speeches where it occurs often both in the AB. and in the KB. (e.g. ii. 7: prāṇiṣam, apāṇiṣam, adrākṣam, asprākṣam, açraṇṣam, aciklṣam). There remain only a few passages where the aorist occurs outside speech. Thus in AB. vi. 36. 8 and 11 occurs idaṁ vā idaṁ vyāhanasyāṁ vācam avādīt tat devapavitreṇa vācam punīte. Here the English 'he has said' is an exact equivalent, the time being the proximate past from the point of view of punīte.¹ So AB. iii. 32. 3: avadhīsur vā etat somam yad abhyasuṣavuh; tasmād enam punaḥ sambhāvayanti; where abhyasuṣavuh is an odd form, though apparently a regular imperfect of the root su in the third class. In AB. ii. 23. 3: puro vā tām devā akrata yat puroḷācās tat puroḷācānām puroḷācatvam is less easy but still can be so taken. In the KB. this use appears in a different form in xiii. 4: atha somā iti vai paṇam avocāma, which may be compared with yatra . . . anvarocat, ix. 7; yad . . . prāvocāma, ix. 10 in M's reading, against prāg aikṣāma of the other MSS. Here may be classed the yad . . . avocāma of AB. iii. 22. 4 where it paraphrases a R̥gvedic verse. So KB. xiv. 3: gāyatrīyā savanam prapīḍya gāyatrīyā pratyasṭhātām, where the aorist approximates to the present sense. In xxiv. 8 asprīkṣan is odd, but is perhaps used deliberately.

17. The perfect is used in two ways, as a present in sense, and as a narrative tense; it does not denote the proximate past. In the present sense it has often a heavy reduplication; thus dūdḥāra, AB. iv. 12. 8 and often; bībḥāya, v. 25. 17; dūdḥāya, i. 28. 9; ii. 40. 2; 41. 4; iii. 8. 2; iv. 11. 8; but this is not essential; so bībḥāya, v. 15. 9, has the same sense as bībḥāya. So regular is the present use that ha sma is regularly used with it, as indicating a repeated past, thus in AB. and KB. alike iti ha smāha means (the authority) 'used to say'.

The special character of the narrative use of the perfect in comparison with the imperfect is seen in the following figures² for the two Brāhmaṇas:—

But the significance of the figures is in the case of the AB. strengthened when the cases of the perfect are scrutinized. In v the six cases occur in the twenty-fifth Adhyāya, and that Adhyāya is no doubt later; they are uvāca, v. 29 (bis); 30. 15; babhūva, 30. 15; āsa, 36. 3 (bis). In the cases in iv. in 8. 3 dadhr̥ṣatuḥ is clearly intended to be differentiated from the preceding abrūtām as it explains why they said as they did, as they had not the daring to say something else. In iv. 17. 5 the loss of jagmuḥ occurs with pūrve, but the reason for its use is not at all obvious, unless it be to convey the precise sense 'arrived first'.

In iii there is a group of three perfects in iii. 48. 9, saṁniruvāpa, uvāca, and āsuh, in iii. 20. 1 occur āsatuḥ and abhyānūvāca; in iii. 18 yatra yatra . . . nirajānan is followed by apīdadhuḥ which may well be taken as an unaugmented imperfect. In iii. 49. 5 āsa is clearly differentiated from the surrounding imperfects.

In ii there occur āsa, differentiated, and abhyānūvāca in 33. 5; abhyānūvāca in 25; parisasāra in 19 is probably not past but present in sense; in 36 nirvāpayām cakruḥ is pluperfect in contrast with viharanta following it.

In i all the perfects in narrative occur in one chapter (18), viz. vimethire, parābabbhūva, ūcuḥ (bis), saṁjabhruḥ, āhatuḥ. This is a very peculiar feature, comparable to the group in iii. 48. 9. Possibly in both cases interpolation is present.

In the KB. and in the last three books of the AB., while of course here and there differences of tense can be read into the text naturally enough, the constant use of the perfect in a narrative sense shows that that tense had acquired a regular narrative use in prose as always in verse, for in the Vedic verse, including the Gāthās, and in the epic as well as in classical poetry the perfect is an established narrative tense.

18. The future tense shows little of note. Chiefly to be remarked is the frequent use of the periphrastic future which is marked in both texts and normally with distinct definiteness of time allusion. The simple future and still more the second future convey the idea of purpose or resolve quite as much as that of mere futurity. Thus in AB. v. 29 and KB. ii. 9 alike vaktā smaḥ expresses the fixed and definite intention of the speakers, not mere futurity.

19. The subjunctive finds its place in speech, not in narrative, and therefore hardly ever occurs except in clauses terminating in iti. The only exception in either Brāhmaṇa is AB. iii. 42: yaḥ caīnam evaṁ vedātī tu tam arjātai. In other cases the sense is normally imperative or a strong assertion of purpose or of desire, in all of which uses its occurrence is quite common. Thus the optative sense is clear in devā me 'nnam adann iti, AB. viii. 24. 2, with which the optative açñīyuh in KB. iii. 1 is a precise parallel. So often asat ii. 8. 7; 11. 12; 13. 8; iii. 43. 6; viii. 1. 5; 4. 5; KB. viii. 9; udyachāte. xviii. 5; vāñchān, xxv. 15 (with a v. l. vāñchantu). Probably injunctive is prajanayan, AB. ii. 38. 8, by which is paraphrased çāñsan of the RV. haratai, AB. v. 34. 1, is a case of the subjunctive used in a question. prajāñātha, AB. i. 7. 4, and juhavātha, v. 32. 5 (his), are imperatives. In AB. i. 24. 5: sañgachātai yah . . . atikrāmāt . . . yah . . . ālulobhayīṣāt the use of the subjunctive in a relative clause is noteworthy. In a conditional clause in AB. ii. 2. 5 yadi ca tiṣṭhāsi yadi ca çayāsai . . . dhattat the forms are paraphrases of the R̥gvedic verse. In AB. iii. 42 arjasi seems an error for arjāsi or arjāsva, while in vii. 16 hantāham upadhavāmi is probably a blunder for dhavāni, as usual with hanta.

20. The optative occurs freely in the sense of wish, and in the sense of direction. But it shows no peculiarity of usage in main clauses.

21. The injunctive is rare and is practically confined to the use with mā in which it occurs in AB. i. 13. 12; ii. 16 (imperf.); vi. 1 and 33, &c.; KB. xii. 13; xxx. 5. That the augmented imperfect is used in AB. vi. 14 is most improbable. In AB. iii. 28. 1 anuparyāguh may be an injunctive.¹ With the first person plural mā occurs in AB. ii. 15. 13; v. 22. 5. prajanayan, AB. ii. 38. 8, has been noted above: it is not independent of çāñsan which it explains.

22. The infinitive in the two Brāhmaṇas has a very limited use. The infinitive in tum is found with akāmayata, AB. iii. 39; veda, vi. 23. 5; arhati, vi. 23. 4; dadhr̥satuh, iv. 8; and the root çak, i. 7. 3; iii. 14. The KB. has the infinitive with çak, iii. 6; xv. 2; xxiii. 2; arh, viii. 6; dr̥, xxv. 13. More unusual is yanti vācam̐ çikṣitum, vii. 6.

The form in toḥ is found with īçvara in aitoḥ, paraitoḥ, AB. viii. 7; abhyupaitoḥ, vii. 29; pratyetoh (without īçvara), vi. 30; anṛṇākartoḥ, i. 14; glāvo janitoḥ, i. 25; vāco rakṣobhāṣo janitoḥ, ii. 7; nī vā roddhor vi vā mathitoḥ, i. 10; pratyavahurtoḥ, vii. 33; hiñsitoḥ, i. 30; with a negatived infinitive, arantoḥ, iii. 48; avarṣtoḥ, iii. 18. It is also found with ā, ā çarīrāṇām āhartoḥ, vii. 2, and with purā, purā vācaḥ pravuditoh, ii. 15. The KB. has no case with ā or purā, with which it uses only abstract nouns; it has īçvara with kartoḥ, vii. 8; īçvaro vivaktāraṁ bhreṣo 'nvetoh, xxvii. 1; there occurs, however, the rare use īçvarā yadi nāsurarakṣāñsy anvarapātoḥ, x. 2; xvii. 9.

The AB. has taṁ harati vadham̐ yo 'sya śr̥tyas tasmai startavai ii. 6, 35; iii. 7; tenedam̐ sarvam etavai kṛtam, v. 15. The KB. has only āgrayanīyān uddhartavā āha, iv. 14.

Finally the AB. has āśade 'cīkṣpat i. 29. 7.

¹ If so, it is overlooked by Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 359.

In AB. ii. 7 it is possible that vāco rakṣobhāṣo janitoḥ is a case of the attr. gen. as taken by BR. But the accusative is at least as probable; the nominative is unlikely as janitoḥ is active.

23. The participles show no special peculiarities of use. The apparent use of the gerund as a finite verb seen by Aufrecht¹ in ya āhitāgnir jīve mṛtaḥabdam ṣrutvā, AB. vii. 9, cannot be correct, and the obvious solution is to read jīven mṛtaḥabdam which would be written as jīven, and the m would easily disappear. The frequent use of the gerund in am is noteworthy in both Brāhmaṇas; it perhaps should be read in KB. viii. 9.

There also is an apparent use of the participle as a finite verb in te abhitaḥ paricaranta ait paḥum, AB. ii. 7, but there is in that case an anacoluthon, or possibly a misreading.

Participles are governed by man, and by abhivijñā in AB. iii. 18. 8.

Gerunds followed by atha occur in KB. xi. 8 and probably in AB. vii. 13. Past participles passive without copula are never historical in sense.

The past aprāptāḥ may be active in KB. xii. 2, where the usual periphrastic tenses with āsīt, āsan occur.

24. Adverbs show little of interest in syntactic use. In KB. xxvi. 5 occurs tūṣṇīm āsuh. The indefinite forms yata eva kutaḥ ca, AB. vii. 2. 5, and yataḥ kutaḥ ca, ii. 24, occur without verbs, and with these may be compared the use of adverbial phrases like yāvatkāmam, AB. vi. 33. 7; yāvanmātram eva, KB. iv. 5, and yathāyatham.

In the relation of prefixes to the verb is to be noted the separation of anu from the infin. in AB. iii. 39.

25. In the use of the particles of assertion certain points require notice.

iva is often used in the sense practically of eva, or more accurately as a sort of modification of the sense of the plain assertion; thus prṣṭhata ivāgnīdhraṇi kṛtvā, AB. i. 30; yadi ha vā api bahava iva yajante, ii. 2; so 'je jyoktamām ivāramata, ii. 8, besides many other places where the sense is less certain.

vā here and there clearly has the sense of vai as in atīva vānyān, AB. iv. 11. 6; ṣaṣṭyāṇi vā varṣeṣu, 17. 5; yathā vā, 6; itī bahūni vāha, vi. 12. 17; in KB. xii. 4 and xvi. 9 are possible cases.

nvai occurs in both texts, AB. ii. 22. 3; KB. xiii. 4; xxvi. 14; xxviii. 2. The normal itī nu is strengthened to itī nvai in KB. xii. 4.

vāva is frequent in the earlier portion of the AB., while vai is normal in the latter portion, in comparisons as yathā vāva; it is found in KB. xxiv. 1 as a v. l.

Combinations with vai include ha vā api, AB. ii. 2; KB. i. 1; ii. 8;

xiv. 3 (wrongly printed by Lindner as iha vā api); u ha vā api, ii. 8; ha va u, vi. 12; xxviii. 1, 2; u ha vai, xi. 5; AB. vii. 26. 5, &c.

aha occurs in upāha... āpnoti, AB. vii. 26. 4; atrāhaiva, vi. 23. 7; and in a verse in KB. xxvii. 1: nāhaiva. aho occurs in KB. vii. 4.

uta is found in AB. iv. 26. 10: yad anyadevatya uta.

nu is specially frequent in the phrase iti nu terminating a description, e.g. AB. i. 21; iii. 19. 7; 41; 47. 13; KB. x. 2; xxii. 1; xxiii. 1. 3.

çaçvat in addition to its function in the AB. in the apodosis of conditional clauses occurs in that text absolutely in iii. 48. 9: catuḥṣaṣṭiḥ kavacinaḥ çaçvad dhāsyā putranaptāra āsuh.

u is found with tv in KB. xviii. 13: u tv eva; with kim in viii. 8.

atha after an absolute form is perhaps¹ to be seen in AB. vii. 13: iti hāsmā ākhyāyāthainam uvāca, and clearly in KB. xi. 8.

26. The repetition of particles is seen in a few cases, namely, ky eva hi twice repeated in AB. ii. 12; naivaiva, vi. 32; and according to Weber, nā vīva, vi. 32, should be taken as nī iva iva. atho... u vai occurs in KB. xvii. 1.

27. Negative particles are normal, except that net occurs as a simple negative in net tu pragāthāḥ kalpante, AB. vi. 28. The emphatic no eva is found in AB. vi. 2. 6; KB. ix. 1. The indefinite negative canu is found in both texts after na, KB. ii. 1; vi. 2.

In a question in AB. vi. 34. 3: no hi na pratyajūsthāḥ the sense is, 'Surely you did not promise?' Normally na is used to ask a simple negative question without implication of the answer.

28. Connective and disjunctive particles are as normal in the Brāhmaṇas duplicated. In no case is a particle used with the first member only. Examples of the use are, for vā, uta vā... uta vā, AB. iii. 46. 2; kena vā nu kena vā, KB. xiii. 3; vāpi vā, AB. vii. 5. 6. In KB. ix. 4 u ha... u ha occurs. vā alone without a preceding vā is found in AB. ii. 17: abrāhmaṇok-tasya yo vā... yaçeta; perhaps in KB. xvi. 9; xxv. 14; in KB. xviii. 1 is found yadi vā Prajāpateḥ as a contrast to sūryām; vā with an independent clause occurs in AB. vii. 9; KB. xvi. 10.

29. In questions when simple no particle is normally used at all. In a double question in AB. v. 36 kim svid... nīyante is followed by akṛtvāho svid... haratai. kim u in KB. viii. 8 seems to raise an objection, rather than to carry on a previous clause.

30. In the compound sentence in many cases the use of parataxis supplies the place of hypotaxis. Of this there is an excellent example in AB. vi. 31: katham atrāçasta eva nābhānediṣṭho bhavaty atha maitrāvāruṇo vālakhilyāḥ ṣaṁsati te prāṇā reto vā agre 'tha prāṇāḥ . . . katham atra yajamānasya prajāteḥ katham prāṇā avikṛptā bhavanti. This clause is further noteworthy as it depends on a yad clause, and contains within it an elaborate parenthesis applying the same principle to the Brāhmaṇa-chaṁsin.

This is a specially elaborate case but other instances occur passim: prāyaṇīyam iti nirvāpanti prāyaṇīyam iti caranti prayanty evāsmāḥ lokāt, i. 11; saṁayāviṣitāḥ sūryaḥ syād atha vācam viśrjeraṁś tāvantam eva tad dviṣate lokam pariṇiṣanti, v. 24. 11; caḥṣuṣi vimṛṣita caḥṣur-evāsya tad gopāyati, KB. xvi. 5; adhīyann upahanyād anyam vivaktāram icchet, A.B. iii. 35; ii. 33. 1; iii. 5. 1, &c.; KB. x. 5, &c.

31. Relative clauses have certain special characteristics. The use of such a clause as precisely parallel to an adjective is seen in abrāhmaṇok-tasya yo vā . . . yajeta, AB. ii. 17.

In the causal sense relative clauses occur very markedly in alaso 'bhūr yo me vācam avadhīḥ, AB. vi. 33. 4; yo . . . asakthāḥ, ibid.; tvam vai naḥ ṣreṣṭho 'si yaṁ tvā . . . anveti, AB. iii. 22. 5.

The use of the relative in comparison is noteworthy in bhūyāṁśaḥ . . . yac ca, AB. iii. 29. 6; saṁānam . . . yac ca, iv. 30. 15.

The indefinite use of the relative is common and the indicative is frequently the tense employed, as in yāvatām vai . . . veda . . . bhavanti, yeṣāṁ u na veda kim u te syuḥ, AB. ii. 39. 11. The same use still more definitely conditional appears in sarvājyānir haiva sā yaḥ . . . dadāti, KB. xxv. 14 ('if a man give'); yaḥ . . . veda tat suviditam, AB. ii. 29. 11. But the optative tends also to appear; thus yasya tat kāmāya tathā kuryāt prāṇasya ca vācaḥ cātraiva tad upāptam, AB. ii. 26; yaḥ . . . yajeta . . . āpnoti, KB. xvi. 10; yat kimcid chandaḥ . . . yuyjeta, xxvi. 8 (no verb). Still more natural is ṣaṁsed yat . . . ṣaṁseyuḥ, AB. vi. 8. 9, in view of the influence of the preceding optative; anūcyāni . . . yo vā . . . yajeta, AB. ii. 17, shows a participle of necessity as equivalent to an optative but yām . . . utsarpet in KB. iii. 1 in a definition is more clearly merely generic.

In another set of cases the optative occurs in both clauses, the conditional sense being perfectly clear: of this character is the constant phrase ya evaṁ tatra brūyāt vācā vajreṇa yajamānasya prāṇān vyagāt prāṇa enam hāsyatīti ṣaṣvat tathā syāt, AB. ii. 21. 2. There is no anacoluthon proper as yaḥ is really felt as 'if any one', and the clause may be further elaborated by a still extra conditional relative clause as in yaḥ . . . iyāt yas . . . tam tatra brūyāc cyoṣyata iti tathā ha syāt, KB. ix. 4. Normally brūyāt means 'speak of' a person, but occasionally 'speak to' as in ya enam tatra brūyād vācaḥ kuteṇa yajamānāt paṣūn niravadhīr apaṣum enam akar iti ṣaṣvat tathā syāt, AB. vi. 24. 13. The use is found in the KB. always with tathā ha syāt, never çaçvat as in the AB.; see vii. 19; xii. 7; xiii. 9; xiv. 2; xvii. 1; xxiii. 6; xxv. 10. In the AB. çaçvat occurs once also in another form of clause yat saumyātithimatī syāt çaçvat sā syāt, AB. i. 17. 3. The optative also occurs in a clause without çaçvat in jāmi ha syād ya etaṁ nigadaṁ brūyāt, KB. viii. 8. In the place of the apodosis there may be a question without a verb as in a series of sentences in AB. vii. 2 seq., commencing yasya . . . (opt.) kā tatra prāyaçcitiḥ.

32. The conditional sentence runs parallel with the relative clause. The normal form has the optative in both protasis and apodosis, but the apodosis may take another form. The apodosis may be an expression which can be regarded as a potential, thus yad . . . samnirvṛpē tēvarā hāsyā vitte devā arantor, AB. iii. 48; so 18. 8; ii. 7. 6, tēvara being an expression approximately future in sense. Or again, yadi . . . kuryuḥ . . . çañstavyaḥ, AB. iv. 2, where the participle of necessity serves as an optative. In other cases the verb of the apodosis is not expressed, as te yadī tathā kuryur etāv eva stotriyānurūpau, KB. xxiv. 5; 26; xxv. 6; xxvi. 4; AB. iv. 13. 5; so with the interrogative form ya āhitāgnīr yadī kṛkṛuṁ naçyet kā tatra prāyaçcitiḥ, AB. vii. 9. 2; v. 32. 5.

A further development is when the optative in the protasis is accompanied by an indicative in the apodosis; yad . . . vyākṣita . . . gamayati, AB. v. 23. 10; yadi . . . abhyābhavet . . . asti, iii. 46; yadi . . . budhyeta . . . bhavati, KB. xxvi. 4; yadi svarāṇi prsthāni bhavanti . . . tarhi . . . kurvanti, yady u . . . syātām tarhi . . . kurvanti, KB. xxiv. 8; cf. xxv. 5.

These are on the whole rare and slightly irregular; on the other hand yad . . . juhoti . . . anubrūyāt, KB. ix. 5, is of a normal type.

The protasis may be of course abbreviated; so sattram u cet, AB. iv. 29. 13; KB. xxv. 14; na cet svayonau, xxv. 6; AB. vii. 5. 1.

In AB. iii. 46. 10 occurs api yadi; api ha yadi, iii. 16. 2.

The conditional is found in a full condition of what was not realized in AB. iv. 30. 6; in KB. xxx. 5 and in the apodosis of the same condition in AB. vi. 33, and in kuto hy anyam āharisyan, KB. xxvi. 7.

33. Clauses of comparison are frequent, and very often show an optative in the dependent clause. In that case the apodosis takes two types, either the indicative stands or it is reduced to a mere evam tat or tādṛk tat. Of the first type is yathā . . . praploverann evam haiva te praplavante, AB. vi. 21. 10 (bis); iii. 19; KB. i. 5; vii. 7; xi. 4, 8; xvii. 8; xviii. 7; xxvii. 6; āhvayanti yathā . . . āhvayet, AB. vi. 3. 1. Of the latter are yathā . . . kuryāt evam tat, KB. x. 3; v. 5; vii. 3, 9; viii. 2, 9; xii. 3, 6; xiv. 4; xviii. 4; xxii. 10; xxv. 10; xxvi. 1; AB. iii. 47; iv. 4; v. 32; so yathā . . . syād evam eva . . . samçleşinyah, KB. vi. 12. In the

AB. the normal form in the main clause is tādṛk tat, i. 17. 12; iii. 10; 20. 21; iv. 9. 9; v. 28 (bis), 31; vi. 23. 8; KB. ii. 9. In AB. v. 15 tat is explained by a clause yad . . . çāṇsati; in vi. 23. 7 the opt. occurs with yathā in a clause where there are optatives in protasis and apodosis.

In KB. xxii. 6 the relative and comparative forms are merged in yathā ya taptam nīnayet evam tat.

34. In the case of sentences of time and place there are no special peculiarities in either text. But both use yatra somewhat freely in clauses of occasion. Thus is found in AB. vii. 28 yatra . . . tatra with imperfects, and in iv. 20. 21 yatra is so used without any correlative. In vii. 33 yatra and tat with the opt. are found and in iv. 20. 19 yatra without correlative with the opt. In iii. 18 yatra . . . nīrajānan . . . apīdadhuḥ the apparent perfect is probably an unaugmented imperfect. In the KB. yatra . . . tad with imperfect occurs in xviii. 1; yatra with perfects, xxviii. 3, 4; xvi. 1; yatra with imperfect and a perfect in the main clause, vi. 13.

35. Clauses denoting the purpose with which an action is done or the result it is desired to avert are normally expressed not by subordinate clauses proper, but by oratio recta with iti. If the purpose is positive the subjunctive or optative is used without any particle, if negative the optative normally is not used, but neç, occasionally na, with the subjunctive and mā with the injunctive.

Moreover, the sentence may be not merely a simple one, but a complex one, giving a reason for the action arrived at, or to be averted: and thus the building up of larger complexes becomes possible.

Examples of the positive form are āhutī juhōti mahacchastram vāk ca manaç ca prīte udyachāte iti, KB. xviii. 5; iv. 14, uttamam vartmopanīçrayetāyam vai loko dakṣiṇam havīrāhānam pratiçthā vā ayam lokah pratiçthāyām anucchinno 'sānīti. In this case and in similar cases, such as xxv. 15; xii. 5 it is open to argue that the reason is given by the Brāhmaṇa, and that a new clause begins with the clause of purpose, but this seems needless and not very natural. Besides the subjunctive occurs the precativē (udyāsam) in KB. xxviii. 1, and a future (atsyāmi) is used in iv. 14.

Instances of the negative form are tasmād u nānūttiṣthen neç çam svād āyatanāc cyavayānīti neç çam sāmno 'nuvartmānam karāṇīti, KB. xii. 5; tān avagṛhyāste neç pravartantā iti xiii. 5; xvii. 7; tasmāt . . . çīlpāni çasyante neç prāṇebhya ātmānam apādadhānīti, xxv. 12; xxvii. 6; na pāpāḥ puruṣo yājño dvādaçāhena neç ayam mayi pratiçthād iti, AB. iv. 25. 5, 7; quite exceptional is tasmāt . . . na kṣatriyo druhyen neç rāṣṭrād avapadyeyam neç vā mā prāṇo jahad iti, viii. 23. 11. The complex type is seen in naite viparyasyati pratisthe vai samyājyge net pratisthe vyatisajānti, KB. vii. 9; iii. 4, 5; vii. 9; ix. 6; x. 4; xi. 8; xiii. 5 (his), 6, 7, 9; xiv. 3 (ned . . . gāma); xvi. 1, 2, 6; xviii. 10; xix. 6: tad avi-vākyaṁ bhavati na hi tad addhā veda kaṣṇa ned avidbrān nirbravānti, xxvii. 1; AB. iii. 29. 3-4; vi. 3. 9.

ned is not essential in this use; in AB. viii. 6. 9-11 is found athainam abhiṣekṣyann apām cāntim vācayati . . . naitasyābhiṣiṣicānasgācāntā āpo vīryaṁ nirhaṇann iti. In AB. v. 22. 5 tasmād daṣanam ahar avivākyaṁ bhavati mā cṛiyo 'vavādiṣmeti. In both cases the sense is precisely as with ned, and the origin of the use of ned through its equivalence to na is obvious. In accented texts the verb with ned is regularly accented because of the logical relation of the ned to the principal clause, but it is unnecessary with Weber¹ and Delbrück² to insist on translating by 'Lest' like Latin ne, for in prose as opposed to verse and prose Mantra (AB. ii. 7. 10: mā rāviṣṭha . . . ned . . . ravitā ravat) the clauses always are flung into oratio recta and can well be rendered 'Let me not'.

ned occurs once with the optative and with a form (johat) which can be subj. or inj. in parallel clauses in AB. viii. 23. 11, quoted above; the former use is unique.

36. In these cases the clause with iti is clearly dependent on a main clause; in another set of instances the iti clause instead forms the main clause, expressing the view or thought of the actors. These clauses take several forms. In the first place the clause may stand somewhat isolated: thus yathā hy evāsya prāyaṇam evam ulūjanam asat iti, AB. iii. 43. 6; brahmapurastān ma ugrān rāṣṭram avyathjam asat iti, viii. 1. 5; 4. 5.

In the second place the clause follows one in yad, as in tad yat somaṁ rājānam krīṇāty asau vai somo rājā vicakṣaṇaṣ candramā abhiṣuto 'sad iti, KB. vii. 10; xvii. 7; yad eva vāco jītāṣiṁ tan ma idam ana karma samtiṣṭhātā iti, AB. viii. 9. 11; yad v evaitaṣapralāpāḥ: ayātayāmā vā aitaṣapralāpo 'yātayāmā me yajñe 'sad akṣitir me yajñe 'saul iti vi. 33. 11.

In the third place the clause with iti may be negatived by ned; thus yad . . . nāha ned yajamānam pravṛṇajānti, KB. v. 6; 7; xviii. 4; yat stokāḥ crotanti sarvadevatyā vai stokā nen ma ime 'nabhiṣritā devān gachān iti, ii. 12. 3. The same effect as ned is produced by mā in tad yat purā cakunivādād anubrūyaṁ mā yajñiṣyāṁ vācūṁ proditām anupravadiṣmeti, ii. 15. 13.

37. In comparison with clauses with iti other forms of indicating purpose are very rare. In KB. ix. 4 occurs yathā hotar abhuyam asat tathā kuru; in AB. viii. 10. 6: tathā me kuru yathemān senān jayāni; in

KB. xxvii. 3: yathā sahasraṁ pañcadaṣa cānuṣṭubhaḥ syus tathā . . . saṁpādayet.

38. Just as in the case of clauses with iti, after a preceding clause with yad, a clause with vai intervenes giving a ground,¹ so when the main clause has eva or tasmāt a clause with vai frequently intervenes. It is usual² to take such clauses as giving the reason for the preceding clause in yad, but the real force is rather to add a further train in the reasoning, and the main clause is not that in vai but rather that in eva. Such clauses are common in both texts, e.g. yad eva gāyatrībhir abhiṣṭanti gāyatram vai prātaḥsavanam tena prātaḥsavane (abhiṣṭutam bhavati), AB. vi. 2. 8; atha yad agniṁ prathamam devatānām yajaty agniṁ vai devānām mukham mukhata eva tad devān prīṇāti, KB. iii. 6; 7; 8; v. 8; viii. 6 (ter), &c. Or with tasmāt, atha yad aparāhṇe pīṭryajñena caranty apakṣayabhājo vai pitaras tasmād aparāhṇe pīṭryajñena caranti, KB. v. 6; yad agniṁ kāryavāhanam antato yajaty etat sviṣṭakṛto vai pitaras tasmād enam antato yajati, v. 7. The yad clause states the fact to be explained, the vai clause the reason for it, and the eva or tasmāt clause the necessary conclusion. In any case the clause with vai is a parenthesis rather than an apodosis, and how exactly it was felt by the users of the phrase cannot now be determined.

39. By an illogical, if natural, use the fact to be explained is sometimes stated in the yad clause and the cause given in a clause with hi, and not as oftener vai. Thus atha yad vyavagrāham devatā āvāhayati nānā hy ābhyo havīṁṣi gṛhītāni bhavanti, KB. iii. 3; iv. 12; v. 5.

40. Clauses of reported speech stand regularly and very commonly in oratio recta with iti. But the iti may be, and not very rarely is, omitted, especially when tad ākruḥ or a similar expression has been used, and the extent of the quotation is left to the context to show. There are clear cases of this in AB. iii. 8; 22; KB. x. 1, 3; xii. 7; xvii. 1; xxiv. 8.

This omission is very natural, where in any case there occurs an iti at the end of the passage quoted, as in AB. iv. 25. 5; no case of a double iti occurs in the AB. There is room therefore for uncertainty in AB. v. 29. 1: uvāca Jātūkarnyo vaktā smo vā idam devebhyo yad vai tad agnihotram ubhayeddyur ahūyatānyedyur vāva tad etarhi hūyata iti whether the iti belongs to uvāca or vaktā smo or to both, and also whether yad serves a double function as relative and particle = 'that'. Cf. also AB. i. 25. 15.

In one case cause seems to be expressed by both yad and iti, namely īṣvaro hāsya vitte devā arantor: yad vā ayam alam ātmane 'mansteti, AB. iii. 48. 8.

41. A distinctive feature of the prose is the free use of prolongation

of vowels for purposes of emphasis. It is thus in place in the asking of a question: thus in AB. vi. 26. 10: viḥṛtā3m stotrā3m avihṛtā3m iti; vi. 34. 3: prāvocā3h iti . . . no hi na pratyajñāsthā3h iti and so often. Another characteristic use is that at the conclusion of a yad clause giving the topic of discussion, as yad eva na saṁ ṣaṁsatī 3 ṇ ātmā vai stotriyāh, vi. 26. 5; yad eva ṣilpānī 3 ṇ ātmasaṁskṛtīr vāva ṣilpānī, vi. 27. 4, and so often. Thirdly it is used merely as emphatic to bring out the full importance of a word, as in taḍ āhur mahāvādā3h, AB. v. 33. 1.

42. The order of words in the texts presents few points of note. The regular practice of placing the subject after the predicate is adhered to freely, but there are of course exceptions, and in many cases which is subject or predicate must remain doubtful.¹ Occasionally a deliberate change of order is found, as in AB. ii. 28. 5: prāṇā vai dvilevatyā āgūr vajrah. In many cases the distinction of predicate and subject is expressly made by the use of yad to introduce the subject, as in AB. ii. 28. 3: saṁsthā vā eṣā yad anuvaṣaṭkārāh.

43. The text as preserved is unaccented. It is no doubt the case that it originally was duly accented, but the accents have not been preserved by the tradition. So in the case of the Pañcaviṅṣa Brāhmaṇa we have a formal record that it was once accented in the style of the Ṣaṭpatha and was still so extant at the time of the Bhāṣikasūtra (ii. 32),² but by Kumārila's time it had ceased to bear accents.³

C. Style.

It is impossible to place the Brāhmaṇas in any respectable position as regards their style. The Kauṣītaki is distinctly inferior to the Āitareya, as the former text is everywhere so seriously condensed as to be needlessly and notoriously hard to understand. The Āitareya has all the demerits common to the Brāhmaṇas, but it does not suffer normally from excessive brevity. This is one of the reasons which would in any case have thrown doubt on the genuineness of vii. 10 and 11; it would be impossible in the whole of the rest of the text to discover any similar abbreviation of the arguments, whereas in the Kauṣītaki the passage (iii. 1) on which the second of the spurious passages is based is perfectly normal and in place. Similarly in all the legends narrated the brevity of the Kauṣītaki is excessive, and illustrates that tendency to abandon literary composition for mnemonic phraseology which finds its full development in the monstrosities of the philosophical Sūtras.

³ See Burnell, Sāmavediāhāna Brāhmaṇa, p. vi. Cf., however, his Saṁhitopaniṣad Brāhmaṇa, p. xiii.

While the Āitareya, by its lack of exclusive devotion to brevity, avoids none of the obscurity of the Kauṣītaki, it would be idle to assert that it is simple or clear in style. A good deal of it is fairly easy to understand, but there remains much that can never have been anything but obscure. Doubtless this is due in no small degree to the nature of the subject-matter; the pseudo-profundity of the texts reflects itself in the vagueness of their language. But this defect is also, in part at least, accounted for by the fact that the texts were the subjects of oral transmission and explanation, and that, therefore, it was sufficient to mention a matter allusively, leaving the meaning to be made clear by the teacher. A good instance of this defect is the phrase ā caturam vai dvandvam mithunam prajananam prajātyai, which occurs in the Kauṣītaki (iii. 9; vii. 10; xxix. 3). What it actually means we are reduced to guessing; it is not more than a brief mnemonic of a fact which is regarded as known to those who listened to the Brāhmaṇa.

The language of the Brāhmaṇas, as has been seen, is very definitely restricted in its grammatical forms, and thus a certain precision is never wanting, but it is only fair to the compilers of these texts to admit that they do all that is possible to lessen the advantage thus conferred upon them. This they accomplish by the constant practice of ellipsis, by the rapid and bewildering change of subject, and by the undue straining of the force of single words and cases. The word iti helps them indefinitely in this struggle to avoid definiteness; it is much more often than not allowed to stand alone to show that the sentence it ends contains either a fact stated, or a purpose set forth as explaining the action mentioned in the preceding clause. A further aid is the repeated use of interpolated clauses with the particle vai which supply the place of statements in parentheses in English, but which are used not here and there, but everywhere. Another support is the use of the demonstrative pronouns without any feeling for discrimination, and the dative of end contemplated repeatedly saves a sentence.

In a style of this kind ornament would doubtless be out of place, and at any rate it is carefully avoided. An interesting or novel metaphor or simile cannot be found in either Brāhmaṇa, and in both of them similes are distinctly rare. The few that occur are merely taken from the most normal aspects of life, such as the movement of a chariot, or the speed of horses.

The structure of the sentences is drearily monotonous; parataxis is wearisomely frequent, and the chief form of subordinate clause is the explanatory which begins with a yad clause, is often followed by a clause in vai, and then concludes with a clause in eva, a form even more affected by the Kauṣītaki than by the Āitareya. There is no objection to a chapter consisting, as does the Aitareya, v. 8, of a series of sentences precisely the same in shape and form, and in this, as in many other respects, it is easy to see the genesis in the Brāhmaṇas of the style which disfigures so many of the Pāli texts.

On the other hand in some things the style of the Brāhmaṇas remains natural and simple and reminds us that it represents the only natural Sanskrit prose, save to a very much less degree that of the fable literature. It is free from the worst features of the nominal style of classical Sanskrit; if it overworks the dative of end, it has hardly developed the ablative of cause, which is a leading feature of the philosophical Sūtras. It is free in its use of verbal forms, and has no preference for passive constructions. Gerunds and passive participles are quite rare, and are used in strictly reasonable proportions. Even more important perhaps is the fact that the long compound, which has all the possible disadvantages of any form of speech, has not come into being.

The result is that in a few passages the Aitareya is really satisfactory. The narrative of Çunaḥçepa is not a model of style but it is a competent piece of work, and reads easily enough. But it must be admitted that most of its merit it does not owe to the Brāhmaṇa at all, but to the inserted verses, without which the prose would show little enough to praise. It is indeed a really astonishing fact that while verse could show very real qualities of style the prose should fall so lamentably short, but the same phenomenon is familiar in other branches of literature, and notably in that of the drama. Of these verses the best is one which expresses with simplicity and felicity the philosophy of human and divine effort:

sūryasya paçya çremāṇam yo na tandrayate caran.*

But this verse and its fellows are alien to the Brāhmaṇa and but serve to mark the distinction which exists between the literary form of the gnomic poetry of the day and the stiffness and lack of beauty of the theosophic prose style.

D. Metre.

There are twenty-nine Çloka in the narrative of Çunaḥçepa (AB. vii. 13-18) and their metrical form is decidedly interesting. Of the fifty-eight half-verses all but one end in an iambus, and all but two in a di-iambus, and the former line is one which has the unparalleled occurrence of di-iambi at the first and third Pādas:

Madhuchandah çṛṇotana Rṣabho Reṇur Aṣṭakah ye ke ca bhrātara sthana asmai jyaiṣṭhyāya kalpadhvam.

Kalpadhvam is a strange expression for which Böhtlingk conjectures tiṣṭhata, but that is not necessary. The other line ends in tu dvāparaḥ. Moreover the rule which forbids $\cup \cup \cup$ in any foot is rigidly adhered to to the extent of resulting in the use of the subjunctive carāti for carati in carāti carato bhagaḥ, though the sense of carāti suits well enough, but kin nu malam is found in a prior Pāda.

In the odd Pādas the pervading form is that known later as the Pathyā ending in $\cup - - \cup$, but only fifteen out of fifty-eight Pādas end in it, whereas later on it is the normal form. The variants are:

$\cup - - - \cup - - \cup$	6	$\cup - - - \cup \cup - - \cup$	2
$- - \cup - \cup - - \cup$	3	$- \cup - \cup \cup - - \cup$	1
$\cup \cup - - \cup - - \cup$	3

The short at the end is found nine times.

The form ending in $\cup \cup \cup \cup$, later a common variant (the first Vipulā), occurs only four times:

$\cup - - - \cup \cup \cup \cup$	3	$- \cup \cup - \cup \cup \cup \cup$	1
----------------------------------	---	-------------------------------------	---

Neither of these forms is allowed in classical metre; in every case \cup is found at the end.

The form ending in $- \cup \cup \cup$ occurs six times (the second Vipulā):

$\cup - \cup - - \cup \cup \cup$	2	$\cup \cup - - - \cup \cup \cup$	1
$- \cup - \cup - \cup \cup \cup$	1	$- - - - - \cup \cup \cup$	2

In one case only $-$ is found.

The form ending in $- - - \cup$ occurs twelve times, nearly as often as the Pathyā (the third Vipulā):

$- - \cup - - , - - \cup$	4	$- - - \cup - - - \cup$	2	$\cup \cup - - - - -$	1
$- - - - - \cup$	4	$- - \cup \cup - - - \cup$	1

At the end \cup and $-$ balance.

The form ending in $- \cup - \cup$ occurs six times (the fourth Vipulā):

$- \cup \cup - - \cup - \cup$	1	$\cup - \cup \cup , - \cup - \cup$	1
$\cup - - - - \cup - \cup$	1	$- - - \cup - \cup - -$	1
$\cup \cup - - - \cup - \cup$	1

one irregular (sarve rādhyāḥ stha putrāḥ). The last syllable is normally short.¹

The form ending in $- - \cup \cup$ occurs four times:

$\cup - - - - \cup -$	2	$- - \cup - - - \cup \cup$	2 (one \cup at end).
-----------------------	---	----------------------------	------------------------

The form ending in $\cup \cup - \cup$ occurs three times:

$- - - - \cup \cup - \cup$	2	$\cup - \cup - \cup \cup - \cup$	1
----------------------------	---	----------------------------------	---

The form ending in $\cup - \cup \cup$ occurs eight times:

$\cup - - - \cup - \cup \cup$	3	$\cup - - \cup \cup - \cup \cup$	2
$- - \cup - \cup - \cup \cup$	2	$- \cup - - \cup - \cup \cup$	1

The last three forms are wholly alien to classical versification, and it is significant that the di-iambic ending is found in 15·5 per cent. of the verses, and that the forbidden forms are nearly 28 per cent. of the whole. But the figure is really far higher, for the only forms allowed in the later poetry are in all twenty-five in number, viz. fifteen in the Pathyā form, two in — — — — —, five in — — — — —, and three in — — — — —.

Further, in arriving at these results, it is necessary to take into consideration various contractions which must be resolved, while again some contractions must be made. Thus na apāgāḥ is necessary; yāvanto apsu must stand (o no doubt short), ābhūtir eṣābhūtir must be resolved; rādhyāḥ and sauhardyāya made into rādhi(y)āḥ and sauhardi(y)āya; syāt at the end of a line made si(y)āt; cādhipatyē read ca ādhipatya, and also yathairvāṅgīrasaḥ must be read yathaiva āṅgīrasaḥ. On the other hand sa irāvaty utitāriṇī must be read as serāvaty, and ma upetā as mopetā. These are, of course, phenomena which cannot be paralleled even in the epic save to a very limited degree. The Upaniṣads of the older type (e.g. Kaṭha and Īcā) have similar phenomena.

In the verses in the account of the consecration of the kings (AB. vii. 21–23) are twelve *Ṣloka*s; none of these ends in anything save a di-iambus except one which terminates with ādhyaduhitṛṇām, where duhi counts as but one syllable, as also in a Triṣṭubh verse in vii. 13. In these verses again are found a resolution like niṣkakaṇṭhi(y)āḥ for kaṇṭhyāḥ* and medhi(y)ān for medhyān, and a contraction like martyeva for martya iva.

Nevertheless the appearance of the verses from the metrical standpoint is different in a marked degree from that of the Ṣaṇṣṭapa episode. The Pathyā form occurs fifteen times out of twenty-four as contrasted with fifteen out of fifty-eight; the forms are — — — — — 5; — — — — — 4; — — — — — 3; — — — — — 2; — — — — — 1. The form in — — — — — is found once (— — — — —); that in — — — — — in — — — — —; that in — — — — — three times (in — — — — —, — — — — — 2; — — — — — 1). The form — — — — — occurs in — — — — —, — — — — —, and that in — — — — — in — — — — —. The di-iambus occurs in — — — — — twice, and this in one verse. But of the nine irregular forms eight are not allowed in classical Sanskrit, and this significantly indicates the nature of the verse.

The same phenomena recur in the verses in AB. viii. 25 and 27 (printed as prose in the editions); there are in all only four different half-verses, but of these one ends in — — — — —, which is a very rare ending, and the odd Pādas show

A Yajñagāthā in AB. vii. 9. 15 is still more irregular.

In the AB. there occur also four Yajñagāthās in Triṣṭubh metre. Of these sixteen lines two are irregular in v. 30, the first having thirteen syllables, the latter ten, both with trochaic endings. The other fourteen lines all end in a double trochee, and the scheme of the verse is normally $\cup - \cup -$, $\cup \cup - \cup - \cup$. The proportion of the length in the several syllables are, long to short, as follows: (1) 5:9; (2) 10:4; (3) 7:7; (4) 13:1; (5) 6:8; (6) 2:12; (7) 8:6. The fourth syllable is normally followed by a diaeresis. There is no case of the similar composition of the whole four lines of the stanza, nor indeed are any two lines of any stanza the same, throughout, though in two cases two, and three in one case, are the same in the last seven syllables.

There are also four stanzas not Yajñagāthās; of these one (AB. viii. 21. 10) has lines of 12+12+10+13 syllables, the rhythm of the first, second, and fourth being iambic, the third being trochaic. Another is in Triṣṭubh, with vyoman as vi(y)oman and duhitā as disyllabic (vii. 13. 8); the last three lines are $\cup - \cup -$, $\cup \cup - \cup - \cup$, and the first only differs by having a long on the third syllable. The next verse (vii. 13. 13) is, on the other hand, quite irregular, the third line having a di-iambic instead of a trochaic conclusion. The fourth verse (v. 30. 11) is also irregular, the second line having only ten syllables.

These verses are therefore all definitely older than the epic in their metrical construction, and older even than the verses of the *Bṛhaddevatā*¹ and the Rgvidhāna,² works which, in all probability, fall about the beginning of the fourth century B.C.

The KB. contains a couple of verses of the Yajñagāthā type (xviii. 3; xxvii. 1), which differ greatly from the normal Ākṣa metre: the first has di-iambic endings with $\cup - - - \cup \cup \cup$ and $- - - - \cup - - \cup$ for the odd Pādas; in the second the even Pādas end in $\cup - - \cup$, and the odd Pādas are $- - - \cup \cup \cup - -$ and $- - - - \cup - \cup \cup$.

§ 8. COMMENTARIES AND EDITIONS.

For the Aitareya Brāhmaṇa there is available the commentary of Sāyaṇa, which is preserved, as Aufrecht has shown, in two divergent versions. Sāyaṇa's text of the AB. is that which is read in all the available MSS., and there are practically no variations of reading and certainly none of account of the Triṣṭubh (ZDMG. xxxvii. 52-61) arrives at somewhat too definite results by ignoring the variety of forms actually found.

any real meaning. This is seen by the fact that the other editions of the text subsequent to Aufrecht's, that in the Anandāçrama series, No. 32 (2 parts, Poona, 1896), by Kāçinātha Sāstry Āgāçe, that of the Nirṇaya Sāgara press, by Vāsudevaçarman Paṇāçikara and Kṛṣṇaṁbhaṭṭa Gore (Bombay, 1911), and that in the Bibliotheca Indica, by Satyavrata Sāmaçramī, agree in the text. The edition of Haug (Bombay, 1863) is indeed different in several points, but these changes cannot be regarded as more than mere blunders, many being due to the difficulty of early printing.

Sāyaṇa's commentary is admittedly much superior in value to his commentary on the R̥gveda. As in the case of the Taittirīya Saṁhitā it shows real knowledge of the ritual, the Sūtras of Āçvalāyana, Āpastamba, and Baudhāyana being used with special frequency. Moreover he often cites real parallels from the Taittirīya Saṁhitā and the Taittirīya Brāhmaṇa, a fact which illustrates his familiarity, as commentator, with these two texts. He cites an earlier commentator, Govindasvāmin, by name¹ and mentions others.²

Aufrecht's text is of the greatest possible accuracy: apart from slight errors as at iii. 18. 9, there are but two clear errors, both of word division; in vii. 12. 3 vāçvā(h) is a mistake for vā çvā, as is proved by the syntax and the parallel versions; in iv. 6. 5 manorathāh is an error for anorathāh. His excerpts from Sāyaṇa are excellently chosen, and admirably edited. The other editions have only a value as containing a fuller text of the commentary.

Haug's edition is accompanied by a translation, the first ever made into English of any Brāhmaṇa text. It is a work for its time of very great merit, and its chief defects are due to its being based on a defective text and to insufficient use of the commentary. The review of it by A. Weber in Indische Studien, ix (1865), is of considerable importance and corrects many of the errors of Haug, but unfortunately it does not deal with the more serious difficulties of interpretation arising from the contents, as contrasted with mere errors of translation. A very valuable series of grammatical criticisms is contained in an article of Böhtlingk's.³

The Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇa, as opposed to the Aitareya, has received little attention; though it was early known in manuscript and described elaborately by Weber in an article in the second volume of the Indische Studien (1853), that account was never completed, and the text was not edited until 1887, when appeared the edition by B. Lindner (Jena, 1887): the second volume of the edition, which was to have contained a translation and notes, has never appeared. Lindner's edition does not include the commentary of Vināyakabhaṭṭa, son of Mādhavabhaṭṭa, as the important work could not be edited from the available MSS. Some extracts from it are given by Weber in his article cited above, and it has been used by other scholars; the comment on Adhyāya x has been edited by R. Löbbecke¹ in 1908.

Unlike the Aitareya the Kauṣītaki shows two distinct MS. traditions, one that preserved in Vināyaka's commentary and most MSS.,² and one in a MS. (M in Lindner) in Burnell's collection in Malayālam script. The latter is clearly a MS. with a good, but not perfect, tradition, and Lindner might profitably have adopted many more of its readings than he has done. Thus in ii. 2, M has adhī for the impossible abhi of the other MSS., and prācīm udīcīm and prācīr udīcīḥ for the later forms prāgudīcīm and prāgudīcīḥ of the other MSS.; in iv. 6 āpayīta must replace the absurd āpaiti. On the other hand the MS. is clearly one interpolated and fond of glosses; in i. 2 triṣu for eṣu before lokeṣu is not at all probable; in ii. 1 avadyotayati is merely, it seems, a correction of avajyotayati; in iv. 12 yasmin kalyāṇe nakṣatre is no improvement on yasmin nakṣatre, and so often. The translation here given rests on Lindner's text, but also takes account of the Burnell MS.³ There is also an edition in the Ānandāṣrama series No. 65 (Çaka, 1832, A. D. 1911), by Gulābarāya Vajecāmkara Chāyā, but it has only the value of a very mediocre manuscript, from which doubtless it has been printed, with occasional corrections. It is practically, as opposed to Lindner's text, of no value whatever. Neither is punctuated.

² Lindner used an India Office MS. (L), two of Wilson's Collection in the Bodleian (W and w), two other Bodleian MSS. (O and o), three Berlin MSS. (B, b, and K), and one of Max Müller's. Some readings from another Bodleian MS. are given in Winternitz and Keith, Bodleian Catal., p. 43. That MS. has the same tradition as the Vulgate.

³ See his Catalogue of Vedic Manuscripts, p. 7 (no. viii). The collation of Lindner as reported in his edition is very defective: thus in the difficult passage xxvii. 1 he omits to note the readings taḍ etan (which is infinitely superior to the difficult taḍ enām of his text), prasiṣṭkṣāmi himself in the same oblation, the same strew; this is one consecration.⁴ Seventeen⁵ kindling verses should he recite; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; the months are twelve, the seasons five through the union of winter and the cool season⁶; so great is the year; Prajāpati is the year. With these (verses) which abide in Prajāpati does he prosper who knows thus.

i. 2. The sacrifice went away from the gods; it they sought to start up with offerings; in that they sought to start it up with offerings that is why offerings have their name. They found it; he prospers having found the sacrifice who knows thus. The libations (āhuti) are callings by name, for by them the sacrificer calls to the gods; that is why libations have their name. Ways¹ (utī) rather are they called by which the gods come to the call of the sacrificer; paths and passages are ways; verily thus are they the roads to heaven of the sacrificer. They say, 'Since another pours the libation, then why do they style Hotṛ him who recites (the invitatory verses) and says the offering verses?' In that he here according to their portion invites the deities, (saying²) 'Bring hither N. N., bring hither N. N.', that is why the Hotṛ has the name. A Hotṛ becomes he, a Hotṛ they call him who knows thus.

i. 3. Him whom they consecrate the priests make into an embryo again. With waters they sprinkle; the waters are seed; verily having made him possessed of seed they consecrate him. With fresh butter they anoint; to the gods appertains melted butter, to men fragrant ghee, slightly melted butter to the fathers, fresh butter to embryos.¹ In that they anoint with fresh butter, verily thus they make him successful with his own portion. They anoint him completely; ointment is the brilliance in the eyes; verily thus having made him possessed of brilliance they consecrate him. With twenty-one handfuls of Darbha they purify him; verily thus purified and pure they consecrate him. They conduct him to the hut of the consecrated; the hut of the consecrated is the womb of the consecrated; verily thus they conduct him to his own womb; therefore (in and) from a firm womb he stands and moves; therefore (in and) from a firm womb embryos are placed and grow forth. Therefore the sun should not rise or set on the consecrated elsewhere than in the hut of the consecrated, nor should they call out to him. With a garment they cover him; the garment is the caul of the consecrated; verily thus they cover him with a caul. Above that is the black antelope skin; the placenta is above the caul; verily thus they cover him with the placenta. He closes his hands²; verily closing its hands the embryo lies within; with closed hands the child is born. In that he closes his hands, verily thus he clasps in his hands the sacrifice and all the deities. They say, 'There is no competing pressing³ for him who is first consecrated; the sacrifice is grasped by him, the deities are grasped; no misfortune is his as there is of him who is not consecrated first.' Having loosened the black antelope skin, he descends to the final bath; therefore embryos are born freed from the placenta; with the garment he descends; therefore a child is born with a caul.

⁴ The rule is laid down by ĀṢ. iv. 1. 1 that the new and full moon sacrifices should precede the Agrayaṇa, the Nirūdhapaṇu, the Cāturmāsya, and the Soma sacrifice, but he admits (iv. 1. 2) that the reverse order was possible and the other Sūtras leave the order undecided. The sacrifice here laid down for the consecration is in fact a mere variant of the full moon rite.

i. 4. 'Thou, O Agni, art extending' and 'O Soma, thy wondrous' should he recite as invitatory verses¹ for the butter portions for him who previously has not sacrificed; 'with thee they extend the sacrifice' (he says²); verily thus for him he extends the sacrifice. 'Agni with ancient thought' and 'O Soma, with verses thee' (he should use³) for him who has sacrificed before; in the word 'ancient' he refers to the former offering. This is not to be regarded. 'May Agni slay the foe' and 'Thou, O Soma, art very lord' (these should he recite and) make (the butter portions) contain a reference to the slaying of Vṛtra.⁴ Vṛtra he slays to whom the sacrifice condescends; therefore should they be made to contain a reference to the slaying of Vṛtra. 'Agni the head, the first of the deities' and 'With Agni, O Viṣṇu, the highest great penance' are the invitatory and offering verses of the oblation for Agni and Viṣṇu⁵; they are perfect in form as being addressed to Agni and Viṣṇu; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is performed the verse describes. Agni and Viṣṇu are the guardians of consecration of the gods; they are lords of the consecration; in that the oblation is for Agni and Viṣṇu, (it is because they desire⁶) 'May those who are the lords of the consecration, being delighted, confer consecration, may those who consecrate consecrate.' They are Triṣṭubh verses, to secure power.

i. 5. Gāyatrī verses¹ should he use as the invitatory and offering verses of the Sviṣṭakṛt, who desires brilliance or splendour; the Gāyatrī is brilliance and splendour; brilliant and resplendent does he become who knowing thus uses Gāyatrī verses. Uṣṇih verses² should he use who desires life; the Uṣṇih is life; he lives all his days who knowing thus uses Uṣṇih verses. Anuṣṭubh verses³ should he use who desires the heaven; of two Anuṣṭubhs there are sixty-four syllables; three worlds each twenty-onefold are there stretching upwards; with twenty-one (verses) each he mounts these worlds; with the sixty-fourth he finds support in the world of heaven; support he finds who knowing thus uses Anuṣṭubh verses. Bṛhatī verses⁴ should he use who desires prosperity and glory; the Bṛhatī is prosperity and glory among the metres; verily prosperity and glory he places in himself who knowing thus uses Bṛhatī verses. Pañkti verses⁵ should he use who desires the sacrifice; the sacrifice is fivefold; verily the sacrifice condescends to him who knowing thus uses Pañkti verses. Triṣṭubh verses⁶ should he use who desires strength; the Triṣṭubh is force, power, and strength; possessed of force, power, and strength does he become who knowing thus uses Triṣṭubh verses. Jagatī verses⁷ should he use who desires cattle; cattle are connected with the Jagatī; he becomes possessed of cattle who knowing thus uses Jagatī verses. Virāj verses⁸ should he use who desires proper food; the Virāj is food; therefore he who here has most food is most glorious in the world; that is why the Virāj has its name (the glorious). Glorious among his own is he, best of his own does he become who knows thus.

i. 6. Now the Virāj is a metre of five strengths; in that it has three Padas, it is the Uṣṇih and Gāyatrī; in that its Padas have eleven syllables, it is the Triṣṭubh; in that it has thirty-three syllables, it is the Anuṣṭubh, for metres are not different by reason of one syllable, nor yet by two; in that it is the Virāj, that is its fifth (strength). The strength of all the metres he wins, the strength of all the metres he attains, unity with and identity of form and world with all the metres he attains, an eater of food, a lord of food he becomes, with his offspring he attains proper food, who knowing thus uses Virāj verses. Therefore should Virāj verses⁸ be used, namely 'Kindled, O Agni' and 'These, O Agni'. The consecration is holy order, the consecration is truth; therefore by one who is consecrated should truth alone be spoken. Rather they say, 'What man ought to speak all truth; the gods are of truth compact,¹ but men of untruth compact.' He should speak with (the word²) 'discerning'; 'the discerning is the eye, for by it he sees distinctly' (they say). Now the eye is truth deposited among men; therefore to him who narrates they say, 'Hast thou seen?' If he replies 'I have seen', then him they believe. But if a man himself sees, he believes not even many others. Therefore should he speak with (the word) 'discerning'; his speech is uttered as essentially true.³

ADHYĀYA II

i. 7 (ii. 1). In¹ that there is the introductory (sacrifice), thereby they advance to the world of heaven; that is why the introductory (sacrifice: Prāyaṇīya) has its name (advancing). The introductory (sacrifice) is expiration, the concluding (sacrifice) is out-breathing, the Hotṛ is common, for expiration and out-breathing are common, for the arrangement of the breaths, for the discrimination of the breaths. The sacrifice went away from the gods; the gods could do nothing, they could not discern it. They said to Aditi, 'Through thee let us discern the sacrifice.' She said, 'So be it, but let me choose a boon from you.' 'Choose' (they replied). This boon she choose, 'Let the sacrifices begin from me and end with me.' 'So be it' (they replied). Therefore there is a pap to Aditi as introductory (offering), (a pap) to Aditi as concluding (offering), for as a boon by her was this chosen. Moreover she chose this boon, 'Through me shall ye know the eastern quarter, through Agni the southern, through Soma the western, through Savitr the northern.' He says the offering verse for Pathyā²; in that he says the offering verse for Pathyā, therefore does yonder (sun) arise in the east and set in the west, for it follows Pathyā. He says the offering verse for Agni³; in that he says the offering verse for Agni, therefore from the south the plants come first ripe, for the plants are connected with Agni. He says the offering verse for Soma⁴; in that he says the offering verse for Soma therefore westward flow many rivers, for the waters are connected with Soma. He says the offering verse for Savitr⁵; in that he says the offering verse for Savitr, therefore on the north-west he that blows blows most, for he blows instigated by Savitr. For Aditi⁶ last he says the offering verse; in that he says the offering verse for Aditi last, therefore yonder (sky) wets this (earth) with rain and snuffs it up. For five deities does he say the offering verses; the sacrifice is fivefold; all the regions are in order, the sacrifice also is in order, for that people is (all) in order, where there is a Hotṛ knowing thus.

i. 8 (ii. 2). He who desires brilliance and splendour should turn towards the east with the libations of the fore-offerings; the eastern quarter is brilliance and splendour; brilliant and resplendent does he become who knowing thus goes to the east. He who desires proper food should turn towards the south with the libations of the fore-offerings; Agni is eater of food and lord of food; he becomes an eater of food, a lord of food, with his offspring he attains proper food who knowing thus turns to the south. He who desires cattle should turn west with the libations of the fore-offerings; the waters are cattle; he becomes possessed of cattle who knowing thus turns west. He who desires the drinking of Soma should turn north with the libations of the fore-offerings; Soma the king is in the north; he obtains the drinking of Soma who knowing thus turns north; the upward region is heavenly; in all the quarters he prospers. These worlds are turned towards one another¹; turned towards him these worlds shine for prosperity for him who knows thus. For Pathyā he says the offering verse; in that he says the offering verse for Pathyā, verily thus at the beginning of the sacrifice he gathers speech together. Agni and Soma are expiration and inspiration, Savitr (serves) for instigation, Aditi for support. Verily for Pathyā he says the offering verse; in that he says the offering verse for Pathyā, verily thus with speech he leads the sacrifice to the path. Agni and Soma are the eyes; Savitr (serves) for instigation, Aditi for support. By the eye the gods discerned the sacrifice; by the eye that is discerned which cannot be discerned; therefore even after wandering in confusion, when a man perceives with the eye immediately,² then he discerns indeed. In that the gods discerned the sacrifice, in this (earth) they discerned, in it they gathered together; from³ it is the sacrifice extended, from it is it performed, from it is it gathered together, for Aditi is this (earth). Thus he says the offering verse for Aditi last; in that he says the offering verse for Aditi last, it is for the discernment of the sacrifice, for the revealing of the world of heaven.

i. 9 (ii. 3). 'The subjects of the gods should be brought into order,' they say; 'as they are brought into order, the subjects of men come into order.' All the subjects come into order, the sacrifice comes into order also, (all) is in order for that people where there is a Hotṛ knowing thus. He recites,¹

'Prosperity to us in the ways, in the deserts, Prosperity in the waters, in the abode which hath the light, Prosperity to us in the wombs that bear children, Prosperity for wealth do ye, O Maruts, bestow.'

The Maruts are the subjects of the gods; verily thus at the beginning of the sacrifice he brings them into order. 'With all the metres should he say the offering verse,' they say; having sacrificed with all the metres, the gods conquered the world of heaven; verily thus the sacrificer having sacrificed with all the metres conquers the world of heaven. 'Prosperity to us in the ways, in the deserts' and 'The highest safety in the way' are the Trīṣṭubh verses for Pathyā Svasti.² 'O Agni, lead us by a fair path to wealth' and 'We have come to the path of the gods' are the Trīṣṭubh verses for Agni.³ 'Thou, O Soma, skilled in thought' and 'Thine abodes in the sky, on the earth' are the Trīṣṭubh verses for Soma.⁴ 'The god of all, the lord of the good' and 'Who all these beings' are the Gāyatrī verses for Savitr.⁵ 'The good protector, the earth, sky unequalled' and 'The great one, the mother of those of good vows' are the Jagatī verses for Aditi.⁶ These are all the metres, Gāyatrī, Trīṣṭubh, and Jagatī, the others are dependent (on them), for these are used most prominently in the sacrifice. By means of these metres the sacrificer has sacrificed with all metres, who knows thus.

i. 10 (ii. 4). The invitatory and offering verses of this oblation contain the words¹ 'forward', 'lead', 'path', and 'prosperity'; having sacrificed with them the gods won the world of heaven; verily thus also the sacrificer having sacrificed with them wins the world of heaven. In them there is the line, 'Prosperity for wealth do ye, O Maruts, bestow'; the Maruts, as subjects of the gods,² occupy the atmosphere; whoever without notification to them goes to the world of heaven they are likely to obstruct him or to crush him. In that he says, 'Prosperity for wealth do ye, O Maruts, bestow,' he announces the sacrificer to the Maruts the subjects of the gods;

the Maruts, the subjects of the gods, do not obstruct him as he goes to the world of heaven, nor do they crush him. Prosperously they speed him to the world of heaven who knows thus. The invitatory and offering verses of the oblation for Sviṣṭakṛt should be the two *Virāj*³ verses of thirty-three syllables, 'May Agni here be above the other Agnis' and 'The Agni who guardeth from the foe'. Having sacrificed with the two Virāj verses, the gods won the world of heaven; verily thus also the sacrificer having sacrificed with two Virāj verses wins the world of heaven. They are of thirty-three syllables; the gods are thirty-three, eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, Prajāpati, and the vaśat call. Thus at the very beginning of the sacrifice he makes the deities sharers in the syllables; verily thus syllable by syllable he delights a deity; verily thus by a vessel for the gods he gladdens the deities.

i. 11 (ii. 5). 'The introductory (sacrifice) should be performed with the fore-offerings but without the after-offerings' they say;¹ 'in that there are after-offerings in the introductory (sacrifice), there is deficiency as it were, and delay as it were.' That is not to be regarded. It should be performed with the fore-offerings and also with the after-offerings;² the fore-offerings are the breaths, the after-offerings offspring; if he were to omit the fore-offerings he would omit the breaths of the sacrificer; if he were to omit the after-offerings, he would omit the offspring of the sacrificer; therefore should it be performed with the fore-offerings and also with the after-offerings. He should not perform the joint sacrifices for the wives (with the gods), nor should he offer with the concluding Yajus. By so much is the sacrifice incomplete. He should preserve the scrapings of the introductory (sacrifice) and mingle them with the concluding (sacrifice), for the continuity of the sacrifice, to prevent a breach in the sacrifice. Or rather in the pot in which he throws the introductory (sacrifice) into that he should throw the concluding (sacrifice). By so much the sacrifice becomes continuous and without a breach. 'Thereby they prosper in yonder world, not in this,' they say, 'in that it is introductory (advancing); as introductory they offer, as introductory they proceed; verily the sacrificers advance away from this world.' In ignorance verily they say thus. He should intertwine the invitatory and the offering verses; the invitatory verses of the introductory (sacrifice) he should make the offering verses of the concluding (sacrifice); the invitatory verses of the concluding (sacrifice) he should make the offering verses of the introductory (sacrifice). Thus he intertwines for success in both worlds, for support in both worlds; in both worlds is he successful, in both worlds he finds support. He finds support who knows thus. There is a pap for Aditi at the introductory, and one for Aditi at the concluding (sacrifice), for the support of the sacrifice, for the tying of the knots of the sacrifice, to prevent the slipping of the sacrifice. Just as then, he used to say, one ties the knots at both ends of a rope to prevent slipping, so at both ends of the sacrifice he ties knots to prevent slipping, in that there is a pap for Aditi at the introductory and also one for Aditi at the concluding sacrifice. With Pathyā Svasti hence they advance, in Pathyā Svasti they end; prosperously hence they advance, prosperously they end.

ADHYĀYA III

i. 12 (iii. 1). In¹ the eastern quarter the gods bought Soma the king; therefore in the eastern quarter is he bought. Him from the thirteenth month they bought; therefore the thirteenth month is not known; the Soma seller is not known, for the Soma seller is evil. The strengths and powers of him when bought and going towards men went away to the quarters; them they sought to win with one verse; they could not win them; them with two, with three, with four, with five, with six, with seven they could not win; with eight they won, with eight they obtained; that is why eight has its name. Whatever he desires he attains who knows thus. Therefore in these rites eight (verses) each are repeated, to win powers and strengths.

i. 13 (iii. 2). 'For Soma when bought and being brought forward, do thou say the invitatory verse' the Adhvaryu says. 'From good to better do thou come forward' he says;¹ this world is good; than it yonder world is better; verily thus he causes the sacrificer to go to the world of heaven. 'Let Brhaspati be thy harbinger' (he says); Brhaspati is the holy power; verily thus he makes the holy power precede him; what has the holy power come to no harm. 'Do thou stay on the chosen spot of earth' (he says). The chosen spot of earth is the place of sacrifice to the gods; verily thus he settles him on the chosen spot of earth. 'Do thou drive afar the foes, with all powers' (he says); verily thus he drives away the evil rival who hates him, and brings him low. 'O Soma, thy wondrous' this triplet to Soma² in Gāyatrī

i. 13. ¹ This verse which is found in the same form as here in the Yajus recension is also found at AV. vii. 8. 1 with the bad variants āthemām asyā pātrūm and sārva-vīram. For § 1 cf. KB. vii. 10.

² RV. i. 91. 9-11.

he recites when Soma the king is being brought forward; verily thus with his own deity, his own metre he makes him successful. 'All rejoice in the glory that hath come' he recites;³ Soma the king is glory; every one rejoices in his being bought, both he who is to gain something in the sacrifice and he who is not. 'The comrades in the comrade strong in the assembly, (he says); Soma the king is the comrade, strong in the assembly, of the Brahmans. 'Saving from sin' (he says); he indeed is a saviour from sin. He who is successful, he who attains pre-eminence, becomes sinful; therefore they say,⁴ 'Do not recite, do not proceed; let them not have sin to requite.' 'Winner of nourishment' (he says); nourishment is food; nourishment is the sacrificial fee; thereby he wins it; verily thus he makes him a winner of food. 'Ready is he for manly force' (he says); manly force is power and strength; manly force is not lost by him up to old age who knows thus. 'The god hath come' (he says⁵), for he has come now; 'With the seasons may he prosper the dwelling' (he says). The seasons are the royal brothers of Soma the king, as of a man; verily thus with that he causes him to come. 'May Savitr bestow upon us fair progeny and sap' this benediction he invokes. 'May he quicken us with nights and days' (he says); the days are days, the nights are nights; verily then for him with the days and the nights he invokes this benediction. 'Wealth with offspring may he accord to us' this benediction he invokes. 'Thine abodes which they worship with oblation' he recites;⁶ 'All these of thine be encompassing the sacrifice; conferring wealth, accomplishing with good heroes' (he says); verily thus he says 'Be thou a conferrer of cattle on us and an accomplisher.' 'Slayer of heroes, O Soma, go forward to the doors' (he says); the doors are the house; the house of the sacrificer is afraid of Soma the king as he advances; in that he recites this (verse), verily thus he calms him; he calmed injures not his offspring or cattle. 'This prayer of thy suppliant, O god', with (this verse) to Varuṇa he concludes; so long as he is tied up, Varuṇa is his deity, so long as he proceeds to the closed places; verily thus with his own deity, his own metre, he makes him successful. 'Of thy suppliant, O god' (he says⁷); he who sacrifices is a suppliant. 'Insight and skill, O Varuṇa, do thou quicken' (he says); verily thus he says, 'Do thou, O Varuṇa, quicken strength and knowledge.' 'Let us mount that ship fair crossing by

⁴ The version of Sāyaṇa takes mā pracārīḥ as addressed to the Adhvaryu and yātayan as prāpnuvantīḥ, but this seems unduly to minimize yātayan. The idea is that in too great prosperity danger of sin is near at hand.

⁵ Āgan is taken as past by the Brāhmaṇa, though Sāyaṇa renders it as imperative. The verse is RV. iv. 53. 7.

which we may pass over all evils' (he says); the ship fair crossing is the sacrifice; the ship fair crossing is the black antelope skin; the ship fair crossing is speech; verily thus having mounted upon speech with it he crosses over to the world of heaven. These he recites eight in number, perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is performed the verse describes. Of them he recites the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up twelve; the year has twelve months; Prajāpati is the year; verily with those whose abode is Prajāpati he prospers who knows thus. Thrice he recites the first, thrice the last; verily thus he ties the ends of the sacrifice, for firmness, for might, to prevent slipping.⁸

i. 14 (iii. 3). One of the two oxen should be yoked,¹ the other unloosened; then they should take down the king; if they were to take down when both were unloosed, they would make the king have the fathers as his deity; if when yoked, lack of peace and rest would come on offspring; offspring would scatter. The ox which is unyoked is the symbol of offspring who sit in the house; the yoked one is that of those on a journey. Those who take down when one is yoked and one unyoked, produce both peace and rest. The gods and the Asuras strove for these worlds; they contended for this eastern quarter; the Asuras conquered them thence; they contended for the southern quarter; the Asuras conquered them thence; they contended for the western quarter; the Asuras conquered them thence; they contended for the northern quarter; the Asuras conquered them thence. They contended for the north-eastern quarter; they were not conquered thence. This is the unconquered quarter; therefore in this quarter one should strive or cause striving;² for he has power to dispose of debts. The gods said, 'Through our lack of a king they conquer us; let us make a king.' 'Be it so' (they said). They made Soma king; with Soma as king they conquered all the quarters. He who sacrifices has Soma as king. While (the cart) stands facing east, they place on (the Soma); thereby he conquers the eastern quarter; him they carry round to the south; thereby he conquers the southern quarter; him they turn round to the west; thereby he conquers the western quarter; him they take down from (the cart) facing north; thereby he conquers the northern quarter. By Soma the king he conquers all the quarters who knows thus.

i. 15 (iii. 4). The¹ oblation of the guest reception is offered, when Soma the king has come; Soma the king comes to the house of the sacrificer; to him this oblation of the guest reception is offered; that is why the guest reception has its name. It is offered on nine potsherds; the breaths are nine; (it serves) to arrange the breaths, to recognize the breaths. It is for Viṣṇu; the sacrifice is Viṣṇu; verily thus with his own deity, his own metre, he makes him successful. All the metres and the Prṣṭhas follow Soma the king when bought. As many as follow Soma the king, to all these is the guest reception performed. They kindle the fire, when Soma the king has come. Just as in the world when a human king has come, or another deserving person, they slay an ox or a cow that miscarries; so for him they slay in that they kindle the fire, for Agni is the victim of the gods.

i. 16 (iii. 5). 'Recite for Agni being kindled' the Adhvaryu says; 'To thee, O god Savitr,' (this verse) to Savitr he recites. They say 'Since it is for Agni being kindled that he recites by order, then why does he recite (a verse¹) to Savitr?' Savitr is lord of instigations; verily thus on the instigation of Savitr they kindle him; therefore he recites (a verse) to Savitr. 'May the two great ones, sky and earth, for us,' (this verse) to sky and earth² he recites; they say, 'Since it is for Agni being kindled that he recites by order, then why does he recite (this verse) to sky and earth?' By means of sky and earth him when born the gods grasped; by these two even to-day is he grasped; therefore he recites (this verse) to sky and earth. 'Thee, O Agni, from the lotus' this triad in Gāyatrī to Agni³ he recites when the fire is being kindled; verily thus with his own deity, his own metre he makes him successful. 'Atharvan kindled forth' is perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is performed the verse describes. If he is not born, if he is long in being born, then should be repeated Gāyatrī verses,⁴ Rakṣas slaying, namely, 'O Agni strike down the foe' for the smiting away of the Rakṣases. The Rakṣases seize them when he is not born and is long in being born. If he is born when one only has been recited, or when two, then he should recite an appropriate (verse⁵) containing (the word) 'born', 'Let men say' for him when born. That which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. 'Whom with the hand like a quoit' (he says⁶), for with the hands they kindle him.

'The child born' (he says); Agni is a first-born child as it were; 'Like (it) they bear, Agni of the folk, good sacrificer' (he says); om is for them what na is for the gods. 'Forward bear the god to the feast for the gods, best winner of wealth' is the appropriate (verse ⁷) for him when being taken forward; that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. 'Let him seat himself in his own place of birth' (he says); he is his own place of birth in that Agni is Agni's. 'Born in the all-knower' (he says ⁸); one is born, one is the all-knower. 'Quicken the dear guest' (he says); he is his dear guest in that Agni is Agni's. 'On a smooth (place) the lord of the house' (he says); verily thus he places him in health. 'By Agni is Agni kindled, the sage, the lord of the house, the youthful, bearer of the oblation, with the ladle in his mouth' is the appropriate (verse ⁹); that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. 'For thou, O Agni, by Agni, sage by the sage, good by the good' (he says ¹⁰); one is a sage, the other a sage; one is good, the other good. 'Friend with friend thou art enkindled' (he says); he is his own friend in that Agni is Agni's. 'Him they make bright, the skilled, the victor in contests, the mighty one in his own dwellings' (he says ¹¹); he is his own house in that Agni is Agni's. 'With the sacrifice the sacrifice the gods sacrificed', with the last ¹² he concludes; with the sacrifice the gods sacrificed the sacrifice in that with Agni they sacrificed to Agni; they went to the world of heaven. 'These laws were first; these greatneses resort to the sky, where are the ancient Sādhyas gods' (he says ¹²); the Sādhyas gods are the metres; they first sacrificed to Agni with Agni; they went to the world of heaven. The Ādityas and the Aṅgirasas were here; they first sacrificed with Agni to Agni; they went to the world of heaven; the libation to Agni is a heavenly libation. Even if he who sacrifices is not a Brāhmaṇa ¹³ or is wrongly spoken of, nevertheless his libation goes to the gods and is not united with evil; his libation goes to the gods, and is not united with evil, who knows thus. These thirteen he recites perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is performed the verse describes. Of these he recites the first thrice, the last thrice. They make up seventeen; Prajāpati is seventeenfold, ¹³ Sāyaṇa gives two views of abrāhmaṇa, either as one who is not instigated by a Brāhmaṇa or one who is declared to be a non-Brahman as explained by Çātātapa in his Smṛti. On the whole the use is probably in each case the same, 'one who is said to be not a Brahman', a non-Brahman (opposed to subrāhmaṇa, Wackernagel, Altind. Gram. ii. i. 261) or durukta. The alternative is to take ukta as 'instigated', 'directed by' one who is not a Brahman or is ill-spoken of. See AB. ii. 17. Lévi (La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 123) has 'on sacrifice sans l'avis d'un brahmane ou si on est diffamé,' which is difficult.

the months are twelve, the seasons five; so great is the year; Prajāpati is the year; verily thus with these which have their abode in Prajāpati he prospers who knows thus. He recites the first thrice, the last thrice; verily thus he ties the ends of the sacrifice, for steadiness, for might, to prevent slipping.

i. 17 (iii. 6). 'With the kindling-stick honour Agni' and 'Swell up; be there gathered for thee' are the invitatory verses¹ of the two butter portions, referring to the guest reception and perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. (The verse) to Agni contains (the word) 'guest', not that to Soma; if (the verse) to Soma contained (the word) 'guest', it would clearly² be (the verse to be used); but it does contain (the word) 'guest' as it contains (the word) 'made fat'; when they serve him with food, then does he become fat. For them he says as offering verses³ 'Delighting'. 'Over this Viṣṇu strode' and 'To his beloved place may I win' are (two verses) to Viṣṇu.⁴ Having used (a verse) of three Padas as invitatory verse, he says one of four as offering verse, there are seven Padas; the guest reception is the head of the sacrifice; there are seven breaths in the head; verily thus he places breaths in the head. 'The Hotr of the sacrifice with brilliant car' and 'Famed far is the Agni of Bharata' are the invitatory and offering verses of the Svīṣṭakṛt,⁵ referring to the guest reception and perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. They are Trīṣṭubh verses, to secure power. (The sacrifice) ends with the sacrificial food; the gods prospered by means of the guest reception ending with the sacrificial food; therefore should it be performed ending with the sacrificial food. In this case they offer the fore-offerings, not the after-offerings. The fore-offerings and the after-offerings are the breaths; the fore-offerings are those breaths in the head, the after-offerings those below. If in the case one were to offer the after-offerings, that would be as if one were to break off those breaths and seek to place them in the head. That would be superfluous; these breaths, both those and those, are united together;⁶ verily thus in that they offer the fore-offerings, not the after-offerings, they obtain their desires in the fore-offerings and in the after-offerings.

³ i. e. the usual verses juṣāṇa agnir ājyasya vetu and juṣāṇaḥ soma ājyasya haviṣo vetu, ĀCS. i. 5, 29; ÇS. i. 8. 2 with haviṣo in the first also.

⁵ RV. x. 1. 5 and vii. 8. 4.

⁶ Sāyana takes this as a potential and as explaining atiriktam, but it seems necessary to use it as explaining the next sentence, the breaths are united and so are in a sense one, ime . . . ime because gestures are used.

ADHYĀYA IV

i. 18 (iv. 1). The¹ sacrifice went away from the gods (saying), 'I shall not be your food.' 'No', replied the gods, 'Verily thou shalt be our food.' The gods crushed it; it being taken apart was not sufficient for them. The gods said 'It will not be sufficient for us, being taken apart; come, let us gather together the sacrifice.' (They replied) 'Be it so'. They gathered it together; having gathered it together they said to the Aṇvins, 'Do ye two heal it', the Aṇvins are the physicians of the gods, the Aṇvins the Adhvaryus; therefore the two Adhvaryus gather together the cauldron. Having gathered it together they say, 'O Brahman, we shall proceed with the Pravargya offering; O Hotṛ, do thou recite.'

i. 19 (iv. 2). With 'The holy power born first in the east' he begins;¹ Brhaspati is the holy power; verily thus with the holy power he heals him. 'This royal one goeth in front to the father' (he says²); the royal one is speech; verily thus he places speech in him. 'The great one hath established the two great ones, when born' is addressed to Brahmanaspati;³ Brhaspati is the holy power; verily thus with the holy power he heals him. 'Towards the god Savitr in the bowls' is addressed to Savitr;⁴ Savitr is breath; verily thus he places breath in him. With⁵ 'Sit thou down; thou art great' they make him sit down. 'Whom they anoint, the sages, as it were extending' is (the verse⁶) appropriate for the anointing; that which is appropriate in the sacrifice is perfect. 'The bird anointed by the skill of the Asura', 'The foe who secretly may attack us, O Agni', and 'Be thou well disposed to us, O Agni, at our approach' are sets of two appropriate (verses⁷); that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. 'Make thou thy brilliance like a broad net', (these) are

¹ AB. i. 18-22 and KB. viii. 3-7 describe the Pravargya as a necessary preliminary to the Soma sacrifice. For the ritual see ĀCS. iv. 6 and 7; ÇÇS. v. 9 and 10; BÇS. ix. 1-16; MÇS. iv; ĀpÇS. xv. ÇÇS. does not require it for a first sacrifice. GB. vii. 6 borrows this. KB. viii. 3 allows it for a first sacrifice in certain cases. ÇB. xiv. 2. 44, 45; KÇS. viii. 2. 16; xxvi. 7. 53 forbid it in any case; TĀ. v. G. 3, however, allows it generally, and MÇS. iv. 1. 3, 4; Āp. in certain cases. For it cf. 'Round thee, O singer, the songs', 'In the two hast thou placed the word of praise', 'Pure is one of them, worthy of sacrifice one' and 'I saw the guardian never resting' are four isolated (verses⁹). They make up twenty-one; man here is twenty-onefold, ten fingers, ten toes, and the body as the twenty-first; this twenty-onefold self he prepares.

i. 20 (iv. 3). 'They of the sounding deep have sounded at the rim' are nine (verses¹) for Soma the purifying; the breaths are nine; verily thus he places the breaths in him. 'May Vena impel those born of Pṛṇi' (he says²); Vena is (this breath) here; above this here some breaths circulate (venanti), below others; therefore is it Vena; 'the breath being here hath not feared (nābheḥ)' (they say); therefore is it the navel; that is why the navel has its name; verily thus he places breath in him. 'Thy strainer is outspread, O lord of holy power', 'The strainer of the scorcher is outspread in the expanse of sky' and 'What time the Dhiṣaṇās spread out the strainer' (he says³); these breaths are connected⁴ with (the word) 'strained'; those breaths below are connected with seed, urine, and excrement; them verily thus he places in him.

i. 21 (iv. 4). 'Thee lord of hosts we invoke' is addressed to Brahmanaspati;¹ Bṛhaspati is the holy power; verily thus with the holy power he heals him. 'Of which extending and far extending are the names' are the bodies of the cauldron;² verily thus he makes him possessed of body and form. 'The Rathantara Vasiṣṭha hath brought'; 'Bharadvāja hath fetched the Bṛhat of Agni' (he says³); verily thus he makes him possessed of the Bṛhat and the Rathantara. 'I saw thee deep in thought' (he says⁴); it contains (the word) 'offspring' and is addressed to Prajāpati; verily thus he confers offspring upon him. 'What offering will win your favour, O Aṣvins' are nine (verses⁵) in different metres; that is the entrails of the sacrifice; the entrails are mixed as it were, some smaller some thicker; therefore are they in different metres. the dear home of the Aṇvins; he won the highest world; he goes to the dear home of the Aṇvins, he wins the highest world who knows thus. 'Agni shineth as the forefront of the dawns' is a hymn.⁶ 'O Aṇvins, to the swelling cauldron' is appropriate; that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. It is in Triṣṭubh verses; the Triṣṭubh is strength; verily then he places strength in him. 'Like the two pressing-stones for the one purpose ye sing' is a hymn⁷; by enumerating the members in 'Like the two eyes, like the two ears, like the two nostrils', verily thus he places the senses in him. It is in Triṣṭubh verses; the Triṣṭubh is strength; verily thus he places strength in him. 'I praise sky and earth for first inspiration' is a hymn⁸ and 'Agni, the cauldron, the shining, for hastening on the way' is appropriate; that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. It is in Jagatī verses; cattle are connected with the Jagatī; verily thus he confers cattle upon him. 'By which ye did help N. N., by which ye did help N. N.' (he says); so many desires do the Aṇvins see in it; them verily thus does he place in him; verily thus with them he makes him successful. 'The tawny one, the chief, hath made the dawns to glow' is (a verse⁹) containing (the word) 'glow'; verily thus he confers glowing upon him. 'With days and with nights guard us around', with the last (verse¹⁰) he concludes, 'With those unharmed and bringing good fortune, O Aṇvins; may this Mitra and Varuṇa accord us; Aditi, Sindhu, earth and sky'; verily thus with these desires he makes him successful. Such is the first section.

At 'O Agni, enjoy' he says the second vaṣaṭ, taking the place of the Sviṣṭakṛt. 'The ghee the milk offered in the cows' and 'Drink of this, O Aṣvins' he uses as offering verses⁷ in the afternoon; at 'O Agni, enjoy' he says the second vaṣaṭ, taking the place of Sviṣṭakṛt. Of these three oblations they do not take portions for the Sviṣṭakṛt, Soma, the cauldron, and the strengthening drink. In that he says the second vaṣaṭ, (it is) to avoid omitting Agni Sviṣṭakṛt. 'Through all the regions, seated in the south' the Brahman⁸ mutters; 'The pure cauldron among the gods over which the call of Hail! is uttered', 'From the ocean the wave Vena sendeth forth', 'The drop that goeth over the ocean', 'O friend, do thou turn towards the friend', 'Upright to our aid', 'Upright do thou protect us from tribulation', and 'Him indeed his worshippers' are appropriate⁹ (verses); that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. With 'O thou of pure brilliance, around thy dwelling' he desires food.¹⁰ With 'The oblation offered, the sweet oblation, on the fire that is most full of Indra, may we eat of thee, O divine cauldron, full of sweetness, full of nourishment, full of strength, full of the Aṅgirasas; homage to thee; harm me not' he partakes of the cauldron. 'Like an eagle its nest, the seat wrought with prayer' and 'In which the seven Vāsavas' he recites¹¹ for him when being deposited. 'The oblation, O thou rich in oblation, the great divine seat' (he says¹²) on the day on which they are going to remove (the cauldron). 'From the good pasture mayst thou be of good fortune', with the last (verse¹³) he concludes. The cauldron is a divine pairing; the cauldron is the member, the two handles the testicles, the spoon the thigh bones, the milk the seed; this seed is poured in Agni as the birthplace of the gods, as generation; the birthplace of the gods is Agni; he comes into existence from Agni as the birthplace of the gods, from the libations; having come into existence as composed of the R̥c,

i. 23 (iv. 6). The¹ gods and the Asuras strove for these worlds; the Asuras made these worlds as citadels, just as those who are more mighty and forceful. They made this (earth) an iron (citadel), the atmosphere one of silver, and the sky one of gold; thus they made these worlds as citadels. The gods said, 'The Asuras have made these worlds as citadels, let us make these worlds as citadels in opposition.' 'Be it so' (they replied). They made out of this (earth) as a counterpoise the Sadas, the Agnīdh's altar from the atmosphere, the two oblation holders from the sky. Thus they made these worlds as citadels in opposition. The gods said, 'Let us have recourse to the Upasads; by siege (Upasad) they conquer a great citadel.' 'Be it so' (they replied). With the first Upasad which they performed they repelled them from this world; with the second from the atmosphere, with the third from the sky. Thus from these worlds they repelled them.⁴ The Asuras, repelled from these worlds, had recourse to the seasons. The gods said, 'Let us have recourse to the Upasads.' 'Be it so' (they replied). These three Upasads they performed one by one twice each; they made up six; the seasons are six; then they repelled from the seasons; they, repelled from the seasons, the Asuras, had recourse to the months. The gods said, 'Let us have recourse to the Upasads.' 'Be it so' (they replied). These Upasads being six they performed one by one twice each; they made up twelve; the months are twelve; then they repelled from the months. The Asuras, repelled from the months, had recourse to the half-months. The gods said, 'Let us have recourse to the half-months.' 'Be it so' (they replied). These Upasads being twelve they performed one by one twice each; they made up twenty-four; the half-months are twenty-four then they repelled from the half-months. The Asuras, repelled from the half-months, had recourse to day and night. The gods said, 'Let us have recourse to the two Upasads.' 'Be it so' (they replied). With the Upasad which they performed on the forenoon they repelled them from the day, by that on the afternoon, from the night; thus from both they excluded them. Therefore one should proceed with the first Upasad early in the forenoon, with the second early in the afternoon. So much only of space does he leave to his enemy.

i. 24 (iv. 7). The Upasads are called victories; by them the gods won an unrivalled victory; an unrivalled victory does he win who thus knows. The victory which the gods won over these worlds, the seasons, the months, the half-months, the day and night, that victory he wins who knows thus.

The¹ gods were afraid, 'Through our disagreement the Asuras will wax great here.' Having gone apart they took council; Agni went out with the Varus, Indra with the Rudras, Varuṇa with the Ādityas, Br̥haspati with the All-gods. Having thus gone apart they took council; they said, 'Come, our dearest bodies let us deposit in the house of king Varuṇa; with them may he not be united who shall transgress this, who shall seek to cause trouble.' 'Be it so' (they replied). They deposited their bodies in the house of king Varuṇa; that became their bodily covenant; that is why the bodily covenant (Tānūnaptra) has its name. Therefore they say, 'One should not show treachery to one united by the bodily covenant.' Therefore the Asuras do not wax great here.

i. 25 (iv. 8). The guest reception is the head of the sacrifice, the Upasads the neck; they are performed on the same strew, for the head and the neck are the same. In the Upasads the gods fashioned an arrow; of it the point was Agni, the socket Soma; the shaft Viṣṇu, the feathers Varuṇa.¹ It they discharged, using the butter as a bow; with it they kept piercing the citadels; therefore these have butter as the oblation. At the Upasads he has first recourse to four teats for the fast milk, for the arrow is composed of four elements, point, socket, shaft, and feathers; three teats he has recourse to for the fast milk in the Upasads, for the arrow is composed of three elements, point, socket, and shaft; two teats he has recourse to for the fast milk in the Upasads, for the arrow is composed of two elements, the socket and the shaft only; one teat he has recourse to for the fast milk in the Upasads, for it is called the one thing 'arrow', by one is strength exercised. These worlds are broader above and narrower below; he performs the Upasads from the top downwards, for the conquering of these worlds. 'To the generous to be adored', 'This kindling stick of mine, O Agni, this waiting upon thee do thou accept' are sets of three kindling verses,² perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. He should use (verses³) containing (the word) 'slay', as invitatory and offering verses, 'Let Agni slay the foes,' 'Who is dread, as it were, a slayer with darts,' 'Thou, O Soma, art very lord,' 'Bestowing prosperity, slayer of disease,' 'Over this Viṣṇu strode,' 'Three steps he strode apart,' these are they. He sacrifices in the afternoon with (the verses) inverted. With these in the Upasads the gods kept slaying and destroying the citadels. They should be of the same metre, not of different metres; if he were to make them of different metres, he would cause swelling on the neck; he would produce boils; therefore should they be made of the same metre, not of different metres. Now as to this Upāvi Jānaçruteya used to say, that is in his explanation of the Upasads, 'In that⁴ the face of even an ugly Çrotriya is seen as joyous as it were and as singing, (it is) because the Upasads have butter as the oblation, and (it is) a face placed on the neck'; therefore was he wont to say this.

i. 26 (iv. 9). The¹ fore-offerings and the after-offerings are divine armour; (this rite) is without fore-offerings and after-offerings, to sharpen the arrow and to prevent rending. Having once stepped over he makes (him) proclaim, to master the sacrifice and to prevent its departure. They say, 'A cruel thing do they in the neighbourhood of Soma the king,² in that they offer the ghee in his neighbourhood, for by ghee as a thunderbolt Indra slew Vṛtra,' in that they make the king to swell, (saying) 'May every shoot of thine, O god Soma, swell for Indra who obtaineth the chief share; may Indra swell for thee; do thou swell for Indra; make us as comrades to swell; with gain, with insight, prosperously may I attain the conclusion in the pressing of thee, O God Soma'; verily thus they make whole whatever cruel as it were they do in his neighbourhood; moreover they cause him to grow. Soma the king is the embryo of sky and earth; in that, (saying) 'Sought by sacrifice is wealth, sought are good things, for strength, for prosperity; holy order to the speakers of holy order; homage to sky,

⁴ The sense is uncertain, as, if iti in rebhativety is taken as ending the quotation, then the sentence is hard to construe, unless it is made to mean 'From whatever (side) the face is seen', which is harsh. On the other hand yasmāt . . . hi contrast well and the omission of iti as in AB. iii. 8. 4 is not difficult. Yet tasmāt points to a reason given by the text, not by Upāvi. Weber takes it as 'In the Brāhmaṇa is to be found the reason that, &c.'. For Brāhmaṇa in this sense cf. ÇB. iv. 1. 5. 14; iii. 2. 4. 1. The sage is called Aupāvi in ÇB. v. 1. 1. 5, 7. janitoḥ must be active, not pass., as Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 430.

¹ The chief point of this chapter is the Nihnavana, for which see ĀÇS. iv. 5. 7; ÇÇS. v. 8. 5; Caland and Henry, L'Agni-çtoma, pp. 63, 64. The Mantras occur in TS. i. 2. 11 and its parallels. For deva-varmā cf. TS. ii. 6. 1. 5.

ADHYĀYA V

The Bringing forward of the Soma and the Fire.

i. 27 (v. 1). Soma¹ the king was among the Gandharvas; the gods and the seers meditated on him, 'How shall Soma the king come hither to us?' Speech said, 'The Gandharvas love women; with me as a woman do ye barter it.' 'No,' replied the gods, 'how could we be without you?' She replied, 'Still do ye buy; when ye will have need of me,² then shall I return to you.' 'Be it so' (they replied). With her as a great naked one they bought Soma the king. In imitation of her they bring up a young immaculate cow to buy Soma; with her they buy Soma the king. Her he may repurchase again, for (speech) went back to them. Therefore one should speak inaudibly when Soma the king had been bought, for then speech is among the Gandharvas; when the fire is again brought forward, she returns again.

i. 28 (v. 2). 'Recite for Agni as he is being brought forward,' the Adhvaryu says.

'Forth the god with the thought divine,
Do ye bear the all-knower,
May he bear our libations daily,' this Gāyatrī verse¹ should he recite for a Brahman; the Brahmin is connected with the Gāyatrī; the Gāyatrī is brilliance and splendour; verily thus with brilliance and with splendour he makes him prosper. 'To him the mighty, meet for assembly, the strengthening hymn,' this Trīṣṭubh he should recite for a Rājanya; the Rājanya is connected with the Trīṣṭubh; the Trīṣṭubh is force, power, and strength; verily thus with force, power, and strength he makes him prosper. 'Ever uttering they have brought forward to the one worthy of praise' (he says); verily, thus he makes him attain pre-eminence over his own people. 'Let him bear us with the splendours of his home; let Agni hear us immortal with his divine (splendour); until old age on him he shines immortal, who thus knows.' 'He here first hath been set down by the ordainers', this Jagatī verse³ should he recite for a Vaiçya; the Vaiçya is connected with the Jagatī; cattle are connected with the Jagatī; verily thus with cattle he makes him prosper. 'Variegated in the woods, manifested for every people' is an appropriate (verse⁴); that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. 'Here the godly', in this Anuṣṭubh⁵ he utters speech; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; verily thus in speech he utters speech. In that he says 'Here', verily thus speech declares 'Here am I come who aforetime have dwelt with the Gandharvas.' 'Agni protecteth here' (he says⁶), Agni here protects; 'As from the immortal race'; verily thus he confers immortality upon him. 'Stronger than the strong the god made for life' (he says), for Agni is a god made for life. 'Thee in the footstep of the sacrificial food, on the navel of the earth' (he says⁷); the navel of the high altar is the footstep of the sacrificial food. 'O All-knower, we deposit thee' (he says), for they about to deposit him. 'O Agni, to carry the oblation' (he says), for he is about to carry the oblation. 'O Agni of fair face, with all the gods, sit first on the birthplace rich in wool' (he says⁸); verily thus he makes him sit with all the gods. 'Making a nest, rich in ghee, for Savitr' (he says); a nest as it were is made in the sacrifice by the enclosing sticks of Pitudāru wood, bdellium, the wool tufts, and the fragrant grasses. 'Lead the sacrifice well for the sacrificer' (he says); verily thus he establishes straight the sacrifice. 'Sit, O Hotr, in thine own place, discerning' (he says⁹); the Hotr of the gods is Agni; the navel of the high altar is his own place. 'Do thou place the sacrifice in the birthplace of good deeds' (he says); the sacrifice is the sacrificer; verily thus for the sacrificer he invokes this benediction. 'Seeking the gods, do thou sacrifice to the gods with oblation, O Agni, do thou accord great power to the sacrificer' (he says); power is breath; verily thus he places breath in the sacrificer. 'The Hotr in the Hotr's seat, well knowing' (he says¹⁰); the Hotr of the gods is Agni; the navel of the high altar is his Hotr's seat. 'Shining, resplendent, he hath sat, the well skilled' (he says), for he is seated here. 'With vows and foresight undeceived, most bright' (he says); Agni is the most bright of the gods. 'Bearing a thousand, Agni, of pure tongue' (he says); for this is his character of bearing a thousand, that him being but one they carry apart in many directions; prosperity a thousandfold he obtains who knows thus. 'Thou art a herald, thou also our protector from afar,' with this last (verse¹¹) he concludes. 'Thou, O strong one, art the leader to greater wealth; (O Agni, for ourselves, our children and offspring, be thou the guardian, resplendent and never failing' (he says); Agni is the guardian of the gods; verily thus does he place Agni as a guardian on all sides for himself and for the sacrificer, when one knowing thus concludes with this (verse); moreover, thus he produces prosperity for a year. Eight he recites, perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. Of these he recites the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up twelve; the year has twelve months; Prajāpati is the year; verily thus with those that have their abode in Prajāpati he prospers who knows thus. He repeats the first thrice, the last thrice; verily thus he ties the two ends of the sacrifice, for firmness, for might, to avoid slipping.

i. 29 (v. 3). 'Recite¹ for the two oblation holders being brought forward' the Adhvaryu says. 'I yoke your ancient holy power with praises' he recites;² with the holy power the gods yoked the two oblation holders; verily thus with the holy power he yokes the two: what has the holy power come to no harm. 'Let the two come forward with weal for the sacrifice,' this triplet³ to sky and earth he recites. They say, 'Seeing that he recites by order for the two oblation holders being brought forward, then why does he recite a triplet to sky and earth?' Sky and earth were the oblation holders of the gods; even to-day also are they the oblation holders, for within these is here all oblation and whatever there is; therefore he recites a triplet to sky and earth. 'What time ye came like twins striving' (he says⁴), for moving like twins they come in an even line. 'Pious men bore you forward' (he says), for pious men bear them forward. 'Sit down in your own place, well knowing; be of secure abode for our Soma drop' (he says); the drop is Soma the king; verily thus he makes the two for Soma the king to sit on. 'In the two thou hast placed the word of praise' (he says⁵), for on the two the third, the covering, is deposited. In that he says 'The word of praise', and the word of praise is the sacrificial rite, verily with it he makes the sacrifice prosper. 'Who in union with uplifted ladle pay honour; unrestrained he dwelleth in thine ordinance, he doth flourish' (he says); the line containing the word 'restrain' which he yonder first said, that with this he appeases, for appeasement. 'May thy strength be favouring to the sacrificer who poureth (oblation)', he invokes this benediction. 'All forms the sage doth assume,' this 'All form' (verse⁶) he recites; he should recite looking at the fronton, for the fronton has as it were all forms, white as it were, and black as it were. Every form he wins for himself and for the sacrificer when one knowing thus recites the verse while looking at the fronton. 'Around thee, O singer, the songs', with this last (verse⁷) he concludes. When he thinks that the oblation holders are covered, he should conclude then. The wives of the Hotṛ and the sacrificer are not likely to become naked, when one knowing thus concludes with this (verse) when the oblation holders have been covered. By a Yajus⁸ are the oblation holders covered; verily thus with a Yajus they cover the two. When the Adhvaryu and the Pratiprasthātr strike in the posts on both sides, then should he conclude; for then are the two covered. Eight he recites, perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. Of them he recites the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up twelve; the year has twelve months; Prajāpati is the year; verily thus with those whose abode is Prajāpati he prospers who knows thus. He recites the first thrice, the last thrice; verily, thus he ties the two ends of the sacrifice for firmness, for might, to prevent slipping.

i. 30 (v. 4). 'Recite for Agni and Soma being brought forward' the Adhvaryu says.¹ 'Do thou pour forth, O god, for the first the father', (this verse²) to Savitr he recites. They say, 'Since he recites by order for Agni and Soma being brought forward, then why does he recite a verse to Savitr?' Savitr is lord of instigation; verily thus instigated by Savitr they bring them forward; therefore he recites (a verse) to Savitr. 'Let Brahmanaspati move forward', (this verse) to Brahmanaspati he recites³ they say, 'Since he recites by order for Agni and Soma being brought forward, then why does he recite (a verse) to Brahmanaspati?' Brhaspati is the holy power; verily thus he makes the holy power their harbinger; that which contains the holy power comes not to harm. 'Let the goddess move forward, the bounteous (he says); verily thus he makes the sacrifice possessed of bounteousness; therefore does he recite (a verse) to Brahmanaspati. 'The Hotṛ, the god, the immortal', this triplet⁴ to Agni he recites, when Soma, the king, is being brought forward. Soma the king the Asuras and the Rakṣases sought to slay as he was being brought forward between the Sadas and the oblation holders; Agni by his cunning led him past. 'He goeth before by cunning' he says, for he led him past by cunning; therefore in front of him they carry Agni. 'To thee, O Agni, day by day' and 'To the dear the adorable' these three⁵ and one⁶ he recites; these two, coming together, are liable to injure the sacrificer, he that was formerly taken out and he whom after they bring forth. In that he recites three and one, verily thus he unites them in unison; verily thus he establishes them in security, to prevent injury to himself or the sacrificer. 'O Agni, rejoice; be glad in this prayer' he recites⁷ when the libation is being offered; verily thus he causes the libation to gladden Agni. 'Soma goeth, who knoweth the way', this triplet⁸ in Gāyatrī to Soma he recites, when Soma the king is being brought forward; verily thus with his own deity, his own metre, he makes him prosper. 'Soma hath sat him on his place' he says; for he is going to take his seat here; having gone beyond and placing the Agnīdh's altar at his back as it were should he recite. 'This of him King Varuṇa, this the Aṇvins', (this verse⁹) to Viṣṇu he recites; 'Attend the insight of him with the Maruts, the ordainer; he doth support the strength, the highest, that knoweth the day; the stall doth Viṣṇu with his comrades reveal' (he says); Viṣṇu is the door guardian of the gods; verily thus he opens the door to him. 'When within thou hast come forward, thou shalt be Aditi' he recites¹⁰ when he is being put in place. 'Like an eagle his nest, the seat wrought with devotion' (he says¹¹) when he has been put in place. 'To the golden to sit on the god hasteneth' (he says); golden as it were he spreads thus for the gods as a cover the black antelope skin. Therefore does he recite this (verse). 'He hath established the sky, the Asura, all-knower'¹², with (this verse) to Varuṇa he concludes; so long as he is tied up he has Varuṇa as his deity, so long as he is approaching the covered (places); verily thus with his own deity, his own metre, he makes him prosper. If they should run up to him or seek safety, he should conclude with the following (verse¹³), 'Do thou welcome Varuṇa the great.' For so many as he desires freedom from fear, for so many as he contemplates freedom from fear, to so many is freedom from fear accorded, when one knowing thus concludes with this (verse). Seventeen (verses) he recites, perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect, which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. Of them he recites the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up twenty-one; Prajāpati is twenty-onefold; twelve months, five seasons, these three worlds, yonder Āditya as twenty-first, the highest support. This is the divine field, this prosperity, this is overlordship, this the expanse of the tawny one, this the abode of Prajāpati, this self-rule. Verily thus he prospers as regards him¹⁴ with these twenty-one (verses).

PAÑCIKĀ II

ADHYĀYA I

ii. 1 (vi. 1). By¹ means of the sacrifice the gods went upwards to the world of heaven; they were afraid, 'Seeing this of us men and seers will track us.' Them they obstructed by means of the sacrificial post; in that they obstructed them by means of the post, that is why the post has its name. Having fixed it point down, they went upwards. Then men and seers came to the place of sacrifice of the gods, 'Let us seek something to track the sacrifice.' They found the post only, established with point downwards. They perceived, 'By this the gods have blocked the sacrifice.' Having dug it out they fixed it upwards; then did they discern the world of heaven. In that the post is fixed upright, (it is) to track the sacrifice, to reveal the world of heaven. The post is a thunderbolt; it should be made of eight corners; the bolt is eight-cornered. This he hurls as a weapon at the rival who hates him, to lay him low who is to be laid low by him. The post is a bolt; it stands erect as a weapon against the foe. Therefore also to him who hates there is displeasure in seeing, 'This is N. N.'s post, this is N. N.'s post.' Of Khadira wood should he make the post who desires heaven; by means of a post of Khadira the gods won the world of heaven; thus verily also the sacrificer by a post of Khadira wins the world of heaven. Of Bilva should he make the post, who desires proper food and desires prosperity. Year by year is Bilva taken; this is the symbol of proper food. It should be covered with branches up to the root, this is (the symbol) of prosperity. He prospers in offspring and cattle who knowing thus makes the post of Bilva. Now as to (his using) Bilva,² they say 'Bilva is light'; a light he becomes among his own people, he becomes the chief of his own people, who knows thus. Of Palāça should he make the post, who desires brilliance and desires splendour. The Palāça is the brilliance and splendour of the trees³; brilliant and resplendent he becomes who knowing thus makes the post of Palāça. As to (his using) Palāça, the Palāça is the birthplace of all trees; therefore they speak with the word 'Palāça' of foliage generally, as 'the foliage of N. N.; the foliage of N. N.' The desire in all trees is obtained by him who knows thus.

ii. 2 (vi. 2). 'We are anointing the post; do thou recite' the Adhvaryu says. 'They anoint thus at the sacrifice, pious men' he recites,¹ for at the sacrifice pious men anoint him. 'O tree, with divine sweetness'; the butter is the divine sweetness. 'What time thou dost stand aloft, then give us riches, or what time thou dost dwell in the lap of the mother' (he says); 'if thou shalt stand or thou shalt lie, bestow wealth upon us' he says in effect. 'Rise erect, O lord of the forest' is the appropriate (verse²) for it being raised; that which in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. 'On the surface of the earth' (he says); that is the surface of the earth where they set up the post. 'Being set up with careful setting, do thou bestow radiance on the bearer of the sacrifice,' this benediction he invokes. 'Rising before the kindled' (he says³), for it is erected before the kindled (fire). 'Winning the holy power unaging, with good heroes', this benediction he invokes. 'Driving misfortune far from us' (he says); misfortune is hunger, the evil; verily thus he drives it away from the sacrifice and from the sacrificer. 'Rise erect for great good fortune,' this benediction he invokes.⁴ 'Aloft to our aid do thou arise like the god *Savitṛ*⁵'; 'the na of the gods is their om' (they say); verily thus he says 'stand like the god Savitṛ'. 'Aloft as the gainer of booty' (he says); verily thus he gains it as a gainer of booty and winner of riches. 'What time with skilled singers we vie in calling' (he says); the skilled singers are the metres; by means of them the sacrificers vie in calling the gods; 'To my sacrifice come ye, to my sacrifice.' Even if many as it were sacrifice, the gods come to the sacrifice of him where one knowing thus recites this (verse). 'Aloft protect us from tribulation, with thy beams do thou consume every devourer' (he says⁶); the devourers are the Rakṣases, the evil; verily thus he says, 'Burn the Rakṣases, the evil.' 'Make us erect for motion, for life,' in that he says thus, verily he says 'Make us erect for moving, for life.' Even if the sacrificer is seized as it were, verily thus he gives him to the year. 'Find our worship among the gods', this benediction he invokes. 'Born he is born in the fairness of the days' (he says⁷), for born he is thus born. 'Waxing great in the mortal ordinance' (he says); verily thus they make it grow. 'They purify him, the clever, the busy, with skill' (he says); verily thus they purify it. 'The sage uttereth his speech desirous of the gods' (he says); verily thus he announces it to the gods. 'The youth, well clad, covered round, hath come', with this last (verse⁸) he concludes; the youth well clad is the breath; it is enclosed with the bodily parts. 'Better he becometh being born' (he says), for ever better he becomes being born. 'Him the wise sages raise up, the prudent, the pious with their minds' (he says); the sages are the learned ones; verily thus they raise it up. Seven (verses) he repeats, perfect in form; that in the sacrifice is perfect which is perfect in form, that rite which as it is being performed the verse describes. Of them he says the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up eleven; the Trīṣṭubh has eleven syllables; the thunderbolt of Indra is the Trīṣṭubh; verily thus with those whose abode is Indra he prospers who knows thus. He recites the first thrice, the last thrice; verily thus he ties the ends of the sacrifice, for firmness, for might, to prevent slipping.

ii. 3 (vi. 3). 'Should the post stand? Or should he throw it (into the fire)?' they say. It should stand for one desiring cattle. Cattle would not serve the gods for slaying as food. They having departed kept disputing; 'Ye shall not slay us, not us.' Then the gods saw this post as a thunderbolt; they raised it up against them; fearing it they came back; verily even to-day they come up to it. Thereafter the cattle served the gods for slaying as food. Cattle serve for slaying as food him who knows thus and for whom knowing thus the post continues standing. He should throw (it) after for one who desires heaven; the ancients used to throw it after, (thinking) 'the post is the sacrificer, the strew the sacrificer; Agni is the birthplace of the gods; he, having come into existence from Agni as the birthplace of the gods from the oblation, with a body of gold will go aloft to the world of heaven.' Then those who were later than they saw this clip as a fragment of the post¹; it should be thrown after at this time; thence is obtained the desire in the throwing after, thence the desire is obtained which is in the standing. Himself to all the deities he offers who consecrates himself; all the deities are Agni; all the deities are Soma; in that he offers a victim to Agni and Soma, verily thus the sacrificer redeems himself from all the deities.² They say, 'As victim for Agni and Soma should be offered one of two colours,³ for it is for two deities.' That is not to be regarded. It should be offered as fat; cattle are characterized by fat; the sacrificer becomes emaciated as it were; in that the victim is fat, verily thus he makes the sacrificer prosper with his own fat. They say, 'He should not eat of the victim for Agni and Soma; of a man he eats who eats of the victim for Agni and Soma, for thereby the sacrificer redeems himself.' That is not to be regarded.⁴ (The victim) for Agni and Soma is an oblation connected with the slaying of Vṛtra; by means of Agni and Soma Indra slew Vṛtra; they said to him, 'Through us two thou hast slain Vṛtra; let us choose a boon from thee.' 'Choose' (he said). They chose this boon, the victim on the pressing day of to-morrow. This is regularly performed for those two, for it is chosen as a boon for them. Therefore should the victim be partaken of, and one should be fain to take it.

ii. 4 (vi. 4). With the Āpri verses he delights;¹ the Āpri verses are brilliance and splendour; verily thus with brilliance and splendour he causes him to prosper. He says the offering verses for the kindling-sticks; the kindling-sticks are the breaths, for the breaths enkindle all that there is here; verily thus he delights the breaths, he places the breaths in the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for Tanūnapāt; Tanūnapāt is the breath, for he protects bodies; verily thus he delights the breath, he places the breath in the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for Narāṇsa²; men are offspring; praise is speech; verily thus he delights offspring and speech; offspring and speech he confers upon the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for the sacrificial food; the sacrificial food is food; verily thus he delights food; food he confers upon the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for the strew; the strew is cattle; verily thus he delights cattle; cattle he confers upon the sacrificer. He says the offering verses for the doors; the doors are rain; verily thus he delights rain; rain and proper food he bestows upon the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for dawn and night; dawn and night are day and night; verily thus he delights day and night; in day and night he places the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for the divine Hotṛs; the divine Hotṛs are expiration and inspiration; verily thus he delights expiration and inspiration; expiration and inspiration he confers upon the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for the three goddesses; the three goddesses are expiration, inspiration, and cross-breathing; verily thus he delights them; them he confers upon the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for Tvaṣṭṛ; Tvaṣṭṛ is speech, for speech creates³ all this as it were; verily thus he delights speech; he confers speech on the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for the lord of the forest; the lord of the forest is the breath; verily thus he delights the breath; the breath he places in the sacrificer. He says the offering verse for the calls of Hail!; the calls of Hail! are a support: verily thus on a support at the end he establishes the sacrificer. For these should he use (verses) by the ancestral seer; in that he uses (verses) by the seer, verily thus he does not set loose the sacrificer from his connexion.

ii. 5 (vi. 5). 'Recite for the carrying round of fire' the Adhvaryu says. 'Agni, the Hotṛ, at our sacrifice', this triplet¹ to Agni in Gāyatrī he recites when the carrying round of fire is being performed; verily thus with his own deity, his own metre, he makes him prosper. 'Being a steed he is carried round' (he says), for him being as it were a steed they carry round. 'Thrice round the sacrifice Agni goeth like a charioteer' (he says), for he like a charioteer goes round the sacrifice. 'The lord of strength, the sage' (he says), for he is the lord of strength. 'Do thou give the supplementary direction, O Hotṛ, for the oblations for the gods' the Adhvaryu says. 'Agni hath conquered,² he hath won strength', thus the Maitrāvaruṇa begins the supplementary direction. They say, 'Since the Adhvaryu gives the order for supplementary directions to the Hotṛ,'³ then why does the Maitrāvaruṇa begin the supplementary direction?' The Maitrāvaruṇa is the mind of the sacrifice; the Hotṛ is the voice of the sacrifice; instigated by mind voice speaks, for the speech which one speaks with his mind elsewhere, that speech is demoniacal and not acceptable to the gods. In that the Maitrāvaruṇa begins the supplementary direction, verily thus with mind he sets speech in motion; with speech set in motion by mind he provides the oblation for the gods.

ii. 6 (vi. 6). 'O divine slayers and O human (slayers) make ready' he says; the slayers of the gods and those of man, them thus he instructs. 'Bring ye (it) to the doors of sacrifice,¹ ordaining the sacrifice for the lords of the sacrifice' (he says). The sacrifice is the victim; the lord of the sacrifice the sacrificer; verily thus he makes the sacrificer prosper with his own sacrifice. Or rather they say, 'To whatever deity the victim is slaughtered, that is the lord of the sacrifice.' If the victim be for one deity, 'for the lord of the sacrifice' he should say; if for two deities, 'for the two lords of the sacrifice'; if for many deities 'for the lords of the sacrifice'. That is the rule. 'Forward for him bear Agni' (he says); the victim as it was borne along saw death before it, and was not willing to go to the gods; the gods said to it, 'Come; we shall make you go to the world of heaven.' It replied 'Be it so; but let one of you go before me.' 'Be it so' (they replied). Before it went Agni; it followed after Agni. Therefore they say, 'Every animal is connected with Agni, for after Agni it followed.' Therefore also they bear Agni before it. 'Spread the strew' (he says); the victim has plants as its body; verily thus he makes the victim have its full body. 'May its mother approve it, its father, its brother from the same womb, its comrade from the same flock' (he says); verily thus they slay it with the approval of its generators.² 'Place its feet north; make its eye go to the sun; let loose its breath to the wind, its life to the atmosphere, its ear to the quarters, its body to earth' (he says); verily it he thus places in these worlds. 'Flay off its skin in one piece; before cutting the navel force out the omentum; keep its breath within' (he says); verily thus he places the breaths in cattle. 'Make³ its breast an eagle, its two front legs hatchets, its two fore feet spikes, its shoulders two tortoises as it were, its loins uncut, its thighs two door leaves, its knees oleander leaves; its ribs are twenty-six; them in order remove; make each limb of it perfect' (he says); verily thus its members and its limbs he delights. 'Make a hole in the earth to cover the offal' he says; the offal is connected with plants; this (earth) is the support of plants; verily thus at the end he establishes it in its own support.

ii. 7 (vi. 7). 'Unite the Rakṣases with the blood' he says.¹ With the husks and the polishings the gods deprived the Rakṣases of the offerings of oblations (of cereals, &c.), with blood of the great sacrifice. In that he says 'Unite the Rakṣases with the blood', with their own share he excludes the Rakṣases from the sacrifice. They say 'He should not at the sacrifice make mention of Rakṣases; what Rakṣases are there? The sacrifice is without Rakṣases.' They say, however, 'He should make mention; if a man deprive one with a portion of his portion, he revenges himself on him, or if he does not revenge himself on him, then on his son, or on his grandson, but he does revenge himself on him.' If he make mention he should do so inaudibly; the inaudible part of speech is hidden as it were, the Rakṣases are hidden as it were. If he were to make mention audibly he would make his speech the speech of the Rakṣases.

² An interesting example of the common practice of deprecating the anger of the relatives of the dead victim.

He who speaks the speech of the Rakṣases (speaks) that speech which a proud person or a man distraught speaks; that is the speech of the Rakṣases. He does not himself become proud, nor in his offspring is a proud son born who knows thus. 'Its entrails² do not cut deeming them an owl (in that shape), lest in your family and offspring a howler may howl, O slayer' (he says); to the divine and the human slayers verily thus he hands it over. 'O Adhriḡu, toil, carefully toil; toil, O Adhriḡu' thrice should he say and 'O free from sin';³ the slayer of the gods is the Adhriḡu, the Nigrabhīṭṛ the one free from sin; verily thus he hands it over to the slayers and the Nigrabhīṭṛs. 'O slayers, whatever here shall be well done, to us that; whatever ill done, elsewhere that' (he says); Agni was the Hotṛ of the gods; with speech he dissected it; by speech the Hotṛ dissects it. Whatever they cut below or above,⁴ whatever is done to excess or defectively, verily thus he indicates it to the Nigrabhīṭṛs and the slayers; prosperously verily is the Hotṛ set free with full life for fullness of life; all his life he lives who thus knows.

ii. 8 (vi. 8). The gods slew man as the victim. When he had been slain his sap went out; it entered the horse; therefore the horse became fit for the sacrifice, and him whose sap had departed they dismissed; he became a monkey.¹ They slew the horse; it went away from the horse when slain; it entered the ox; therefore the ox became fit for sacrifice, and it whose sap had departed they dismissed; it became a Gauramṛga.² They slew the ox; it departed from the ox when slain; it entered the sheep; therefore the sheep became fit for sacrifice, and it whose sap had departed they dismissed; it became the Gayal. They slew the sheep; it departed from the sheep when slain; it entered the goat; therefore the goat became fit for sacrifice, and it whose sap had departed they dismissed; it became the camel. It dwelt for the longest time in the goat; therefore the goat is of these animals the most often employed. They slew the goat; it departed from the goat when slain; it entered this (earth); therefore this (earth) became fit for sacrifice, and it whose sap had departed they dismissed; it became a Çarabha.³ These animals whose sap is departed are unfit for sacrifice ; therefore one should not eat of them. It they followed in this (earth) ; it, followed, became rice ; in that they offer also a cake in the animal sacrifice (it is because they think) 'Let our sacrifice be with a victim with sap, let our sacrifice be with a victim whole.'⁴ His sacrifice is performed with a victim with sap, his sacrifice is performed with a victim whole who knows thus.

ii. 9 (vi. 9). The cake (which is offered) is the victim which is killed ; the chaff¹ of it is the hairs, the husks the skin, the polishings the blood, the pounded grains and fragments the flesh, whatever is substantial the bone. With the sap of all animals he sacrifices who sacrifices with the cake. Therefore they say, 'The cake offering is the people's sacrificial session.'

'Ye two, Agni and Soma, of joint power, have placed These constellations in the sky ;
Ye too the rivers from unspeakable misfortune, O Agni and Soma, set free when fast held ;'

this offering verse² he says for the omentum. By all these deities is he seized who becomes consecrated. Therefore they say 'He should not eat (the food) of one consecrated.' In that he says as offering verse for the omentum 'O Agni and Soma ye set free when fast held', verily thus from all the deities he sets the sacrificer free. Therefore they say 'One should eat when the omentum has been offered, for he then becomes the sacrificer.' 'Another from the sky Mātariçvan bore' he says as offering verse³ for the cake. 'Another from the mountain the eagle pressed out', (he says) for hence as it were is he, hence is the sap gathered. 'Make ready the oblations, shape food forth' he uses as offering verse⁴ for the Sviṣṭakṛt of the cake (offering). Verily thus he makes ready the oblation for him and places sap and strength in himself. He invokes the sacrificial food ;⁵ the sacrificial food is cattle ;⁶ verily thus he invokes cattle ; he confers cattle on the sacrificer.

ii. 10 (vi. 10). 'Recite for the oblation being cut off for Manotā' the Adhvaryu says. He recites the hymn¹ 'For thou, O Agni, are the first thinker.' They say 'Since the victim is for other deities also, then why does he recite (verses) to Agni alone for the oblation being cut off for Manotā?' Three are the Manotās of the gods, for in them are their minds woven. Speech is the Manotā of the gods; for in it are their minds woven. The cow is the Manotā of the gods, for in it are their minds woven. Agni is the Manotā of the gods, for in him are their minds woven. Agni is all the Manotās; in Agni the Manotās unite. Therefore he recites (verses) to Agni only for the oblation being cut off for Manotā. 'O Agni and Soma, of the oblation set forward' he uses as offering verse² for the oblation. In 'of the oblation' it is (appropriate and) perfect in form, as 'set forward' it is perfect in form. Made perfect with all perfections his oblation goes to the gods who knows thus. He says the offering verse for the lord of the forest;³ the lord of the forest is the breaths; with life his oblation goes to the gods when one knowing thus says the offering verse for the lord of the forest. He says the offering verse of the Sviṣṭakṛt;⁴ the Sviṣṭakṛt is a support; verily thus on a support at the end he establishes the sacrifice. He invokes the sacrificial food;⁵ the sacrificial food is cattle; verily thus he invokes cattle; he confers cattle upon the sacrificer.

ii. 11 (vii. 1). The gods performed the sacrifice; towards them as they performed it came the Asuras, (saying) 'We shall make a disturbance of their sacrifice.' When over the victim had been said the Āpris, before as it were the circumambulation with fire they attacked the post from the east. The gods, perceiving, placed around three forts consisting of citadels made of Agni, to protect themselves and the sacrifice. These Agni-made citadels kept shining and blazing. The Asuras, in terror, ran away; verily with Agni before and Agni behind they smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Verily then also the sacrificers in that they perform the circumambulation with fire place around three forts, consisting of citadels made of Agni, to protect the sacrifice and themselves. Therefore they carry fire round; therefore for the carrying round of fire he recites. The victim over which the Āpris have been said and round which fire has been carried they lead northwards.¹ They carry a torch before it, (thinking) 'The victim is in essence the sacrificer; by this light the sacrificer with light before him will go to the world of heaven.' By this light the sacrificer with light before him goes to the world of heaven. When they are about to kill it, then the Adhvaryu throws the strew below. In that they lead it outside the altar when over it has been said the Āpriś and round it fire has been carried, verily thus they make it sit on the strew. They dig a hole for the offal; the offal is connected with plants; this (earth) is the support of plants; verily thus in its support it at the end they establish. They say, 'This animal is the oblation; now much of it goes away, hair, skin, blood, dewclaws, hooves, the two horns, the raw flesh falls away; by what is this made up?' In that they offer a cake also at the animal sacrifice, thereby is this made up for it. The saps went away from animals; becoming rice and barley were they born; in that in the animal sacrifice they offer also a cake, (it is because they think) 'Let our sacrifice be with a victim with sap; let our sacrifice be with a victim whole.' His sacrifice is performed with a victim with sap; his sacrifice is performed with a victim whole who knows thus.

ii. 12 (vii. 2). Having forced out its omentum they bring it up; the Adhvaryu covering it with butter from the dipping ladle says, 'Recite for the drops.' In that the drops are dropped, (it is because he thinks) 'The drops are connected with all the deities; let these not, undelighted by me, go to the gods.' 'Rejoice in the most extending' he recites.¹ 'This speech most pleasing to the gods, offering the oblations in thy mouth' (he says); verily thus he offers them in the mouth of Agni. 'This our sacrifice place among the immortals', this hymn² he recites. In 'Rejoice in these oblations, O all-knower' he invokes rejoicing in the oblations. 'Of the drops, O Agni, of fat, of ghee' (he says), for they are of fat and of ghee. 'O Hotṛ, eat first seated' (he says); Agni is the Hotṛ of the gods; verily thus he says 'O Agni, eat, first seated.' 'Rich in ghee, O purifying one, for thee the drops of fat are dropped' (he says),³ for they are of fat and of ghee. In 'Bestow upon us in thy wont that most worthy thing meet for the enjoyment of the gods' he invokes a benediction. 'To thee, the sage, the drops drop ghee, O Agni, who art to be appeased' (he says),⁴ for they drop ghee. In 'As best seer art thou kindled; do thou become the helper of the sacrifice' he invokes the perfecting of the sacrifice. 'For thee they drop,⁵ O Adhriḡu, O mighty one, the drops, O Agni, of fat and of ghee' (he says), for they are of fat and of ghee. 'Praised by the poet with great blaze hast thou come; rejoice in the oblations, O wise one', with this he invokes rejoicing in the oblations.

‘For thee from the middle the best fat is taken out,
We give it forth unto thee;
For thee, O bright one, the drops drop on the skin,

(he says);⁶ verily thus he says the vasat call over them, just as in ‘O Agni, taste the Soma.’ In that the drops are dropped, and the drops are connected with all the deities, therefore the rain comes divided into drops.

ii. 13 (vii. 3). They say,¹ ‘What are the invitatory verses of the calls of Hail! What the direction? What the offering verse?’ These which he recites are the invitatory verses, the direction is the direction: the offering verse the offering verse. They say, ‘What is the deity of the calls of Hail!’ ‘The All-gods’ he should reply. Therefore they use as offering verse ‘May the gods eat the oblation over which has been said the call of Hail!’ The gods by the sacrifice, by zeal, by fervour, by the libations went to the world of heaven; when the omentum had been offered the world of heaven was discerned by them; having offered the omentum, disregarding the other rites they went aloft to the world of heaven. Then the men and the seers came to the place of sacrifice of the gods, ‘We shall seek something of the sacrifice for discernment.’ They went round, and lo the victim lying without entrails!² They perceived ‘The victim is just so much as the omentum.’ The victim is just so much as the omentum. In that having cooked it they offer it at the third pressing, (it is because they think) ‘Let our sacrifice be performed with many libations; let our sacrifice be with the victim whole.’ His sacrifice is performed with many libations; his sacrifice is with the victim whole who knows thus.

ii. 14 (vii. 4). The libation of the omentum is a libation of ambrosia; the Agni libation is a libation of ambrosia; the libation of butter is a libation of ambrosia; the libation of Soma is a libation of ambrosia. These are the incorporeal libations; with those libations which are incorporeal the sacrificer conquers immortality. The omentum is seed: seed disappears as it were, the omentum disappears as it were; seed is white, the omentum is white; seed is incorporeal, the omentum is incorporeal. The blood and the flesh are the body. Therefore should he say ‘As much as is bloodless, so much do thou cut off.' (The offering) is made in five portions;¹ even of the sacrifice is a four-portioner, still the omentum is made into five portions. He makes a basis of butter, a fragment of gold (comes next), the omentum, a fragment of gold; above he makes a layer of butter. They say 'If there is no gold, how shall it be?' Having made two bases of butter, having made a portion of the omentum, then he makes two layers of butter on the top; butter is ambrosia; gold is ambrosia; therein he obtains the desire which is in the butter, therein he obtains the desire which is in gold. They make up five; man is fivefold and disposed in five parts, hair, skin, flesh, bone, marrow. Having made ready the sacrifice in the same extent as is man, he offers in Agni as the birthplace of the gods; Agni is the birthplace of the gods; he having come into being from Agni as the birthplace of the gods, from the libation, with a body of gold, he goes aloft to the world of heaven.

The Morning Litany.

ii. 15 (vii. 5). 'For¹ the gods that move at morn recite, O Hotr' the Adhvaryu says. Agni, Uṣas, and the Aṣvins are the gods that move at morn; they come with seven metres each; the gods that move at morn come to the call of him who knows thus. When Prajāpati himself as Hotr was about to recite the morning litany, both the gods and the Asuras resorted to the sacrifice, (thinking) 'For us will he recite, for us.' He recited for the gods alone; then did the gods prosper, the Asuras were defeated. He prospers himself, the evil rival who hates him who knows thus is defeated. In the morning he recited it for the gods; in that he recited in the morning, that is why the morning litany has its name. It should be recited in the deep of the night, to secure the whole of speech, the whole of the holy power. If a man prospers or attains pre-eminence, his speech as uttered others repeat; therefore should it be recited in the deep of the night; before the utterance of speech must it be recited. If he should recite, when speech has been uttered, verily he would make him a repeater of what has been said by another; therefore in the deep of night should it be recited. Before the speaking of the fowls² should he recite; the birds, the fowls, are the mouth of Nirṛti;

ii. 15. ¹ For the morning litany see KB. xi. For the ritual see AṢS. iv. 13; ÇṢS. vi. 2; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, pp. 130-132.

now as to his reciting before the speaking of the fowls (it is because they think), 'Let us not speak after speech has been uttered unconnected with the sacrifice.' Therefore it should be recited in the deep of the night. Or rather when the Adhvaryu begins, then he should recite; when the Adhvaryu begins, verily with speech he begins, at speech the Hotṛ recites, for speech is the holy power. Herein is the desire obtained which is in speech and in the holy power.

ii. 16 (vii. 6). When Prajāpati himself as Hotṛ was about to recite the morning litany, all the deities expected 'With me will he begin; with me.' Prajāpati pondered, 'If I shall begin with one specified deity, then by what means shall I obtain the other deities?' He saw this verse,¹ 'O waters, the rich ones'; the waters are all the deities; the rich ones are all the deities. With this verse he began the morning litany. All these deities were delighted, 'With me has he begun; with me!' All the deities delight in him beginning the morning litany. By him who knows thus the morning litany is provided with all the deities. The gods were afraid, 'The Asuras will take from us this morning sacrifice, just as those that have more force and might.' To them said Indra 'Fear not; against them in the morning shall I hurl my thunderbolt thrice made perfect.' This verse did he speak; it is a thunderbolt, in that it is addressed to the son of the waters; it is a thunderbolt, in that it is a Triṣṭubh; it is a thunderbolt in that it is speech. It he hurled against them; with it he slew them; thus indeed the gods prospered, the Asuras were defeated. He prospers himself, the evil rival who hates him is defeated, who knows this. They say 'He indeed would be a Hotṛ who in this verse could produce all the metres'; this thrice repeated supports all the metres; this is the generating of the metres.

ii. 17 (vii. 7). A hundred (verses) should be recited for one desiring life; man has a hundred (years of life), a hundred strengths, a hundred powers; verily thus he confers upon him life, strength, and power. Three hundred and sixty should be recited for one desiring the sacrifice; three hundred and sixty are the days of the year; so great is the year; Prajāpati is the year; the sacrifice is Prajāpati. To him the sacrifice condescends, for whom one who knows thus recites three hundred and sixty. Seven hundred and twenty should be recited for one desiring offspring and cattle. Seven hundred and twenty are the days and nights of the year; so great is the year; Prajāpati is the year; he through whose propagation all this is propagated; verily thus through Prajāpati being propagated he is propagated with offspring and cattle for propagation; he is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. Eight hundred should be recited for one who is called not a Brahman¹ or who being ill-spoken of and seized with defilement sacrifices; the Gāyatrī has eight syllables; by means of the Gāyatrī the gods smote away the evil, the defilement; verily thus by the Gāyatrī he smites away the evil, the defilement. A thousand should be recited for one desiring heaven; the world of heaven is at a distance of a thousand journeys² of a horse hence; (they serve) for the attainment of the world of heaven, the securing, the going to (the world of heaven). An unlimited number should be recited; Prajāpati is unlimited; the morning litany is the litany of Prajāpati; in it are all desires obtained. In that he recites an unlimited number, (it serves) to win all desires; all desires he wins who knows thus. Therefore should an unlimited number be recited. In seven metres he recites for Agni; seven are the worlds of the gods; in all the worlds of the gods he prospers who knows thus. In seven metres he recites for Uṣas; seven are the tame animals; he wins the tame animals who knows thus. In seven metres he recites for the Aṇvins; in seven ways spoke speech; so much spoke speech; (they serve) to secure the whole of speech, the whole of the holy power. To three deities he recites; three are these threefold worlds; verily (they serve) to conquer these worlds.

ii. 18 (vii. 8). They say 'How is the morning litany to be recited?' The morning litany is to be recited according to the metres; the metres are the limbs of Prajāpati; the sacrificer is Prajāpati; that is meet for the sacrificer. The morning litany should be recited by feet; cattle have four feet, for the winning of cattle. By half-verses should it be recited, just as one usually recites it, for support; man has two supports, cattle four feet; verily thus the sacrificer with two supports he establishes among four-footed cattle; therefore should it be recited by half-verses. They say 'Since the morning litany is transposed,¹ how does it become not transposed?' 'Since the Br̥hati does not depart from the middle of it,' he should reply, 'For this reason.' Some deities have the libations as their portion, others the Stomas and the metres. The libations which are offered in the fire, by them he delights those whose portion is the libations; in that they sing and recite, thereby those whose portion is the Stomas and the metres. Both sets of deities are delighted and sacrificed to by him who knows thus. Thirty-three are the gods that drink Soma, thirty-three that do not drink Soma; eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, Prajāpati and the vaśaṭ call are

ii. 18. ¹ This refers to the order of the metres on the morning litany, viz. Gāyatrī, Anuṣṭubh, Triṣṭubh, and Br̥hati; Uṣṇih, Jagati, and Pañkti, not the normal (avyūḍha) order by fours upwards, which is given in the enumerations in the Anukramaṇī, ÇCS. v. 27, &c.

the deities that drink Soma; the eleven fore-offerings, the eleven after-offerings, the eleven subordinate² offerings, are those that do not drink the Soma and have the victim as their portion; by Soma he delights the Soma drinkers, by the victim those that do not drink Soma. Both sets of deities are delighted and sacrificed to by him who knows thus. 'Uṣas with her ruddy kine hath appeared', with this last (verse²) he concludes. They say 'In that he recites for three rites, to Agni, to Uṣas, and to the Aṇvins, how are all these rites concluded by him when he concludes with one verse only?' 'Uṣas with her ruddy kine hath appeared' is the characteristic of Uṣas; 'Agni in due season hath been placed' of Agni; 'Your chariot hath been yoked, O ye of great wealth, wonder-workers, the immortal, lovers of sweetness, hear ye my call' of the Aṇvins. So all three rites are concluded by him when he concludes with one verse only.

ADHYĀYA III

ii. 19 (viii. 1). The¹ seers performed a sacrificial season on the Sarasvatī; they drove away Kavaṣa Ailūṣa from the Soma, 'The child of a slave woman, a cheat, no Brahman; how has he been consecrated in our midst?' They sent him out to the desert, (saying) 'There let thirst slay him; let him drink not the water of the Sarasvatī.' He sent away to the wilderness, afflicted by thirst, saw the 'child of the waters' hymn,² 'Forth among the gods let there be speeding for the Brahman.' Thereby he went to the dear abode of the waters; him the waters welled out after; all around him Sarasvatī hastened. Therefore they call it here Parisāraka, in that Sarasvatī went all around him. The seers said 'The gods know him; let us summon him.' 'Be it so' (they replied). They summoned him; having summoned him they performed this 'child of the waters' (hymn), 'Forth among the gods let there be speeding for the Brahman'; therewith they went to the dear home of the waters, of the gods. He goes to the dear home of the waters, of the gods; he conquers the highest world who knows thus, and he who knowing thus performs the 'child of the waters' (hymn). It he should recite continuously; Parjanya comes to rain continuously³ for

³ RV. v. 75. 9.

¹ AB. ii. 19 and 20 and KB. xii. 1 and 2 deal with the recitation for the drawing of the water for the Soma; see ĀṢ. v. 1; Eggeling, SBE. xxvi. 232, n. 2; Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, pp. 139 seq. For Kavaṣa cf. KB. xii. 3; Lévi, La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 150.

² RV. x. 30. The sense of the verse is doubtful: Caland and Henry render 'Que, pour le service divin, la marche (du sacrifice) aille aux dieux'.

³ Not jimūtavarṣi, i. e. 'from passing clouds' (Sāyaṇa absurdly 'on the mountains').

offspring when one knowing thus recites this continuously. If he were to recite with divisions, then Parjanya would rain with clouds for offspring; therefore should it be recited continuously only. Of it he recites the first (verse) thrice continuously; verily thereby the whole is continuously recited.

ii. 20 (viii. 2). These nine (verses) he recites without omission. 'Send forth our sacrifice with divine offering' (he says) as tenth.¹ 'Winding hitherward those of two streams' (he says²), when the Ekadhanā (waters) are turned hitherward; 'What time the waters are seen coming forward' (he says³) when they are being seen; 'May the cows with milk, eager for the end' (he says⁴), when they are coming up; 'Some come together, others come up' (he says⁵) when they come together. The waters were in conflict, 'we shall first bear the sacrifice; we'; both these Vasatīvarī waters, which are drawn on the previous day and the Ekadhanā (waters which are drawn) in the morning.

These Bhṛgu saw, 'These waters are in conflict.' Them with this verse he brought into harmony, 'Some come together, others come up.' They came into harmony; in harmony they support his sacrifice who knows thus. 'Like the waters divine they come up to the vessel of the offering' he recites⁶ when they are being poured together into the Hotṛ's goblet, both the Vasatīvarī and the Ekadhanā (waters). 'Hast thou seen the waters, O Adhvaryu?' the Hotṛ asks the Adhvaryu; the sacrifice is the waters; verily thus he says 'Hast thou seen the sacrifice?' 'Yea, they have indeed condescended' the Adhvaryu replies; verily thus he says 'Look upon them.' 'In these, O Adhvaryu, shalt thou press for Indra the Soma rich in honey, full of rain, bitter at the end, thick meanwhile,⁷ for him with the Vasus, the Rudras, the Ādityas, the Ṛbhus, the Vibhus, with Vāja, with Brhaspati, with the All-gods, of which having drunk, Indra shall slay the foes; he shall overcome their tribes'; (so saying) he rises to meet (them); the waters are to be met; men rise to meet a superior when he comes; therefore is he to rise to meet them. He must turn round behind them⁸; they turn round behind a superior; therefore must he turn round behind them. As he recites he should move after them; for even if another be the sacrificer still fame will fall to the Hotṛ; therefore should he move after them as he recites. Reciting this (verse ⁹), 'The mothers go with the paths,' should he move after. 'The sisters of those that sacrifice, mixing the milk with honey' (he says) who being without taste of the honey drink desires to win fame. 'Those that are in the sun or with which is the sun' (he says ¹⁰) who desires brilliance and splendour. 'I invite the waters, the goddesses, where our kine drink' (he says ¹¹) who desires cattle. Reciting all these should he move after, to win these desires. These desires he wins who knows thus. 'They have come rich with living gifts' he recites ¹² as the Vasativarī and the Ekadhanā waters are being set down; 'They have come, the waters, eager to this strew,' when ¹³ they have been set down. With this he concludes.

⁸ Sāyana tries to make anu- and pari-āvṛtyāh into two categories, which is impossible.

The Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma Cups.

ii. 21 (viii. 3). The ¹ morning litany is the head of the sacrifice; the Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma (cups) are expiration and inspiration; speech verily is a thunderbolt. Before the Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma (cups) have been offered the Hotṛ should not utter speech; if, before the Upāṇḍu and the Antaryāma (cups) have been offered, the Hotṛ should utter speech, with speech as a thunderbolt he would interrupt the breaths of the sacrificer. If one were to say then of him, 'With speech as a thunderbolt he has interrupted the breaths of the sacrificer, breath will forsake him,' it would assuredly be so. Therefore the Hotṛ should not utter speech before the Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma (cups) have been offered. With 'Support expiration; hail! thee, O easy to invoke, to the sun!' he should accompany the Upāṇḍu (cup) ²; towards it he should breath forth with 'O expiration, support my expiration.' With 'Support inspiration; hail! thee, O easy to invoke, to the sun!' he should accompany the Antaryāma (cup); towards it he should breath in with 'O inspiration, support my inspiration'; 'To cross-breathing thee!' with this he utters speech, having touched the stone for pressing (the Soma for) the Upāṇḍu. Verily thus the Hotṛ, having placed the breaths in the body, utters speech, with the whole of life, for the whole of life; a full life he lives who knows thus.

² 'Restrain' is also possible as a rendering; 'O well-calling one' is Eggeling's version (SBE. xxvi. 254, n. 4).

ii. 22 (viii. 4). They¹ say 'Should he creep? Should he not creep?' 'He should creep' hold some, saying 'The Bahiṣpavamāna is the food of both gods and men; therefore they go together towards it.' That is not to be regarded. If he were to creep, he would make the Ṛc a follower of the Sāman. If one here were to say of him, 'This Hotṛ has become a follower of the Sāman singer; he has conferred glory on the Udgātṛ; he has fallen from his place; she will fall from her place,' it would certainly be so. Therefore seated here he should recite,

'The Soma drink of the gods here,
At the sacrifice, on the strew, on the altar,
Of this, we are eating.'

So his self is not excluded from the Soma drinking. Moreover he should say, 'Thou art the mouth; may I become the mouth'; the Bahiṣpavamāna is the mouth of the sacrifice; the head among his own he becomes, the chief of his own he becomes, who knows thus. An Asura woman,² named Long Tongue, licked the morning pressing of the gods; it became drunk. The gods sought to remedy it; they said to Mitra and Varuṇa, 'Do ye remove this (intoxication).' They replied, 'Be it so; let us choose a boon from you.' 'Choose' (they said). They chose this boon, the milk mess of the morning pressing. This is their fixed portion, for it is chosen as a boon by the two. Thus what by her was made intoxicated, as it were, is made perfect by this (milk mess), for by it the two removed what was intoxicated as it were.

The Cakes.

ii. 23 (viii. 5). The¹ pressings of the gods were not firm. They saw these cakes; they offered them at each pressing, to support the pressings; then indeed were their pressings made firm. In that the cakes are offered at each pressing, (they serve) to support the pressings, for so are those of them made firm. The cakes the gods made citadels,² that is why the Puroḍāṣas

² The legend explains the use of a milk mess at the Bahiṣpavamāna. The tale of the Āsuri is found in the Talavakāra tradition referred to here by Sāyaṇa, and published by Oertel, JAOS. xix. 120; cf. Lévi, La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 155.

ii. 23 ¹ AB. ii. 23 and KB. xiii. 8 deal with the cakes for the three pressings of Soma. For the rule of eleven potsherds see TB. ii. 5. 11. 4; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 134.

² puraḥ is presumably the noun rather than the prefix, cf. AB. i. 23. 1.

have their name. They say 'He should offer the cakes at each pressing, one on eight potsherds at the morning pressing, one on eleven potsherds at the midday pressing, one on twelve potsherds at the third pressing, for such is the characteristic of the pressings, such of the metres.' That is not to be regarded. The cakes at each pressing are all offered to Indra; therefore he should offer them on eleven potsherds. They say 'From that part of the cake should he eat where it is not anointed with ghee, to protect the Soma drink; for by ghee as a thunderbolt Indra slew Vṛtra.' That is not to be regarded. That which is purified is the oblation; what is purified is the Soma drink; therefore should he eat from any part whatever of it. From all sides these oblations, butter, fried grains, mush, the pap, the cake, and the milk mess flow up to the sacrificer as delights; on all sides delights flow up to him who knows thus.

ii. 24 (viii. 6). He¹ who knows the sacrifice with five oblations prospers with the sacrifice of five oblations; the sacrifice of five oblations is made up of fried grains, mush, the pap, the cake, and the milk mess; this is the sacrifice of five oblations; he who knows thus prospers with the sacrifice of five oblations. He who knows the sacrifice of five syllables prospers with the sacrifice of five syllables; the sacrifice of five syllables is su mat pad vag de; he prospers with the sacrifice of five syllables who knows thus. He who knows the sacrifice of five Narāçaṁsas² prospers with the sacrifice of the five Narāçaṁsas; the morning pressing has two Narāçaṁsa (cups); the midday pressing two Narāçaṁsas; the third pressing one Narāçaṁsas; this is the sacrifice of five Narāçaṁsas; he prospers with the sacrifice of five Narāçaṁsas who knows thus. He who knows the sacrifice of five pressings prospers with the sacrifice of five pressings; the sacrifice of five pressings is the victim on the fast day, three pressings, the concluding victim; he prospers with the sacrifice of five pressings who knows thus. 'With the bay steeds let Indra eat the fried grains; with Pūṣan the mush; with Sarasvatī, with Bhārati, the pap (is for Indra); for Indra the cake' is the offer-

¹ AB. ii. 24 and KB. xiii. 2 deal with the sacrifice of five oblations, and AB. adds speculations on other fivefold elements in the sacrifice; see Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, pp. 134, 135. See also TS. vi. 5. 11. 4 which very closely agrees.

² This refers to the fillings of the goblets, two for the first two pressings and once at the third. For the sense see AB. vii. 34.

ing verse for the five oblation (sacrifice); the two bays are the Ṛc and the Sāman; Pūṣan is cattle; mush is food; 'With Sarasvatī, with Bhārati' (he says); Sarasvatī is speech, Bharata is the breath; 'the pap, for Indra the cake' (he says); the pap is food, the cake is power; verily thus he makes the sacrificer attain union and identity of form and world with these deities he is united with a stronger, he obtains pre-eminence who knows thus. 'Enjoy, O Agni, the oblation' he says as offering verse for the Sviṣṭakṛt of the cake at each pressing. Thereby did Avatsāra go to the dear home of Agni; he conquered the highest world. He goes to the dear home of Agni; he conquers the highest world, who knows thus and who knowing thus sacrifices with this (sacrifice of) five oblations and who says the offering verse.⁴

The Cups for two Deities.

ii. 25 (ix. 1). The¹ gods could not agree in the drinking first of Soma, the king; 'Let me drink first; let me drink first' they desired. They said seeking agreement, 'Come, let us run a race; he who of us wins shall drink first of the Soma.' 'Be it so' (they replied). They ran a race; of them running the race when they had started Vāyu first took the lead, then Indra, then Mitra and Varuṇa, then the Açvins. Indra perceived of Vāyu 'He is winning.' He ran up after him (saying) 'Let us share together; then let us win.' He answered, 'No; I alone shall win.' 'A third for me; then let us win' (he said). 'No,' he answered, 'I alone shall win.' 'A fourth for me; then let us win' (he said). 'Be it so' (he replied); he admitted him to a fourth share; therefore Indra has a quarter as his portion, Vāyu three-quarters. Indra and Vāyu won together, then Mitra and Vāruṇa, then the Açvins. Their feeding is in accord with their winning; first for Indra and Vāyu, then for Mitra and Varuṇa, then for the Açvins. The Indra-Vāyu cup is drawn with a quarter for Indra. Seeing this the seer declares² 'With the teams, with Indra as charioteer.' Therefore now also (when) the Bharatas attack the property of the Satvants,

the charioteers claim a fourth (of the booty) by force of the example since then Indra becoming a charioteer as it were conquered.³

ii. 26 (ix. 2). The cups for two deities are the breaths; that for Indra and Vāyu is speech and breath; that for Mitra and Varuṇa eye and mind; that for the Aṅvins ear and self. Now some make the invitatory verses for that for Indra and Vāyu Anuṣṭubhs, and the offering verses Gāyatrīs (saying), 'The cup for Indra and Vāyu is speech and breath; thus will the two be in accord with metres also.' This is not to be regarded. Imperfection is produced in the sacrifice when the invitatory verse is longer than the offering verse; when the offering verse is the longer, that is perfect, and so also when they are equal. For whatever desire in speech or breath he thus acts, that is herein obtained. The first invitatory verse is addressed to Vāyu, the second to Indra and Vāyu¹ and so with the offering verses.² With the one addressed to Vāyu, he puts breath in order, for breath is Vāyu; then with the Indra line of (the verse) to Indra and Vāyu he puts speech in order, for speech is connected with Indra. He obtains the desire in breath and speech; he makes no unevenness in the sacrifice.

ii. 27 (ix. 3). (The cups) for two deities are the breaths; they are drawn in one vessel; therefore the breaths have one name. They are offered in two vessels¹; therefore the breaths are in pairs. With the Yajus with which the Adhvaryu offers, the Hotṛ accepts. With 'This the wealthy one, of much wealth; here the wealthy, of much wealth; in me the wealthy, of much wealth; protector of speech, protect my speech' he partakes of (the cup) for Indra and Vāyu. 'Invoked is speech together with breath; may speech together with breath invoke me; invoked are the seers, divine, guardians of the body, born of fervour; may the seers, the divine, invoke me, guardians of the body, born of fervour' (he says); the seers, divine, guardians of the body, born of fervour are the breaths; verily thus he invokes them. With 'This the wealthy, finding wealth; here the wealthy, finding wealth; in me the wealthy, finding wealth; guardian of the eye, guard mine eye' he partakes of (the cup) for Mitra and Varuṇa. 'Invoked is the eye together with mind; may the eye together with mind invoke me; invoked are the seers, divine, guardians of the body; born of fervour' (he says); the seers, divine, guardians of the body, born of fervour are the breaths; verily thus he invokes them. With 'This the wealthy, collecting wealth; here the wealthy, collecting wealth; in me the wealthy, collecting wealth; guardian of the earth, guard mine ear' he partakes of (the cup) for the Aṣvins. 'Invoked is the ear together with the self; may the ear together with the self invoke me; invoked are the seers, divine, guardians of the body, born of fervour; may the seers, divine, guardians of the body, born of fervour, invoke me' (he says); the seers divine, guardians of the body, born of fervour, are the breaths; verily thus he invokes them. He partakes of (the cup) for Indra and Vāyu front to front²; therefore expiration and inspiration are in front; he partakes of (the cup) for Mitra and Varuṇa front to front; therefore the eyes are in front; he partakes of (the cup) for the Aṣvins carrying it all round; therefore both men and beasts hear speech speaking on all sides.

ii. 28 (ix. 4). (The¹ cups) for two deities are the breaths; without taking in breath he should say the offering verses for (the cups) for the deities, for the continuity of the breath and to avoid splitting the breaths. (The cups) for two deities are the breaths; he should not say the second vaṣaṭ for (the cups) for two deities. If he were to say the second vaṣaṭ for those for two deities, he would bring to rest the unresting breaths; the second vaṣaṭ call is the ending. If one were then to say of him 'He has brought to rest the unresting breaths; breath will forsake him,' it would certainly be so. Therefore he should not say the second vaṣaṭ for (the cups) for two deities. They say 'Having twice expressed approval the Maitrāvaruṇa twice gives directions; having once expressed approval the Hotṛ twice says vaṣaṭ; what is the expression of approval of the Hotṛ?' (The cups) for two deities are the breaths; the expression of approval is the thunderbolt; if the Hotṛ were to express approval between, with the expression as a thunderbolt he would pierce the breaths of the sacrificer. If one were then to say of him, 'With the expression of approval as a thunderbolt he has pierced the breaths of the sacrificer,' it would certainly be so. Therefore the Hotṛ should not express approval between (the two offering verses). Moreover the Maitrāvaruṇa is the mind of the sacrifice, the Hotṛ is the voice of the sacrifice. Impelled by mind speech speaks, for the speech which he speaks with mind elsewhere is demoniacal and not welcome to the gods; verily thus in that the Maitrāvaruṇa twice utters the expression of approval, this is the expression of approval of the Hotṛ.

² I. e. the mouth of the cup is placed opposite his mouth, and he does not drink promiscuously from any part.

¹ This chapter explains the omission of the anuvaṣaṭkāra in the offering and the fact that there is only one āgura as there is no space to intervene between the two offering verses; see AṢS. v. 5. 4, and 21, where a memorial verse is cited on the anuvaṣaṭkāra. The latter peculiarity is again referred to in AB. iii. 5.

The Seasonal Cups.

ii. 29 (ix. 5). The offerings to the seasons¹ are the breaths; in that they proceed with the offerings to the seasons, verily thus they place the breaths in the sacrificer. Six (priests) offer (saying) 'With the season': verily thus they place expiration in the sacrifice; four with 'With the seasons' offer; verily thus they place inspiration in the sacrifice; twice with 'With the season' later; verily thus they place cross-breathing in the sacrificer. This breath is divided in three ways, expiration, inspiration, and cross-breathing. In that they offer (saying) 'With the season,' 'with the seasons,' 'with the season,' (it is) for the continuity of the breaths, to avoid splitting the breaths. The offerings to the seasons are the breaths; he should not say the second vaṣaṭ for the offerings to the seasons; the seasons are unresting; each (follows) each. If he were to say the second vaṣaṭ for the offerings to the seasons he would bring to rest the unresting seasons; the second vaṣaṭ is an ending. If one were then to say of him 'He has brought to rest the unresting seasons: it will be an ill season', it would certainly be so. Therefore he should not say the second vaṣaṭ for the offerings to the seasons.

ii. 30 (ix. 6). (The cups¹) for two deities are the breaths; the sacrificial food is cattle. Having partaken of (the cups) for two deities he invokes the sacrificial food; the sacrificial food is cattle; verily thus he invokes cattle; he confers cattle upon the sacrificer. They say 'Should he eat first the subdivided sacrificial food? (Or) should he partake of the Hotr's goblet?' First should he eat the subdivided² sacrificial food, and then should he partake of the Hotr's goblet. In that he partakes first of (the cups) for two deities, thereby is the Soma drink first partaken of by him; therefore should he first eat the subdivided sacrificial food, and then partake of the Hotr's goblet; then on both sides he envelopes food with Soma drinkings, to envelope food. (The cups) for two deities are the breaths; the Hotr's goblet is the body ; the remains of (the cups) for two deities he pours down into the Hotṛ's goblet ; verily thus the Hotṛ places the breaths in the body, with full life for fullness of life ; a full life lives he who knows thus.

The Silent Praise.

ii. 31 (ix. 7). What¹ the gods did at the sacrifice, that the Asuras did ; they were of even strength and were not discriminated. Then indeed the gods saw this silent praise ; that of them the Asuras could not follow. The silent praise is a silent essence. Whatever weapon the gods raised against the Asuras that the Asuras perceived and countered ; then the gods saw this silent praise as a thunderbolt ; they raised it against them ; it the Asuras did not counter ; it they hurled at them ; with it not countered they smote them ; then indeed the gods prospered, the Asuras were defeated. He prospers himself, the wicked rival who hates him is defeated, who knows thus. The gods, regarding themselves as victors, were performing the sacrifice ; to it the Asuras came (thinking) ' We will make a confusion of the sacrifice.' They saw them ranged round on all sides, daring ; they said, ' Let us conclude this sacrifice ; let not the Asuras injure our sacrifice.' ' Be it so ' (they replied). They concluded it in the silent praise. With ' Bhūh, Agni, light, light, Agni ' they concluded the Ājya and Praūga (Çastras). With ' Indra, light, bhuvah, light, Indra ' they concluded the Niṣkevalya and Marutvatiya (Çastras). With ' Sūrya, light, light, sva, Sūrya ' they concluded the Vaiṣyadeva and Āgnimāruta (Çastras). So they concluded it in the silent praise ; having thus concluded it in the silent praise they attained the end with it uninjured. Then indeed does the sacrifice come to a conclusion, when the Hotṛ recites the silent praise. If any person should after the recitation of the silent praise reproach him or curse him, he should say of him, ' He will fall into this misfortune (he invokes²). Early to-day we complete this when the silent praise is recited. Just as one may attend upon one come to his house with due performance, even so now do we attend upon this.' He falls into this misfortune who knowing thus, after the silent praise is recited, either reproaches or curses. Therefore one who knows thus should not reproach or curse when the silent praise has been recited.

ii. 32 (ix. 8). The silent praise is the eyes of the pressings. ' Bhūh, Agni, light, light, Agni ' is the eyes of the morning pressing. ' Indra, light, bhuvah, light, Indra' is the eyes of the midday pressing. 'Sūrya, light, light, svar, Sūrya' is the eyes of the third pressing. He prospers with pressings possessed of eyes; with pressings possessed of eyes he goes to the world of heaven who knows thus. The silent praise is the eye of the sacrifice. The exclamation being one is said twice; therefore the eye being one is (manifested) twice. The silent praise is the root of the sacrifice: if he desire of a man 'May he be homeless', he should not recite the silent praise at his sacrifice; verily thus he comes to ruin along with the sacrifice which being without a root falls to ruin. They say 'He should certainly recite; it is not good for the priest, if the Hotṛ does not recite the silent praise, for on the priest rests the whole sacrifice, on the sacrifice the sacrificer; therefore must it be recited.'

¹ AB. ii. 31 and 32 contain the treatment of the silent praise, which is part of the Ājya Çastra ; see Caland and Henry,

ADHYĀYA V

ii. 33 (x. 1). The¹ call is the holy power, the Nivid the lordly power, the hymn the people; he calls, then he inserts the Nivid; verily thus he makes the lordly power dependent on the holy power. Having inserted the Nivid he recites the hymn; the Nivid is the lordly power, the hymn the people; verily, thus he makes the people dependent on the lordly power. If he desire of a man, 'Let me deprive him of the lordly power,' he should recite the hymn in the middle of the Nivid; the Nivid is the lordly power, the hymn the people; verily thus he deprives him of the lordly power. If he desire of a man, 'Let me deprive him of the people,' he should recite a Nivid in the middle of the hymn; the Nivid is the lordly power, the hymn the people; verily thus he deprives him of the people. But if he desire of a man 'May all be in due and proper order and correct for him,' he should call, then insert the Nivid, and then recite the hymn. Thus is the ordering of all. Prajāpati was here being one only in the beginning. He desired 'May I be propagated and become greater'; he practised fervour; he restrained speech; at the end of the year he uttered twelve times. The Nivid has twelve clauses; it was just the Nivid that he uttered; after it were all beings created. Beholding this the seer declares²—

'He at the call aforetime of Āyu with his wisdom Brought into being these sons of man.'

In that he inserts the Nivid before³ the hymn (it serves) for propagation; he is propagated with offspring, with cattle who knows thus.

ii. 34 (x. 2). 'Agni god-kindled' he recites; Agni yonder is god-kindled, for the gods kindle him; verily thus he establishes him in that world. 'Agni man-kindled' he recites; Agni here is man-kindled, for men kindle him; verily thus he establishes him in this world. 'Agni the good kindler' he recites; Agni the good kindler is Vāyu, for Vāyu himself kindles himself, himself all this whatever there is here; Vāyu verily thus he establishes in the world of the atmosphere. 'The Hotṛ god-chosen' he recites; the Hotṛ god-chosen is yonder (sun), for he is chosen on all sides by the gods; verily thus he establishes him in that world. 'The Hotṛ chosen by man' he recites; the Hotṛ chosen by man is Agni here, for he is chosen on all sides by men; verily thus he establishes him in this world. 'Leader of the sacrifices' he recites; the leader of the sacrifices is Vāyu, for, when he breathes forth, then there is the sacrifice, then the Agnihotra; verily thus he establishes Vāyu in the world of the atmosphere. 'The charioteer of the offerings' he recites; the charioteer of the offerings¹ is yonder (sun), for he as he wanders yonder is as it were a charioteer; verily thus in yonder world he establishes him. 'The Hotṛ uncrossed' he recites; the Hotṛ uncrossed is Agni here; no one whatever crosses him; verily thus he establishes Agni in this world. 'The crosser, the bearer of the oblation' he recites; the crosser, the bearer of the oblation is Vāyu, for Vāyu at once crosses all that whatever there is here, Vāyu carries the oblation to the gods; verily thus he establishes Vāyu in the world of the atmosphere. 'May the god bring hither the gods' he recites; yonder god brings the gods; verily thus he establishes him in that world. 'May Agni, the god, offer to the gods' he recites. Agni here as a god sacrifices to the gods; verily thus he establishes Agni in this world. 'Let him perform the sacrifices, All-knower' he recites; the All-knower is Vāyu, for Vāyu makes all that whatever there is here; verily thus he establishes Vāyu in the world of the atmosphere.

ii. 35 (x. 3). 'Forward to your god Agni' are Anuṣṭubh (verses¹). He separates the two first Padas;² therefore a woman separates her thighs. He creates the last two Padas; therefore a man unites his thighs. That is a pairing; verily thus he makes a pairing at the beginning of the litany, for generation; he is propagated with offspring, with cattle, who knows thus.

³ Hence it is called a Puroruc, Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 354, n. 3. So AB. ii. 41.

‘Forward to your god Agni’ are Anuṣṭubh (verses). He separates the first two Padas, verily thus he makes a thunderbolt broader below; he unites the last two Padas; at the beginning a thunderbolt is narrow, and so of a club and of an axe; verily thus he hurls a thunderbolt at the foe who hates him, as a weapon to lay low whom he has to lay low.

ii. 36 (x. 4). The gods and the Asuras fought over these worlds;¹ the gods made the Sadas their refuge; they conquered them from the Sadas; they went to the Agnīdh’s altar; they were not conquered thence. Therefore they spend the fast day at the Agnīdh’s altar, not in the Sadas, for they were supported at the Agnīdh’s altar; in that they were supported at the Agnīdh’s altar that is why the Agnīdh’s altar has its name. The Asuras made a scattering of the fires of those gods in the Sadas; the gods drew off the fires in the Sadas from the Agnīdh’s altar; with them they repelled the Asuras and the Rākṣases; verily thus also the sacrificers draw off the fires in the Sadas from the Agnīdh’s altar; verily thus they repel the Asuras and the Rākṣases. In the morning they kept conquering by the Ājyas; in that they kept conquering (ājayanta ājya) by the Ājyas that is why the Ājyas have their name. Of the Hotṛ offices which continued conquering, that of the Achāvāka was left out; in it Indra and Agni took their place; Indra and Agni are the most forcible, mighty, strong, rich, and effective of the gods; therefore (a hymn) to Indra and Agni the Achāvāka² recites at the morning pressing, for Indra and Agni took their place in it. Therefore the other Hotṛakas creep to the Sadas in front, the Achāvāka behind, for being left behind as it were he is anxious to follow after. Therefore a Brahman, skilled in the R̥c verses and strong, should perform the Achāvāka’s part; thereby it does not become neglected.

ii. 37 (x. 5). The sacrifice is a chariot of the gods; the Ājya and the Praūga Častras are its inner reins;¹ in that with the Ājya he follows in recitation the Pavamāna, with the Praūga the Ājya (Stotra), verily thus he separates the inner reins of the chariot to prevent confusion; in imitation thereof they separate the inner reins of the chariot of men to prevent confusion. His chariot, whether of the gods or men does not become confused who knows thus. They say ‘As is the Stotra, so the Častra;

ii. 37 ¹ The sense seems clearly to be that there are four reins, two for each horse, the outer being the Pavamāna and Ājya Stotras, the inner the Ājya and Praūga Častras; the two Ājyas if joined would mean thus that the two reins (outer and inner) of the horse would be held together, whereas by having Pavamāna and Ājya, Ājya and Praūga, the result is that one hand holds outer and inner, another inner and outer, so that the two inner do not fall together. Sāyaṇa misses the point by not seeing that four reins are referred to.

the Sāman singers sing to verses for Soma, the purifying; the Hotṛ recites the Ājya to Agni; how then does he follow in recitation the verses to Soma, the purifying?' Soma, the purifying, is Agni; that is declared by a seer.² 'Agni, the seer, the purifying'; therefore although he proceeds with verses to Agni, still he follows in recitation the verses to Soma, the purifying. They say 'As is the Stotra so the Çastra; the Sāman singers sing to verses in Gāyatrī; the Hotṛ recites the Ājya in Anuṣṭubhs; how then by him are Gāyatrīs followed in recitation.' 'By conversion' he should reply. There are seven Anuṣṭubhs; they become eleven through the first being repeated thrice and the last thrice; the twelfth is the Virāj offering verse; not by one syllable do metres change, nor yet by two. These make up sixteen Gāyatrī verses. Thus by him although he proceeds with Anuṣṭubhs are Gāyatrīs followed in recitation. 'O Agni with Indra, in the home of the generous one', (this verse³) to Agni and Indra he uses as offering verse. These two as Indra and Agni did not conquer; being Agni and Indra they did conquer; in that he uses (a verse) for Agni and Indra as offering verse (it serves) for conquest. The Virāj is of thirty-three syllables; the gods are thirty-three, eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, Prajāpati, and the vaṣaṭ call. Thus in the very beginning of the litany he makes the deities sharers in the syllables; syllable by syllable the gods drink in order; verily thus the gods delight in the vessel for the gods. They say, 'As is the Çastra so the offering verse; the Hotṛ recites the Ājya to Agni, then how does he use (a verse) to Agni and Indra as offering verse.' Be it to Agni and Indra or to Indra and Agni, the litany is connected with both Indra and Agni through the cup and the silent praise; with⁴

'O Indra and Agni come hither to the pressed (drink)
The delightful cloud, for our prayers;
Of it do ye drink, impelled by our desire'

the Adhvaryu draws the cup for Indra and Agni. 'Bhūh, Agni, light, light, Agni; Indra, light, bhuvah, light, Indra; Sūrya, light, light, sva, Sūrya;' the Hotṛ recites as silent praise; therefore as is the Çastra, so is the offering verse.

ii. 38 (x. 6). He mutters the muttering of the Hotṛ;¹ thus he pours seed; inaudibly he mutters; inaudible as it were is the pouring of seed. Before the call he mutters; whatever there is after the call, that belongs to the Çastra. To him he calls as he lies on all fours with averted face; therefore turning their backs quadrupeds pour seed; when he faces him who faces him he becomes two-footed; therefore bipeds facing (each other) emit seed.² 'Father Mātariṣvan,' he says; the father is the breath; Mātariṣvan is the breath; seed is the breath; thus he pours seed. 'Make the lines unbroken' (he says); what is unbroken is seed, for hence he arises unbroken. 'May the poets sing unbroken litanies'; the poets are the learned; 'May they propagate this unbroken seed,' he says, in effect. 'May Soma, All-knower, guide the songs, Brhaspati recite the litanies and the exclamations!' (he says); Brhaspati is the holy power, Soma the lordly power, the songs and the litanies with the exclamations are the Stotras and the Çastras. Verily thus instigated by the holy power divine and the lordly power divine he recites the litanies. These two are the lords of instigation of all this whatever there is here. What he does without instigation by these two that is not done; 'He has done what is not done,' they say, in blame. What is done is done, what is done is not undone by him who knows thus. 'Speech, life, of all life, all life' he says; life is the breath; seed is the breath; the womb is speech; thus having created a womb he pours seed. 'Who (ka) will recite this? He will recite this,' he says; Prajāpati is who; verily thus he says 'Prajāpati will propagate this.'

ii. 39 (x. 7). After the call, he recites the silent praise; thus he develops the seed poured; first is then pouring, then development. Inaudibly he recites the silent praise; inaudible as it were is the pouring of seed. Secretly as it were he recites the silent praise;¹ secretly as it were are seeds developed. Of six sentences he recites the silent praise; sixfold is man, with six members;² verily thus he develops the self as sixfold and of six members. Having recited the silent praise he recites the Puroruc; thus he propagates the seed when developed; first there is development, then birth. Aloud he recites the Puroruc, verily openly he propagates him. He recites the Puroruc in twelve sentences; the year has twelve months; Prajāpati is the year; he is the propagator of all this. He who is the propagator of all this propagates him with offspring and cattle, for generation. He is propagated with offspring, with cattle, who knows thus. He recites the Puroruc to Jātavedas, with an allusion to Jātavedas. They say, 'Since the morning pressing is the abode of Jātavedas, then why at the morning pressing does he recite a Puroruc to Jātavedas?' Jātavedas is the breath, for he knows of born creatures. Of so many creatures as he knows, they become; for how could they exist of whom he knows not? If one knows the making of the self in the Ājya, that is well known.

ii. 40 (x. 8). 'Forward to your god, Agni,' he recites.¹ 'Forward' is the breath, for all these creatures advance following after the breath; verily thus he creates the breath, he makes breath perfect. 'Radiant, unparalleled,' he recites;² mind is radiant, for there is nothing prior to mind; verily thus he creates mind, he makes mind perfect. 'He for us protection for our enjoyment,' he recites;³ protection is speech; therefore of one following him in speech he says, 'I have accorded him what has a protection'; verily thus he creates speech, he makes speech perfect. 'Do thou aid us, O Brahman' he recites⁴; the holy power is the ear, for by the ear the holy power hears, in the ear does the holy power find support; verily thus he creates the ear, he makes the ear perfect. 'He is the holder, the sage, of them' he recites;⁵ the holder is inspiration, for expiration here is restrained by inspiration and departs not; verily thus he creates inspiration, he makes inspiration perfect. 'The righteous, of whom the two worlds' he recites;⁶ the right is the eye; therefore when two contend, whichever says 'I actually have seen it with my eye,' him men believe; verily thus he creates the eye, he makes the eye perfect. 'Do thou accord us wealth with a thousand, with offspring, with prosperity', he recites⁷ the last (verse) as concluding verse; the self when put together is possessed of a thousand, offspring, and prosperity; verily thus he creates the self as a complex, he makes the self as a complex perfect. He sacrifices with an offering verse; the offering verse is acquisition, prospering destiny; verily thus he creates a prospering destiny, he makes a prospering destiny perfect. He knowing thus, having come into being as composed of the metres, the deities, the holy power, immortality, goes to the gods, he who knows thus. If one knows how having come into being as composed of the metres, the deities the holy power, immortality, he goes to the gods, that is well known. So with regard to the self; now with regard to the deities.

ii. 41 (x. 9). He recites the silent praise as of six clauses; the seasons are six; verily thus he places the seasons in order; he goes to the seasons. He recites the Pururuc as of twelve clauses; the months are twelve; verily thus he places the months in order; he goes to the months. 'Forward to your god, Agni' he recites¹; 'forward' is the atmosphere, for all these creatures advance following the atmosphere; verily thus he places the atmosphere in order; he goes to the atmosphere. 'The righteous of whom the two worlds' he recites;⁶ the two worlds are sky and earth; verily thus he places sky and earth in order; he goes to sky and earth. 'Do thou accord us wealth with a thousand, with offspring, with prosperity', with the last (verse⁷) he concludes; the year as a complex possesses a thousand, offspring, and prosperity; verily thus he places the year as a complex in order; he goes to the year as a complex. He sacrifices with an offering verse; the offering verse is rain and lightning, for lightning here gives rain and proper food; verily thus he places lightning in order; he goes to the lightning. THE SOMA SACRIFICE (continued).

ADHYĀYA I

iii. 1 (xi. 1). The ¹ Praūga is a litany of the cups; nine cups are drawn in the morning; with nine (verses) do they sing in the Bahispavamāna (Stotra); when the Stoma has been performed, he draws the tenth; the sound hiñ of the other (verses) is the tenth; thus is there equality. (A triplet²) to Vāyu he recites; thereby has the Vāyu (cup) its litany. (A triplet³) to Indra and Vāyu he recites; thereby has (the cup) for Indra and Vāyu its litany. (A triplet⁴) for Mitra and Varuṇa he recites; thereby has (the cup) for Mitra and Varuṇa its litany. (A triplet⁵) for the Aṇvins he recites; thereby has (the cup) for the Aṇvins its litany. (A triplet⁶) for Indra he recites; thereby have (the cups) Çukra and Manthin litanies. (A triplet⁷) for the All-gods he recites; thereby has Āgrayana cup its litany. (A triplet⁸) for Sarasvatī he recites; there is no cup for Sarasvatī, but Sarasvatī is speech; whatever cups are drawn with speech, they have all litanies recited for him, they become possessed of litanies for him, who knows thus.

iii. 2 (xi. 2). By the Praūga he wins proper food; now various deities are celebrated in the Praūga, different litanies are performed in the Praūga, different kinds of food are placed in the cups of him who knows thus. Now the Praūga is the most related to the self of the litanies for the sacrificer as it were; 'therefore it is most to be perfected as it were by him, they say, 'for by it the Hotṛ makes him perfect.' (A triplet¹) to Vāyu he recites; therefore they say 'The breath is Vāyu, seed is the breath; seed comes into existence first when man comes into existence.' In that he recites (a triplet) to Viṣṇu, verily thus he makes his breath perfect. (A triplet²) to Indra and Vāyu he recites; where there is expiration, there is inspiration; in that he recites (a triplet) to Indra and Vāyu, verily thus his expiration and inspiration he makes perfect. (A triplet³) to Mitra and Varuṇa he recites; therefore they say 'The eye comes into existence first when man comes into existence.' In that he recites (a triplet) to Mitra and Varuṇa, verily thus he makes his eye perfect. (A triplet⁴) to the Aṇvins he recites; therefore they talk of a child born 'He is trying to listen; he is taking notice.' In that he recites (a triplet) to the Aṇvins, verily thus he makes his ear perfect. (A triplet⁵) to Indra he recites; therefore they talk of a child born, 'He is holding erect his neck, and also his head'; in that he recites (a triplet) to Indra, verily thus he makes his strength perfect. (A triplet⁶) to the All-gods he recites; therefore a child born crawls on all fours, for the limbs are connected with the All-gods; in that he recites (a triplet) to the All-gods, verily thus he makes his limbs perfect. He recites (a triplet⁷) to Sarasvatī; therefore to a child born speech comes last, for Sarasvatī is speech; in that he recites (a triplet) to Sarasvatī, verily thus he makes his speech perfect. He being born is born from all these deities, from all the litanies, from all metres, from all Praūgas, from all pressings, who knows thus and for whom knowing thus they recite thus.

iii. 3 (xi. 3). The Praūga is a litany of the breaths; seven deities he celebrates; seven are the breaths in the head; verily thus he places the breaths in the head. 'Should he consider the good or evil of the sacrificer' he used to say,¹ 'whose Hotṛ he is?' He should do to him at this point as he may desire. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of expiration', he should recite (the triplet) to Vāyu for him in confusion; a verse or a line he should pass over; thereby is it confused; verily thus does he deprive him of expiration. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of expiration and inspiration, he should recite for him (the triplet) to Indra and Vāyu in confusion; he should pass over a verse or a line; thereby is it confused; verily thus he deprives him of expiration and inspiration. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of the eye', he should recite for him (the triplet) to Mitra and Varuṇa in confusion; he should pass over a verse or a line; thereby is it confused; verily thus he deprives him of the eye. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of the ear', he should recite for him (the triplet) to the Aṅvins in confusion; he should pass over a verse or a line; thereby is it confused; verily thus he deprives him of the ear. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of strength', he should recite for him (the triplet) to Indra in confusion; he should pass over a verse or a line; thereby is it confused; verily thus he deprives him of strength. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of limbs', he should recite for him (the triplet) to the All-gods in confusion; he should pass over a verse or a line; thereby is it confused; verily thus he deprives him of limbs. If he desire of a man 'Let me deprive him of speech', he should recite for him (the triplet) to Sarasvatī in confusion; he should pass over a verse or a line; thereby is it confused; verily thus he deprives him of speech. But if he desire of a man 'With all his members, with all the self, let me make him to prosper', verily let him recite for him thus in due and proper order; verily thus he makes him prosper with all his members, with all his self. With all his members, with all his self, he prospers who knows thus.

iii. 4 (xi. 4). They say 'As is the Stotra, so the Ḍastra; the Sāman singers sing to (verses to) Agni;¹ the Hotṛ starts with one to Vāyu; how does he follow in recitation (verses) to Agni?' These deities are all forms of Agni; in that Agni burns forward as it were that is his form as Vāyu; thereby he follows in recitation that (form) of his.² Again in that making two as it were he burns and Indra and Vāyu are two, that is his form as Indra and Vāyu; thereby he follows in recitation that of his. Again in that he leaps up and down, that is his form as Mitra and Varuṇa; thereby he follows in recitation that of his. Again in that Agni is dread of contact, that is his form as Varuṇa; in that him being dread of contact they serve with friendliness, that is his form as Mitra; thereby he follows in recitation that of his. Again in that they kindle him with both arms from the two fire sticks and the Aṅvins are two, that is his form as the Aṅvins; thereby he follows in recitation that of his. Again in that with loud noise, thundering, and making the sound ba ba bā he burns, whence creatures shudder away, that is his form as Indra; thereby he follows in recitation that of him. Again in that him being one they carry apart in many places, that is his form as the All-gods; thereby he follows in recitation that of him. Again in that he burns, roaring and uttering speech as it were, that is his form as Sarasvatī; thereby he follows in recitation that of his. So though he begins with (a verse) to Vāyu, in each triplet through these deities he follows in recitation (the triplet) of the Stotra. Having recited the Vaiçvadeva litany³ he uses (a verse) to the All-gods as⁴ offering verse.

‘With all the sweet Soma drink,
O Agni, with Indra, with Vāyu,
Do thou drink according to Mitra’s laws.’

According to their portion he thus delights the deities.

The Vaṣaṭ Call.

iii. 5 (xi. 5). The¹ vaṣaṭ call is a vessel of the gods; he says the vaṣaṭ call; verily thus with a vessel of the gods he delights the deities. He says a second vaṣaṭ.² Just as in this world men delight horses or cows by renewed attention, verily so they delight the deities by renewed attention in that he says the second vaṣaṭ. ‘These fires they worship’ they say, ‘the Dhiṣṇyas; then why do they offer in the former (fire), and say vaṣaṭ in the former?’ In that with ‘O Agni, enjoy the Soma’ he says the second vaṣaṭ call, thereby he delights the Dhiṣṇyas. ‘They partake of the Soma draughts when incomplete,’ they say ‘for whom he does not say the second vaṣaṭ call;’³ what now is the portion for Sviṣṭakṛt of the Soma?’ In that with ‘O Agni, enjoy the Soma’ he says the second vaṣaṭ call, thereby they partake of the Soma draughts when complete; this is the Sviṣṭakṛt portion of the Soma. He says the call vaṣaṭ.

iii. 6 (xi. 6). The vaṣaṭ call is a thunderbolt; he should think of him whom he hates when about to say the vaṣaṭ call; verily in him he places the thunderbolt. In the vaṣaṭ call he says (the word) ‘six’; the seasons are six; verily thus he puts in order the seasons; the seasons he establishes; all this whatever there is here finds support through the seasons finding support. He finds support who knows thus. As to this Hiranyadant Baidā¹ used to say ‘These six thereby he establishes; sky is established on the atmosphere; the atmosphere on the earth; the earth on the waters; the waters on truth; truth on the holy power; the holy

⁴ RV. i. 14. 10.

The repetition of the vaṣaṭ follows from AQS. i. 5. 5; QCS. i. 1. 39, and the words above are not the anuvāṣaṭkāra. It is correctly explained by BR. vi. 824.

power on fervour.' All this whatever there is here finds support in these supports finding support. He finds support who knows thus. He says vaṣaṭ as the vaṣaṭ call; va is yonder (sun), ṣaṭ (six) the seasons; verily thus he places him in the seasons, he establishes him in the seasons; whatever as it were he does to the gods, that as it were the gods do to him.

iii. 7 (xi. 7). There are three vaṣaṭ calls, the thunderbolt, the hider of his abode, the empty. The vaṣaṭ call which he makes aloud and forcibly is the thunderbolt; it he hurls as a missile at the rival who hates him to lay him low whom he should lay low. Therefore is it the vaṣaṭ to be said by one with rivals. That which is even, continuous, and without loss of (part of) the verse,¹ is the hider of his abode; on it depend offspring and cattle; therefore it is the vaṣaṭ to be said by one desiring offspring and cattle. That one wherein the ṣaṭ fails² is the empty; he empties himself, he empties the sacrificer; the sayer of vaṣaṭ becomes worse, he becomes worse for whom he says vaṣaṭ. Therefore he should not desire it. 'Should he consider the good and evil of the sacrificer', he used to say, 'whose Hotṛ he is?' He should do to him herein as he may desire. If he desire of a man 'As he has been before sacrificing, so let him be after sacrificing', he should say the vaṣaṭ call for him as he recites the Ṛc for him; verily thus he makes him the same. If he desire of a man 'Let him be worse', having recited the Ṛc for him in a more raised tone he should say the vaṣaṭ call in a more depressed tone; verily thus he makes him worse. If he desire of a man 'May he be better', having recited the Ṛc for him in a more depressed tone, he should say the vaṣaṭ call in a more raised tone; from³ prosperity he places him in prosperity. The vaṣaṭ is said continuously with the Ṛc,⁴ for continuity; he is united with offspring and cattle who knows thus.

iii. 8 (xi. 8). He should meditate on the deity for whom the oblation is taken when about to say the vaṣaṭ; verily thus openly he delights the deities; before all eyes he sacrifices to the deity. The vaṣaṭ call is a thunderbolt; it shines when hurled if not appeased. Of it not every man as it were knows the appeasing nor the support. From it even now there is often as it were death. The appeasing of it, the support is 'Speech'¹.

I. e. without the loss of the last syllable of the Ṛc merged in the om. See n. 4.

Sāyaṇa says that ṣaṭ = vaṣaṭ and the loss is in a low pronunciation. The sense seems to be that the ṣaṭ is lost through imperfect utterance.

ṣṛiye Sāyaṇa, but ṣṛiyaḥ seems at least as probable. For the mode of pronunciation see ĀṚS. i. 5. 6; ṢṢS. i. 1. 34, 35 (which allows samo vā).

⁴ Whether with Pluti or not, ṢṢS. i. 1. 42, 43.

iii. 8. ¹ ĀṚS. i. 5. 17: vāg ojaḥ saha oja mayi prāṇāpānanu; ṢṢS. i. 1. 39 has a slightly different form.

Therefore after each vaṣaṭ call he should recite as accompaniment 'Speech'; appeased it injures him not. With 'O vaṣaṭ call, do not injure me; let me not injure thee; with the great I invoke mind, with cross-breathing body; thou art a support; win support; make me attain support' he should accompany the vaṣaṭ call. As to that he² used to say 'That is long, yet it is impotent. With "Force, strength, force" he should accompany the vaṣaṭ call; force and strength are the two dearest forms of the vaṣaṭ call; verily thus he unites it with its abode; with a dear abode does he prosper who knows thus.' The vaṣaṭ call is speech and expiration and inspiration; they depart when each vaṣaṭ call has been said. Then he should accompany with 'Speech, force, strength, force, in me expiration and inspiration'; verily doth the Hotr establish speech and expiration and inspiration in the self, with a full life, for fullness of life; a full life he lives who knows thus.³

iii. 9 (xi. 9). The sacrifice went away from the gods; they sought to start it up with the directions; in that they sought to start it up with the directions, that is why the directions have their name (praiśa). It they made radiant with the Puroruces; that is why the Puroruces have their name. It they found on the altar; in that they found it on the altar, that is why the altar has its name (vedi). It, when found, they drew off with drawing (cups); in that they drew it off with drawing (cups), that is why the cups have their name (graha). Having found it they made it known by Nivids; in that having found it they made it known (nyavedayan) by Nivids, that is why Nivids have their name. He who seeks what is lost desires something great or small; of the two he who desires the greater has the better desire; he who knows the directions as ever greater, knows them better, for the directions are a seeking for what is lost; therefore standing bent forward¹ he gives directions.

iii. 10 (xi. 10). The Nivids are the embryos of the litanies; in that they are inserted before the litanies at the morning pressing, therefore embryos are deposited at the back and come into being at the back. In that they are inserted in the middle at the midday, therefore embryos are held in the middle. In that they are placed at the end at the third pressing,

I. e. as Kauṣītaki is often cited in the KB., so Aitareya is thus meant in the AB. There is no iti to end the quotation. The beginning of the chapter is found also in Yaska, Nirukta, viii. 22.

therefore offspring are born downward thence, for generation. He is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. The Nivids are the ornaments¹ of the litanies; in that they are inserted at the morning pressing before the litanies, that is as if one were to make a decoration in the upper part of the warp; in that they are inserted in the middle at the midday, that is as if one were to make a decoration in the middle; in that they are inserted at the end at the third pressing, that is as if one were to make a decoration in the lower part of the warp. On all sides he shines with the decoration of the sacrifice who knows thus.

iii. 11 (xi. 11). The Nivids are deities connected with the sun; in that they are inserted before the litanies at the morning pressing, in the middle at the midday pressing, at the end at the third pressing, verily thus they follow the course of the sun. By quarters the gods gathered together the sacrifice; thereby by sentences are the Nivids recited. In that the gods gathered together the sacrifice, therefore the horse came into being; therefore they say 'A horse should he give to the reciter of Nivids'; that boon indeed do they give. He should not pass over a sentence of the Nivid; if he were to pass over a sentence of the Nivid, he would make a break in the sacrifice; as the break in the sacrifice grows the sacrificer becomes worse. Therefore should he not pass over a line of the Nivid. He should not invert two sentences of the Nivid; if he were to invert two sentences of the Nivid, he would confuse the sacrifice; the sacrificer would be confused. Therefore he should not invert two sentences of the Nivid. He should not unite two sentences of the Nivid; if he were to unite two sentences of the Nivid, he would contract the life of the sacrifice, the sacrificer would be likely to die. Therefore he should not unite two sentences of the Nivid. 'Forward this holy power; forward this lordly power,' these two only should he unite, to unite the lordly power with the holy power; therefore are the lordly and the holy powers united. He should not go beyond (a hymn) of three or four verses for inserting a Nivid; each single sentence of a Nivid is a counterpart¹ to a verse, (even) to a hymn; therefore one must not go beyond (a hymn) of three or four verses for inserting a Nivid, for by the Nivid in itself the Stotra is exceeded in recitation. Having left one (verse) over should he insert a Nivid at the third pressing; if he were to insert having left two over, he would injure the propagative power; thus he would deprive people of embryos; therefore having left one only over, he should insert a Nivid at the third pressing. He should not go past the Nivid with the

iii. 11. ¹ Haug against Sāyaṇa takes that the sense must be that he is to use no hymn of 3 or 4 verses for a Nivid. This cannot be correct. Sāyaṇa holds that no shorter hymn is to be used.

hymn; if with a hymn he goes past the Nivid, he should not return there; verily that stays in its place; having taken another hymn of the same deity and metre he should insert in it the Nivid. 'Let us depart not from the way' he recites² before the hymn; he goes from the way who is confused at the sacrifice. 'Not from the sacrifice with Soma, O Indra' (he says); verily thus he falls not away from the sacrifice. 'May not evil spirits stand within us' (he says); verily thus he smites away those who plot evil.

'That which accomplisheth the sacrifice
The web spread out among the gods,
May we accomplish, when offered'

(he says³). The web is offspring; verily thus he secures offspring for him (he says³). 'Mind we invoke with Soma for Narācaṇsa' (he says⁴); by mind the sacrifice is carried on, by mind it is performed. This here is the expiation.

ADHYĀYA II

iii. 12 (xii. 1). 'The¹ subjects of the gods must be brought into order' they say, 'The metre must be made to rest on the metre.' 'Let us two praise' is his call of three syllables at the morning pressing; 'Let us recite, O divine one' is the Adhvaryu's response in five syllables; that makes up eight syllables; the Gāyatrī has eight syllables; verily they place the Gāyatrī in front at the morning pressing. 'The hymn hath been recited' he says, having recited, in four syllables; 'Yes, reciter of hymns' replies the Adhvaryu in four syllables; that makes up eight syllables; the Gāyatrī has eight syllables; verily thus they place the Gāyatrī on both sides at the morning pressing. 'O Adhvaryu, let us two recite' is his call of six syllables at mid-day; 'Let us recite, O divine one' the Adhvaryu replies in five syllables; that makes up eleven syllables; the Triṣṭubh has eleven syllables; verily thus they place the Triṣṭubh in front at the midday (pressing). 'The hymn hath been uttered to Indra' he says, having recited, in seven syllables; 'Yes, reciter of hymns' replies the Adhvaryu in four syllables; that makes up eleven syllables; the Triṣṭubh has eleven syllables; verily thus they place pressings in order. The calls are all clearly mutilated forms from çais with om. Cf. also TS. iii. 2. 9; GB. viii. 10 imitates as usual. Hillebrandt (Ritual-litteratur, p. 104) sees in daiva a corruption of modēva.

the Trīṣṭubh on both sides at the midday (pressing). ‘O Adhvaryu, so let us two recite’ is his call of seven syllables at the third pressing; ‘Let us recite, O divine one’ the Adhvaryu replies in five syllables; that makes up twelve syllables; the Jagatī has twelve syllables; verily thus they place the Jagatī in front at the third pressing. ‘The hymn hath been uttered to Indra, to the gods’ he says, having recited, in eleven² syllables; ‘Yes’ replies the Adhvaryu in one syllable; that makes up twelve syllables; the Jagatī has twelve syllables; verily thus they place the Jagatī on both sides at the third pressing. Seeing this the seer declares it a verse,³

‘That the Gāyatrī is deposited on the Gāyatrī,
Or that they fashioned the Trīṣṭubh from the Trīṣṭubh,
Or that the Jagatī Pada is placed on the Jagatī,
They who know this obtain immortality.’

Verily thus metre on metre he establishes. The subjects of the gods he sets in order who knows thus.

iii. 13 (xii. 2). Prajāpati assigned to the gods the sacrifice and the metres in portions. He allotted the Gāyatrī at the morning pressing to Agni and the Vasus, the Trīṣṭubh to Indra and the Rudras at the midday (pressing), the Jagatī to the All-gods, and the Ādityas at the third pressing. Now, the metre that was his own, the Anuṣṭubh, he pushed out to the end to the office of the Achāvāka; she, the Anuṣṭubh, said to him ‘Assuredly thou art the worst of the gods whose own metre I am and who yet hast pushed me to the end to the office of the Achāvāka.’ This he recognized; he took his own Soma offering; he brought the Anuṣṭubh round to the very beginning in his own Soma offering; therefore the Anuṣṭubh is employed at the very beginning of all the pressings. The very first does he become, pre-eminence doth he attain, who knows thus. He arranged this in his own Soma offering; therefore whenever it falls under the power of the sacrificer the sacrifice is in order; (all) is in order for that people when a sacrificer knowing thus has power.

iii. 14 (xii. 3). Agni was the Hotṛ of the gods¹; for him death waited in the Bahiṣpavamāna (Stotra); he began the Ājya (Çastra) with an Anuṣṭubh; verily thus he evaded death. For him it waited in the Ājya (Stotra); he began with the Praūga; verily thus he evaded death. For him it waited in the Mādhyamīna Pavamāna; he began the Marutvatīya with an Anuṣṭubh; verily thus he evaded death. For him it could not wait in the Bṛhatī verses in the midday (pressing); the Bṛhatī verses are the breaths; verily thus it could not penetrate the breaths. Therefore at the midday pressing Hotṛ begins with a strophe in Bṛhatī; the Bṛhatī verses are the breaths; verily thus he begins with reference to the breaths. For him it waited in the third Pavamāna; he began the Vaiṣvadeva (Çastra) with an Anuṣṭubh; verily thus he evaded death. For him it waited in the Yajñāyajñīya; he began the Āgnimāruta (Çastra) with (a triplet) for Vaiṣvānara; verily thus he evaded death. That for Vaiṣvānara is a thunderbolt, the Yajñāyajñīya is a support; verily thus by the thunderbolt he drives away death from the support. He having unloosened all the nets, all the posts, of death, was released in safety; in safety verily is the Hotṛ released with full life, for fullness of life; a full life he lives who knows thus.

iii. 15 (xii. 4). Indra¹ having slain Vṛtra, thinking 'I have not laid (him) low', went to the further distances; to the very furthest distance he went; the very furthest distance is the Anuṣṭubh; the Anuṣṭubh is speech. He, having entered speech, lay there; him all creatures severally searched for. Him on the previous day the fathers found, on the second day the gods. Therefore on the previous day is offering made to the fathers, on the second day they sacrifice to the gods. They said, 'Let us press; so assuredly most quickly will he come to us.' They pressed; with² 'Thee like a car for aid' they turned him towards (them); at (the verse³) praising the pressed (drink), 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' he became revealed to them. With⁴ 'O Indra, come nearer' they brought him into the midst; with a sacrifice to which Indra has come he sacrifices, with a sacrifice possessing Indra he prospers, who knows thus.

iii. 16 (xii. 5). When Indra had slain Vṛtra all the deities left him, thinking 'He has not laid (him) low'; the Maruts only, his true comrades, did not leave; the Maruts, true comrades, are the breaths; the breaths did not then leave him. Therefore this unchanging Pragātha¹ containing (the word) 'true friend' is recited, 'Hither, O true friend, with true friends.' Even if here onwards a recitation to Indra is recited, the whole is the Marutvatīya, if this unchanging Pragātha is recited, containing (the word) 'true friend', 'Hither, O true friend, with true friends.'

iii. 17 (xii. 6). He recites a Pragātha¹ to Brahmanaspati; with Bṛhaspati as Purohita the gods conquered the world of heaven, and conquered in the world. Verily so also the sacrificer with Brhaspati as Purohita conquers the world of heaven and conquers in the world. These two Pragāthas, though not being chanted, are recited with repetitions. They say 'Seeing that nothing which is not chanted is recited with a repetition, then how are these two Pragāthas, which are not chanted, recited with repetitions?' The Marutvatīya is the litany of the Pavamāna (Stotra); there they chant to six Gāyatrī verses, six Brhatī verses, and three Triṣṭubh verses; this is the midday Pavamāna, in the Pañcadaça (Stoma), with three metres. They say 'How is this midday Pavamāna, in the Pañcadaça, with three metres followed in recitation?' The two last verses of the strophe are in Gāyatrī, the antistrophe is in Gāyatrī²; by these the Gāyatrī verses are followed in recitation; by the two Pragāthas the Brhatī verses are followed in recitation. In these Brhatī verses the Sāman singers chant with repetitions with the Raurava and Yaudhājaya (Sāmans);³ therefore these two Pragāthas, though not chanted, are recited with repetitions; thus with the Çastra he follows the Stotra. By the inserted verses in Triṣṭubh⁴ and the Triṣṭubh Nivid insertion⁵ the Triṣṭubh verses by him are followed in recitation. Thus indeed is the midday Pavamāna in the Pañcadaça with three metres followed in recitation by him who knows thus.

iii. 18 (xii. 7). He recites the inserted verses; by the inserted verses Prajāpati milked from these worlds whatever desire he desired; by means of the inserted verses he milks from these worlds whatever he desires, who knows thus. Now as to these inserted verses, whenever the gods observed a breach in the sacrifice that they closed up by the inserted verses; that is why the inserted verses have their name. With a sacrifice without breach does he sacrifice who knows thus. Now as to these inserted verses, the inserted verses are the sewing of the sacrifice; just as one continues putting together a garment with a needle, so does he continue with these putting together the breach in the sacrifice who knows thus. Further as to the inserted verses, the inserted verses are the recitations for the Upasads; 'Agni is the leader' (he says¹); the first Upasad is connected with Agni; of that this is the recitation. 'Thou with insight, O Soma' (he says²); the second Upasad is connected with Soma; of that this is the recitation. 'They swell the waters' (he says³); the third Upasad is connected with Viṣṇu; of that this is the recitation. So much space as by sacrifice with the Soma sacrifice he conquers, that he conquers with each Upasad who knows thus and who knowing thus recites the inserted verses. As to this some hold 'You the great' should he recite;⁴ saying 'We know that this (verse) is recited among the Bharatas.' That is not to be regarded. If he were to recite it, Parjanya would be liable not to rain.⁵ 'They swell the waters' only he should recite; that line has rain in it; it mentions the Maruts in 'Maruts', and contains (the word) 'lead' in 'Like a steed to make rain they lead about'; that which has (the word) 'lead' has the word 'stride'; that which has 'stride' is connected with Viṣṇu; 'The strong one' (he says); the strong one is Indra. In this (verse) there are four clauses, referring respectively to rain, the Maruts, Viṣṇu, and Indra. This verse which has its place in the third pressing is recited at the midday (pressing); therefore the cattle of the Bharatas now spend the evening in the cattle-ground, and at the midday come up to the cattle-shed.⁶ It is in Jagatī, for cattle are connected with the Jagatī; the midday is the self of the sacrificer; thus he confers cattle on the sacrificer.

iii. 19 (xii. 8). He recites a Pragātha¹ to the Maruts; the Maruts are cattle; the Pragātha is cattle; (it serves) to win cattle. 'Thou hast been born dread, for impetuous strength', this hymn² he recites. This hymn is a propagation of the sacrificer; the sacrificer by it he propagates from the sacrifice as the birthplace of the gods. It is a bringer of victory; he gains victory and is victorious. It is by Gaurivīti. Gaurivīti Çaktya went nearest to the world of heaven; he saw this hymn; with it he conquered the world of heaven. Verily so also the sacrificer with this hymn conquers the world of heaven. Having recited half its (verses), leaving half over, he places a Nivid in the middle; the Nivid is a mounting to the world of heaven; the Nivid is a ladder to the world of heaven. It he should recite climbing up as it were; and he should take hold³ of the sacrificer who is dear to him. So for one desiring the heaven. Now for one practising witchcraft. If he desire 'May I smite the people by the lordly power' thrice should he here separate with the Nivid the recitation of the hymn; the Nivid is the lordly power, the hymn the people; verily thus by the lordly power he smites the people. If he desire 'May I smite the lordly power by the people', thrice should he here divide the Nivid in recitation by the hymn; the Nivid is the lordly power, the hymn the people; verily thus he smites the lordly power by the people. But if he desire 'On both sides let me sever him from the people', he should here on both sides of the Nivid utter the call; on both sides thus he cuts him off from the people. So for one practising witchcraft, but the other way for one desiring heaven. 'The birds, fair winged, have approached Indra', with this last (verse⁴) he concludes; 'the Priyamedhas, the seers, seeking aid; do thou unroll the darkness' (he says). The darkness by which he deems himself surrounded that should he approach in mind; that from him is removed. 'Fill the eye', with this he should rub his eyes; possessed of sight until old age becomes he who knows thus. 'Release us that are bound as it were with a net' (he says); a net is snares; verily thus he says 'Release us being bound from a snare as it were'.

iii. 20 (xii. 9). Indra¹, being about to slay Vṛtra, said to all the deities 'Do ye support me; do ye call to me.' 'Be it so' (they replied). They ran forward to slay. He perceived 'They are running hither to slay me; well, let me terrify them.' Against them he breathed forth; before his snorting in haste all the gods ran away, but the Maruts did not abandon him; saying 'Smite, O blessed one; strike, show thy strength' they supported him. Seeing this the seer declares²

'Before the snorting of Vṛtra in haste,
All the gods, thy comrades, abandoned thee:
With the Maruts, O Indra, be there friendship for thee;
Then shalt thou conquer every foe.'

He perceived 'These indeed are my friends; they showed me love; well, let me give them a share in this litany.' He gave them a share in this litany; to that time both litanies were his only. He draws the cup for the Maruts, he recites the Pragātha to the Maruts, he recites the hymn to the Maruts, he inserts the Nivid to the Maruts; this is the portion of the Maruts. Having recited the litany to the Maruts, he uses (a verse) to the Maruts as offering verse; thus in due portion he delights the deities.

'Those who magnified thee, O bounteous one, at the slaying of the serpent,
Those who, O lord of the bays, at the affair with Çambara, the cattle foray,
Those who now, the sages, rejoice with thee,
In union with the Maruts, drink, O Indra, the Soma'

(he says³). Wherever with them he conquered, wherever he showed his strength, thus by mentioning that also he makes them share the Soma drink with Indra.

iii. 21 (xii. 10) Indra,¹ having slain Vṛtra, having won all victories, said to Prajāpati 'Let me be what thou art; let me be great.' Prajāpati replied, 'Then who am I?' 'Even that which thou hast said' he answered; then indeed did Prajāpati become Who by name; Prajāpati is Who by name.¹ In that Indra became great, that is why Mahendra has his name.² He having become great said to the deities 'Assign me a choice portion', just as one desires here, who prospers, who attains pre-eminence, who becomes great.³ The gods said to him 'Claim thyself what is to be for thee.' He claimed this cup for Mahendra, the midday of pressings, the Niṣkevalya of litanies, the Trīṣṭubh of metres, the Pṛṣṭha of Sāmans; this choice portion they assigned to him. They assign a choice portion to him who knows thus. To him the gods said 'All hast thou asked; let us have a share here also.' 'No', he replied, 'how can you have a share also?' They answered 'Let us have a share also, O bounteous one.' He merely looked at them.

iii. 22 (xii. 11). The¹ gods said 'Here is the dear wife, the favourite of Indra, Prāsahā by name; from her let us seek (our desire).' 'Be it so' (he said). From her they sought; she said to them 'In the morning shall I tell you.' Therefore wives seek from a husband, therefore a wife seeks from her husband in the night. To her they went in the morning; she replied with (the verse²):

'Since many a time he hath conquered, enduring,
Indra hath made good his name as slayer of Vṛtra;
The mighty lord of strength hath been perceived:'

the mighty lord of strength is Indra.

'What we desire of him to do, let him perform that,' his of ours.' 'Be it so' (they said). They gave her a share then; therefore herein is recited (the verse) 'Since many a time he hath conquered, enduring.' The dear wife, the favourite, Prāsahā by name, of Indra, is his host; her father-in-law is Prajāpati named Who. Therefore he who desires the victory of a host standing away from it at half distance, should cut a grass blade at both ends, and throw it towards the other host, saying Prāsahā, Ka seeth thee.' Then, just as in this world, a daughter-in-law keeps hiding in modesty before her father-in-law, so also the host keeps drinking away in confusion, where one knowing thus, having cut a grass blade at both ends, hurls it against the other host (saying) 'Prāsahā, Ka seeth thee.' To them said Indra 'You may have a share here also.' The gods replied ⁴ 'Let the Virāj of thirty-three syllables be the offering verse of the Niṣkevalya.' The gods are thirty-three, eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, Prajāpati and the vaśat call; he makes the gods share the syllables; syllable by syllable the gods drink in turn; verily thus with a vessel of the gods the gods are satisfied. If he desire of a man 'Let him be without an abode', let him use for him as offering verse a Gāyatrī, Trīṣṭubh or some other metre, not a Virāj, and say the vaśat call; verily thus he makes him without an abode. If he desire of a man 'Let him have an abode', he should use for him as offering verse ⁵ a Virāj 'Drink ye Soma, O Indra; let it delight thee'; verily thus with it he makes him have an abode.

iii. 23 (xii. 12). The Ṛc and the Sāman were here in the beginning. The Ṛc was called 'she', the Sāman 'he'.¹ The Ṛc said to the Sāman 'Let us be united for generation.' 'No', replied the Sāman, 'my greatness is above mine.' She becoming two spoke (to him); he did not at all consent. Having become three she spoke; with three he united. In that with three he united, therefore with three they chant, with three sing, for with three is the Sāman commensurate. Therefore one (husband) has many wives, but not one (woman) at once many husbands. In that thus he and she were united, thus came into being the Sāma (sā-ama); that is why the Sāman as its name. He becomes² fair who knows thus; he who prospers, who attains pre-eminence, he becomes fair, for as 'unfair' men reproach (a man).

The same derivation in CU. iii. 6. 1-6. SB.

sāman bhavati can only be construed as a loc. but apparently the sense is as taken by Śāyaṇa on its second occurrence. Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 263) offers no translation, and on its first Śāyaṇa renders sarvair abhyarhitaiḥ sadṛṣo bhavati. BR. (vii. 929) has 'er sitzt in der Fülle' (from sā), and Deussen (Sechzig Upanishads, p. 85) sees in CU. ii. 1. 1-3 a play on these senses of Sāman, those of richness, friendliness, and the Sāman. Probably all are in essence one, resting on the root idea 'conciliate', 'please'.

They came into order becoming one five, the other five; (namely) the call and the hiñ call, the prelude and the first Ṛc, the principal part and the middle Ṛc, the response and the last Ṛc, the finale and the vaṣaṭ call. In that the two came into order becoming one five, the other five, therefore they say 'The sacrifice is fivefold; cattle are fivefold.' In that, further, they made up, as a set of ten, the Virāj, therefore they say 'In the Virāj, as a set of ten, the sacrifice finds support.' The strophe is the self, the antistrophe offspring, the inserted verses the wife, the Pragātha cattle, the hymn the house. He in this and in yonder world abides with offspring and cattle in his home who knows thus.

iii. 24 (xii. 13). He recites the strophe¹; the strophe is the self; it he recites with a middle tone; verily thus he makes the self perfect. He recites the antistrophe²; the antistrophe is offspring; the antistrophe is to be recited in a louder tone; verily thus he makes his offspring better than himself. He recites the inserted verse³; the inserted verse is the wife; the inserted verse must be recited in a lower tone as it were; in his house his wife is not likely to answer back, when one knowing thus recites the inserted verse in a lower tone. He recites the *Pragātha*⁴; it is to be recited with sonorous voice; sound is cattle, the Pragātha is cattle; (it serves) to win cattle. He recites the hymn⁵ 'I shall declare the mighty deeds of Indra.' Thus is the hymn devoted only to and dear to Indra, by Hiranyastūpa. By the hymn Hiranyastūpa Āṅgīrasa went to the dear abode of Indra, he won the highest world. He goes to the dear abode of Indra, he wins the highest world who knows thus. The hymn is a house, a support. Therefore it should be recited in the most firm tone. Therefore even if a man gets cattle at a distance as it were, he desires to bring to his house; for a house is the support of cattle.

the metres went towards Soma, the king. The metres then were of four syllables each only. The Jagatī being of four syllables first flew up ; she having flown up and having gone half of the way felt weary ; having laid aside three syllables, and becoming of one syllable, she flew back down again, bearing consecration and fervour. Therefore by him is consecration obtained, is fervour obtained, who has cattle, for cattle are connected with the Jagatī, for the Jagatī brought them back. Then the Triṣṭubh flew up. She having flown up and having gone more than half the way felt weary ; she having laid aside one syllable, having become of three syllables, came back again, bearing the sacrificial fees. Therefore at the midday the sacrificial fees are taken, in the place of the Triṣṭubh, for the Triṣṭubh brought them back.

iii. 26 (xiii. 2). The gods said to the Gāyatrī ‘Do thou fetch the Soma, the king, for us.’ ‘Be it so,’ she replied, ‘do ye accompany me with the recitation of the whole (formula for a) safe passage.’ ‘Be it so’ (they said). She flew up ; her the gods accompanied with the recitation of the whole (formula for a) safe passage, containing the words ‘forward’ and ‘hither’. (The words) ‘forward’ and ‘hither’ are the whole (formula for a) safe passage ; therefore him who is dear to him he should accompany with this (recitation) containing ‘forward’ and ‘hither’ ; verily safely he goes, safely he returns. She, having flown and having terrified the guardians of the Soma, grasped with foot and mouth Soma the king, and also grasped the syllables which the other two metres had dropped. Having shot at her, Kṛçānu, a Soma guardian,¹ cut off the nail of her left foot ; that became a porcupine ; therefore is it like a nail. The fat that flowed became the barren cow² ; therefore is it the oblation as it were. The socket and the point became a serpent, not biting ; from its swiftness (came) the viper ; the feathers became flying foxes, the sinews earthworms, the shaft the blind snake. Thus became the arrow.

iii. 27 (xiii. 3). What she grasped with her right foot became the morning pressing ; the Gāyatrī made it her own abode ; therefore they regard it as the most perfect of all the pressings. The very first he becomes, he attains pre-eminence who knows thus. What she grasped with her left foot became the midday pressing ; it slipped ; having slipped it did not match the former pressing. The gods sought to remedy this ; in it they placed the Triṣṭubh of metres, Indra of deities ; thereby it became of equal strength with the former pressing ; with the two pressings of equal strength and of similar quality he prospers who knows thus. That which she grasped with her mouth became the third pressing. Flying she sucked its sap ; having its sap sucked,¹ it did not equal the two former pressings. The gods sought to remedy this; they saw it in cattle. In that they pour in an admixture (of milk), and proceed with the (offering of) butter² and the animal (offering), thereby it became of equal strength with the previous pressings. With all the pressings of equal strength and of similar quality he prospers who knows thus.

iii. 28 (xiii. 4). The other two metres said to the Gāyatrī ‘Our property, the syllables have come round with (you).’ ‘No,’ replied the Gāyatrī; ‘ours are they as they were found (by us).’ They disputed before the gods; the gods said ‘They are yours as they were found (by you).’ Therefore even now in a question of property they say ‘It is ours by right of finding.’ Then the Gāyatrī was of eight syllables, the Trīṣṭubh of three, the Jagatī of one. The eight-syllable Gāyatrī supported the morning pressing; the Trīṣṭubh with three syllables could not support the midday pressing; to her the Gāyatrī said ‘Let me come; let there be a portion for me here also.’ ‘Be it so,’ replied the Trīṣṭubh, ‘Do thou unite me with these eight syllables.’ ‘Be it so’ (she said); her she united; thus to the Gāyatrī at the midday belong the last two (verses) of the strophe of the Marutvatiya and the antistrophe.¹ She, having become of eleven syllables, supported the midday pressing. The Jagatī having one syllable could not support the third pressing; to her the Gāyatrī said ‘Let me come; let there be a portion for me here also. ‘Be it so,’ replied the Jagatī, ‘Do thou unite me with these eleven syllables.’ ‘Be it so’ (she said); her she united; thus to the Gāyatrī at the third pressing belong the last two verses of the strophe of the Vaiṣṇadeva and the antistrophe. Having become of twelve syllables she supported the third pressing. Then indeed the Gāyatrī became of eight syllables, the Trīṣṭubh of eleven syllables, and the Jagatī of twelve syllables. With all the metres of equal strength and of similar quality he prospers who knows thus. That which was one became three; therefore they say ‘It should be given to one who knows thus’; for being one it became three.

iii. 29 (xiii. 5). The gods said to the Ādityas ‘With you let us support this pressing.’ ‘Be it so’ (they replied). Therefore the third pressing begins with the Ādityas; the cup for the Ādityas¹ is before it. He uses (a verse²) containing (the word) ‘be drunk’ and so perfect in form, as offering verse, ‘Let the Ādityas and Aditi be drunk’; that which contains (the word) ‘be drunk’ is a characteristic of the third pressing. He does not say the second vaṣaṭ, nor eat (thinking) 'The second vaṣaṭ call is a conclusion ; eating is a conclusion ; the Ādityas are the breaths ; let me not bring the breaths to a conclusion.' The Ādityas said to Savitr 'With thee let us support this pressing.' 'Be it so' (he replied). Therefore the strophe³ of the Vaiṣṇadeva is addressed to Savitr, the cup for Savitr is before it. He uses (a verse⁴) containing (the word) 'be drunk', and so perfect in form, as offering verse, 'God of the home Savitr the delectable'; that which contains (the word) 'be drunk' is a symbol of the third pressing. He does not say the second vaṣaṭ nor eat, (thinking) 'The second vaṣaṭ call is a conclusion ; eating is a conclusion ; Savitr is the breath ; let me not bring the breath to a conclusion.' Savitr drinks of both these pressings, the morning pressing and the third pressing. In that there is in the beginning of the Nivid⁵ to Savitr a sentence containing (the word) 'drink' and at the end one containing (the word) 'be drunk', verily thus he gives him a share in both pressings, the morning pressing and the third pressing. Many verses to Vāyu are recited in the morning, but one⁶ only at the third pressing ; therefore the upward breaths of a man are more numerous than the lower. He recites (a hymn⁷) to sky and earth ; sky and earth are supports ; this (earth) is a support here, yonder (sun) yonder. In that he recites (a hymn) to sky and earth, verily thus he establishes him on a pair of supports.

iii. 30 (xiii. 6) He recites (a hymn) to the Ṛbhus¹ ; the Ṛbhus by fervour among the gods won the drinking of Soma. For them they desired to arrange it at the morning pressing ; them Agni with the Vasus repelled from the morning pressing. For them they sought to arrange it at the midday pressing ; them Indra with the Rudras repelled from the midday pressing. For them they desired to arrange it at the third pressing ; them the All-gods energetically repelled, (saying) 'They shall not drink here, not here.' Prajāpati said to Savitr 'These are thy pupils ; do thou drink together with them.' 'Be it so,' replied Savitr, 'Do thou drink round them on both sides.' Prajāpati drank round them on both sides ; these two inserted verses² without mention (of the deity), intended for Prajāpati, are recited round (the hymn) for the Ṛbhus, 'The maker of fair forms for aid' and 'Let Vena here impel those born of Prṇi'; verily thus does Prajāpati drink on both sides of them. Therefore does one of high rank honour at his table him whom he desires. The gods had loathing of those because of the human scent; they interposed these inserted verses³ 'In whom the mother' and 'To the father'.

iii. 31 (xiii. 7). He recites (a hymn¹) to the All-gods; as are peoples, so is the Vaiçvadeva. As are the peoples within, so are the hymns; as the wastes so the inserted verses. On both sides of the inserted verse he utters the call; 'therefore these being wastes seem not to be such by reason of the beasts and birds' he used to say. As is a man, so is the Vaiçvadeva; as are his members within, so are the hymns; as his joints, so the inserted verses. On both sides of the inserted verse he utters the calls; therefore the joints of a man being slack are made firm, for they are made firm by the holy power. The inserted verses and the offering verses are the root of the sacrifice; if they were to use different inserted verses and offering verses, they would uproot the sacrifice; therefore they should be the same. The Vaiçvadeva litany is connected with the five folks; it is the litany of all the five folks, gods and men, Gandharvas and Apsarases, serpents and fathers; of these five folks is it the litany; all the five folks know him; to him from the fivefold folk sacrificers go who knows thus. He who recites the Vaiçvadeva is the Hotṛ connected with all the gods. Of all the quarters should he think when about to recite; verily thus in all the quarters he places sap. He should not think of that quarter in which there is one whom he should hate; by omitting it he appropriates his strength. He concludes with the last (verse²) 'Aditi is the sky, Aditi the atmosphere'; Aditi is this (earth); the sky this (earth), the atmosphere this (earth). 'Aditi is mother, is father, is son' (he says); the mother is this (earth), the father this (earth), the son this (earth). 'Aditi is the All-gods, the five folks' (he says); in this are the All-gods, in this the five folks. 'Aditi is what is born, Aditi is what is to be born' (he says); what is born is this (earth); what is to be born is this (earth). He recites twice by lines the concluding (verse); cattle are four-footed; (verily it serves) to win cattle; once by half verses, for support. Man has a double support, cattle have four feet; verily thus he causes men with his double support to find support in four-footed cattle. He should always conclude with (a verse) connected with the five folks; touching the earth should he conclude. Thus in the very place where he brings together the sacrifice in that at the end he establishes it. Having recited the Vaiçvadeva litany he uses (a verse) to the All-gods as offering verse,³ 'O All-gods, harken to this my call'; thus according to their portions he delights the deities.

the offering verse for (the pap for) Soma is addressed to Soma, the offering verse for the ghee is addressed to Viṣṇu. For (the pap for) Soma he uses as offering verse² 'Thou, O Soma, in unison with the fathers,' which contains (the word) 'fathers'. They slay the Soma in that they press it; for it they perform (the offering of) a barren cow in the form of (the pap) for Soma; the barren cow is for the fathers; therefore (a verse) containing (the word) 'fathers' he uses as offering verse for (the pap for) Soma. They have killed Soma in that they pressed it; thus do they again bring it into being; they swell it up again with the symbol of the Upasads, these deities, Agni, Soma, and Viṣṇu are the symbol of the Upasads. Having taken (the pap) for Soma before the Sāman singers the Hotṛ should look into it; some indeed give it first to the Sāman singers, but that he should not do. 'The sayer of vaṣaṭ eats first all foods', he used to say; in this way therefore the sayer of vaṣaṭ should first look into it, then they give it to the Sāman singers.

iii. 33 (xiii. 9). Prajāpati¹ felt love towards his own daughter, the sky some say, Uṣas others. Having become a stag he approached her in the form of a deer. The gods saw him, 'A deed unknown Prajāpati now does.' They sought one to punish him; they found him not among one another. These most dread forms they brought together in one place. Brought together they became this deity here; therefore is his name containing (the word) Bhūta; he prospers who knows thus his name. To him the gods said 'Prajāpati here hath done a deed unknown; pierce him.' 'Be it so,' he replied, 'Let me choose a boon from you.' 'Choose' (they said). He chose this boon, the overlordship of cattle; therefore does his name contain the word 'cattle'.² Rich in cattle he becomes who knows thus this name of his. Having aimed at him he pierced him; being pierced he flew upwards;³ him they call 'the deer'. The piercer of the deer is he of that name. The female deer is Rohiṇī; the three-pointed arrow is the three-pointed arrow. The seed of Prajāpati outpoured ran; it became a pond. The gods said 'Let not this seed of Prajāpati be spoiled.' It became 'not to be spoilt'; that is why 'not to be spoilt' (māduṣa) has its name; connected with man is called 'not to be spoilt'; that being 'not to be spoilt' they call mystically 'connected with man (mānuṣa)', for the gods are lovers of mystery as it were.

iii. 34 (xiii. 10). It they surrounded with Agni; it the Maruts blew upon; Agni could not make it move; they surrounded it with Agni Vaiṣvānara; the Maruts blew upon it; then Agni Vaiṣvānara caused it to move. The first part of the seed that was kindled up became yonder Āditya; the second became Bhṛgu; him Varuṇa took; therefore is Bhṛgu descended from Varuṇa.¹ The third (part), that was brilliant (adīdet) as it were, became the Ādityas. The coals became the Āṅgirasas; in that the coals after being quenched blazed forth again, Brhaspati came into being. The extinguished coals became black cattle; the reddened earth ruddy (cattle). The ash which there was crept about in diverse forms, the buffalo, the Gayal, the antelope, the camel, the ass, and these ruddy animals. To them this god said 'Mine is this, mine is what remains.'² Him they deprived of a claim by this verse which is recited as addressed to Rudra,³

'O father of the Maruts, let thy goodwill approach us;
Do thou not sever us from the sight of the sun;
Do thou, hero, be merciful to our steeds';

so should he say, not 'Towards us' (in the last line); this god is not likely to attack offspring then;

'May we be multiplied with children, O thou of Rudra,' so he should say, not 'O Rudra', to avoid the use of the actual name. Or rather he should recite⁴ 'Weal for us let him make'; with 'weal' he begins, for weal for all. 'For men, for women, for cows' (he says); men are males, women are females; (verily it serves) for weal for all. This verse, being without mention (of the name of the deity)⁵ though addressed to Rudra, is appeased; with full life, for fullness of life, a full life he lives who knows thus. It is a Gāyatri; the Gāyatri is holy power; verily thus with the holy power he honours him.

iii. 35 (xiii. 11). He begins the Āgnimāruta with (a hymn¹) to Vaiṣvānara; Vaiṣvānara caused to move the seed when poured; therefore with a hymn to Vaiçvānara he begins the Āgnimāruta. Without taking in breath the first verse is to be recited. He who recites the Āgnimāruta keeps quenching the fires which have not been appeased, the blazing flames; verily thus with the breaths he crosses the fires. In reciting he may err; he should seek another to point out; verily thus making him a bridge he crosses. Therefore at the Āgnimāruta he should not himself correct, a correcter (of errors) should be found. He recites (a hymn²) to the Maruts; the Maruts by blowing caused to move the seed when poured; therefore he recites (a hymn) to the Maruts. 'At each sacrifice to Agni' and 'The god wealth gives to you', the basis³ (of the Stotra) and the antistrophe⁴ he recites in the middle; in that in the middle he recites the basis (yonī) and the antistrophe, therefore is the womb placed in the middle. In that he recites after reciting two hymns, verily thus he places the organ of propagation above the two supports for generation. He is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus.

iii. 36 (xiii. 12). He recites (a hymn¹) to Jātavedas; Prajāpati created offspring; they created went away and returned not. Them he surrounded with Agni; they came up to Agni; to him to-day even they come up. He said 'Offspring born by him I have found.' In that he said 'Offspring born by him I have found', that became (the hymn) to Jātavedas; that is why Jātavedas has his name. They, surrounded by Agni, and controlled, kept scorching and blazing; them he sprinkled with water. Therefore after (the hymn) to Jātavedas he recites the Āpohiṣṭhiya;² therefore should it be recited by one who is appeasing. Having sprinkled them with water he thought that he had destroyed them; in them by means of the dragon of the deep³ he mysteriously placed brilliance. Agni Gārhapatya is the dragon of the deep; verily thus by Agni Gārhapatya mysteriously he places brilliance in them. Therefore they say 'He who offers is more brilliant than he who does not offer.'

iii. 37 (xiii. 13). He celebrates the wives of the gods¹ after Agni, the lord of the house; therefore the wife sits behind the Gārhapatya. They say 'Let him celebrate Rākā first; a sister has the first drink.' That is not to nijāsyaiṇa cannot be taken as svakīyāḥ as by Sāyana; the sense must be something like 'destroy' or 'injure' and the Dhātupāṭha root (xxvi. 102) jas in its causative form is clearly meant. Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 272.

iii. 37. ¹ RV. v. 46. 7 and 8. Probably çāns may here simply have its normal sense of 'praise', or the terms may be used as brief descriptions of the verses recited.

be regarded; the wives of the gods he should celebrate first. Agni Gārhapatya places seed in the wives; verily thus in these wives with Agni Gārhapatya openly he places seed, for propagation. He is propagated with offspring and cattle, who knows thus. Therefore a sister, though of the same womb, lives as inferior to a wife, though of a different womb. He celebrates Rākā;² Rākā is it that sews this suture in man which is in the organ. Male sons are born for him who knows thus. He celebrates Pāvīravī;³ Pāvīravī is speech, Sarasvatī; verily thus he places speech in speech. They say 'Should he recite (the verse) to Yama first? Or that for the fathers?' That to Yama should he recite first. 'This strew, O Yama, do thou sit upon'; the first drink is the king's; therefore should he recite (the verse⁴) to Yama first. 'Mātali with the sages, Yama with the Aṅgīrasas', he recites⁵ after (it) for the sages. The sages are inferior to the gods, but above the fathers; therefore he recites it after (the verse to Yama). 'Let them arise, the lower, the higher', (these verses⁶) to the fathers he recites. 'The midmost fathers, loving the Soma' (he says); the lowest, the highest and the midmost, all these without omission he delights. 'I have found the kindly fathers' he recites as the second (verse). 'Who sitting on the strew (the drink) pressed with the call' (he says); 'sitting on the strew' is a reference to their dear abode (the strew); verily thus with their dear home he makes them prosper. With a dear home he prospers who knows thus. 'May there be this homage to the fathers to-day' he recites, containing the making of homage, at the end; therefore at the end is homage paid to the fathers. They say 'Should he recite (the verses) to the fathers separating (them) with the call? Or without separating (them) with the call.' He should recite separating (them) with the call; the good of the sacrifice to the fathers is incomplete⁷; he who recites separating (them) with the call completes the incomplete sacrifice to the fathers; therefore it is to be recited separating (them) with the call.

iii. 38 (xiii. 14). 'Sweet indeed is he, full of honey is he', he recites (verses¹ to) Indra for the drinking after of Indra; by these Indra drank after (the other gods) the third pressing; that is why (the verses) for the drinking after have their name. The deities become drunk as it were in that the Hotṛ recites these verses; therefore in their case the response (of the plete is suitable for the sacrifice to the fathers; he who recites without the call ('vyāhāvam).' But this is doubtful, and the rendering above given is preferable in any case as giving more accurately the sense of vyā—hve.

Adhvaryu) should contain² (the word) 'be drunk'. 'By whose might the regions are established', this verse³ to Mitra and Varuṇa he recites; Viṣṇu guards what is ill offered in the sacrifice, Varuṇa what is well offered; verily (it serves) to appease them both. 'I will proclaim the mighty deeds of Viṣṇu', (this verse⁴) to Viṣṇu he recites. As is a roller, so is Viṣṇu to the sacrifice. Just as one may keep making well ploughed and well rolled what has been ill ploughed and ill rolled, so, in that the Hotṛ recites this verse, he keeps making well sung and well recited what has been ill sung and ill recited in the sacrifice. 'Weaving the web from the darkness follow to the light', (this verse⁵) to Prajāpati he recites; the web is offspring; verily thus he weaves the web of offspring for him. 'Guard the paths, full of light, wrought by prayer' (he says); the paths full of light are those that go to the gods; verily thus he extends them for him. With 'Weave without a flaw the works of the singers; be Manu, bring to birth the divine folk' verily he extends him with the offspring of Manu, for generation. He is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. 'Do thou to us, the generous one, Indra, the resplendent', with this last (verse⁶) he concludes; the generous one, Indra, the resplendent, is this (earth); 'May he make true (blessings), supporter of the folk, the unequalled' (he says); the true, supporter of the folk, the unequalled is this (earth); 'Do thou, king of beings, confer upon us' (he says); the king of beings is this (earth). 'The great fame that is a singer's' (he says); great is this (earth); fame is the sacrifice; the singer is the sacrificer; verily thus he invokes this benediction for the sacrificer. Touching the earth should he say the conclusion; verily thus in the very same place in which he gathers together the sacrifice, in that he establishes it at the end. Having recited the Āgnimāruta litany he recites (a verse⁷) to Agni and the Maruts as offering verse 'O Agni with the Maruts brilliant and resounding'; thus according to their portions he delights the gods.

ADHYĀYA IV

The Characteristics of the Agniṣṭoma.

iii. 39 (xiv. 1). The¹ gods undertook battle with the Asuras, for conquest; them Agni was not willing to accompany. To him the gods said

¹ AB. iii. 39-44 contains miscellaneous remarks on the Agniṣṭoma and its relation to other rites. The passage seems a later addition; cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 275.

‘Do thou come too ; thou art one of us.’ He replied ‘I shall not follow you if I am not sung to ; sing now to me.’ They, having risen, and having returned, praised him ; then praised he followed. Becoming in three rows, he went to battle for conquest with the Asuras in three columns ; ‘in three rows’ (he says) ; verily he made the metres rows ; ‘in three columns’ (he says) ; the pressings (he made) the columns. Then he defeated invincibly ; then indeed the gods prospered, the Asuras were defeated. He prospers himself, the evil rival who hates him is defeated, who knows thus. The Agniṣṭoma is the Gāyatrī ; the Gāyatrī has twenty-four syllables ; there are twenty-four Stotras and Çastras in the Agniṣṭoma. This is why they say ‘A horse well loaded gives (its rider) comfort.’² This is the Gāyatrī ; the Gāyatrī is not content with the earth ; taking with it the sacrificer it goes aloft to the sky.’ This is the Agniṣṭoma ; the Agniṣṭoma is not content with the earth ; taking with it the sacrificer it goes aloft to the sky. The Agniṣṭoma is the year ; the year has twenty-four half-months ; there are twenty-four Stotras and Çastras in the Agniṣṭoma. As in the ocean all streams, so in it all the sacrificial rites are resolved.

iii. 40 (xiv. 2). The consecration offering¹ is performed ; all those offerings after it verily are resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. He invokes the sacrificial food ; the sacrifices of cooked (food) have the form of the sacrificial food ; all the sacrifices of cooked (food) are resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. At evening and morning they offer the Agnihotra ; evening and morning they gave the fast (milk) ; with the call of Hail ! they offer the Agnihotra ; with the call of Hail ! they gave the fast (milk). Through the call of Hail ! the Agnihotra is resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. Fifteen kindling verses he recites at the introductory (offering), fifteen in the new and full moon sacrifices ; through the introductory (offering) the new and full moon sacrifices are resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. They buy Soma, the king ; Soma, the king, is connected with plants ; with plants they heal whom they heal ; therefore through the purchase of Soma, the king, whatever medicines there are, all these are resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. They kindle Agni by friction at the guest reception, Agni at the four-monthly sacrifices ; through the guest reception the four-monthly sacrifices are resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. With milk they proceed at the Pravargya, with milk at the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice² ; verily through the Pravargya the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice is resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. There is a victim on the fast day ; verily through it all animal sacrifices are resolved in the Agniṣṭoma. There is a sacrificial rite called the Idādadha;³ it they perform with curds; with curds they perform the pot of curds; verily through the pot of curds the Idādadha is resolved in the Agniṣṭoma.

iii. 41 (xiv. 3). So now as to previous (rites) and next as to subsequent (rites). There are fifteen Stotras in the Ukthya, fifteen Častras; that makes up a month; by months is the year arranged; Agni Vaiçvānara is the year; the Agniṣṭoma is Agni; verily through the year the Ukthya is resolved into the Agniṣṭoma. Through the resolution of the Ukthya the Vājapeya is resolved, for it is an Ukthya. There are twelve night rounds,¹ all in the Pañcadaṣa Stoma; taking these by two they make up thirty. The Ṣoḍaṣin Sāman is the Ekaviṅṣa, the Sandhi (Sāman) is the Trivṛt; these are thirty, the month; the nights of the month are thirty; the year is arranged by months; Agni Vaiçvānara is the year; the Agniṣṭoma is Agni; verily through the year the Atirātra is resolved in the Agniṣṭoma; through the resolution of the Atirātra the Aptoryāma is resolved, for it is Atirātra. Thus all the sacrificial rites previous to and subsequent to (the Agniṣṭoma) are resolved into the Agniṣṭoma. Of it, taking the Stotras together, in all there are a hundred and ninety² Stotriya verses. The ninety corresponds to ten Trivṛt (Stomas); then the (next) ninety to ten more; of the ten (that remain) one Stotriya verse is in excess, a Trivṛt is left over; it yonder gives heat as the twenty-first placed over (the rest). It is the midmost³ of the Stomas; before it are ten Trivṛts, after it ten; in the middle this twenty-first gives heat placed over on both sides. The Stotriya verse over is incorporated in this; it is the sacrificer; it is the divine lordly power, might and strength; he attains the divine lordly power, might and strength, he attains union and identity of form and world with it, who knows thus.

iii. 42 (xiv. 4). The gods having defeated the Asuras went aloft to the world of heaven. Agni arose aloft touching the sky: he opened the door of ³ For this see ĀṢ. ii. 14. 11; KB. v. 5. For the pot of milk offering of the Agniṣṭoma see ĀṢ. v. 13; ṢṢ. vii. 18; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 283.

² Thus made up: the morning pressing has a Trivṛt and four Pañcadaṣas = 69; the midday pressing has a Pañcadaṣa and four Saptadaṣas = 83; the evening pressing has a Saptadaṣa and Ekaviṅṣa = 38; viz. $190 = 10 \times 9 + 10 \times 9 + 10$ (= 9 + 1).

the world of heaven; Agni is the overlord of the world of heaven. To him first came the Vasus; they said to him 'Let us through'¹; make room for us.' He replied 'Unless I am praised, I shall not let you through; praise me now.' 'Be it so' (they said); they praised him with the Trivṛt Stoma; being praised he let them through; they went to their due place. To him came the Rudras; they said to him 'Let us through; make room for us.' He replied 'Unless I am praised, I shall not let you through; praise me now.' 'Be it so' (they said); they praised him with the Pañcadaśa Stoma; being praised, he let them through; they went to their due place. To him came the Ādityas; they said to him 'Let us through; make room for us.' He replied 'Unless I am praised, I shall not let you through; praise me now.' 'Be it so' (they said); they praised him with the Saptadaśa Stoma; being praised, he let them through; they went to their due place. To him came the All-gods; they said to him 'Let us through; make room for us.' He replied 'Unless I am praised, I shall not let you through; praise me now.' 'Be it so' (they said); they praised him with the Ekaviṃśa Stoma; being praised, he let them through; they went to their due place. With each Stoma the gods praised him; them praised he let through; they went to their due places. So he who sacrifices praises him with all these Stomas, and he who knows thus him will he let pass; him he lets pass to the world of heaven who knows thus.

iii. 43 (xiv. 5). The Agniṣṭoma is Agni; in that they praised him, therefore is it the praise of Agni (agnīṣṭoma); it, being the praise of Agni, they call Agniṣṭoma mystically, for the gods love mystery as it were. In that four sets of gods praised him with four Stomas, therefore is it of four Stomas (catu-ṣṭoma); it being of four Stomas they call it Catuṣṭoma mystically, for the gods love mystery as it were. Again in that they praised him when aloft and having become light (jyotis), therefore is it the Jyotiṣṭoma; it being the Stoma of light, they call it the Jyotiṣṭoma mystically, for the gods love mystery as it were. This is the sacrificial rite without beginning or end; the Agniṣṭoma is like a chariot wheel endless; as is its beginning so is its end; as to this a sacrificial verse is sung:

'That which is its beginning is also its end,
That again which is its end is also its beginning,
Like the creeping of a snake is the movement of the Çākala¹ (ritual),
They discern not which of the two is the subsequent';

iii. 43. ¹ A kind of snake (Sāyana) is absurd.

The reference to the Çākala is seen by Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 277), and though not apparently accepted by Aufrecht or others appear to me correct.

for (they say) 'As the beginning, so should be the end.' As to this they say 'Seeing that the beginning has the Trivṛt, the end the Ekaviṇṣa, how are the two alike?' 'For the reason', he should reply, 'that the Ekaviṇṣa is threefold and moreover that both consist of repeated triplets.

iii. 44. (xiv. 6). The ¹ Agniṣṭoma is he who gives heat here; it is one to be finished in the day; with the day should they complete it; its name is what is finished with the day. They should proceed with it without haste; as at the morning pressing, so at the midday, so at the third pressing. So the sacrificer is not likely to perish. In that they proceed without hastening at the two*former pressings, therefore here the villages of the east are densely populated; in that they proceed hastening at the third pressing, therefore here to the west there are long forests. Thus the sacrificer is likely to perish. Therefore without hastening they should proceed; as at the morning pressing, so at the midday, so at the third pressing. So the sacrificer is not likely to perish. He should follow in recitation the movement of this (sun); when he rises in the morning, then he gives a gentle heat; therefore he should recite in a gentle tone at the morning pressing. Then when he comes forward, he gives stronger heat; therefore at the midday should he recite with a stronger tone. Then when he comes still further forward, he gives his strongest heat; therefore he should recite at the third pressing with the strongest tone. So should he recite if he be lord of speech, for the Častra is speech. He should begin in the tone in which he can complete, increasing in height; that is the best way of reciting. The (sun) never really sets or rises. In that they think of him 'He is setting', verily having reached the end of the day, he inverts himself; thus he makes evening below, day above. Again in that they think of him 'He is rising in the morning', verily having reached the end of night he inverts himself; thus he makes day below, night above. He never sets; indeed he never sets, union with him and identity of form and world he attains who knows thus.²

Miscellaneous Points regarding the Sacrifice.

iii. 45 (xv. 1). The sacrifice as food departed from the gods; the gods said 'The sacrifice as food hath left us; this sacrifice, food, let us search for.' They said 'How shall we search?' 'By the Brahman and the metres, they said.' They consecrated the Brahman with the metres; for him they performed the sacrifice up to the end; they also performed the joint offerings to the wives (of the gods). Therefore now also in the consecration offering they perform the sacrifice right up to the end, they also perform the joint offerings to the wives. According to this rule did they proceed. They performed the introductory (offering); to him with the introductory (offering) they came nearer; they hastened with the performance. They made it end in the Çamyu. Therefore now also the introductory (offering) ends in the Çamyu. According to this rule did they proceed. They performed the guest reception; to him with the guest reception they came nearer; they hastened with the performance. They made it end in the sacrificial food. Therefore now also the guest reception ends in the sacrificial food. According to this rule did they proceed. They performed the Upasads; to him with the Upasads they came nearer; they hastened with the performance; having repeated three kindling verses, they offered to three deities. Therefore now also in the Upasads having repeated three kindling verses,¹ they offer to three deities. According to this rule did they proceed. They performed the fast day; him on the fast day they obtained; having obtained him they performed the sacrifice; they also performed the joint offerings to the wives. Therefore now also on the fast day they perform the sacrifice to the end; they also perform the joint offerings to the wives. Therefore in these previous rites he should recite more and more gently; for they followed him creeping after.² 'Therefore with whatever voice he desires, he should recite on the fast day, for he is then obtained' (they say). Having obtained him they said 'Serve us for food'; 'No,' he replied, 'how can I serve you?' Them he only looked at. To him they said 'With the Brahman and the metres becoming united do thou serve us as food.' 'Be it so' (he replied). Therefore now also the sacrifice becoming united with the Brahman and the metres bears the sacrifice to the gods.

Errors in the choice of Priests.

iii. 46 (xv. 2). Three things are performed at the sacrifice, eating, swallowing, and vomiting. What is eaten is when he makes as priest one that expects 'May he give to me, or may he choose me.' That is remote like something eaten; that does not profit the sacrificer. Again what is swallowed is when fearing he chooses a priest, 'Let him not either oppress me, nor let him make confusion in the sacrifice for me.' That is remote like something swallowed; that does not profit the sacrificer. Again what is vomited is when he chooses as priest one who is spoken ill of. Just as here men are disgusted by what is vomited, so therefore the gods. That is remote like something vomited; that does not profit the sacrificer. He should not desire these three. If against his desire he should have one of these three, there is in the Stotra of the Vāmadevyā¹ an expiation for it. The Vāmadevyā (Sāman) is this, the world of the sacrificer, the world of ambrosia, the world of heaven. It is three syllables short; having crept up for the chanting of the (Sāman), he should divide the self into three, pu, ru, and ṣa. He places the self in these worlds, in this world of the sacrificer, in this world of ambrosia, in the world of heaven; he overcomes all errors in sacrifice. 'Even if the priests are perfect,' he used to say, 'he should mutter this.'

iii. 47 (xv. 3). The¹ metres having carried the oblation to the gods being wearied stand at the back part of the sacrifice; just as if a horse or a mule stands having carried (its load). He should offer to them the oblations to the minor deities after the cake of the animal (offering) to Mitra and Varuṇa. To Dhātṛ (he should offer) a cake on twelve potsherds; Dhātṛ is the vaṣaṭ call. To Anumati (he should offer) a pap; Anumati is the Gāyatrī. To Rākā (he should offer) a pap; Rākā is the Triṣṭubh. To Sinīvālī (he should offer) a pap; Sinīvālī is the Jagatī. To Kuhū (he should offer) a pap; Kuhū is the Anuṣṭubh. These are all the metres; Gāyatrī, Triṣṭubh, Jagatī, Anuṣṭubh; on (them) the others (depend), for these are performed most prominently at the sacrifice. By means of these metres the sacrificer sacrifices with all the metres, who knows thus. This is why they say 'A horse, well loaded, gives (its rider) comfort²'; this is the metres; the metres place him in comfort. A world which misses nothing he wins who knows thus. Now some say 'To Dhātṛ in front of each of these (deities) should he offer with butter; thus in all of them he makes pairing.' As to this they say 'There is tediousness in the sacrifice when on the same day he uses the same verses as offering verses.' Even if there are many wives as it were, one husband is a pair with them. In that before them all he offers to Dhātṛ,³ he makes pairing in all of them. So now for the minor deities.

¹ SV. ii. 32-34; RV. iv. 31. 1-3; the last verse has three Pādas of seven syllables, acc. to Sāyaṇa, but Oldenberg (Prolegomena, p. 378) more correctly takes the shortage to lie in the words madānām, sakhīnām, and jaritṛṇām, leaving bhavāsi ātibhūḥ in the last verse uncontracted; hence the insertion of puruṣa. The practice is not given in ĀṆS., though the verses are often rubricated (v. 16. 1; vii. 4. 2; viii. 12. 18; 14. 18).

iii. 47. ¹ For the rites on the conclusion of the sacrifice, viz. the barren cow to Mitra and Varuṇa and the oblations to the Devikās see ĀṆS. vi. 14; ÇṢS. viii. 12; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, pp. 407-409.

³ For the Mantra see ĀṆS. vi. 14. 16.

iii. 48 (xv. 4). Now as regards the goddesses.¹ To Sūrya (he should offer) a cake on eleven potsherds; Sūrya is Dhātṛ, and he is also the vaṣaṭ call. To sky (he should offer) a pap; the sky is Anumati; she is also the Gāyatrī. To Uṣas (he should offer) a pap; Uṣas is Rākā; she is also the Triṣṭubh. To the cow (he should offer) a pap; the cow is Sinīvālī; she is also the Jagatī. To earth (he should offer) a pap. Earth is Kuhū; she is also the Anuṣṭubh. These are all the metres; Gāyatrī, Triṣṭubh, Jagatī, Anuṣṭubh; on (them) the others (depend), for these are performed most prominently at the sacrifice. By means of these metres the sacrificer sacrifices with all the metres, who knows thus. This is why they say 'A horse, well loaded, gives (its rider) comfort'; this is the metres; the metres place him in comfort. A world which misses nothing he wins who knows thus. Now some say 'To Sūrya before each of these he should offer with butter; thus in all of them he makes pairing'. As to this they say 'There is tediousness in the sacrifice when on the same day he used the same verses as offering verses.' Even if there are many wives as it were, one husband is a pair with them. In that before all of them he offers to Sūrya, he makes pairing in all of them. Those here are those yonder; those yonder are those here; by either set he obtains the desire which is in both. Both sets he should offer for one desiring propagation who has attained prosperity, but not for one who is seeking it. If he were to offer them together for one who is seeking only, the gods would be liable² to be ill pleased in his gains since 'he has thought he has enough'. Çucivṛkṣa Gaupalāyana offered both together at the sacrifice of Vṛddhadyumna³ Ābhīpratāriṇa. He (Çucivṛkṣa Gaupalāyana) having seen his skilled charioteer plunging (in the water) said 'Here for this king I have delighted together at the sacrifice both the minor deities and the goddesses in that his skilled charioteer plunges.' Sixty-four armed warriors assuredly were his sons and grandsons.

iii. 49 (xv. 5). In¹ the Agniṣṭoma the gods took refuge, in the Ukthas the Asuras; they were of equal strength; they could not be discriminated. These Bharadvāja among the seers saw 'These Asuras are resting in the Ukthas; them no one of these (gods) sees.' He called to Agni² 'Come, I shall proclaim to thee, O Agni, other words.' Other words are those of the Asuras. Agni, rising up, said 'What does this lean, tall, grey-haired one desire to say to me?' Bharadvāja was lean, tall, and grey haired. He replied 'These Asuras are resting in the Ukthas; them no one of you sees.' Agni, becoming a horse, rushed to and beyond them; in that Agni, having become a horse, rushed to and beyond them, that was the origin of the Sākamaçva Sāman;³ that is why the Sākamaçva has its name. They say 'He should begin the Ukthas with the Sākamaçva; the Ukthas have no proper beginning other than the Sākamaçva.' 'With the Pramanhiṣṭhiya⁴ he should begin,' they say. By means of the Pramanhiṣṭhiya the gods repelled the Asuras from the Ukthas. Thus he may begin with the Pramanhiṣṭhiya, or with the Sākamaçva.

iii. 50 (xv. 6). The Asuras took refuge in the litany of the Maitrāvaruṇa; Indra said 'Who with me will repel hence these Asuras?' 'I too' replied Varuṇa. Therefore the Maitrāvaruṇa recites (a litany) to Indra and Varuṇa¹ at the third pressing, for Indra and Varuṇa drove them thence. Being driven thence, the Asuras took refuge in the litany of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin; Indra said 'Who with me will repel these Asuras hence?' 'I too' replied Bṛhaspati. Therefore the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin recites to Indra and Bṛhaspati² at the third pressing, for Indra and Bṛhaspati drove them thence. Being driven thence, the Asuras took refuge in the litany of the Achāvāka; Indra said 'Who with me will repel them hence?' 'I too' replied Viṣṇu. Therefore the Achāvāka recites to Indra and Viṣṇu³ at the third pressing, for Indra and Viṣṇu drove them thence. Jointly with Indra the deities are celebrated; a couple is a pairing; therefore from a couple a pairing is produced, for propagation; he is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. There are four offerings to the seasons of the Potṛ and the Neṣṭṛ, and six verses;⁴ they make up the tenfold Virāj; thus in the tenfold Virāj they establish the sacrifice.⁵

PAÑCIKĀ IV

ADHYĀYA I

iv. 1 (xvi. 1). The¹ gods by the first day collected the thunderbolt for Indra; by the second day they dipped it; by the third day they presented it; it he hurled on the fourth day. Therefore on the fourth day he recites the Ṣoḍaḥin. The Ṣoḍaḥin is a thunderbolt: in that on the fourth day he recites the Ṣoḍaḥin, verily thus he hurls at the rival who hates him the thunderbolt as a weapon to lay him low who is to be laid low by him. The Ṣoḍaḥin is a thunderbolt, the litanies cattle: putting it round after the litanies he recites. In that putting it round after the litanies he recites, verily thus with the Ṣoḍaḥin as a thunderbolt he surrounds cattle. Therefore cattle, being surrounded by the Ṣoḍaḥin as a thunderbolt, come up to man. Therefore a horse or a man or a cow or an elephant being surrounded, led by itself, comes up when bidden by the voice; by merely seeing the Ṣoḍaḥin as a thunderbolt, he is surrounded by the Ṣoḍaḥin as a thunderbolt, for the thunderbolt is speech, the Ṣoḍaḥin speech. They say 'Why has the Ṣoḍaḥin this name?' Of the Stotras it is the sixteenth; the sixteenth of the Častras; with sixteen syllables he commences; with the (next) sixteen he says om; he inserts a Nivid of sixteen sentences; that is why the Ṣoḍaḥin has its name. Two syllables are left over² when the Ṣoḍaḥin is made into an Anuṣṭubh; these are the two breasts of speech; these are truth and falsehood: truth aids him, falsehood harms him not, who knows thus.

iv. 2 (xvi. 2). He who desires brilliance and splendour should use as the Ṣoḍaḥin Sāman the Gaurivita;¹ the Gaurivita is brilliance and splendour; brilliant and resplendent he becomes who knowing thus uses the Gaurivita as Ṣoḍaḥin Sāman. 'The Nānada'² should be used as the Ṣoḍaḥin Sāman'

¹ AB. iv. 1-4 and KB. xvii. 1-4 deal with the Ṣoḍaḥin rite; see ĀČS. vi. 2 and 3; ČČS. ix. 2 seq.; ĀpČS. xiv. 2; KČS. xii. 5. 20 seq. The Ṣoḍaḥin is treated here as performed on the fourth day of a Ṣaḍaha; cf. TS. vi. 6. 11. 1 where a distinct and independent rite of that name is denied. For § 5 cf. GB. ix. 19.

iv. 2. ¹ SV. ii. 302-304; ĀČS. vi. 3.1. This is the riḥṛta form of the Ṣoḍaḥin.

they say; Indra lifted up his thunderbolt against Vṛtra; he hurled it at him; he smote him. He, being smitten, cried aloud; in that he cried aloud, the Nānada Sāman came into existence; that is why the Nānada has its name. That is a Sāman without rivals, one that destroys rivals, the Nānada; without rivals, a destroyer of rivals, he becomes who, knowing thus, uses the Nānada as the Ṣoḍaṣin Sāman. If they use the Nānada, the Ṣoḍaṣin must be recited without intermingling;³ for they chant to the (verses) without intermingling. If it is the Gaurivita, the Ṣoḍaṣin must be recited with intermingling, for they chant to them with intermingling.

iv. 3 (xvi. 3). Then he intertwines the metres. In 'Let the bay steed carry thee hither' and 'Do thou hearken to our words' he intertwines Gāyatrī¹ and Pañkti² verses; man is connected with the Gāyatrī; cattle are connected with the Pañkti; verily thus he intertwines man with cattle, in cattle he makes him find support. The Gāyatrī and the Pañkti are two Anuṣṭubhs; thereby he does not depart from the symbol of speech, the symbol of the Anuṣṭubh, and the symbol of the thunderbolt. In 'What time, O Indra, in the conflict' and 'Let this delightful one be to you' he intertwines Uṣṇih³ and Brhatī⁴ verses; man is connected with the Uṣṇih, cattle with the Brhatī; verily thus he intertwines man with cattle, in cattle he makes him find support. The Uṣṇih and the Brhatī are two Anuṣṭubhs; thereby he does not depart from the symbol of speech, the symbol of the Anuṣṭubh, and the symbol of the thunderbolt. In 'On the yokes for him' and 'O Brahman, O hero, rejoicing in the making of holy power' he intertwines (a verse⁵) of two Padas and a Triṣṭubh;⁶ man has two feet, the Triṣṭubh is strength; verily thus he intertwines man with cattle; in strength he makes him find support; therefore man, being established in strength, is the strongest of all cattle. In that (the verse) of two Padas has twenty syllables and there is a Triṣṭubh, there are two Anuṣṭubhs; thereby he does not depart from the symbol of speech, the symbol of the Anuṣṭubh, and the symbol of the thunderbolt. In 'This Brahman' and 'I shall declare to thee the bay steeds in the great assembly' he intertwines (verses) of two Padas⁷ and Jagatīs;⁸ man has two feet; cattle are connected with the ³ The viharana is described in ĀṢ. vi. 3; it consists of mixing up the verses by reciting their Pādas interlaced, that is, of 3 Gāyatrī Pādas and 5 Pañkti Pādas (RV. i. 16. 2 and 82. 3) is made up a verse form of Gāyatrī + Pañkti thrice and then two Pañkti Pāda verses. According to ĀṢ. vi. 2. 2 the avīṛṭa form has RV. i. 84. 1-6 (SV. i. 347 seq.) as its strophe and anti-

agatī; verily thus he intertwines man with cattle; in cattle he makes man find support. Therefore man, being established in cattle, both eats them and masters them; and these are in his power. In that (the verse) of two Padas has sixteen syllables, and there is a Jagatī, there are two Anuṣṭubhs; thereby he does not depart from the symbol of speech, the symbol of the Anuṣṭubh, and the symbol of the thunderbolt. In 'In the bowls the buffalo the barley-mixed' and 'Forward for him, with his chariot forward' he recites Atichandas verses;³ the sap of the metres that flowed over, that flowed over to the Atichandas verse; that is why the Atichandas has its name. The Ṣoḍaḥin is fashioned out of all the metres. In that he recites Atichandas verses, verily thus he fashions it out of all the metres. With the Ṣoḍaḥin fashioned out of all the metres he prospers who knows thus.

iv. 4 (xvi. 4). He adds the additions of the Mahānāmniś.¹ The first Mahānāmni is this world, the second the world of the atmosphere, the third the under world. The Ṣoḍaḥin is fashioned out of all the worlds; in that he adds the additions of the Mahānāmniś, verily thus he fashions it from all the worlds. With the Ṣoḍaḥin fashioned out of all the worlds he prospers who knows thus. In 'Forward for you the Triṣṭubh sap', 'Praise, praise forth', and 'He who hath made to bound the steeds' he recites as normal Anuṣṭubhs.² As one who has wandered here and there out of his path comes back to the path, so it is in that he recites normal Anuṣṭubhs. He who considers himself complete and at the height of prosperity should make him recite the Ṣoḍaḥin without intermingling, (thinking) 'Let me not fall, through the isery of the metres.' But he, who is desirous of removing evil, should make him recite the Ṣoḍaḥin with intermingling; man is, as it were, intertwined with evil; verily thus he smites away the evil stain which is intertwined for him; evil he smites away who knows thus. 'When up to the place of the bright one', with this last³ he concludes; the place of the bright one is the world of heaven; verily thus he causes the sacrificer to go to the world of heaven. 'Thou hast drunk of the ancient draughts, lord of the bays' he uses as offering verse⁴; the Ṣoḍaḥin is fashioned out of all the pressings; in that he uses as offering verse 'Thou hast drunk of the ancient draughts, O lord of the bays', and the morning pressing contains the word) 'drink', verily thus he fashions it out of the morning pressing. 'Now let this pressing be thine only' (he says); the midday pressing (is the dra's) only; verily thus he fashions it from the midday pressing. 'Be drink with the Soma, rich in honey, O Indra' (he says); the third pressing contains the words) 'be drunk'; verily thus he fashions it out of the third pressing.

‘Do thou ever, O courser, press into thy belly’ (he says); that which contains (the word) ‘courser’ is a symbol of the Ṣoḍaḥin; the Ṣoḍaḥin is fashioned out of all the pressings; in that he uses as offering verse ‘Thou hast drunk of the ancient draughts, O lord of the bays’, verily thus he fashions it out of all the pressings. With the Ṣoḍaḥin fashioned out of all the pressings he prospers who knows thus. He adds five-syllable additions⁵ of the Mahānāmnīs to Pādas of eleven syllables; the Ṣoḍaḥin is fashioned out of all the metres; in that he adds four-syllable additions of the Mahānāmnīs to Pādas of eleven syllables, verily thus he fashions it out of all the metres. With the Ṣoḍaḥin fashioned out of all the metres he prospers who knows thus.

iv. 5 (xvi. 5). In¹ the day the gods took refuge, in the night the Asuras; they were of equal strength; they could not be discriminated. Indra said ‘Who with me will attack (to drive) hence these Asuras through the night?’ He found no one among the gods, they were afraid of night, the darkness, death. Therefore now also in the night if one has gone away any distance whatever, he is afraid, for the night is darkness as it were, death as it were. The metres alone followed him; in that the metres alone followed him, therefore Indra and the metres bear the night. No Nivid is recited, nor Puroruc nor inserted verse, nor is any other deity celebrated; for Indra and the metres alone bear the night. They repelled them by going round in rounds; in that they repelled by going round in rounds, that is why the rounds have their name. Then they repelled from the first part of the night by the first round, from the middle of the night by the second, from the last part of night by the last. ‘Up from the night do we follow’ they said. ‘Bordering on night are these metres’ he used to say; for these rescued Indra when afraid from night, the darkness, death; that is why the Apīcarvaras have their name.

iv. 6 (xvi. 6). ‘Drink of the Soma juice’ with this Anuṣṭubh¹ containing (the word) ‘Soma juice’ he begins the night; the night is connected with the Anuṣṭubh; this is the symbol of night. The offering verses contain (the words) ‘Soma juice’, ‘drink’ and ‘be drunk’, and are appropriate; what in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect. They chant the first round; they repeat the first Pādas; their horses and cows, thereby they take from them.

¹ AB. iv. 5 and 6 and KB. xvii. 5-9 deal with the Atirātra form of the Jyotiṣṭoma; see ĀṢ. vi. 4. The characteristic of this rite is the addition of four Paryāyas of three Ṣastras each. GB. x. 1-3 follow AB. iv. 5 and 6. Cf. JB. i. 208; Oertel, Trans. Conn. Acad. xv. 170.

They chant the second round ; they repeat the middle Padas ; their carts¹ and chariots,² thereby they take from them. They chant the last round ; they repeat the last Padas ; their clothes, their gold, the jewels on their bodies, thereby they take from them. He takes the property of his foe, he repels him from all these worlds, who knows thus. 'The day has Pavamāna (Stotras)', they say, 'the night has no Pavamānas ; how have both Pavamānas, and through what have they equal portions?' In that 'To Indra, the drunken, the pressed (drink)', 'This Soma juice hath been pressed, O bright one', and 'This hath been pressed with might' they chant³ and recite, thereby the night has Pavamānas ; thereby the two become possessed of the Pavamānas ; thereby they become of equal portions. 'The day has fifteen Stotras', they say, 'the night has not fifteen Stotras ; how have both fifteen Stotras and through what have both equal portions?' The Apiṣarvaras are twelve Stotras ; they sing the Sandhi (Sāman)⁴ to the Rathantara with three deities ; thereby the night has fifteen Stotras ; thereby both have fifteen Stotras ; thereby they become of equal portions. They chant a limited amount, they recite an unlimited amount, (thinking) 'What has been is limited, what is to be is unlimited, (it serves) to win what is unlimited.' He recites more than the Stotra ; offspring is beyond the self, cattle are beyond. In that he recites beyond the Stotra, verily thereby he wins whatever in him there is beyond the self.

ADHYĀYA II

iv. 7 (xvii. 1). *Prajāpati*¹ gave his daughter to Soma, the King, even Sūryā Sāvitrī ; for her all the gods came as groomsmen ; for her wedding ceremony he made this thousand (of verses) which they call the Āçvina (Çastra). What is less than a thousand is not the Āçvina ; therefore he should recite a thousand or more. Having eaten of ghee, he should recite. Just as in this world a cart or a chariot, when oiled, goes (well), so he when oiled goes. He should call (making a posture) as of an eagle about to fly up. The gods did not agree as to this, 'Let this be mine ; let this be mine.' They said coming to agreement 'Let us run a race for it ; his who wins shall it be'. They made the course from Agni, the lord of the house, to the sun; therefore the beginning² (verse) is addressed to Agni in the Āçvina, 'Agni is the Hotṛ, the lord of the house, he the King.' As to this some say "Agni, O dear father, Agni friend" with this³ should he begin; "In the sky the pure, the sacrificial, of the sun" with this as first verse he reaches the goal.' This is not to be regarded. If one were now to say of him 'He has had recourse to "Agni" and "Agni", he will fall into the fire', it would certainly be so. Therefore should he begin with 'Agni is the Hotṛ, the lord of the house, he the King.' It contains (the words) 'lord of the house' and 'generation', and is propitious; with full life for fullness of life, a full life he lives who knows thus.

⁴ See SV. ii. 99-104 ; to Agni, Uṣas, and Āçvins, two verses being turned into three.

iv. 8 (xvii. 2.) As these deities were running the race, and had started, Agni took the lead first; the Açvins followed him; to him they said 'Give way; we two will win this.' 'Be it so', he replied, 'Let me have a share here.' 'Be it so' (they said). For him they made a share herein; therefore at the Āçvina (Çastra) (a litany) to Agni is recited. They followed after Uṣas; to her they said 'Give way; we two will win this.' 'Be it so', she replied, 'Let me have a share here.' 'Be it so' (they said). For her they made a share herein; therefore at the Āçvina (a litany) to Uṣas is recited. They followed after Indra; to him they said 'We will win this, O generous one'; they did not dare to say to him 'Give way'. 'Be it so', he replied, 'Let me have a share herein.' 'Be it so' (they said). For him they made a share herein; therefore at the Āçvina (a litany) to Indra is recited.¹ The Açvins won the race; the Açvins attained it. In that the Açvins won the race the Açvins attained it, therefore they call it the Āçvina. He attains whatever he desires who knows thus. They say 'In that there are here recitations to Agni, to Uṣas, to Indra, then why do they call it the Āçvina?' (It is) because the Açvins won the race, the Açvins attained it. In that the Açvins won the race, the Açvins attained it, therefore they call it the Āçvina. He attains whatever he desires, who knows thus.

iv. 9 (xvii. 3). By means of a mule chariot Agni ran the race; as he drove on he burned their wombs; therefore they conceive not. With ruddy cows Uṣas ran the race; therefore, when dawn has come, there is a ruddy glow; the form of Uṣas. With a horse chariot Indra ran the race; therefore it as neighing aloud and resounding is the symbol of lordly power; for it is connected with Indra. With an ass chariot the Açvins won, the Açvins attained; in that the Açvins won, the Açvins attained, therefore is his speed outworn, his energy spent; he is here the least swift of all beasts of burden; but they did not take the strength of his seed; therefore has he virility and possesses a double seed. 'Seven metres should he use in reciting to Sūrya', they say, 'as in (the recitations) to Agni, Uṣas, and the Aṇvins; the worlds of the gods are seven; he prospers in all the worlds of the gods.' That is not to be regarded. Three only should he use in recitation; three are these threefold worlds; (they serve) to win these worlds. They say 'He¹ should begin those for Sūrya with "Up this all-knower".' That is not to be regarded. That would be as if one having gone should miss the goal. He should begin² with 'Let Sūrya protect us from the sky'; that is as if one having gone should reach the goal. He recites second 'Up this all-knower'. 'The radiant countenance of the gods hath come forth' is a *Trīṣṭubh*³. Yonder (sun) rises as the radiant one of the gods; therefore he recites this. 'Homage to the eye of Mitra and Varuṇa' is in *Jagatī*⁴; this has a Pada containing a benediction; verily thus he invokes a benediction for himself and the sacrificer.

iv. 10 (xvii. 4.) They say 'Sūrya should not be passed over in recitation; the Br̥hatī should not be passed over; if he were to pass over Sūrya, he would pass over splendour; if he were to pass over the Br̥hatī, he would pass over the breaths.' 'O Indra bear to us inspiration' he recites as a Pragātha to Indra.¹ 'Guide us, O much invoked, in this way; alive may we attain the light' (he says); the light is yonder (sun); thereby he does not pass over Sūrya. Moreover in that it is a Pragātha in Br̥hatī, thereby he does not pass over the Br̥hatī. In² 'Towards thee, O hero, we utter praise' he recites the basis of the Rathantara (Sāman); they chant to the Rathantara the Sandhi for the Aṇvina; in that he recites the basis of the Rathantara, it is to provide the Rathantara with its basis. 'Lord of this world, beholding the light' (he says); yonder (sun) is he who beholds the light; thereby he does not pass over Sūrya. Moreover, in that it is a Pragātha in Br̥hatī, thereby he does not pass over the Br̥hatī. In³ 'Many, sun-eyed' he recites a Pragātha to Mitra and Varuṇa; Mitra is the day, Varuṇa the night; both day and night does he lay hold on, who undertakes the Atirātra. In that he recites a Pragātha to Mitra and Varuṇa, verily thus he establishes him in day and night. 'Sun-eyed' (he says); thereby he does not pass over Sūrya. Moreover, in that it is a Pragātha in Br̥hatī, thereby he does not pass over the Br̥hatī. In 'May the two great ones, sky and earth, for us' and 'For they, sky and earth, all weal-producing' he recites (two verses⁴) to sky and earth; sky and earth are supports ; this (earth) is a support here, yonder (sun) yonder. In that he recites (two verses) to sky and earth, verily thus he establishes him in sky and earth. 'The god, the goddess, according to the law, Sūrya, the pure' (he says) ; thereby he praises Sūrya. Moreover, in that (the two verses) Gāyatrī and Jagatī make up two Brhatī, thereby he does not pass over the Brhatī. In ' Goddess of all the perishable kind Who shall not be wrath, nor seize (us),' he recites (a verse) of two Padas⁵. The Āṣvina they used to call a litany in which (the funeral) pyre is piled. Nirṛti with her noose used to await (thinking) 'When the Hotṛ concludes, then shall I let loose my nooses against him.' Then indeed Brhaspati saw (this verse) of two Padas. 'Who shall not be wrath, nor seize (us)'; therewith he cast below the nooses of Nirṛti with the nooses; in that the Hotṛ recites (this verse) of two Padas, verily thus he casts below the nooses of Nirṛti with the nooses; verily thus in safety the Hotṛ is released, with full life, for fullness of life; a full life he lives who knows thus. 'Of all the perishable kind' (he says); yonder (sun) causes to perish as it were; thereby he does not pass over Sūrya. Moreover in (the verse) of two Padas is man's metre; it includes all the metres; thereby he does not pass over the Brhatī.

iv. 11 (xvii. 5). He concludes with a verse to Brahmanaspati; Brhaspati is the holy power; verily thus at the end he establishes him in the holy power. With¹ 'To the father, with all the gods, the strong' should he conclude who desires offspring and cattle. 'O Brhaspati, with good offspring, with heroes' (he says); by offspring he has good offspring and heroes. 'Let us be lords of wealth' (he says); he becomes possessed of offspring, of cattle, of wealth, of heroes, when one knowing thus concludes with this (verse). With² 'O Brhaspati, that which may surpass the foe' he should conclude, who desires brilliance and splendour; beyond all others he deserves splendour. 'Brilliant' (he says); 'Brilliantly splendour shines' (they say); splendour shines as it were. 'That shall shine with radiance, O thou born of holy order' (he says); splendour is brilliant. 'Upon us do thou confer varied wealth' (he says); splendour is radiant as it were. Resplendent and glorious becomes he, when one knowing thus concludes with this (verse). Therefore he who knows thus should conclude with this (verse). (It is addressed) to Brahmanaspati; thereby he does not pass over Sūrya. In that he recites thrice (this) Triṣṭubh and it includes all the metres, thereby he does not pass over the Brhatī. With a Gāyatrī and a Triṣṭubh he should say the vaṣaṭ call; the Gāyatrī is the holy power, the Triṣṭubh is strength; verily thus he unites the holy power with strength. Resplendent and glorious and full of strength does he become, when one knowing thus with a Gāyatrī³ and a Triṣṭubh⁴ says the vaṣaṭ call, 'O Aṇvins, skilled ones, with Vāyu' and 'Do ye both drink, O Aṇvins'. With a Gāyatrī and a Virāj he should say the vaṣaṭ call; the Gāyatrī is the holy power; the Virāj is food; verily thus he unites proper food with the holy power. Resplendent and glorious he becomes, he eats food made edible by the holy power, when one knowing thus says the vaṣaṭ call with the Gāyatrī and the Virāj. Therefore he who knows thus should say the vaṣaṭ call with the Gāyatrī and the Virāj,⁵ with these (verses), 'For you the Soma juice is ready to be drunk' and 'Do ye both drink, O Aṇvins'.

The Caturviṅṣa and Mahāvratā Days.

iv. 12 (xvii. 6). Now¹ they proceed to the Caturviṅṣa day as the beginning, by it they grasp the year, by it the Stomas and the metres, by it all the deities. Not grasped in that metre, not grasped that deity, which is not grasped on this day. That is why the Ārambhaṇīya has its name. The Stoma is the Caturviṅṣa; that is why the Caturviṅṣa has its name; the half-months are twenty-four; verily thus by half-months they grasp the year. It is an Ukthya; the Ukthas are cattle; (it serves) for the winning of cattle. It has fifteen Stotras, fifteen Çastras; it is the month; verily thus by months they grasp the year. These are in the three hundred and sixty Stotriya verses; so many are the days of the year; verily thus by days they grasp the year. 'The day should be an Agniṣṭoma,' they say, 'the year is the Agniṣṭoma; no other than an Agniṣṭoma supports the day or discriminates it.' If it is an Agniṣṭoma, the three Pavamānas should be Aṣṭācatvāriṅṣas, the other Stotras Caturviṅṣas. Here also there are three hundred and sixty Stotriya verses; so many are the days of the year; verily thus by days they grasp the year. It should be an Ukthya; the sacrifice is made perfect by the animal (offering), the Sattra is made perfect by the animal (offering); all the Stotras are Caturviṅṣas, for this is openly the Caturviṅṣa day; therefore let it be an Ukthya.

AB. iv. 12-14 and KB. xix deal with the Caturviṅṣa as the opening day of the Gavām Ayana Sattra, corresponding to the Mahāvratā at the end; see AÇS. vii. 1-4; ÇCS. xi. 2 seq.

iv. 13 (xvii. 7). The Sāmāns are the Br̥hat and the Rathantara.¹ These are the two ships which carry across the sacrifice; verily thus by them they cross over the year. The Br̥hat and the Rathantara are the two feet, this day the head; verily thus by the two feet they approach the head which is prosperity. The Br̥hat and Rathantara are the two wings, this day the head; verily thus with the two wings they unite the head, which is prosperity. The two are not both to be laid aside; if they were to lay them both aside, just as a vessel which has parted from its fastening floats moving to either bank, so the performers of Sattras would float, moving to either bank, if they were to lay aside both together. If they were to lay aside the Rathantara, then by the Br̥hat both are not laid aside; if they were to lay aside this Br̥hat, then by the Rathantara both are not laid aside. The Vairūpa is the Rathantara; the Vairāja is the Br̥hat; the Çākvara is the Rathantara; the Raivata is the Br̥hat. So these two become not laid aside both together. Those who knowing thus perform this day (rite), having obtained by the days the year, having obtained it by the half months, having obtained it by the months, having obtained the Stomas and the metres, having obtained all the deities, practising fervour, partaking of the Soma drink, continue pressing (Soma) all the year. Those who straight on² from the day perform the year (rite) they lay upon themselves a heavy burden, the heavy burden crushes them. He, who having obtained it with the rites straight forward approaches it (with the rites) reversed, attains in safety the other side of the year.³

iv. 14 (xvii. 8). The Mahāvṛata is the Caturvīṇṣa; by means of the Br̥haddiva (hymn¹) the Hotṛ pours seed on this day; it on that day with the Mahāvṛata day he propagates; in a year seed poured is born. Therefore the Br̥haddiva is the common Niṣkevalya (Çastra). He having obtained it with the rites straight forward approaches it (with the rites) reversed, who knowing thus approaches this day. In safety he attains the other side of the year who knows thus. He, who knows this side and the other side of the year, in safety attains the other side of the year. The introductory Atirātra is this side, the concluding (Atirātra) is the other side. In safety he attains the other side of the year who knows thus.

¹ This chapter is intended to show that in every case one or other of those Sāmāns is used whether in Abhiplava or Pr̥sthya Ṣaḍahas. The six Sāmāns are based on the following verses: Rathantara, SV. ii. 30, 31; Br̥hat, SV. ii. 159, 160; Vairūpa, ii. 212, 213; Vairāja, ii. 277-279; Çākvara, ii. 1151-3; Raivata, ii. 434-436. Cf. AB. iv. 15, n. 1.

² I. e. without change of order according to Sāyaṇa; Haug treats it as merely meaning 'proceed with', and takes abhi nidadhate as 'lay down'. The point is as in n. 3.

³ The second six months are intended to be a reverse of the first six. For the ship metaphor cf. AB. vi. 6. 6; ÇB. iv. 2. 5. 10; Lévi, La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 88. iv. 14. ¹ RV. x. 120. For the year cf. Keith, JRAS. 1917, p. 137.

He, who knows the descent and ascent² of the year, obtains in safety the other side of the year. The introductory Atirātra is the descent, the concluding (Atirātra) the ascent. In safety he attains the other side of the year who knows thus. He, who knows the expiration and the ending³ breath of the year, attains in safety the other side of the year. The introductory Atirātra is the expiration, the concluding (Atirātra) the ending breath. In safety he reaches the other side of the year, who knows thus.

iv. 15 (xviii. 1). They proceed with the Stomas, Jyotis, Go, and Āyus; the Jyotis is this world, the Go the atmosphere, the Āyus yonder world. There is the same second set of three days; there are three days, Jyotis, Go, and Āyus; there are three, Go, Āyus, and Jyotis. The Jyotis is this world, the Jyotis is yonder world. These two Jyotis (days) look together on both sides; thereby they proceed with this set of six days with a Jyotis on either side. In that they proceed with this set of six days with a Jyotis on either side, verily thus they continue to find support on both sides in these two worlds; in this world and in that world, both. The Abhiplava Śaḍaha is a circling wheel of the gods. The Agniṣṭomas on the two sides of it are the felloes; the four Ukthyas in the middle are the nave. He goes with it turning wherever he desires; thus in safety he attains the other side of the year who knows thus. He, who knows the first set of six days, in safety attains the other side of the year; (so) he who knows the second, he who knows the third, he who knows the fourth, he who knows the fifth.¹

iv. 16 (xviii. 2). They perform the first set of six days,¹ there are six days; the seasons are six; verily thus by the seasons they obtain the year; by the seasons they continue finding support in the year. They perform the second set of six days; these are twelve days; the months are twelve; verily thus by months they obtain the year; by months they continue finding support in the year. They perform the third set of six days; they are eighteen days; these are twofold, one set of nine, one set of nine. There are nine

The udāna here must be the apāna, but used for udāniya as suggested by Sāyana.

¹ The Abhiplava Śaḍaha is dealt with in ĀCS. vii. 5-7 and the Prṣṭhya in vii. 10-12; viii. 1-4; in ÇCS. the order is reversed, viz. xi. 4-9 and x. 1-8. See also BCS. xvi. 4, 5; ĀpCS. xxi. 1-8.

iv. 16. ¹ See ĀCS. xi. 7; ÇCS. xiii. 19.

breaths, nine worlds of heaven; verily thus they obtain the breaths and the worlds of heaven; verily thus they continue finding support in the breaths and the worlds of heaven. They perform the fourth set of six days; these are twenty-four days; the half-months are twenty-four; verily thus by half-months they obtain the year; by half-months they continue finding support in the year. They perform the fifth set of six days; they are thirty days; the Virāj has thirty syllables; proper food is the Virāj; verily thus they continue producing the Virāj month by month. Desiring proper food they performed the sacrificial session.² In that they continue producing the Virāj month by month, verily thus they continue winning proper food month by month, for the world and for that, for both.

iv. 17 (xviii. 3). They proceed with the way of the cows;¹ the Ādityas are the cows; verily thus they proceed with the way of the Ādityas. The cows performed a sacrificial session seeking to win hoofs and horns; in the tenth month their hoofs and horns came into being. They said 'That desire for which we have consecrated ourselves we have obtained; let us cease.' Those that ceased are those possessed of horns. Those who performed, (thinking) 'We will complete the year', they had only mock horns, these are the hornless; but they produced² strength. Therefore they having made up all the seasons, then cease, for they produced strength. Dear to all are cows, beloved by all. Dear to all, beloved by all, does he become who knows thus. The Ādityas and the Aṅgirases contended for the world of heaven,³ 'We will go first, we'; the Ādityas went first to the world of heaven, behind the Aṅgirases by sixty years. The way of the Ādityas is thus,⁴ an introductory Atirātra, the Caturviṅṣa Ukthya, all the Abhiplava Śaḍahas, other Āksyant⁵ days; the way of the Aṅgirases is thus, an asanvan is obvious (as in TS.) but needless as asunvan makes sense.

² Āsate would seem more natural, but the imperfect may convey the view in the minds of those performing the Sattra when they undertook it.

¹ For this see TS. vii. 5. 1. 2; PB. iv. 1. Aufrecht considers that na must be read as apparently by Sāyaṇa; the alternative is to read agraddhayaṁ ṛṇḡāni as one term as suggested by BR. or to take prāvartanta as = 'fell off'. Cf. Keith, Taittirīya Saṁhitā, I. xcvi, xcix. Lévi (La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 111) renders the TS. passage without commenting on the sense.

³ Cf. ÇB. xii. 2. 2. 9.

⁴ yathā vā is odd; vā=vai has just before occurred, but yathā seems needless and in clause 7 is not inserted, but it can easily be taken in its usual sense. Sāyaṇa's attempt to make it allude to the mode of the Gavām Ayana is absurd. The Sattras are quite different in ĀÇS. xii. 1. 1; ÇÇS. xiii. 21, 22.

⁵ This word is doubtful. Aufrecht takes it as 'stättige umwandelbare Tage' (= ākṣiyanti). Sāyaṇa cites Baudhāyana as restricting it to the Abhijit, Viṣuvant, Viṣvajit, the tenth day (of the Dvādaçāha), the Mahāvratā and the concluding Atirātra; Çālika as including in it all save the Śaḍahas, and Aupamanyava as including in it all save the Śaḍahas and the tenth day. introductory Atirātra, the Caturvinṣa Ukthya, all the Prṣṭhya Śadahas, other Āksyant days. The Abhiplava Śadaha is the path that leads straight to the world of heaven; again the Prṣṭhya Śadaha is a great circuitous route to the world of heaven. In that they proceed with both, and going by both he comes to no ill, (it serves) to obtain both desires, that in the Abhiplava Śadaha and that in the Prṣṭhya.⁶

iv. 18 (xviii. 4). They perform the Ekaviṇṣa day, the Viṣuvant,¹ in the middle of the year; by the Ekaviṇṣa the gods raised up the sun to the world of heaven; it is here the Ekaviṇṣa; below this Divākirtya are ten days, ten above; in the middle is the Ekaviṇṣa resting on both sides in the Virāj, for on both sides does he find support in the Virāj. Therefore he going between these worlds does not shake. The gods were afraid of this Āditya falling down from the world of heaven; him with three worlds of heaven from below they propped up; the three worlds of heaven are the Stomas. They were afraid of his falling away up; him with three worlds of heaven from above they propped up; the three worlds of heaven are the Stomas. Thus below there are three Saptadaṣa (Stomas), three above; in the middle is the Ekaviṇṣa on both sides supported by the Svara Sāmāns, for he is supported on both sides by the Svara Sāmāns.² Therefore he going between these worlds does not shake. The gods were afraid of this Āditya falling from the world of heaven;³ him with the highest worlds of heaven they propped up from below; the highest worlds of heaven are the Stomas. They were afraid of his falling away up; him with the highest worlds of heaven they propped up from above; the highest worlds of heaven are the Stomas. Thus there are three Saptadaṣa (Stomas) below, three above. Making them up by twos they are three Catustrinṣas; the Catustrinṣa is the highest of the Stomas. Placed over these it gives heat, for he placed over these gives heat. He is higher than all this that has been and will be; he shines over all this whatever there is here; he is higher; thus he becomes who knows thus higher than he than whom he desires to be higher.

iv. 19 (xviii. 5). They perform the Svara Sāmāns; the Svara Sāmāns are these worlds. They saved these worlds with the Svara Sāmāns; that is why

⁶ The Gavām Ayana has a mixture of four Abhiplavas and a Prṣṭhya in the month; see ĀCS. xi. 7. 1 seq. It is Prāyaṇiya; Caturvinṣa; 5 months of 4 Abhiplavas and 1 Prṣṭhya Śadaha; 3 Abhiplavas, 1 Prṣṭhya, Abhijit, 3 Svara Sāmāns; Viṣuvant; 3 Svara Sāmāns, Viçvajit, 1 Prṣṭhya, 3 Abhiplavas; 4 months of 1 Prṣṭhya and 4 Abhiplavas; 3 Abhiplavas, Go, Ayus, a Daçarātra; the Mahāvraata and Udaya-niya, with variants.

¹ AB. iv. 18-22 and KB. xxv. 1-10 deal with the Viṣuvant and connected rites; see ĀCS. viii. 5-7; ÇÇS. xi. 13.

² For these as Saptadaṣas see TB. i. 2. 2. 1. Cf. ĀCS. viii. 5. 10 seq.; ÇÇS. xi. 11, 12.

the Svāra Sāmāns have their name. In that they perform the Svāra Sāmāns, they give him a share in these worlds. The gods were afraid of th sinking down of these Saptadaṣas, 'The Stomas are alike and unprotected let them not sink down.' They secured them with all the Stomas from below, with all the Prṣṭhas from above; in that the Abhijit with all th Stomas is below, the Viṣvajit with all the Prṣṭhas above, thus they secur the Saptadaṣas on both sides for security and to prevent sinking down. The gods were afraid of this Āditya falling from the world of heaven they fastened him up with five ropes; the Divākirtya (Sāmāns) are th ropes; the Prṣṭha is the Mahā-Divākirtya,² the Sāmān of the Brāhmaṇā cchaṁsin is the Vikarṇa,³ the Agniṣṭoma Sāmān is the Bhāsa,⁴ th Br̥hat and Rathantara are those of the Pavamānas; thus they fasten u Āditya with five ropes, for support, to avoid falling down. When the su has arisen, he should recite the morning litany, for all the day (rite) is to b performed during the day time. They should offer as the victim to Sūry (an animal) without blemish and white, in addition to (the victim) for th pressing, for this day has Sūrya as its deity. He should recite twenty-on kindling verses,⁵ for this day is openly the Ekaviṅṣa. Having recited fifty one or fifty-two⁶ he places a Nivid in the middle; so many after h recites. Man has a hundred (years of) life, a hundred powers, and a hund dred strengths; verily thus he confers upon him life, strength, an power.

iv. 20 (xviii. 6). He mounts the difficult mounting; the difficult mountin is the world of heaven; verily thus he mounts the world of heaven wh knows thus. As to its being the difficult mounting, he that gives hea yonder is hard to mount, and whoever goes there, in that he mounts th difficult mounting, verily thus he mounts him. He mounts (with a verse¹ containing (the word) 'gander', 'The gander seated in purity'; he is th gander seated in purity. 'The Vasu seated in the atmosphere' (he says) he is the Vasu seated in the atmosphere. 'The Hotṛ seated at the altar (he says); he is the Hotṛ seated at the altar. 'The guest seated in th house' (he says); he is the guest seated in the house. 'Seated among men

For th mode of recitation see ĀṢS. viii. 2. 13-15 6. 14, 15; it is first by Pādas, then b half-verses, then by three Pādas, then b the whole verse, and then in descending order. Cf. ṢṢS. xi. 14. 13; xii. 11. 1. The recitation of the Tārṅgya takes plac at the end of the Niṣkevalya.

(he says); he is seated among men. 'Seated in the best (abode)' (he says); he is seated in the best (abode); the best of abodes is that in which seated he gives heat. 'Seated in holy order' (he says); he is seated in truth. 'Seated is the sky' (he says); he is seated in the sky; the sky is that seat in which seated he gives heat. 'Born of the waters' (he says); he is born of the waters; from the waters he rises in the morning, into the waters he enters at evening. 'Born of the cow' (he says); he is born of the cow. 'Born of holy order' (he says); he is born of truth. 'Born of the mountain' (he says); he is born of the mountain. 'Holy order' (he says); he is truth. He is all these things. In the metres this (verse) is most manifestly as it were a symbol of him. Therefore, whenever he performs the difficult mounting, should he mount with (the verse) containing (the word) 'gander'. With the Tārksya² (hymn) should he mount for one desiring the heaven. Tārksya aforetime made the journey when yonder the Gāyatrī in the form of an eagle brought the Soma. Thus, just as one makes one knowing the place a guide on a journey, so is it in that (he mounts) with the Tārksya: he who blows is Tārksya; he is the bearer to the world of heaven. 'This steed, god-strengthened' (he says); he is the steed, god-strengthened. 'Enduring, the bearer of the cars' (he says); he bears across enduring, for he at once crosses these worlds. 'With chariot rim unharmed, the warrior, swift' (he says); he is the one with chariot rim unharmed, the warrior, swift. 'For safety' (he says); he invokes safety. 'Tārksya let us summon hither' (he says); verily thus he summons him. With 'Invoking by sacrifice the favour as of Indra for safety' he invokes safety. 'Like a ship let us mount' (he says); verily thus he mounts it for the attainment, the winning, the arrival at the world of heaven. 'Like the two broad ones, wide, large, deep, may we not be harmed at your going and coming' (he says); verily thus he recites for these two, when going to and returning.³

'He who at once with his glory over the five peoples
Like Surya with his light over the waters extendeth'

(he says); openly he mentions the sun.

'A thousandfold, a hundredfold bestowing, is his onset;
They cannot stay him like a young dart'

³ The root here in megyan explains Dhātupāṭha, xxxiv. 18, m. 1 or 10.

iv. 21 (xviii. 7). Having uttered the call, he mounts the difficult mounting; the difficult mounting is the world of heaven; the call is speech; speech is the holy power; in that he calls, thus with the call as the holy power he mounts the world of heaven. He mounts by Padas first; thus he obtains this world; then by half-verses; thus he obtains the atmosphere; then by three Padas; thus he obtains yonder world; then with the whole (verse); thus he who gives heat here finds support in this (world). By three Padas he descends as one holding a branch;¹ thus he finds support in yonder world; by half-verses (he descends; thus he finds support) in the atmosphere; by Padas (he descends; thus he finds support) in this world. Thus, having obtained the world of heaven, the sacrificers find support in this world. For those who desire one only, (the world of) heaven, he should mount in the forward direction only; they will conquer the world of heaven, but they will not have long to live in the world. Pairing hymns are recited, Triṣṭubh and Jagatī; cattle are pairing; the metres are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle.

iv. 22 (xviii. 8). The Viṣuvant is like a man; the first half of the Viṣuvant is like the right half of a man; the second half of the Viṣuvant is like¹ the left half; therefore they call it the latter. The Viṣuvant is the head of a man standing on the level; man is composed of (two) sections; thus there is seen in the middle of his head a suture as it were. They say 'On the Viṣuvant alone should he perform (the recitations of) the day; the Viṣuvant is the Uktha of Ukthas; (holding that) "The Viṣuvant is that which has the Viṣuvant (Çastra)" they become the head, they attain pre-eminence.' That is not to be regarded. He should recite it only in the year; verily thus they keep holding the seed for a year. Whatever seeds are born before the year, of five months or six months, these wither; they do not profit by them; those that are born in ten months or a year, by these they profit. Therefore should he recite it in the year, for the year contains this day; as the year they obtain this day. He smites away evil by the year, by the Viṣuvant; from the limbs he drives away evil by the months, from the head by the Viṣuvant. He smites away evil by the year, by the Viṣuvant, who knows thus. As additional to (the victim)² for the pressing, they should offer to Viçvakarman a bull of two colours, variegated on both

iv. 22. ¹ The first view, here rejected, must have held that the Viṣuvant rite might be performed always as a special rite on that day and not merely as part of a Sattra. The second view of the text appears to allow its use at a Sattra only (eva), the Viṣuvant having its full meaning only as the middle day of such a rite. So Sāyaṇa who, however, takes viṣuvān viṣuvān iti merely as saying that the tulāmeṣasamkrānti is thus called.

² Nārāyaṇa on ĀCS. viii. 6. 4 makes this an additional, Sāyaṇa has a substituted victim.

(he says); he is seated among men. 'Seated in the best (abode)' (he says); he is seated in the best (abode); the best of abodes is that in which seated he gives heat. 'Seated in holy order' (he says); he is seated in truth. 'Seated is the sky' (he says); he is seated in the sky; the sky is that seat in which seated he gives heat. 'Born of the waters' (he says); he is born of the waters; from the waters he rises in the morning, into the waters he enters at evening. 'Born of the cow' (he says); he is born of the cow. 'Born of holy order' (he says); he is born of truth. 'Born of the mountain' (he says); he is born of the mountain. 'Holy order' (he says); he is truth. He is all these things. In the metres this (verse) is most manifestly as it were a symbol of him. Therefore, whenever he performs the difficult mounting, should he mount with (the verse) containing (the word) 'gander'. With the Tārksya² (hymn) should he mount for one desiring the heaven. Tārksya aforetime made the journey when yonder the Gāyatrī in the form of an eagle brought the Soma. Thus, just as one makes one knowing the place a guide on a journey, so is it in that (he mounts) with the Tārksya: he who blows is Tārksya; he is the bearer to the world of heaven. 'This steed, god-strengthened' (he says); he is the steed, god-strengthened. 'Enduring, the bearer of the cars' (he says); he bears across enduring, for he at once crosses these worlds. 'With chariot im unharmed, the warrior, swift' (he says); he is the one with chariot im unharmed, the warrior, swift. 'For safety' (he says); he invokes safety. 'Tārksya let us summon hither' (he says); verily thus he summons him. With 'Invoking by sacrifice the favour as of Indra for safety' he invokes safety. 'Like a ship let us mount' (he says); verily thus he mounts it for the attainment, the winning, the arrival at the world of heaven. 'Like the two broad ones, wide, large, deep, may we not be harmed at your going and coming' (he says); verily thus he recites for these two, when going to and returning.³

'He who at once with his glory over the five peoples
Like Sūrya with his light over the waters extendeth'

he says); openly he mentions the sun.

'A thousandfold, a hundredfold bestowing, is his onset;
They cannot stay him like a young dart'

he says); verily thus he invokes a benediction for himself and the sacrificers.

RV. x. 178: it has 3 verses; here cited in full. ³ The root here in meṣyan explains Dhātupāṭha, xxxiv. 18, mī 1 or 10.

iv. 21 (xviii. 7). Having uttered the call, he mounts the difficult mounting; the difficult mounting is the world of heaven; the call is speech; speech is the holy power; in that he calls, thus with the call as the holy power he mounts the world of heaven. He mounts by Padas first; thus he obtains this world; then by half-verses; thus he obtains the atmosphere; then by three Padas; thus he obtains yonder world; then with the whole (verse); thus he who gives heat here finds support in this (world). By three Padas he descends as one holding a branch;¹ thus he finds support in yonder world; by half-verses (he descends; thus he finds support) in the atmosphere; by Padas (he descends; thus he finds support) in this world. Thus, having obtained the world of heaven, the sacrificers find support in this world. For those who desire one only, (the world of) heaven, he should mount in the forward direction only; they will conquer the world of heaven, but they will not have long to live in the world. Pairing hymns are recited, Triṣṭubh and Jagatī; cattle are pairing; the metres are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle.

iv. 22 (xviii. 8). The Viṣuvant is like a man; the first half of the Viṣuvant is like the right half of a man; the second half of the Viṣuvant is like¹ the left half; therefore they call it the latter. The Viṣuvant is the head of a man standing on the level; man is composed of (two) sections; thus there is seen in the middle of his head a suture as it were. They say 'On the Viṣuvant alone should he perform (the recitations of) the day; the Viṣuvant is the Uktha of Ukthas; (holding that) "The Viṣuvant is that which has the Viṣuvant (Çastra)" they become the head, they attain pre-eminence.' That is not to be regarded. He should recite it only in the year; verily thus they keep holding the seed for a year. Whatever seeds are born before the year, of five months or six months, these wither; they do not profit by them; those that are born in ten months or a year, by these they profit. Therefore should he recite it in the year, for the year contains this day; as the year they obtain this day. He smites away evil by the year, by the Viṣuvant; from the limbs he drives away evil by the months, from the head by the Viṣuvant. He smites away evil by the year, by the Viṣuvant, who knows thus. As additional to (the victim)² for the pressing, they should offer to Viṣvakarman a bull of two colours, variegated on both

iv. 22. ¹ The first view, here rejected, must have held that the Viṣuvant rite might be performed always as a special rite on that day and not merely as part of a Sattra. The second view of the text appears to allow ides, on the Mahāvrata day. Indra having slain Vṛtra became Viṣvakarman; Prajāpati having created offspring became Viṣvakarman; Viṣvakarman is the year; verily thus Indra whose self it is, Prajāpati, the year, Viṣvakarman, they obtain; verily thus in Indra whose self it is, Prajāpati, the year, Viṣvakarman, they find support at the end. He finds support who knows thus.

ADHYĀYA IV

iv. 23 (xix. 1). Prajāpati felt desire 'May I be propagated, may I become reater.' He practised fervour; he, having practised fervour, saw the twelve-day (rite) in the limbs and the breaths of his self; he meted it out from the limbs and the breaths of his self twelvefold; he grasped it, and sacrificed with it. Then indeed he prospered himself, he was propagated with offspring and cattle. He prospers himself, he is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. He felt desire, 'How can I now, having encircled the twelve-day (rite) with the Gāyatrī on all sides, prosper with all prosperity?' It he encircled in front with brilliance, in the middle with the metres, at the last with the syllables; having encircled the twelve-day (rite) with the Gāyatrī on all sides he prospers with all prosperity. With all prosperity he prospers, who knows thus. He who knows the Gāyatrī as possessed of wings, of eyes, of light, and¹ of brilliance, goes to the world of heaven with the Gāyatrī as possessed of wings, of eyes, of light, and of brilliance; the twelve-day (rite) is the Gāyatrī as possessed of wings, of eyes, of light, and of brilliance. The two Atirātras on either side are the wings;² the two Agniṣṭomas within are the two eyes; the eight Ukthyas in the middle are the body. With the Gāyatrī as possessed of wings, of eyes, of light, and of brilliance, he goes to the world of heaven, who knows thus.

iv. 24 (xix. 2). The twelve-day (rite) consists of three sets of three days, the tenth day and two Atirātras.¹ For twelve days is he consecrated;² verily through them he becomes fit for sacrifice. He performs [pasads for twelve nights; verily with them he shakes clear his body. Having pressed for twelve days continuously, having become born anew, having shaken clear his body, pure and purified, he goes to the gods who

The oldest and the best should sacrifice; here there becomes son. No evil man should be sacrificed for with the twelve- (thinking) 'Let not this one find support in me.' The gods admit the seniority and superiority of Indra; he said to Br̥haspati 'I sacrifice for me with the twelve-day (rite).' For him he made men indeed did the gods admit his seniority and superiority. His seniority they admit, and his pre-eminence his own (people) knows thus. The first set of three days is in ascending order, transverse, the last in descending order.¹ In that the first set is in ascending order, therefore Agni here is kindled upwards, the first is upwards; in that the middle is transverse, therefore the waters flow transversely, the waters flow transversely, for his quarter is transverse; in that the last is in descending order, therefore yonder heat downward, it rains downward, and the constellations downward, for his region is downward. These worlds are in unison; the three days are in unison; in unison for him these worlds shine in unison, who knows thus.

ix. 4). Consecration departed from the gods; it they sought to obtain the two months of spring; it they could not obtain with the two months of spring. It they sought to grasp with the two months of the rainy season, of autumn, of winter; it they could not obtain the months of winter. It they sought to grasp with the two months of the cool season; it they obtained with the two months of the cool season.

He obtains whom he seeks to obtain, his enemy obtains him thus. Therefore he to whom the consecration for the cool season may condescend¹ should consecrate himself when these months of the cool season have arrived. Obviously thus does he consecrate himself, when consecration has arrived; manifestly he encircles himself. Therefore in these months of the cool season the cattle of the domestic and of the wild become thin and shaggy; verily thus they are the form of consecration. Before the consecration he offers a sacrifice to Prajāpati; first he should recite seventeen kindling verses; seventeenfold; (they serve) to obtain Prajāpati. The Āprīs are by Jamadagni.² They say 'Seeing that in the case of sacrifices the Āprīs are according to the (ancestral) seer, then why for the three pressings vary Gayatri, Trīṣṭubh, and Jagatī to Gayatri, and Trīṣṭubh and (3) Jagatī, and Gayatri.

iv. 26. ¹ The Dvādaśāha is here treated as a Sattrā.

² RV. x. 110. Cf. Max Müller, Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 466; Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 88 seq.; ĀCS. vii. 2. 6-8; ÇÇS. v. 16. 5, 6.

in this case are the verses by Jamadagni used by all?' The verses Jamadagni are of all forms, all perfect; the victim is of all form perfect; in that they are verses by Jamadagni (they serve) to secure possession of all forms, all perfections. The cake offering for the victim is for Vāyu. They say 'Seeing that the victim is for other deities then why is the cake offering for the victim performed for Vāyu.' The sacrifice is Prajāpati, to prevent the exhaustion of the sacrifice' he says in reply. In that it is for Vāyu, thereby he does not depart from Prajāpati for Prajāpati is Vāyu. It is declared by the seer³ 'Prajāpati blowing.' If it is a sacrificial session, they should offer after depositing the fires together, all should be consecrated, all should press. Spring he ends; spring is strength; verily thus he ends with sap strength.

iv. 27 (xix. 5). The metres desired one another's abode; the Gāyatrī desired the abode of the Trīṣṭubh and the Jagatī, the Trīṣṭubh desired the Gāyatrī and the Jagatī, and the Jagatī that of the Gāyatrī and the Trīṣṭubh. Then indeed did Prajāpati see this twelve-day (rite) the metres transposed; he grasped it and sacrificed with it. Thus he made the metres attain all their desires. He attains all desires knows thus. He transposes the metres to avoid exhaustion. Verily he transposes the metres. Just as in the world men go with relays of horses or oxen, so with relays of fresh metres they go to the world above, in that he transposes the metres. These two worlds were together they went apart; no rain fell, there was no heat; the five folk were in harmony.¹ The gods brought them together; they uniting performed the divine marriage. By means of the Rathantara this (earth) quickens yonder (sky); by the Bṛhatī yonder (sky) this (earth); by the Naudī this quickens that; by the Āyāta that this. With smoke this quickens that; with rain that this. This placed in that the place of sacrifice to gods; cattle that in this. In that this placed the place of sacrifice to gods, in that there is dark as it were in the moon. Therefore on waxing fortnights they sacrifice as they desire to win that.³ Yonder placed salt in the (earth); as to this Tura Kāvaṣeya said 'Salt is nutriment O my dear Janamejaya.'⁴ Therefore here also men considering a sacrifice for cattle ask 'Are there salts there?' for salt is nutriment. Yet world turned to this world; then were sky and earth born; neither from the atmosphere (comes) the sky,⁵ nor from the atmosphere earth.

iv. 28 (xix. 6). In the beginning there were here the Bṛhat and the Rathantara; they were speech and mind; the Rathantara speech, the Bṛhat mind; the Bṛhat as first born despised the Rathantara; the Rathantara conceived and produced the Vairūpa; having become two, the Rathantara and the Vairūpa, they despised the Bṛhat. Then the Bṛhat conceived and produced the Vairāja; having become two, the Bṛhat and the Vairāja, they despised the Rathantara and the Vairūpa. Then the Rathantara conceived and produced the Çākvara; these having become three, the Rathantara and the Vairūpa and the Çākvara, despised the Bṛhat and the Vairāja. The Bṛhat conceived and produced the Raivata. These three and those three were the Prṣṭhas. The three metres were not enough for the Prṣṭhas. The Gāyatrī conceived and produced the Anuṣṭubh; the Anuṣṭubh conceived and produced the Pañkti; the Jagatī conceived and produced the Atichandas. These three and those three others were the metres; the Prṣṭhas were six; thus they came into order. The sacrifice in order; (all) is in order for that folk where one knowing thus this ordering of the metres and the Prṣṭhas consecrates himself.

iv. 29 (xx. 1). Agni¹ as deity bears the first day, the Trivṛt Stoma, the Rathantara Sāman, the Gāyatrī metre. With it according to the deity, the Stoma, the Sāman, the metre, he prospers who knows thus. That which is (the words) 'hither' and 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. That which contains (the word) 'yoke', (the word) 'car', (the word) 'swift', (the word) 'drink', (the fact) that the deity is mentioned in the first Pada, that this world is referred to, that which is connected with the Rathantara, which is connected with the Gāyatrī, the future tense, these are the symbols of the first day. 'Advancing forward up to the sacrifice' is the Ājya² of the first day; (the word) 'forward' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Vāyu, come hither, O lovely one' is the Praūga³; (the word) 'hither' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Thee like a car forward' and 'This Soma juice, O bright one, hath been pressed' are the strophe and antistrophe⁴ of the Marutvatīya; that which contains (the words) 'car' and 'drink' on the first day is the symbol of the first day. 'O Indra come nearer' is the Pragātha⁵ invoking Indra; in the first Pada the god is mentioned, on the first day it is a symbol of the first day. 'Let Brahmanaspati move forward' is (the Pragātha) to Brahmanaspati⁶; (the word) 'forward' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Agni the leader', 'Thou, O Soma, with inspiration' and 'They swell the waters' are the inserted verses⁷; in the first Padas the deities are mentioned; on the first day it is a symbol of the first day. 'Forward to Indra, the great' is the Marutvatīya Pragātha⁸; (the word) 'forward' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Let Indra come hither for help to us' is the hymn⁹; (the word) 'hither' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Towards thee, O hero, we utter praise' and 'Towards thee for the first drink' are the Rathantara as Prṣṭha¹⁰, on the Rathantara day, the first day, it is a symbol of the first day. 'Since many a time he hath conquered, enduring' is the inserted verse;¹¹ in 'Indra hath made good (ā... aprāh) his names as slayer of Vṛtra', (the word) 'hither (ā)' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Drink of the pressed juice full of sap' is the Pragātha¹² of the Sāman; containing (the word) 'drink' on the first day it is a symbol of the first day. In 'This steed, god-strengthened' he recites the Tārksya¹³ (hymn) before the hymn; Tārksya is safe passage; (verily it serves) to secure safety. Verily he secures a safe journey, he attains the other side of the year who knows thus.

iv. 30 (xx. 2). 'Hither to us, O Indra, hither to us, from afar, from near' is the hymn.¹ (The word) 'hither' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. In the Nisikevalya and Marutvatīya (Çastras) (the hymns) in which Nivids are inserted are contiguous. Vāmadeva saw those worlds; to them he flew up with the Sampātas; because he flew up with the Sampātas, that is why Sampātas have their name. In that he repeats the two Sampātas on the first day, (it is) for the attaining, the securing, the union with, the world of heaven.

'That of Savitr we choose' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitr' are the strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiṣvadeva²; on the Rathantara day, on the first day, (it is) a symbol of the first day. 'They yoke their mind, they also yoke their thoughts' is (the hymn) to Savitr³; containing (the word) 'yoke' (it is) on the first day a symbol of the first day. 'Forward sky and earth, increasing holy order, with the sacrifices' is (the hymn) to sky and earth⁴; "forward" on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'Here, here, in mind is your relationship, O heroes' is (the hymn) to the Ṛbhus⁵; (the words) 'hither' and 'forward' are symbols of the first day; 'if (the word) "forward" had been used throughout, the sacrificers would have gone out forward from this world' (they say). In that on the first day he recites as (hymn) to the Ṛbhus, 'Here, here, in mind is your relationship, O heroes', and 'here, here' is this world, verily thus he makes them remain in this world. 'The gods I invoke of great fame for safety' is (the hymn) to the All-gods⁶; in the first Pada the gods are mentioned; on the first day (this is) a symbol of the first day. A long journey are they about to go who perform the year (session) or the twelve-day (rite). In that he recites as (the hymn) to the All-gods on the first day 'The gods I invoke of great fame for safety', (it serves) to secure safety. Verily thus he secures a safe passage; in safety he attains the other side of the year who knows thus and those for whom one as Hotṛ knowing thus recites on the first day as (the hymn) to the All-gods 'The gods I invoke of great fame for safety'. 'To Vaiṣvānara, with broad radiance, bard' is the beginning of the Āgnimāruta;⁷ in the first Pada the deity is mentioned; on the first day (this is) a symbol of the first day. 'Forward pressing, mighty, and resounding' is (the hymn) to the Maruts⁸; (the word) 'forward' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma', (this verse) to Jātavedas⁹ he recites before the hymn. The verses to Jātavedas are a benediction; (verily it serves) to secure safety. Verily thus he secures a safe passage; in safety he attains the other side of the year who knows thus. 'Forward the strong, new, hymn to Agni' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas¹⁰; (the word) 'forward' on the first day is a symbol of the first day. The Āgnimāruta is the same as in the Agniṣṭoma; through that which is performed the same in the sacrifice, offspring breathe together. Therefore the Āgnimāruta is the same.

a symbol of the second day. 'This steed, god-strengthened' is the normal Tārksya¹⁴ (hymn).

iv. 32 (xx. 4). 'Thy nearest, furthest help' is the hymn;¹ as containing (the word) 'strong' on the second day in 'Slay the strong ones, make them depart', it is a symbol of the second day. 'Let every man of the god that leadeth', 'That desirable of Savitr' and 'Lord of all, lord of the good' are the strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiṣvadeva²; on the Br̥hat day, the second day, they are a symbol of the second day. 'Up the god Savitr with the golden' is (the hymn) to Savitr³; as containing (the word) 'upright' on the second day it is a symbol of the second day. 'They, sky and earth, all weal producing' is (the hymn) to sky and earth⁴; as containing (the word) 'between' on the second day in 'Between the two bowls of high birth he moveth', it is a symbol of the second day. 'They have wrought the car, well rounded, whose skill is known' is (the hymn) to the R̥bhus⁵; as containing (the word) 'strong' on the second day in 'They have wrought the two bay steeds that draw Indra, with strong wealth', it is a symbol of the second day. 'The charioteer of the sacrifice, the lord of the folk' is (the hymn) to the All-gods;⁶ as containing (the word) 'strong' on the second day in 'The strong beacon, the holy one, hath attained the sky' it is a symbol of the second day. This hymn is by Çāryāta. The Āṅgīrasas were performing a sacrificial session for the world of heaven; whenever they came to the second day they used to go wrong. Them Çāryāta Mānava made to recite this hymn on the second day; then indeed did they discern the sacrifice, the world of heaven. In that he recites the hymn on the second day, (it serves) to discern the sacrifice, to reveal the world of heaven. 'The might of the swift, strong, ruddy one' is the beginning of the Āgnimāruta⁷; that which contains (the word) 'strong' on the second day is a symbol of the second day. 'To the strong host, the majestic, the wise' is (the hymn) to the Maruts⁸; that which contains (the word) 'strong' on the second day is a symbol of the second day. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' is the normal verse to Jātavedas.⁹ 'With the sacrifice make Jātavedas to grow' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas;¹⁰ that which contains (the word) 'grow' on the second day is a symbol of the second day.

The Third and Fourth Days.

v. 1 (xxi. 1). The All-gods as deities support the third day, the Saptadaça Stoma, the Vairūpa Sāman, the Jagatī metre. With it according to the deity, the Stoma, the Sāman, the metre, he prospers who knows thus. That which has the same endings is a symbol of the third day; that which contains (the word) 'horse', (the word) 'end', that which is repeated, that which is alliterated; that which contains (the word) 'stay', the word 'surpass', (the word) 'three', that which is a symbol of the end, (the fact) that the deity is mentioned in the last Pada, that yonder world is referred to, that which is connected with the Virūpa, that which is connected with the Jagatī, the past tense, these are the symbols of the third day, 'Yoke thou those best fitted to invoke the gods, thy steeds, O Agni, like a charioteer' is the Ājya¹ of the third day. By the third day the gods went to the world of heaven; the Asuras and the Rakṣases sought to hinder them. They kept prospering (saying) 'Become misshapen, become misshapen'; in that they kept prospering (saying) 'Become misshapen, become misshapen,' the Vairūpa Sāman came into existence; that is why the Vairūpa has its name (misshapen). They followed after them; they were united with them; them, having become horses, they smote away with their hoofs. In that, having become horses, they smote them away with their hoofs, that is why horses have their name. He attains whatever he desires who knows thus. Therefore a horse is the swiftest of animals; therefore a horse strikes backwards with his foot. He smites away evil who knows thus. Therefore this Ājya contains (the word) 'horse'; on the third day it is a symbol of the third day. 'O Vāyu, come for enjoyment', 'O Vāyu, come from the sky, auspicious', 'With Indra Vāyu, of these pressed draughts', 'Indra and ¹ RV. viii. 75. Cf. KB. xxii. 3-5 for the third day. See ĀṢ. vii. 10. 4; ÇṢ. x. 4. 2. The derivation of the Vairūpa is remarkable, but no other version is really possible.

Varuṇa we', 'O Aṇvins come hither', 'Come to that pressed with the stones', 'In unison with the All-gods', 'Dear for us among the dear' is the Praūga² in Uṣṇih verses; that which has similar endings on the third day is a symbol of the third day. 'It for great gain' and 'Three Soma draughts for Indra' are the strophe and antistrophe of the Marutvatīya³; that which has alliteration and contains (the word) 'three' on the third day is a symbol of the third day. 'O Indra come hither' is the normal Pragātha⁴. 'Forward now Brahmanaspati' is (the Pragātha) to Brahmanaspati⁵; as containing an alliteration on the third day it is a symbol of the third day. 'Agni, the leader', 'Thou, O Soma, with inspiration', 'They swell the waters' are the normal inserted verses.⁶ 'No one hath surpassed the chariot of Sudās, nor caused it to pause' is the Marutvatīya Pragātha⁷; as containing (the word) 'surpass' at the third pressing, it is a symbol of the third pressing. 'Three friendships hath man's worship' is the hymn⁸: that which contains (the word) 'three' on the third day is a symbol of the third day. 'If a hundred skies, O Indra, were thine' and 'If, O Indra, as many as thou' are the Vairūpa as Pṛṣṭha⁹; on the Rathantara day, the third day, this is a symbol of the third day. 'Since he hath conquered' is the normal inserted verse.¹⁰ In 'Towards thee, O hero, we utter praise' he brings back the basis of the Rathantara,¹¹ for this day is connected with the Rathantara in its place. 'O Indra, threefold protection' is the Pragātha of the Sāman¹²; as containing (the word) 'three' on the third day it is a symbol of the third day. 'This steed, god-strengthened' is the normal Tārksya¹³ (hymn).

v. 2 (xxi. 2). 'Who is born first the thinker' is the hymn¹; that which has the same endings on the third day is a symbol of the third day. It has (the words) 'He, O men'; (the hymn) with (the words) 'He, O men' is the power of Indra; on it being recited power enters Indra. As to this the Sāman singers say 'On the third day those of many verses recite the power of Indra'. It is by Gṛtsamada. By it Gṛtsamada went to the dear abode of Indra; he conquered the highest world; he goes to the dear abode of Indra, he conquers the highest world who knows thus. 'That of Savitr we chose' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitr' are the strophe and anti-strophe of the Vaiṣvadeva²; on the Rathantara day, on the third day, it is a symbol of the third day. 'That desirable greatness of Savitr the god' is (the hymn) to Savitr³; greatness is the end; the third day is the end; on the third day it is a symbol of the third day. 'With ghee sky and earth enveloped' is (the hymn) to sky and earth⁴; in 'Mixed with ghee, dropping ghee, ghee anointed' there is repetition and alliteration; on the third day this is a symbol of the third day. 'Born without steed, without reins, worthy of praise' is (the hymn) to the Rbhus⁵; as containing (the word) 'three' on the third day in 'The chariot of three wheels', it is a symbol of the third day. 'Those who from afar would assume kinship' is (the hymn) to the All-gods⁶; from afar is the end; the third day is the end; on the third day it is a symbol of the end. That is by Gaya; by it Gaya Plāta went to the dear abode of the All-gods; he conquered the highest world; he goes to the dear abode of the All-gods; he conquers the highest world who knows thus. 'To Vaiṣvānara, the praise, increasing holy order' is the beginning of the Āgnimāruta⁷; the praise is the end; the third day is the end; on the third day it is a symbol of the end. 'Pouring showers, the Maruts, of daring might' is (the hymn) to the Maruts⁸ with much to be recited; what is much is the end; the third day is the end; on the third day it is a symbol of the third day. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' is the normal (verse) to Jātavedas.⁹ 'Thou, O Agni, the first Aṅgiras, the R̥ṣi' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas¹⁰; that with the same beginning on the third day is a symbol of the third day. In 'Thou' and 'Thou' he refers to the several sets of three days, for continuity. With sets of three days, uninterrupted and continuous, they proceed who proceed knowing this.¹¹

v. 3 (xxi. 3). The Stomas are fully obtained, the metres obtained on the third day; verily this only is leftover, namely speech alone.¹ This one element is three syllables; speech is one element, element is three syllables; this is the third set of three days, speech one, Go one, Dyo one. Therefore indeed speech supports the fourth day. In that on the fourth day they utter the sound *o*², they extend this syllable, they make it to grow, they magnify³ it, to support the fourth day. The sound o is food; when the farmers run about shouting, thus does food come into existence; in that on the fourth day they say the sound o, verily thus they produce food; (it serves) for the production of food. Therefore the four days contain (the word) 'born'. 'With the first four syllables should he say o' they say; cattle are four-footed; (verily it serves) to win cattle. 'With three syllables should he say o' they say; there are three threefold worlds; (verily it serves) to conquer these worlds. 'With one syllable should he say o' used Lāṅgalāyana Brahman Maudgalya to say; 'Speech has one syllable; he says o in truth now who says o with one syllable'. With two syllables should he say o, for a support; man has two supports, cattle four feet; verily thus he makes the sacrificer with two supports to find support in fourfooted cattle. Therefore should he say o with two syllables. At the beginning in the morning litany he says o; by the mouth offspring eat food; at the beginning of proper food he places the sacrificer. In the middle in the Ājya Çastra he says o; in the middle food quickens offspring; verily thus in the middle of proper food he places the sacrificer. At the beginning⁴ in the midday he says o; by the mouth offspring eat food; verily thus at the beginning of proper food he places the sacrificer. Thus on both sides he grasps the saying of o with the pressings, to grasp proper food.

v. 4 (xxi. 4). Speech as deity supports the fourth day, the Ekaviṅṣa Stoma, the Vairāja Sāman, the Anuṣṭubh metre. With it according to the deity, the Stoma, the Sāman, the metre he prospers who knows thus. That which has 'hither' and 'forward' is a symbol of the fourth day, for the fourth day is the first day over again. That which contains (the word) 'yoke', (the word) 'chariot', (the word) 'swift', (the word) 'drink', (the fact) that the deity is mentioned in the first Pada, that this world is referred to, that which contains (the word) 'born', (the word) 'call', (the word) 'bright', that which is the symbol of speech, that which is by Vimada, that which is sounded, that which has various metres, that which is deficient, redundant, that which is connected with the Vairāja, that which is connected with the

² The Nyūṅkha is dealt with at length in ĀÇS. vii. 11. It is in the morning litany to take place at the second syllable of each halfverse and consists in altering the vowel of that syllable to o 3 00000 03 00000 03 000, with accents on the three protracted o sounds. In the Ājya it is used in the third Padas, save in the last verse, ĀÇS. vii. 11. 8.

⁴ See ĀÇS. vii. 11. 28. The Nyūṅkha is appropriate to the fourth day. Cf. KB. xxii. 7.

Anuṣṭubh, the future, that which is a symbol of the first day; these are the symbols of the fourth day. 'With offerings for ourselves Agni'¹ is the Ājya of the fourth day; it is by Vimada and is sounded²; being of the seer who is sounded, on the fourth day it is a symbol of the fourth day. It is of eight verses in Pañkti; the sacrifice is fivefold, cattle are fivefold; (verily it serves) to win cattle. These are ten Jagatī verses; this set of three days has the Jagatī at the morning pressing; thereby is there a symbol of the fourth day. They are fifteen Anuṣṭubhs, for the day is connected with the Anuṣṭubh; thereby is there a symbol of the fourth day. They are twenty Gāyatrī verses, for this day is a repeated introduction; thereby is there a symbol of the fourth day. This hymn, unsung, unrecited, unexhausted, is the sacrifice made manifest. In that this is the Ājya of the fourth day, verily thus from the sacrifice they extend the sacrifice; verily thus they revert again to speech for continuity. With sets of three days, uninterrupted and continuous, they proceed who proceed knowing thus, 'O Vāyu, for thee the pure hath been prepared', 'Enjoy the fresh offerings', 'O Vāyu, a hundred bay steeds', 'With Indra, O Vāyu, of these pressed draughts', 'O wise one, those of good insight', 'Hither to us with all aids'. 'This for you I have sent forth', 'Away the wicked foe', and 'O best of mothers, O chief of streams', are the Praūga³ in Anuṣṭubhs; (the words) 'hither', 'forward', and 'pure' on the fourth day are symbols of the fourth day. 'Thee with the sacrifices we invoke' is the beginning⁴ of the Marutvatiya; as regards 'we invoke', this day is to be secured as it were; thereby is there a symbol of the fourth day. 'This Soma juice hath been pressed, O bright one', 'O Indra, come nearer', 'Let Brahmanaspati move forward' 'Agni the leader' 'Thou, O Soma, with inspiration' 'They swell the waters', 'Forward to Indra, the great' are the continuation⁵ (of the Marutvatiya) being the same as that of the first day; on the fourth day this is a symbol of the fourth day. 'Hear our call, O Indra, harm us not' is the hymn⁶; as containing (the word) 'call' on the fourth day, it is a symbol of the fourth day. 'Indra with the Maruts, the bull, for joy' is the paring viribh̥ita in comm. on Pāṇ. vii. 2. 18. Haug's view is 'contained in an alliteration in it (vi vo made)'.

hymn⁷; as containing (the word) 'call' in⁸ 'Dread, giver of strength, let us call him' on the fourth day, it is a symbol of the fourth day. This is in Trīṣṭubh. With this (hymn), with its feet supported, he maintains the pressing; verily thereby it leaves not its place. 'Him the cunning I call' is the conclusion⁹; as containing (the word) call on the fourth day it is a symbol of the fourth day. These are Gāyatrī verses; the Gāyatrī support the midday (pressing) of this set of three days; that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore in the Gāyatrī verses he inserts a Nivid, 'Drink the Soma, O Indra, let it gladden thee' and 'Hear the call of the much drinking stone' are the Vairāja as *Prṣṭha*¹⁰; on the Br̥hat day, the fourth day, it is a symbol of the fourth day. 'What he hath conquered' is the normal inserted verse¹¹. In 'Thee we invoke' he makes to follow the basis¹² of the Br̥hat, for the day is connected with the Br̥hat in place. 'Thou, O Indra, in the conflicts' is the Pragātha of the *Sāman*¹³; as containing (the word) 'born' in 'slaying imprecation, cause of birth' on the fourth day, it is a symbol of the fourth day. 'This steed, god-strengthened' is the normal *Tārksya*¹⁴ (hymn).

v. 5 (xxi. 5). 'Where is Indra famed, in what to-day?' is the hymn¹ by Vimada, which is sounded; being of the seer who is sounded, on the fourth day it is a symbol of the fourth day. 'Of thee the roarer, the bull self-ruling' is the hymn²; as containing (the word) 'born' on the fourth day in 'Dread, deep, by birth, to the dread' it is a symbol of the fourth day. It is a Trīṣṭubh; with it with its feet supported he maintains the pressing;³ thereby it leaves not its place. 'Him of you ever enduring' is the conclusion. 'Secured in all speech' (he says); this day is to be secured as it were; thereby is there a symbol of the fourth day. They are Gāyatrī verses; the Gāyatrī verses support the midday (pressing) of this set of three days: that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore in the Gāyatrī verses, he inserts a Nivid. 'Let each man of the god that leadeth'; 'That desirable of Savitr̥', and 'God of all, lord of the good' are the strophe and antistrophe of the *Vaiçvadeva*⁴; on the Br̥hat day, the fourth day, it is a symbol of the fourth day. 'Let the god, Savitr̥, with fair jewels come hither' is (the hymn) to *Savitr̥*⁵; (the word) 'hither' on the fourth day is a symbol of the fourth day. 'Forward the sky and earth

'Forward to the Ṛbhus like a messenger shall I speed my speech' is (the hymn) to the Ṛbhus⁷; (the words) 'forward' and 'Shall I speed my speech' are symbols of the fourth day. These are in different metres; there are Virāj verses, there are Triṣṭubh verses; thereby is there a symbol of the fourth day.

‘udder’, (the word) ‘cow’, (the word) ‘dappled’, (the word) ‘be drunk’, that which is a symbol of cattle, that which has an addition,—for cattle are as it were of varied size—that which is connected with the Jagatī—for cattle are connected with the Jagatī—, that which is connected with the Bṛhat—for cattle are connected with the Bṛhat—, that which is connected with the Pañkti—for cattle are connected with the number five—, that which is desirable—for cattle are desirable, that which contains (the word) ‘oblation’—for cattle are the oblation—, that which contains (the word) ‘form’—for cattle are form—, that which is connected with the Çākvara, that which is connected with the Pañkti, the present tense, that which is a symbol of the second day; these are symbols of the fifth day. ‘This guest of yours waking at dawn’ is the Ājya¹ of the fifth day; it is in Jagatī, contains an addition, is a symbol of cattle and so on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. ‘Hither to us the sacrifice, touching the sky’, ‘Hither to us, O Vāyu, to the great rite’, ‘With the chariot of broad radiance’, ‘The many, sun-eyed’, ‘These morning offerings you’, ‘Drink the pressed draught, rich in sap’, ‘Each god for grace’, and ‘A great speech dost thou sing’ are the Praūga² in Bṛhatī; on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. ‘When with the folk of the five peoples’ is the beginning of the Marutvatīya³; (the word) ‘of the five peoples’ on the fifth day is a symbol of the fifth day. ‘Indra is the Soma drinker alone’, ‘O Indra, come near’, ‘Rise up, O Brahmanaspati, Agni the leader’, ‘Thou, O Soma, with inspiration’, ‘They swell the waters’, and ‘Sing aloud to Indra’ are the continuation⁴, being the same as that of the second day; on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. ‘Thou art the helper of him who presseth, who plucketh the grass’ is the hymn⁵; as containing (the word) ‘be drunk’, and being in the Pañkti metre, and of five Padas, on the fifth day, it is a symbol of the fifth day. ‘Thus in the Soma, in the drink’ is the hymn⁶; as containing (the word) ‘be drunk’ and being in the Pañkti metre and of five Padas, on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. ‘O Indra, drink; for thee is it pressed to be drunk’ is the hymn⁷, containing (the word) ‘be drunk’ and in the Triṣṭubh metre; with it with its feet supported he maintains the pressing; thereby it departs not from its abode. ‘O Indra with the Maruts, O bounteous one’ is the conclusion⁸. It has neither (the word) ‘hither’ nor

(the word) 'forward'; on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. They are Gāyatrī verses; Gāyatrī verses support the midday (pressing) of this set of three days; that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore in the Gāyatrī verses he inserts a Nivid.

v. 7 (xxii. 2). Here they chant the Mahānāmnī verses¹ to the Çākvara Sāman; on the Rathantara day, the fifth day, it is a symbol of the fifth day. By them Indra fashioned himself as great; therefore are they called Mahānāmnīs; moreover these worlds are the Mahānāmnīs and these are great. Having created these worlds Prajāpati had all power whatever there is here. In that having created these worlds Prajāpati had all power whatever there is here, therefore they become the Çakvarī verses; that is why the Çakvarīs have the name (powerful). Beyond the boundary he created them; so that he created them beyond the boundary, they became the Simās; that is why the Simās have their name. 'Of the sweet thus diffused', 'To our pressed drink with the dappled steeds', and 'Indra all made grow' are the antistrophe²; as containing (the words) 'strong', 'dappled', 'be drunk' and 'grow' on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'What he hath won' is the normal inserted verse³. In 'Towards thee, O hero, we utter praise' he makes to follow the basis⁴ of the Rathantara; for this day is connected with the Rathantara in place. 'Not then any of thy worshippers' is the Pragātha of the Sāman;⁵ as having an addition it is on the fifth day a symbol of the fifth day. 'This steed, god strengthened' is the normal Tārksya⁶ (hymn).

v. 8 (xxii. 3). 'Thou hast furthered our prayer in the overcoming of Vṛtra' is the hymn¹; as being in the Pañkti metre and having five Padas on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'Indra hath waxed for the drink' is the hymn²; as containing (the word) 'be drunk' and as being in the Pañkti metre and having five Padas on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'Ever for all men are thy drinkings' is the hymn,³ containing (the word) 'be drunk' and in Triṣṭubh metre; with it with its feet supported he maintains the pressing; thereby it departs not from its place. 'Him Indra we strengthen' is the conclusion⁴; as being a symbol of cattle in 'May he become a strong bull' on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day.

These are Gāyatrī verses; Gāyatrī verses support the midday (pressing) of this set of three days; that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore he inserts a Nivid in the Gāyatrī verses. 'That of Savitr we choose,' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitr' are the strophe and antistrophe⁵ of the Vaiṣvadeva; on the Rathantara day, the fifth day, it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'Up the god Savitr of the home' is (the hymn) to Savitr⁶; in 'May he instigate much that is desirable to the generous one' the desirable is a symbol of cattle; on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'The great ones, sky and earth, here the oldest' is (the hymn) to sky and earth⁷; in 'Roaring, the bull' there is a symbol of cattle; on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'To us Ṛbhus, Vibhvan, Vāja, Indra' is (the hymn) to the Ṛbhus⁸; cattle are Vāja (strength); as being a symbol of cattle on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'I praise the man, of good vows, with a new song' is (the hymn) to the All-gods⁹; as having an addition and being a symbol of cattle on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'The swelling oblation, unaging, in the finding of light' is the beginning of the Āgnimāruta¹⁰; as containing (the word) 'oblation' on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'Even to the wise let it be a wondrous thing' is (the hymn) to the Maruts¹¹; as containing (the word) 'wonder' on the fifth day it is a symbol of the fifth day. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' is the normal (verse) to Jātavedas.¹² 'Agni is the Hotr, the householder, the king' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas¹³; as containing an addition and being a symbol of cattle on the fifth day, it is a symbol of the fifth day.

v. 9 (xxii. 4). The sixth day is a field of the gods; those who approach the sixth day approach a field of the gods. 'The gods dwell not in one another's houses, nor a season in the house of a season' they say. Therefore in due order the priests perform the sacrifice to the seasons, not handing them over (to others). Thus they arrange in order the seasons according to the season, and place in order communities.¹ They say 'No directions should be given with the Ṛtupraiṣas, nor should the vaṣaṭ call be said with the Ṛtupraiṣas. The Ṛtupraiṣas are speech; on the sixth day speech is made up.' If they were to give directions with the Ṛtupraiṣas, if they were to say vaṣaṭ with the Ṛtupraiṣas, verily thus they would go to speech when made up, weary, with galled shoulders, groaning under the yoke. But if they were not to give directions with them, if they were not to say vaṣaṭ with them, they would depart from the norm of the sacrifice, from the sacrifice, from breath, from Prajāpati, from cattle they would go away. Therefore directions should be given only after that which contains a Ṛc, and the vaṣaṭ call said only after that which contains a Ṛc; then they do not go to speech when made up, weary, with galled shoulders, groaning under the yoke, nor do they depart from the norm of the sacrifice, nor from the sacrifice, breath, Prajāpati, cattle do they go away.²

v. 10 (xxii. 5). In the first two pressings he inserts (verses) by *Parucchepa*¹ before the offering verses for the Prasthita libations; the metre of the Parucchepa (verses) is the mounting; by it Indra mounted the seven worlds of heaven; he mounts the seven worlds of heaven, who knows thus. They say 'Seeing that (verses) of five Padas are a symbol of the fifth day, and (verses) of six Padas of the sixth, then why are (verses) of seven Padas recited on the sixth day?' By six Padas they make up the sixth day, cutting off as it were the seventh day; that they keep grasping by the seventh Pada. Verily thus they approach speech again, for continuity. With sets of three days, uninterrupted and continuous, they proceed who proceed knowing thus.

v. 11 (xxii. 6). The gods and the Asuras were in conflict over these worlds. The gods by the sixth day repelled the Asuras from these worlds; taking all the wealth that was within reach, they cast¹ it into the sea. Following up they rescued by this metre the wealth within reach; in that this Pada is a repeated Pada, it is a hook to fasten on. He secures the wealth of him who hates him, he repels him from all these worlds who knows thus.

v. 12 (xxii. 7). The sky as deity supports the sixth day, the Trayastrīṇa Stoma, the Raivata Sāman, the Atichandas metre. With it according to the deity, the Stoma, the Sāman, the metre, he prospers who knows thus. That which has the same endings is a symbol of the sixth day, for the sixth day is a repetition of the third day. That which contains (the word)

² Here the point is that the normal rule of Praiṣa and Yājyā in Praiṣa form with vaṣaṭ call is to be observed, subject to the concluding of either with a Ṛc, the verses being given by Sāyana as RV. ii. 36 and 37. See ĀCS. viii. 1. 6-8 who prescribes hotā yakṣat + Praiṣa + Ṛc + hotar yaja for the Praiṣa and ye yajāmahe + yājyā + Ṛc + vaṣaṭ for the Yājyā. Cf. ÇS. x. 7. 8. rgma must be interpreted in

'horse', (the word) 'end', that which is repeated, that which is alliterated, that which contains (the word) 'stay', that which contains (the word) 'surround', that which contains (the word) 'three', that which is a symbol of the end, (the fact) that the deity is mentioned in the last Pada, (the fact) that yonder world is referred to, that which is connected with Parucchepa, that which has seven Padas, the Nārāṇsa, the Nābhānediṣṭha, the Raivata, the Atichandas metre, the past tense, that which is a symbol of the third day; these are the symbols of the sixth day. 'He is born in the ordinance of Manu' is the Ājya¹ of the sixth day; as being by Parucchepa, in Atichandas metre, and of seven Padas, on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'Come to our strewn grass for enjoyment,' 'Let the chariot with the steeds bear you hither for aid,' 'We have pressed with the stones; O come ye'; 'You pious men with praises, O Aṇvins,' 'Thou hast revealed the mighty, O Indra,' 'O strong Indra,' 'Be it so; let it be heard,' 'Hearken to us, O Agni; thou art praised,' 'The eleven gods in the sky,' and 'She gave the impetuous one, canceller of debts' are the Praūga²; as being by Parucchepa, in Atichandas metre, and of seven Padas, on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'He first of the great' is the beginning of the Marutvatiya³; the great is the end; the sixth day is the end; on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'Three Soma draughts for Indra,' 'O Indra, come near,' 'Forward now Brahmanaspati,' 'Agni the leader,' 'Thou, O Soma, with inspiration,' 'They swell the waters,' 'No one the chariot of Sudās' are the continuation⁴, being the same as that of the third day; on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'The chariot which thou, O Indra, for the winning of the offering' is the hymn⁵; as being by Parucchepa, in Atichandas metre, and of seven Padas, on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'The strong with the strong in one dwelling' is (the hymn⁶); as having the same endings on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'Up the god Savitr for instigation' is (the hymn) to Savitr⁸; 'Forever he hath stood, the bearer intent on his work' (he says); standing is the end; the sixth day is the end; on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'Which is the first, which is the latter of these two?' is (a hymn) to sky and earth⁹; as having the same endings on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'Why hath the best, why hath the youngest come to us?' and 'To our sacrifice, O Vājas, O R̥bhuksans' are (a hymn¹⁰) to the R̥bhus and one connected with Narācaṇsa; as having (the word) 'three' on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'This dread thing he of glad speech' and 'Those who through the sacrifice are endowed with the fee' are the Vaiṣvadeva.¹¹

v. 14 (xxii. 9). He recites the Nābhānediṣṭha¹; Nābhānediṣṭha Mānava when he was performing his studentship, his brothers deprived of any share (in his father's property). Having returned he said to them 'What have you allotted to me?' 'This judgement giver, the decider' they replied. Therefore now here the sons call the father 'The judgement giver, the decider.' He having gone to his father said 'O father, they have allotted thee to me.' To him said his father, 'Do not care for that, O my boy. These Aṅgirasas are performing a sacrificial session for the world of heaven; they fall into confusion whenever they reach the sixth day; make them recite these two hymns on the sixth day; when they go to the world of heaven they will bestow on thee the thousand which is the gift at the session.' 'Be it so' (he said); he went to them (saying) 'Accept the Mānava, O wise ones²'. They replied to him, 'What dost thou desire when thou sayest this?' 'Let me reveal to you the sixth day,' he replied, 'And when ye go to the heaven, do you give me the thousand which is the gift at the session.' 'Be it so' (they said). Then he made to recite these two hymns on the sixth day; then indeed did they discern the sacrifice, the world of heaven. In that he recites these two hymns on the sixth day, (it is) to discern the sacrifice, to reveal the world of heaven. To him as they went to heaven they said 'This thousand is for thee, O Brahman.' As he was gathering it together, a man in black garments, coming from the north, said to him 'Mine is this; mine is what is left on the place (of sacrifice).' He said 'To me have they given it.' He replied 'Then let us question thy father.' He went to his father, to him his father said 'Did not they give it to thee, O son?' 'They did give it,' he replied, 'but a man in black garments came from the north upon me and (saying) "Mine is this; mine is what is left on the place (of sacrifice)" has taken it away.' To him said his father, 'His it is, O my boy; but he will give it to thee.' Returning he said 'Thine is this, O blessed one, so my father tells me'. He replied 'I give it to thee who hast spoken the truth.' Therefore by one who knows thus should truth alone be spoken. The Nābhānediṣṭha is a speech to win a thousand; a thousand comes to him, with the sixth day he discerns the world of heaven, who knows thus.

v. 15 (xxii. 10). These they call accompaniments; the Nābhānediṣṭha, the Vāḷakhilyā,¹ the Vṛṣākapi,² and the Evayāmarut³ (hymns). Them he should recite together. Whichever of them he should omit, that of the sacrificer he would omit. If the Nābhānediṣṭha, he would omit his seed; of the Vāḷakhilyās he would omit his breaths; if the Vṛṣākapi, he would omit his body; of the Evayāmarut, he would remove him from support, both divine and human. With the Nābhānediṣṭha he poured seed; that he discriminated by the Vāḷakhilyās; with (the hymn of) Sukīrti Kāksivata⁴ he made (it) leave the womb (saying) 'That we may rejoice in thy broad protection, O Indra.' Therefore the embryo, being larger, yet does not harm the womb which is smaller; for it is made proper by the holy power. By means of the Evayāmarut he produces motion; by it set in motion all whatever there is here moves. 'The dark day and the bright day' is the beginning of the Āgnimāruta⁵; in 'day and day' is there repetition and alliteration; on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'Of the sweet juice, the Marut name, O holy ones' is (the hymn) to the Maruts⁶ wherein is much to be uttered; much is the end; the sixth day is the end; on the sixth day it is a symbol of the end. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' is the normal (verse) to Jātavedas.⁷ 'He born of old with strength' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas⁸; as having the same endings on the sixth day it is a symbol of the sixth day. 'They supported,' 'They supported,' he recites; he fears the slipping down of the end. Just as a man ties the end, twining it again and again intertwining it, or as one sticks in a peg at the end to keep (a skin) taut, so is it in that he recites 'They supported', 'They supported', for continuity. With sets of three days, uninterrupted and continuous, they proceed, who proceed knowing thus.⁹

v. 16 (xxiii. 1). That which has (the words) 'hither' and 'forward' is a symbol of the seventh day, for the seventh day is a repetition of the first day. That which contains (the word) 'yoke', (the word) 'chariot', (the word) 'swift', (the word) 'drink', (the fact), that the deity is mentioned in the first Pada, (the fact) that this world is referred to, that which contains (the word) 'born', that which has no express mention (of the deity), the future tense, that which is a symbol of the first day; these are the symbols of the seventh day. 'From the ocean the aroma of sweetness hath arisen' is the Ājya¹ of the seventh day; as not containing any express mention of the deity, on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. The ocean is speech; speech wastes not away, the ocean wastes not away. In that this is the Ājya of the seventh day, verily thus from the sacrifice they extend the sacrifice; verily thus they again approach speech for continuity. With sets of three days, uninterrupted and continuous, they proceed who proceed knowing thus. The Stomas are obtained, the metres are obtained on the seventh day. Just as they smear with butter again the portions cut off to refresh them, so here they perform again the Stomas and the metres to refresh them, in that this is the Ājya of the seventh day. It is in Triṣṭubh; this set of three days has the Triṣṭubh at the morning pressing. 'O Vāyu, drinker of the pure, come hither to us,' 'With which thou dost come forward to the bounteous one,' 'To our sacrifice hither with hundreds of steeds,' 'The lively presser at the sacrifices hath arisen forward,' 'The draughts delighting Indra,' 'Thy hundred steeds, thy thousand,' 'When forward, O Mitra and Varuṇa, for you they struggle,' 'Hither, O Nāsatyas, with chariot rich in cattle,' 'Come hither to us, O god, O impetuous one,' 'Forward to you in the sacrifices the pious have sung,' and 'Forward she hasteneth with her nourishing stream' are the Praiṅga.² (The words) 'hither' and 'forward' on the seventh day are symbols of the seventh day. O bright one,' 'O Indra come near,' 'Let Brahmanaspati move forward,' 'Agni, the leader,' 'Thou, O Soma, with inspiration,' 'They swell the waters,' and 'Forward to Indra, the great' are the continuation,³ being the same as that of the first day; on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. 'With what array, of one age, of one home' is the hymn;⁴ as containing (the word) 'born' in 'Neither he that is being born nor he that is born shall attain' on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. It is the 'With what array (hymn); the 'With what array' hymn is one producing agreement and continuing (life). By it Indra and Agastya and the Maruts came to agreement; thus, in that he recites the 'With that array' (hymn), (it serves) to produce agreement. It is also life-giving; therefore for him who is dear to him he should perform the 'With what array' hymn. It is in Trīṣṭubh; with it with feet supported he maintains the pressing; thereby it departs not from its place. 'That ram that winneth the light I glorify' is the hymn;⁵ as containing (the word) 'chariot' in 'Like a strong steed the chariot hastening at the call' on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. It is in Jagatī; Jagatī verses support the midday (pressing) of this set of three days; that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore he inserts a Nivid in the Jagatī verses. Pairing hymns are recited, in Trīṣṭubh and Jagatī; cattle are a pairing; the Chandomas are cattle; (they serve) to win cattle. 'Thee we invoke', and 'Do thou come to the worshipper', are the Br̥hat as Pr̥ṣṭha⁶ on the seventh day; that is what belongs to the sixth day; the Rathantara is the Vairūpa, the Br̥hat the Vairāja; the Rathantara the Çākvara, the Br̥hat the Raivata; in that there is the Br̥hat as Pr̥ṣṭha, verily thus with the Br̥hat they support the Br̥hat, to avoid cleaving the Stomas. If it were to be the Rathantara, there would be a cleavage (of the Stomas). Therefore the Br̥hat only is to be used. 'What he hath won' is the normal inserted verse.⁷ In 'Towards thee, O hero, we utter praise' he makes to follow the basis of the Rathantara,⁸ for this day is connected with the Rathantara in place. 'Drink of the pressed draught rich in sap' is the Pragātha⁹ of the Sāman; as containing (the word) 'drink' on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. 'This steed, god strengthened' is the normal Tārksya¹⁰ (hymn).

v. 17 (xxiii. 2). 'I shall proclaim the mighty deeds of Indra' is the hymn;¹ the word 'forward' (in 'proclaim') on the seventh day is a symbol of the seventh day. It is in Triṣṭubh; with it with feet supported he maintains the pressing; thereby it departs not from its place. 'Towards the ram, much invoked, worthy of praise' is the hymn;² 'towards' is equivalent to 'forward'; on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. It is in Jagatī; Jagatī verses support the midday (pressing) of the set of three days; that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore he inserts a Nivid in the Jagatī verses. Pairing hymns are recited in Triṣṭubh and in Jagatī; cattle are a pairing, the Chandomas cattle; (they serve) to win cattle. 'That of Savitṛ we choose, and 'To-day, for us, O god Savitṛ' are the strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiṣvadeva;³ on the Rathantara day, the seventh day, it is a symbol of the seventh day. 'Towards thee, O god Savitṛ' is (the triplet) to Savitṛ.⁴ 'Towards' is equivalent to 'forward'; on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. 'Let them come forward with weal for the sacrifice' is (the triplet) to sky and earth;⁵ 'forward' on the seventh day is a symbol of the seventh day. 'This to the race divine' is (the triplet) to the R̥bhus;⁶ as containing (the word) 'born' on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. He recites (the verses) of two Padas,⁷ 'Come hither with thy beauty'; man has two feet, cattle four feet; the Chandomas are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle; in that he recites (verses) of two Padas, verily thus he makes the sacrificer with two feet find support in four-footed cattle. 'Hither to our service, the songs, O Agni' is the (hymn) to the All-gods;⁸ 'hither' on the seventh day is a symbol of the seventh day. These are Gāyatrī verses; this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the third pressing. 'Vaiṣvānara hath produced' is the beginning of the Āgnimāruta;⁹ as having (the word) 'born' on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. 'Forward to you, the Triṣṭubh, food' is (the hymn) to the Maruts;¹⁰ 'forward' on the seventh day is a symbol of the seventh day. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' is the normal (verse) to Jātavedas.¹¹ 'Your envoy, with all knowledge' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas;¹² as not having the deity mentioned on the seventh day it is a symbol of the seventh day. These are Gāyatrī verses; this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the third pressing.

Pairing hymns are recited, in Trīṣṭubh and in Jagatī; cattle are a pairing; the Chandomas are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle. Five hymns are recited; the Pañkti has five Padas; the sacrifice is fivefold; cattle are fivefold; the Chandomas are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle. 'Thee we invoke' and 'Do thou come to the worshipper' are the Bṛhat as Prṣṭha ¹⁰ on the ninth day. 'What he hath won' is the normal inserted verse.¹¹ In 'Towards thee, O hero, we utter praise' he makes to follow the basis ¹² of the Rathantara, for this day is connected with the Rathantara in place. 'O Indra, threefold protection' is the Pragātha of the Sāman ¹³; as containing (the word) 'three' on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'This steed, god strengthened' is the normal Tārksya ¹⁴ (hymn).

v. 21 (xxiv. 2). 'In thee from of old the songs have gone together, O Indra' is the hymn ¹; as containing (the word) 'gone' on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'When shall our prayers dwell in the chariot' is the hymn ²; as containing (the word) 'dwell' it is a symbol of the end; having gone to the end he dwells as it were; on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'May the true one come hither, the generous, he of the Soma lees' is the hymn ³; as containing (the word) 'true' on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'That highest power of thine is on high' is the hymn ⁴; the highest is the end; the ninth day is the end; on the ninth day it is a symbol of the end. It is a Triṣṭubh; with it with feet supported he maintains the pressing; verily it departs not from its place. 'I am the first lord of wealth' is the hymn ⁵ (containing the words) 'I win wealth of every man'; what is won is the end; the ninth day is the end; on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. It is in Jagatī; Jagatī verses support the midday pressing of this set of three days; that metre is a support in which a Nivid is inserted; therefore he inserts a Nivid in the Jagatī verses. Pairing hymns are recited, in Triṣṭubh and in Jagatī; cattle are a pairing; the Chandomas are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle. Two sets of five hymns are recited; the Pañkti has five Padas; the sacrifice is fivefold; cattle are fivefold; the Chandomas are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle. They are separate, five in one set, five in the other; they make up ten; the Virāj is a set of ten; the Virāj is food; cattle are food; the Chandomas are cattle; (verily they serve) to win cattle. 'That of Savitṛ we choose' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitṛ' are the strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiṣvadeva ⁶; on the Rathantara day, the ninth day, it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'The evening hath come' is (the triplet) to Savitṛ ⁷; what has gone is the end; the ninth day is the end; on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day; 'Forward towards you mightily sky and earth' is (the triplet) to sky and earth ⁸; as containing (the word) 'pure' in 'To the pure the praises' on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'Let Indra give for sap to us' and 'Give ye jewels' are (the triplet) to the Rbhus ⁹; as containing (the word) 'three' in 'Three sevens to the presser' on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'That are three over thirty' is (the hymn) to the All-gods ¹¹; as containing (the word) 'three' on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. These are Gāyatrī verses; this set of three days has the Gāyatrī metre at the third pressing. 'O Maruts in whose dwelling' is the hymn¹³ to the Maruts; as containing (the word) 'dwell' it is a symbol of the end; having gone to the end he dwells as it were; on the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'To Jātavedas let us pour the Soma' is the normal (verse) to Jātavedas¹⁴. 'Forward to Agni, move your speech' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas¹⁵; as having the same endings in the ninth day it is a symbol of the ninth day. 'May he convey us beyond our foes, may he convey us beyond our foes' he recites; in the set of nine nights much is done that is forbidden; verily (this serves) for atonement. In that he recites¹⁶ 'May he convey us beyond our foes; may he convey us beyond our foes', verily thus he releases them from all sin. These are Gāyatrī verses; this set of three days has the Gāyatrī metre at the third pressing.

The Tenth Day.

v. 22 (xxiv. 3). They¹ perform the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha. As is the mouth, so is the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha; as within the mouth are the tongue, palate, and teeth, so are the Chandomas; now that by which he makes speech distinct, by which he discerns sweet and not sweet, is the tenth day. As the two nostrils, so the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha, as that within the nostrils, so the Chandomas; now that by which he discriminates scents is the tenth day. As is the eye, so is the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha; as the black within the eye, so the Chandomas; now the pupil, by which he sees, is the tenth day. As is the ear, so is the Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha; as what is within the ear, so the Chandomas; now that by which he hears is the tenth day. The tenth day is prosperity; they attain prosperity who perform the tenth day (rite). Wherefore the tenth day is one on which corrections are not to be made (thinking) 'Let us not speak ill² of prosperity', for it is unwise to speak ill of a superior. They creep thence, they purify themselves, they enter the hut of the wives; of those he who knows this libation should say 'Hold ye on to one another'. He should offer with 'Here stay, stay ye here; here be support, here self support; O Agni; vāt! Hail! vāt!' In that he says 'Here stay' he makes them stay in this world ; in that he says ' Stay ye here ' he makes offspring stay in them. In that he says ' Here be support ; here self-support ', verily thus he confers speech and offspring upon the sacrificers. The Rathantara is ' O Agni, vāt! ', the Brhat is ' Hail! vāt! '. The Brhat and Rathantara are a pairing of the gods ; verily thus by a pairing of the gods they win a pairing ; by a pairing of the gods they are propagated in pairings ; (therefore this serves) for propagation ; he is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. They creep thence ; they purify themselves ; they go to the Agnīdh's altar ; of them he who knows this libation should say ' Hold ye on to one another '. He should offer with ³

' Sending the sucking calf (to its mother), Himself a sucking calf sucking his mother,
Increase of wealth, sap, and strength
May be support in us ; hail ! '

Increase of wealth, sap and strength he wins for himself and the sacrificers when one knowing thus offers this libation.

v. 23 (xxiv. 4) They creep thence ; they go to the Sadas ; the other priests creep out severally according to their wont ; the Udgātṛs creep together. They chant to the verses of the serpent queen. The serpent queen is this (earth), for this (earth) is the queen of what creeps ; this (earth) in the beginning was bare ; she saw this spell¹ ' The dappled bull hath come ' ; this dappled colour, of various forms, entered her ; whither she desired, whatever there is here, plants, birds all forms (entered her). The dappled colour enters him with various forms, whatever he desires who knows thus. With mind he utters the prelude, with mind he sings, with mind he responds ; with voice he recites. Speech and mind are a pairing of the gods, verily thus with a pairing of the gods they win a pairing, by a pairing of the gods they are propagated in pairings ; (verily it serves) for propagation ; he is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. Then the Hotṛ recites² the Four Hotṛs ; verily thus he accompanies in recitation the song. The Four Hotṛs are the sacrificial, secret name of the gods ; in that the Hotṛ recites the Four Hotṛs, verily thus he reveals the sacrificial, secret name of the gods ; that revealed reveals him. He is revealed who knows thus. ' That Brahman, to whom, though learned, fame does not come ', he used to say, ' having gone into the wild should gather a bunch of Darbha grass, points upward, and, placing to his right

v. 24 (xxiv. 5) Then¹ they together lay hold of an Udumbara (branch) with 'Sap and strength I lay hold of'. The Udumbara is strength and proper food. In that the gods distributed sap and strength, thence the Udumbara came into being. Therefore thrice in a year it ripens. Thus in that they lay hold together of the Udumbara (branch), verily thus they lay hold together on sap and strength. They restrain their speech; the sacrifice is speech; verily thus they restrain the sacrifice. They suppress the day; the world of heaven is the day; verily thus they press down the world of heaven. They should not utter speech by day; if they were to utter speech by day they would leave the day over to a rival. They should not utter speech by night; if they were to utter speech by night, they would leave the night over to a rival; let the sun be half set; then should they utter speech; so much only of space do they leave over to a rival. Or rather, when the sun is set, should they utter speech; verily thus they make the rival who detests them have the darkness as his portion. Having gone round the Āhavaniya should they utter speech; the Āhavaniya is the sacrifice, the Āhavaniya the world of heaven; verily thus by the sacrifice as the world of heaven they go to the world of heaven. With 'What we have done here defective,

What we have done in excess,
To Prajāpati the father
Let that go.'

they utter speech. Through Prajāpati are offspring born; Prajāpati is the support of what is defective and excessive; them neither defect nor excess harms. To Prajāpati they transfer defect and excess who knowing thus utter speech with this (verse). Therefore those who know thus should utter speech with this (verse)².

v. 25 (xxiv. 6) 'O Adhvaryu' he calls when about to speak out in the Four Hotṛs. This is the form of the Call. 'Yes, O Hotṛ; be it so, O Hotṛ' is the response of the Adhvaryu at each pause in the ten sentences.¹

They drew this cup (with)

“O Vācaspati, O worshipper, O name. Let us worship thy name. Do thou worship, with our name go to the sky. That prosperity with which the gods with Prajāpati as householder prepared, that prosperity shall we attain.”

Then he runs over the Bodies of Prajāpati and the riddle.

‘Eater of food and mistress of food’: the eater of food is Agni; the mistress of food Āditya.

‘The fair and the beautiful’: the fair is Soma, the beautiful is cattle.

‘The unresting and the fearless’: the unresting is Vāyu, for he never rests; the fearless is death, for all fear it.

‘The unattained and the unattainable’: the unattained is the earth; the unattainable is the sky.

‘The unattackable and the irresistible’: the unattackable is Agni; the irresistible is Āditya.

‘That which has no prius and no rival’: that which has no prius is mind; that which has no rival is the year.

These are the twelve Bodies of Prajāpati; this is the whole of Prajāpati, thus the whole of Prajāpati he obtains on the tenth day.

Then they say the riddle².

“Agni is the householder” some say: he is the householder of the world.

“Vāyu is the householder” some say: he is the householder of the atmosphere.

“He who gives heat yonder is the householder” some say: he is the lord, the seasons are the house. The householders prosper, the sacrificers prosper, for whom there is as householder one knowing the god as householder. The householder smites away evil, the sacrificers smite away evil for whom there is as householder one knowing the god who most effectively has smitten away evil.”
 O Adhvaryu we have won³.

ADHYĀYA V

v. 26 (xxv. 1) 'Take¹ out the Āhavanīya' he says on the afternoon; whatever good he does on the day, verily thus, by taking it out and bringing forward, he places in security. 'Take out the Āhavanīya' he says on the morning; whatever he does well by night verily thus, by taking it out and bringing it forward, he places in security. The Āhavanīya is the sacrifice, the Āhavanīya the world of heaven; verily thus in the sacrifice as the world of heaven, he places the world of heaven who knows thus. He who knows the Agnihotra as connected with the All-gods, of sixteen parts, and finding support in cattle, prospers with the Agnihotra, as connected with the All-gods, of sixteen parts, and finding support in cattle. When in the cow, it is Rudra's²; when allowed to drop, it is Vāyu's; when being milked, it is the Aṇvin's; when milked, it is Soma's; when put on the fire, it is Varuṇa's; when swelling up, it is Pūṣan's; when pouring over, it is the Maruts'; when bubbling, it is the All-gods'; when covered with a film, it is Mitra's; when removed, it is sky and earth's; when it is ready (for the Hotṛ), it is Savitr's; when it is being taken (for the oblation), it is Viṣṇu's; when put (on the altar), it is Brhaspati's; the first libation is for Agni; the next for Prajāpati; the offering is Indra's. This is the Agnihotra, connected with the All-gods, of sixteen parts, and finding support in cattle. With the Agnihotra, as connected with the All-gods, of sixteen parts and finding support in cattle he prospers who knows thus.

v. 27 (xxv. 2) (They ask) 'If the¹ Agnihotra cow, when united (with its calf) and being milked sits down, what is the expiation then?' He should address it with 'That from fear of which thou dost sit down Thence give us security;

Guard all our cattle;
Homage to Rudra, the bountiful.'

He should make her rise with²

¹ AB. v. 26-31 and KB. ii. deal with the Agnihotra. Cf. ĀṢ. iii. 11.

‘The goddess Aditi hath arisen,
She hath bestowed life upon the¹lord of the sacrifice;
Making good fortune for Indra,
For Mitra and for Varuṇa.’

Then should he place on her udder and her mouth a pot of water, and then give her to a Brahman. That is the expiation in this case. ‘If one’s Agnihotra cow, when united and being milked, calls aloud, what is the expiation then’ (they ask). She calls aloud foreseeing hunger for the sacrifices²; he should make her eat food, for expiation; food is expiation. (He says⁴) ‘From eating the good pasture mayst thou be of good fortune’. That is the expiation in this case. ‘If one’s Agnihotra cow when united and being milked stumbles, what is the penance then?’ (they ask). If she causes any (milk) to spill, he should touch it and mutter⁵

‘That milk which to-day hath crept over the earth
That which hath crept over the plants, the waters
The milk in the house, the milk in the cow,
The milk in the calves, that milk be mine.’

He should offer with the remainder of the milk, if it be enough for an oblation. But, if all be poured out, then he should summon another (cow) and milk her and offer with it, but there must be an offering, even if only in faith.⁶ That is the expiation in this case. All becomes for him suited for the strew, all is secured, who knowing thus offers the Agnihotra.

v. 28 (xxv. 3) The sacrificial post is yonder sun, the altar the earth, the strew the plants, the kindling wood the trees, the sprinkling waters the waters, the enclosing sticks the quarters. Whatever of his is lost, or dies, or men drive away, all of that comes to him in yonder world who knows thus to offer the Agnihotra, just as what is placed on the strew would come. Both sets, gods and men, reciprocally he leads as fees and all this whatever there is here. Men by the evening libation he leads as fees to the gods and all this whatever there is is here; they lie as it were relaxed and at home, when taken as fees for the gods. The gods by the morning libation he leads as fees to man and all this whatever there is here. They leap up¹ recognizing this as it were (saying) 'That shall I do; there shall I go'. The world which a man conquers by giving all this, that world he conquers who knowing thus offers the Agnihotra. By the evening libation for Agni he begins the Āṇvina (Çastra); speech utters the response² in 'Speech, speech'. By Agni, by the night, is the Āṇvina recited by him who knowing thus offers the Agnihotra. For Āditya by the morning libation he begins the Mahāvrata; breath utters the response in 'Food; food'; by Āditya, by the deity is the Mahāvrata recited by him who knowing thus offers the Agnihotra. Of this Agnihotra there are seven hundred and twenty evening libations in the year; there are also seven hundred and twenty morning libations in the year. So many are the bricks accompanied by Yajus verses of the fire³. By the year, by the fire fully does he sacrifice who knowing thus offers the Agnihotra.

² Sāyaṇa and Haug take this as ‘to reveal her hunger to the sacrificer’ but this is forcing the sense of pratikhṛyāya; cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 291. Cf. Atharva-prāyaścitta, ii. 4 which has samprakhṛyāya.

⁴ RV. i. 164. 40; AV. vii. 73. 11; ĀṠS. iii. 11. 4; ĀṠS. ix. 5. 4.

v. 29 (xxv. 4) Vṛṣaṣṣma Vātāvata Jātūkarnya said 'We shall declare this to the gods; the Agnihotra which used to be performed on both days is now performed on alternate days only'. This also said a maiden seized by a Gandharva 'We shall declare this to the fathers; the Agnihotra which used to be performed on both days is now performed on alternate days only.¹' The Agnihotra is offered on alternate days in that one offers it on the evening after sunset and in the morning before sunrise. The Agnihotra is offered on both days in that one offers it in the evening after sunset and in the morning after sun rise. Therefore the offering should be made after sun rise. He who offers before sunrise obtains the world of the Gāyatrī in the twenty-fourth year; in the twelfth he who offers after sunrise. If he offers for two years before sunrise then he has really sacrificed for one only; he who sacrifices after sunrise with the year obtains the year, he who knowing thus offers after sunrise. Therefore should one offer after sunrise. He offers in the brilliance of day and night who offers in the evening after sunset and in the morning after sunrise. By Agni as brilliance the night is brilliant, by Āditya as brilliant the day is brilliant.

² The point is that the opening to Agni of the Āṇvina is compared with the offering to Agni at evening: the Pratigara is according to Sāyaṇa vācā tvā hotrā: see ĀpÇS. vi. 1. 2; and in the next case of the offering to Āditya annam payo reto

'smāsu dāhē; see ĀpÇS. vi. 11. 5; ÇÇS. iv. 13. 1.

³ Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 291) refers them to 360 yajusmatyaḥ and 360 pariçrit bricks in ÇB. x. 4. 2. 2.

v. 29. ¹ This is the reasonable sense and construction; cf. KB. ii. 9. The yad may be 'that', one iti being only usual to cover uvāca, or it may be the relative, in which case there is a slight anacoluthon but the first view is perhaps the best.

In the brilliance of day and night does he offer who knowing thus offers after sunrise. Therefore should one offer after sunrise².

v. 30 (xxv. 5) Day and night are the wheels of the year; verily thus with them he goes through the year. If he offers before sunrise, that is as if one were to go with (a chariot with) a single wheel. But if he offers after sunrise, that is as if one were swiftly to perform a journey with (a chariot with) wheels on both sides. As to this the sacrificial verse is recited:

‘This goeth yoked with Br̥had and Rathantara,
All that hath been and is to be;
With them should he go who is wise taking the fires,
By day should he offer one, by night another.’

The night is connected with the Rathantara, the day with the Br̥hat; Agni is the Rathantara, Āditya the Br̥hat. Those deities make him attain the vault of the tawny one, the world of heaven, who knowing thus offers after sunrise. Therefore should one offer after sunrise. As to this, the sacrificial verse is recited

‘As one may go with a single horse
Having nothing else for harnessing,
So many men go,
Who offer the Agnihotra before sunrise.’

The deity as it proceeds, all this whatever there is here follows upon it; of the deity all this whatever there is here is a follower; this deity is that which has followers. A follower he finds, a follower is his who knows thus. He is the one guest, he lives among the offerers. This is why there is in the world the following verse

‘Let him heap blame on the blameless,
Or take away blame from the blameworthy,
The one guest at evening he turns away,
The thief who stole away the lotus fibres.’¹

² Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 292) points out that in the Avesta there is expressed a preference for the period from the first appearance of light to the sunrise as the proper time of sacrifice, while the time of the sunrise is the daevayaçna.

¹ Yo for so is an obvious correction suggested first by Weber and later by Geldner. The stanza was partly intelligible to Sāyaṇa, as he makes it said as an oath by one accused of stealing lotus fibres. The verse is clearly cited from a story of which we have divergent versions in the Mahābhārata (2 accounts; xiii. 4396– 4546 and 4547–4600) and in the Jātaka no. 488, and in which the Ṛṣis in order to release themselves of the accusation of being guilty of the theft of lotus fibres swore frightful oaths, one of which is here recorded, but which has no parallel in the Mahābhārata or the Jātaka. See Charpentier, ZDMG. lxiv. 65 seq.; lxvi. 44 seq.; Geldner, lxv. 306, 307 (who overlooks Weber’s suggestion of yo); Oldenberg, GGN. 1911, p. 464, n. 2 who suggests ruṇadāhu as a possibility, a very plausible conjecture.

He is the one guest, he dwells among offerers; this deity he turns away who being fit for the Agnihotra does not offer the Agnihotra. This deity being turned away turns him away from this world and from yonder, both of them, who being fit for the Agnihotra does not offer the Agnihotra. Therefore he who is fit for the Agnihotra should offer it. Therefore they say 'A guest at evening should not be turned away', knowing this Nagarin Jānaṣṛuteya said as to Aikādaçākṣi² Mānutantavya 'In his offspring will we know him if he offer with knowledge or without knowledge'. Of Aikādaçākṣi the offspring became as kingly person; as a kingly person his offspring becomes, who knowing thus offers after sunrise. Therefore after sunrise should offering be made.

v. 31 (xxv. 6) Āditya on rising unites his rays with the Āhavanīya; if one offers before sunrise, that is as if one were to offer the breast to a child unborn or to a calf unborn. But, if he offers after sunrise, that is as if one were to offer the breast to a child born or a calf born.¹ Through his being united in both worlds proper food is offered both from this world and from yonder to him. If he offers before sunrise, that is as if one were to offer to a man or an elephant, without hand stretched out², if he offers after sunrise it is as if one were to offer to a man or an elephant, with hand stretched forth. He³ having taken him with his hand and dragged him upwards places him in the world of heaven, who knowing thus offers after sunrise. Therefore one should offer after sunrise. Āditya as he rises leads forward all creatures; therefore they call him breath. In breath does he sacrifice who knowing thus sacrifices after sunrise; therefore one should sacrifice after sunrise. Speaking truth he offers in truth who offers in the evening after sunset and in the morning after sunrise. With bhūh, bhuvah, svar, om; Agni is light, light is Agni' he offers in the evening; with 'bhūh, bhuvah, svar, om'; Sūrya is light, light is Sūrya' in the 'morning. By him speaking truth in truth is the offering made, who knowing thus offers after sunrise; therefore should one offer after sunrise. As to this a sacrificial verse is sung:

² So Sāyaṇa and Haug: but of course prayate and aprayate may equally well be datives, and the sense be 'put into the hand of a man who is not coming', as Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 293), prefers as in KB. ii. 9.

³ Sāyaṇa consistently here and in the clause above tam asmai pratidhīyamānam takes the worshipper and the sun as the two persons though he renders the passive erroneously as an active. This seems correct, as the only real alternative is to assume that the sun and the sacrifice are meant which is very difficult in the second passage, as tam must correspond with ya since ṣa clearly is the sun.

‘ Every morning they tell falsehood
Who offer the Agnihotra before sunrise,
Declaring what is to be declared by day on what is not day, “Surya is the light” ; there is not then light for them.’³

Errors in the Sacrifice.

v. 32 (xxv. 7) Prajāpati¹ desired ‘ May I be propagated ; may I be multiplied ’. He practised fervour ; having practised fervour he created these worlds ; the earth, the atmosphere, the sky. He brooded over these worlds ; from these worlds when brooded over these luminaries were born ; Agni was born from the earth, Vāyu from the atmosphere, Āditya from the sky. He brooded over these luminaries. From these brooded over the three Vedas were born ; the Ṛgveda was born from Agni, the Yajurveda from Vāyu, the Sāmaveda from Aditya. He brooded over these Vedas ; from these (Vedas) when brooded over three pure (sounds) were born ; bhūh from the Ṛgveda was born, bhuvah from the Yajurveda, svah from the Sāmaveda. He brooded over these pure ones ; from them when brooded over the three sounds were born ; the letter a, the letter u, and the letter m. Them he brought together ; that made (the word) om. Therefore with om does he say the Pranava. Om is the world of heaven ; om is he that yonder gives heat. Prajāpati extended the sacrifice ; he took it ; he sacrificed with it. He performed the Hotṛ’s office with the Ṛc alone, the Adhvaryu’s with the Yajus, the Udgātṛ’s with the Sāman. He performed the Brahman’s office with the pure (part) of the threefold knowledge. Prajāpati handed over the sacrifice to the gods ; the gods extended the sacrifice ; they took it, they sacrificed with it. They performed the Hotṛ’s office with the Ṛc alone, the Adhvaryu’s with the Yajus, the Udgātṛ’s with the Sāman. They performed the Brahman’s office with the pure (part) of the threefold knowledge. The gods said to Prajāpati ‘ If there be trouble in our sacrifice from the Ṛc, or from the Yajus, or from the Sāman, or an unknown (trouble) or a complete failure, what is the expiation ? ’ To the gods said Prajāpati ‘ If there is trouble in your sacrifice from the Ṛc, do ye offer on the Gārhapatya, with ‘ bhūh ’ ; if from the Yajus, with ‘ bhuvah ’ on the Agnidh’s altar, or on the Anvāhāryapacana at oblation sacrifices² ; if from the Sāman, with ‘ svah ’ on the Āhavanīya ; if (the trouble) is unknown or a complete failure, running through all 'bhūh, bhuvah, svar', do ye offer on the Āhavanīya only'. These exclamations are the internal fastenings of the Vedas; just as one may unite one thing with another³, or joint with joint, or with a cord unite an object of leather or something which has come apart, so with these he unites whatever in the sacrifice has come apart. These exclamations are an expiation for all; therefore this expiation only should be performed in the sacrifice.

¹ KB, xxvi. 3-6 has a Prāyaścitta section, but only remotely similar. Cf. ÇB. xi. 5. 8 ;

v. 33 (xxv. 8). Important sages say 'Since the Hotṛ's office is performed with the Rc, the Adhvaryu's with the Yajus, the Udgātr's with the Sāman, the threefold knowledge is taken up; how then is the Brahman's office performed?' 'With the threefold knowledge', he should say. He that blows here is the sacrifice; two paths it has, speech and mind, for by speech and by mind the sacrifice proceeds. Speech is this (earth), mind yonder (world); by speech as the threefold knowledge they make ready one side, by mind the Brahman makes (another) ready.¹ Now some Brahman priests, when the morning litany is begun, having muttered the *Stoma-bhāgas*², wait talking. As to this³ a Brahman said, seeing the Brahman talking when the morning litany was begun, 'They have omitted half of this sacrifice'. Just as a man with one foot when going, or a chariot with a wheel on one side when moving, fails, so the sacrifice fails and through the failure of the sacrifice the sacrificer fails. Therefore the Brahman priest, when the morning litany is begun, should remain silent until the offering of the Upāñcu and Antaryāma (cups); when the Pavamānas have been begun, until the conclusion; again, in the case of Stotras accompanied with Çastras, he should be silent until their vaśaṭ call. Just as a man with both feet when going, or a chariot with wheels on both sides when moving, does not come to any harm, so the sacrifice does not come to harm, and through the sacrifice being unharmed, the sacrificer is not harmed.

v. 34 (xxv. 9). They say 'Seeing that the fees are brought for the Adhvaryu (by the sacrificer thinking) 'He has drawn the cups for me, he has acted for me, he has offered the libations for me', for the Udgātr (thinking) 'He has sung for me', for the Hotṛ (thinking) 'He has said the invitatory verses for me, he has recited (the litanies) for me, he has said the offering verses for me', what has the Brahman priest done for the fees brought for him; or is it that without action he is to receive them?' The Brahman is the physician of the sacrifice; he receives for making medicine for the sacrifice. Moreover in that (the Brahman) performs his function as Brahman with the greatest amount of holy power, with the sap of the metres, therefore is he the Brahman; in the beginning the Brahman was a sharer of half with the other priests; a half (of the holy power) was the Brahman's, a half the other priests. Therefore if there is trouble in the sacrifice from the Ṛc the Brahman should offer on the Gārhapatya with 'bhūh'; if from the Yajus, on the Agnidh's altar, or on the Anvāhāryapacana at oblation offerings with 'bhuvah'; if from the Sāman with 'sva' on the Āhavanīya; if (the trouble) is unknown or a complete failure, he should run over all 'bhūh, bhuvah, svar' and offer on the Āhavanīya only. The Prastotr when the Stotra is being begun, says 'O Brahman,¹ shall we chant, O Praçāstr?'. At the morning pressing the Brahman should say 'bhūh! with Indra do ye chant'; 'bhuvah' he should say at the midday pressing 'With Indra do ye chant'; 'sva' he should say at the third pressing, 'With Indra do ye chant'. 'bhūh, bhuvah, svar' he should say at an Uktha or Atirātra, 'With Indra do ye chant'. In that he says 'With Indra do ye chant', and the sacrifice is connected with Indra, and the god of the sacrifice is Indra, verily thus he makes the chanting possessed of Indra, verily to them he says in effect 'Let it go not from Indra; with Indra do ye chant'.

³ For this cf. ĀṠS. v. 2. 11-16; ÇṢS. vi. 8. 5, 6. For the Brahman's activity see KB. vi. 12. See also MṢS. iii. 1. 11 seq.; ĀṠS. ix. 16. 4, 5. The absence of reference to the AV. is strongly in favour of the priority of the AB.; cf. Bloomfield, Atharvaveda, p. 4.

PAÑCIKĀ VI

The Recitations of the Hotrakas.

ADHYĀYA I

The Offices of the Subrahmanyā and Grāvastut.

vi. 1 (xxvi. 1). The¹ gods performed a Sattrā at Sarvacaru;² they could not smite away evil. To them said Arbuda Kādraveya, the serpent seer, the maker of spells, 'One Hotṛ's office has not been performed by you, that will I perform for you; then will you smite away evil. They said 'Be it so'. At each midday he crept out for them; he praised the pressing stones; therefore at each midday they praise the pressing stones in imitation of him. The way by which he crept out is now called the creeping out of Arbuda. Then the king made drunk; they said 'It is a poisonous snake that looks at our king; come, with a turban let us bind his eyes'. 'Be it so' (they said); with a turban they bound³ his eyes; therefore winding round a turban they praise the pressing stones in imitation of him. The king still made them drunk; they said 'With his own spell he praises the pressing stones; come, let us mingle the spell with other verses.' 'Be it so' (they said); with other verses they mingled his spell; then he did not make them drunk. In that they mingle his spell with other verses, verily (it serves) for expiation. They smote away evil; in accordance with their smiting away the serpents smote away evil; having smitten away evil they lay aside their old worn out skin and go on with a new one. He smites away evil who knows thus.

vi. 2 (xxvi. 2). They say 'With how many verses¹ should he praise?'

331, 332; Cf. Lévi, La doctrine du sacrifice, pp. 142, 143.

² A place according to Sāyaṇa: Aufrecht supplies yajña; a man, BR.

³ Apināhyus is a wholly anomalous and incorrect form; probably merely a blunder. vi. 2. ¹ I. e. of the Pāvamānī verses which he is to use.

‘With a hundred’ they say; man has a hundred (years of) life, a hundred strengths, a hundred powers; verily thus he places him in life, in strength, in power. ‘Or with thirty-three’ they say; ‘he smote away the evils of thirty-three gods; thirty-three were the gods for him.’ With an unlimited number should he praise; Prajāpati is unlimited. The Hotṛ function of the Grāvastut is Prajāpati’s; in it all desires are won. In that he praises with an unlimited number, (it serves) to win all desires. All desires he wins who knows thus. Therefore should he praise with an unlimited number only. They say ‘How is he to praise?’ ‘By syllables?’ ‘By sets of four syllables?’ ‘By Padas?’ ‘By half-verses?’ ‘By verses?’ By verses does not fit, nor again does by Padas fit; as to by syllables or sets of four syllables, the metres would be broken up so, many syllables would so be omitted. By half verses only should he praise, for support. Man has two supports, cattle four feet; verily thus he makes the sacrificer with two supports find support in four-footed cattle. Therefore should he praise by half verses only. They say ‘Since it is at the midday only that he praises the pressing stones, how is the praising at the other pressings performed by him?’ In that he praises with Gāyatrī verses, and the morning pressing is in Gāyatrī, thereby (is the praise accomplished) at the morning pressing; in that he praises with Jagatī verses, and the third pressing is in Jagatī, thereby at the third pressing. So by him who knows thus, although he praises the pressing stones only at the midday, is praising accomplished in all the pressings. They say ‘Seeing that the Adhvaryu directs the other priests, then why does he undertake this without a direction?’ The office of the Grāvastut is mind; mind requires no direction; therefore he undertakes this without a direction.

vi. 3 (xxvi. 1). The Subrahmaṇyā¹ is speech; its calf is Soma the king; when Soma the king has been bought, they summon the Subrahmaṇyā, just as one summons a cow; with this as calf it milks all desires for the sacrificer. All desires speech milks for him who knows thus. They say ‘Why has the Subrahmaṇyā its name?’ ‘It is speech’, he should reply; ‘speech is the holy power and the good holy power (su-brahma).’ They say ‘Why then do they call him that is male female as it were?’ ‘Because the Subrahmaṇyā is speech’ he should reply, ‘for that reason.’ They say ‘Seeing that the other priests perform their priestly functions within the altar, and the Subrahmaṇyā without the altar, how is his function performed within the altar?’ ‘From the altar they throw up the rubbish heap; in that standing on the heap he calls’, he should reply, ‘for that reason.' They say 'Then why does he stand on the heap when calling the Subrahmanya?' The seers performed a sacrificial session; to the tallest² of them they said 'Do thou call the Subrahmanya; from nearest wilt thou summon the gods.' Verily thus they make him the tallest; moreover thus he delights the whole of the altar. They say 'Why do they drive up a bull as the fee for him?' 'The bull is male, the Subrahmanya female; that is a pair; for the propagation of this pair' (he should reply). Inaudibly³ the Agnidh utters the offering verse for the cup for (Tvaṣṭr) with the wives; the cup for (Tvaṣṭr) with the wives is seed; seed is poured inaudibly as it were. He does not say the second vaṣaṭ (thinking) 'The second vaṣaṭ call is a completion; let me not bring seed to completion.' The incomplete state of seed is perfect; therefore he does not say the second vaṣaṭ. Seated on the lap of the Neṣṭr he partakes; the Neṣṭr represents the wife;⁴ Agni places seed in the wives for propagation; verily thus by Agni he places seed in the wives for propagation. He is propagated with offspring and cattle who knows thus. After the fees the Subrahmanya is completed; the Subrahmanya is speech; the fee is food; verily thus in proper food and speech at the end they establish the sacrifice.

ADHYĀYA II

The Çastras of the other Hotrakas at Sattras and Ahīnas.

vi. 4 (xxvii. 1). The¹ gods performed a sacrifice; as they were performing it the Asuras came up to them (saying) 'We will make a confusion of their sacrifice.' From the south they approached them, where they thought was the thinnest part of the sacrifice. The gods perceiving this put Mitra and Varuṇa around on the south; by means of Mitra and Varuṇa on the south at the morning pressing they smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Verily thus also the sacrificers by means of Mitra and Varuṇa on the south at the morning pressing smite away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Therefore the Maitrāvaruṇa recites (the litany) to Mitra and Varuṇa at the morning pressing, for by means of Mitra and Varuṇa the gods smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases on the south at the morning pressing. Smitten off at the south the Asuras entered

³ For the omission of the anuvāṣaṭkūra see ĀCS. v. 5. 21.

the sacrifice in the middle. The gods perceiving this placed Indra in the middle; they with Indra in the middle smote away the Asuras and Rakṣases at the morning pressing. Verily thus also the sacrificers with Indra in the middle smite away the Asuras and the Rakṣases at the morning pressing. Therefore the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin at the morning pressing recites (a litany) to Indra, for with Indra in the middle the gods at the morning pressing smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. The Asuras, smitten off in the middle, entered the sacrifice from the north. The gods, perceiving this, put Indra and Agni around on the north; with Indra and Agni on the north at the morning pressing they smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Verily thus also the sacrificers with Indra and Agni on the north at the morning pressing smite away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Therefore the Achāvāka at the morning pressing recites (a litany) to Indra and Agni, for with Indra and Agni on the north at the morning pressing the gods smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. The Asuras smitten off on the north ran round to the front in battle array. The gods perceiving this placed Agni around in front at the morning pressing; with Agni in front at the morning pressing they smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Verily thus also the sacrificers with Agni in front at the morning pressing smite away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Therefore the morning pressing is connected with Agni. He smites away evil who knows thus. The Asuras, smitten off in front, having gone round to the back entered. The gods, perceiving this, put the All-gods, as their self, around behind at the third pressing; they with the All-gods, as themselves, behind at the third pressing smote away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Verily thus also the sacrificers with the All-gods, as themselves, behind at the third pressing smite away the Asuras and the Rakṣases. Therefore the third pressing is connected with the All-gods. He smites away evil who knows thus. So the gods smote away the Asuras from the whole of the sacrifice. Then the gods prospered, the Asuras were defeated. He prospers himself, the evil rival who hates him is defeated, who knows thus. The gods with the sacrifice so ordered smote away the Asuras, the evil, and conquered the world of heaven. He smites away the evil rival who hates him and conquers the world of heaven who knows thus and who knowing thus orders the pressings.

vi. 5 (xxvii. 2). They make the strophe the antistrophe of the strophe¹

not be done at the other pressings because the Stotras there (Prṣṭha and Uktha) do not from day to day remain in the same ritual form. The idea occurs in AB. vi. 17. See AÇS. vii. 2. 2 seq. Cf. GB. vii. 11.

at the morning pressing; verily thus they make one day the counterpart of the other; verily thus by the preceding day they lay hold of the subsequent day. But this is not the case at the midday (pressing); the Prsthās are prosperity; they have not the position² for the purpose of making the strophe the antistrophe of the strophe. By reason of the same distinction they do not at the third pressing make the strophe the antistrophe of the strophe.

vi. 6 (xxvii. 3). Next as to the commencing verses.¹ 'With true guidance for us, let Varuṇa' is that of the *Maitrāvaruṇa*² (containing) 'Let Mitra lead us knowing'; the Maitrāvaruṇa is the leader of the Hotrakas; therefore this (verse) contains the word 'leader'. 'Indra for you on all sides' is that of the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin,³ (containing) 'We invoke for men'; verily with this (verse) day by day they invoke Indra. When they invoke in competition no other appropriates Indra, where a Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin knowing thus day by day recites this (verse). 'What time, when the Soma was pressed, men' is that of the Achāvāka;⁴ 'invoked Indra and Agni' (it continues); verily with this (verse) day by day they invoke Indra and Agni. When they invoke in competition no other appropriates Indra and Agni, where an Achāvāka knowing thus recites this (verse) day by day. They are ships which carry over to the world of heaven; verily with these (verses) they cross to the world of heaven.

vi. 7 (xxvii. 4). Next as to the concluding verses. 'May we be thine, O god Varuṇa' is that of the Maitrāvaruṇa;¹ 'Sap and light may we obtain' (it ends); 'sap' is this world; 'light' is yonder world; verily with this (verse) they lay hold of both worlds. 'He hath traversed the atmosphere' is that of the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin,² a triplet, containing the word 'apart'; verily with these he puts apart the world of heaven for them. 'In the joy of the Soma the worlds, when Indra broke Vala' (he says); the consecrated ones are eager to win; therefore this (verse) contains the word 'hole' (vala).

'He drove out the cows for the Aṅgirasas, Revealing them that were in secret, Headlong he hurled Vala ;'

verily with this (verse) he wins booty. 'By Indra the spaces of the sky' (he says); the spaces of the sky are the world of heaven; by Indra (they) 'Are made firm and established

The firm are not to be moved away';

verily with this (verse) day by day they continue to find support in the world of heaven. 'I seek of those with Sarasvatī' is that of the Achāvāka;³ Sarasvatī is speech; verily thus he says 'of those with speech'; 'Of Indra and Agni the aid' (he says); speech is the dear abode of Indra and Agni; verily thus he unites these two with their dear abode. With a dear abode does he prosper who knows thus.

vi. 8 (xxvii. 5). There are two kinds of concluding verses of the Hotrakas, at the morning and at the midday, those of the Ahīna and those of the one day rites. The Maitrāvaruṇa concludes with those of the one day rite only;¹ thereby he departs not from the world. With those of the Ahīna the Achāvāka,² to obtain the world of heaven. Both are used by the Brāhmanācchaṁsin;³ thereby grasping both he goes to this and to yonder world; moreover he goes grasping both, the Maitrāvaruṇa and the Achāvāka, the Ahīna and the one day rite, the year and the Agniṣṭoma. Now at the third pressing the concluding verses of the Hotrakas are those of the one day rite only;⁴ the one day (rite) is a support; verily thus at the end they establish the sacrifice on a support. Without taking a breath he should say the offering verse at the morning pressing; save for one or two (verses) he should not recite beyond the Stoma,⁵ (thinking) 'That is as if one were to give quickly to one neighing and thirsting; moreover I shall swiftly give proper food and Soma drinking to the gods.' Swiftly he finds support in the world. (He uses) an unlimited number at the two latter pressings; the world of heaven is unlimited; (verily it serves) to obtain the world of heaven. At pleasure the Hotṛ may recite whatever the Hotrakas may recite on the previous day; or the Hotrakas

¹ I. e. at the two Savanas of morning and midday he uses the same concluding verse (the plural being prayogabāhuvāpekṣam) they are RV. vii. 66. 9 and iv. 16. 21 (cf. AB. vi. 23). See ĀṢ. v. 10. 28; 16. 1; vi. 18. 5.

² RV. viii. 38. 10 and vii. 94. 9; RV. ii. 11. 21 (AB. vi. 23) and iii. 30. 22 are those for the Ahīna and Ekāha respectively.

³ This means that at the morning pressing he used different verses in the Ekāha and Ahīna (RV. viii. 93. 3; 14. 9), but at the midday pressing the same (RV. vii. 23. 6).

⁴ Viz. RV. vii. 84. 1; x. 43. 1; vi. 69. 1; see ĀṢ. viii. 2. 16; 3. 34; 4. 3.

⁵ The sense as taken by Śāyana and Haug seems that meant; cf. AB. vi. 23. 10 for the same use: Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 296) objects on grammatical grounds to the wording and prefers the normal 'He should use one or two verses, but not over recite the Stoma'; but this is really not consistent with the context in vi. 23 and ĀṢ. vii. 13. 2 expressly says that there is atīpaṇsana in one or two verses.

what the Hotṛ may recite; the Hotṛ is the breath, the Hotrakas the limbs; in common does this breath go through the limbs. Therefore at pleasure the Hotṛ may recite what the Hotrakas recite on the previous day, or the Hotrakas what the Hotṛ (recites). The Hotṛ keeps concluding with the ends of the hymns. Moreover the concluding verses of the Hotrakas are the same at the third pressing; the Hotṛ is the body, the Hotrakas the limbs; the ends of the limbs are the same; therefore the concluding verses of the Hotrakas at the third pressing are the same.

ADHYĀYA III

vi.9(xxviii.1). 'Let¹ the bays carry thee hither' he recites at the morning pressing for the (goblets) being filled, (verses) containing (the words) 'strong', 'drink', 'pressed', and 'be drunk' and so perfect in form. They are (verses) to Indra which he recites; the sacrifice is connected with Indra. They are Gāyatrīs which he recites; the morning pressing is connected with the Gāyatrī. Nine small² (verses) he recites at the morning pressing; in what is small is seed poured; ten at the midday he recites; seed poured in the small having attained the middle part of the woman becomes most firm; nine small (verses) he recites at the third pressing: from what is small are offspring born. In that he repeats the whole of the hymns, verily thus he propagates the sacrificer as an embryo from the sacrifice as the womb of the gods. Some recite seven verses each, seven at the morning pressing, seven at the midday (pressing), seven at the third pressing; saying 'The offering verses should be as many as the invitatory verses;³ seven eastward say the offering verses, seven say the vaṣaṭ call; these are the invitatory verses of those'. That he should not do so; they injure the seed of the sacrifice and moreover the sacrificer himself, for the hymn is the sacrificer. By nine (verses) the Maitrāvaruṇa carries him from this world to the world of the atmosphere, by ten from the world of the atmosphere to yonder world, for the world of the atmosphere is the longest,⁴ with nine from ¹ This chapter, in part, like KB. xxviii. 2 and 3 deals with the Maitrāvaruṇa's recitations at the three pressings, which are RV. i. 16 (ĀÇS. v. 5. 14), vii. 21, and iv. 35 complete in each case as against the alternative of sets of seven verses.

² The argument is that as ten is the norm, nine is small; or defective.

³ I. e. at the Prasthita offering; see ĀÇS. v. 5. 15-18; ÇÇS. vii. 4. 2-10; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, pp. 209, 211, 212.

⁴ Sāyaṇa treats this as if it were antarīkṣalokād dhi: the world meant is in his view the nākaprāṭha.

yonder world to the world of heaven. They cannot bear the sacrificer to the world of heaven who recite sets of seven. Therefore as wholes should he recite the hymns.

vi. 10 (xxviii. 2). Further he says 'Seeing that the sacrifice is for Indra, then why do two only at the morning pressing use as offering verses for the Prasthita (libations) verses manifestly addressed to Indra, namely the Hotṛ and the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin: 'This Soma drink for thee' is the offering verse of the Hotṛ,¹ 'O Indra, thee as a bull we' is that of the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin.² The others use (verses) to various deities; how are their verses connected with Indra?' The Maitrāvaruṇa³ uses as offering verse 'Mitra we hail'; 'Varuṇa for the Soma drinking' (he says); whatever Pada contains (the word) 'drink' is a symbol of Indra; thereby he delights Indra. The Potr⁴ uses as offering verse 'O Maruts, in whose dwelling'; 'He is best protected of men' (he says); the protector is Indra; this is a symbol of Indra; thereby he delights Indra. 'O Agni, bring hither the wives' the Neṣṭṛ⁵ uses as offering verse; 'Tvaṣṭṛ to the Soma drinking' (he says); Tvaṣṭṛ is Indra; this is a symbol of Indra; thereby he delights Indra. 'To him whose food is the ox, whose food the cow' the Agnidh⁶ uses as offering verse; 'Soma-backed, the creator' (he says); the creator is Indra; this is a symbol of Indra; thereby he delights Indra.

'Come hither with those that move at dawn,
The gods, ye that have excellent wealth, Indra and Agni, to the Soma drinking';

is the offering verse of the Achāvāka,⁷ being in itself perfect. So are these verses to Indra; in that they are addressed to various deities, thereby he delights the other deities. In that they are in Gāyatrī, thereby they are connected with Agni; these three with them he obtains.

vi. 11 (xxviii. 3). 'There¹ hath been pressed the divine Soma juice mingled with milk' he recites at the midday for (the goblets) being filled, (verses) containing (the words) 'strong', 'drink', 'pressed', and 'be drunk' and so perfect a form. (The verses) which he recites are addressed to Indra; the sacrifice is connected with Indra; they are Triṣṭubh verses which he recites; the midday pressing is connected with the Trīṣṭubh. They say 'Seeing that (the word) "be drunk" is a symbol of the third pressing, then why does he recite verses containing (the word) "be drunk" and why do they use such verses as offering verses?' At the midday the gods become drunk as it were; they also at the third pressing become drunk together; therefore at the midday he recites (verses) containing the word 'be drunk' and they use such (verses) as offering verses. All of them at the midday use for the Prasthita libations ² verses manifestly addressed to Indra. Some use verses containing (the words) 'penetrate towards'. The Hotr ³ uses as offering verse 'Drink the Soma towards which O dread one thou hast penetrated'. The Maitrāvaruṇa ⁴ uses as offering verse 'Drink it, thou that art impetuous, penetrating'. The Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin ⁵ uses as offering verses 'Do thou drink as of old; let it delight thee'. The Potr ⁶ uses as offering verse 'Come hither; Soma lover they call thee'. The Neṣṭr ⁷ uses as offering verse 'Thine is this Soma; do thou come hither'. The Achāvāka ⁸ uses as offering verse 'For Indra the Soma draughts found aforetime'. The Agnīdh ⁹ uses as offering verse 'Filled is his cup; hail!'. Of these those contain (the words) 'penetrate towards'; Indra was not victorious at the morning pressing; with these (verses) he penetrated towards the midday pressing; in that he penetrated towards, therefore do these verses contain (the words) 'penetrate towards'.

The hymn is RV. vii. 21: the word gorjika is quite uncertain; 'dont la flèche est la vache' is Caland and Henry's rendering of L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 284.

vi.12 (xxviii.4). 'Come ¹ hither, O sons of strength' he recites at the third pressing for (the goblet) being filled, (verses) containing (the words) 'strong', 'drink', 'press', and 'be drunk' and so perfect in form. They are addressed to Indra and the Ṛbhus. They say 'Since they do not chant (verses) to the Ṛbhus, then why do they call it the Ārbhava Pavamāna?' Prajāpati as father having made immortal the Ṛbhus being mortal gave them a share in the third pressing; therefore they do not chant (verses) to the Ṛbhus, but they call it the Ārbhava Pavamāna. Further he says 'Seeing that in the two first pressings he recites according to the metre, Gāyatrī verses at the morning pressing, Trīṣṭubhs at the midday pressing, then why does he recite Trīṣṭubh verses at the third pressing which is connected with the Jagatī?'

‘The third pressing has the sap sucked out; the Triṣṭubh metre is one with the sap not sucked out but full of pure juice; (therefore it serves) to make it full of sap’ should he reply; ‘Moreover he thus gives Indra a share in the pressing’. Further he says ‘Seeing that the third pressing is connected with Indra and the Ṛbhus, then why does he, the Hotr, alone at the third pressing use for the Prasthita libations² what is manifestly (a verse³) to Indra and the Ṛbhus “O Indra with the Ṛbhus, full of strength, the well blended”, while the others use (verses) to various deities, and how are these (verses) connected with Indra and the Ṛbhus’. The *Maitrāvaruṇa*⁴ uses as offering verse ‘O Indra and Varuṇa, drinkers of the pressed this pressed (juice)’; in ‘Your chariot the sacrifice for the enjoyment of the gods’ he mentions many; that is a symbol of the Ṛbhus. The *Brāhmaṇacchāsin*⁵ uses as offering verse ‘With Indra, O Brhaspati, drink the Soma’; in ‘Let the drops well formed enter you’ he mentions many; that is a symbol of the Ṛbhus. The *Potr*⁶ uses as offering verse ‘May the steeds, swift speeding, bring you hither’; in ‘Swiftly leaping, come ye forward on their backs’ he mentions many; that is a symbol of the Ṛbhus. The *Neṣṭr*⁷ uses as offering verse ‘As at home come ye to us, swift to listen’; in ‘Come ye’ he mentions many; that is a symbol of the Ṛbhus. The *Achāvāka*⁸ uses as offering verse ‘O Indra and Viṣṇu drink of this sweet drink’; in ‘The sweet Soma juices of you two have come’ he mentions many; that is a symbol of the Ṛbhus. The *Agnidh*⁹ uses the offering verse ‘This praise to Jātavedas who doth deserve it; in ‘Like a chariot let us magnify with devotion’ he mentions many; that is a symbol of the Ṛbhus. So are these verses addressed to Indra and the Ṛbhus. In that they are addressed to various deities, thereby he delights the other deities. In that they consist mainly of Jagatī verses,¹⁰ and the third pressing is connected with the Jagatī, verily (they serve) to make perfect the pressing.

vi. 13 (xxviii. 5). Further he says ‘Seeing that some of the Hotr’s offices have litanies and others have no litanies, how are they all made by him to have litanies, and be equal and perfect?’ In that naming them together¹ they call them Hotr’s offices, thereby are they equal. In that some of the Hotr’s offices have litanies and others not, thereby are they different. So they all become for him possessed of litanies, equal and perfect. Further he says 'The Hotrakas recite at the morning pressing and recite at the midday pressing; how do they recite at the third pressing?' 'In that at the midday they recite two hymns apiece', he should reply, 'for that reason.' Further he says 'Seeing that the Hotṛ has two litanies, how have the Hotrakas two litanies?' 'In that they use as offering verses (verses) addressed to two deities', he should reply, 'for that reason.'

vi. 14 (xxviii. 6). Further he says 'Seeing that these three Hotṛ's offices are possessed of litanies, how have the others litanies?' The Ājya is the litany of the Agnīdh's office, the Marutvatiya of the Potṛ's, the Vaiçvadeva of the Neṣṭṛ's; these Hotṛ's offices contain the characteristics accordingly.¹ Further he says 'Seeing that some Hotrakas have one direction only given to them, then why has the Potṛ two directions given, and the Neṣṭṛ two ²?' When the Gāyatrī yonder having become an eagle brought the Soma, Indra having cut off the litanies of these Hotṛ's offices gave them to the Hotṛ (saying) 'You have called to me; you have known this'. The gods said 'With speech let us strengthen these two Hotṛ's offices'. Therefore have they two directions. By speech they strengthened the Agnīdh's office; therefore his offering verses are one verse larger.³ Further he says 'Seeing that the Maitrāvaruṇa gives directions to the Hotṛ with 'Let the Hotṛ say the offering verse; let the Hotṛ say the offering verse', then why does he give directions with 'Let the Hotṛ say the offering verse; let the Hotṛ say the offering verse' to the Hotrāṇsins who are not Hotṛs?' The Hotṛ is the breath; all the priests are the breath; verily thus he says in effect 'Let breath say the offering verse; let breath say the offering verse'. Then he says 'Is there a direction for the Udgātṛs, or is there not?' 'There is' he should reply. In that the Praçāstr, after muttering, says 'Do ye chant', this is their direction. Further he says 'Is there a choosing ⁴ of the Achāvāka? Or not?' 'There is' he should reply. In that the Adhvaryu says to him, 'O Achāvāka, say what is to be said by you', this is the choice of him. Further he says 'Seeing that at the third pressing the Maitrāvaruṇa recites (a litany) to Indra and Varuṇa, then why are the strophe and antistrophe addressed to Agni?' With Agni as their head the gods smote away the Asuras from the litanies; therefore its strophe and antistrophe are addressed to Agni.⁵ Further he says 'Seeing that the Brāhmaṇācchaṇsin recites (a litany) to Indra and Bṛhaspati at the third pressing, and the Achāvāka one to Indra and Viṣṇu, how are their strophes and antistrophes addressed to Indra?⁶ Indra drove away the Asuras from the litanies; he said 'With me who?' 'With 'I' and 'I' the deities followed after; in that Indra was the first to drive away, therefore their strophes and antistrophes are addressed to Indra; in that with 'I' and 'I' the deities followed after, therefore do they recite to various deities.

vi. 15 (xxviii. 7). Further he says 'Seeing that the third pressing is connected with the All-gods, then why are these hymns to Indra in Jagatī recited as the commencement at the third pressing?' 'Verily laying hold of Indra by them they proceed' he should reply. Moreover in that the third pressing is connected with the Jagatī, it is for desire¹ of the Jagatī. Whatever metre is recited thereafter, it is all in the Jagatī if these hymns to Indra in Jagatī are recited as the commencement at the third pressing. Then at the end the Achāvāka recites a hymn in Triṣṭubh² 'With the rite'; the rite which is to be praised he refers to. 'With sap' (he says); sap is food; (verily it serves) to win proper food. 'With safe paths furthering us' (he says); verily thus he recites for safety day by day. Further he says 'Since the third pressing is connected with the Jagatī, then why have they concluding verses in Triṣṭubh?' The Triṣṭubh is strength; verily thus at the end they keep finding support in strength. 'This speech of mine hath reached Indra, Varuṇa' is that of the Maitrāvaruṇa;³ 'May Brhaspati protect us around behind' that of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin;⁴ 'Both have conquered' is that of the Achāvāka,⁵ for they two are victorious; 'They are not conquered, he is not conquered' (he says), for neither of them has conquered.

'What time, O Viṣṇu, with Indra ye did strive Then did ye two divide in three the thousand'

(he says). Indra and Viṣṇu fought with the Asuras; having conquered, them they said 'Let us make an arrangement'. The Asuras said 'Be it so'. Indra said 'So much as Viṣṇu three times traverses, so much be ours; let the rest be yours'. He traversed these worlds, then the Vedas, then speech.

⁶ RV. i. 57; x. 68 and 43 are the Çastra; viii. 21. 1-2; 9-10 are the Stotriya and Anurūpa of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin; ii. 13; vii. 100; i. 156; vi. 69; and viii. 98. 7-9; 13. 4-6 are the verses of the Achāvāka referred to. All these are the Çastras of the Hotrakas at the third pressing in the Ukthya; see ĀÇS. vi. 1. 2; ÇÇS. ix. 1-4; AB. iii. 49, 50.

¹ Cf. KB. xxx. 2, 3 and see also Vait. xxxii. 35. The form jagatkāmā is very abnormal; mitrakṛtyā in AB. iii. 4. 6 is not probably a parallel, but bhūyaskāmā occurs in a Kaṇva passage of the ÇB., cited by Eggeling, SBE. xxvi. 42, n. 2.

They say 'What is the thousand?' 'These worlds, these Vedas, moreover speech' he should reply. 'Did ye divide' the Achāvāka repeats in the Ukthya, for he is then the last; the Hotṛ at the Agniṣṭoma and the Atirātra, for he is then the last. 'Should he repeat at the Ṣoḍaṣin? Or should he not repeat?' 'He should repeat' they say; 'Why should he repeat in the other days and not at this?' Therefore he should repeat.⁶

vi. 16 (xxviii. 8). Further he says 'Seeing that the third pressing is connected with the Nārāṇsa, then why does the Achāvāka at the end recite in the Ṣilpas verses without reference to the Nārāṇsa.¹ The Nārāṇsa (hymn) is a development; some seed is developed as it were; this is already developed and so propagated. Again the Nārāṇsa hymn is soft and slipping; but the Achāvāka is the last; (they think) 'We shall establish it in something firm for the sake of firmness'. Therefore the Achāvāka at the end in the Ṣilpas recites (verses) without reference to the Nārāṇsa (thinking) 'We shall establish it in something firm, for the sake of firmness'.

ADHYĀYA IV

The Sāmpāta and other Hymns.

vi. 17 (xxix. 1). The strophe of the next day they make the antistrophe, at the morning pressing¹ for the continuity of the Ahina (sacrifice). Just as the one day (rite) pressing, so the Ahina; just as the pressings of the one day (rite) as a pressing keep united, so the days of the Ahina keep united. In that they make the strophe of the next day the antistrophe at the morning pressing for the continuity of the Ahina, verily thus they continue the Ahina. The gods and the seers planned 'With what is the same, let us continue the sacrifice; they saw this similarity in the sacrifice, ⁶ The last four syllables are repeated; see ĀCS. vii. 1. 12.

¹ Sāyaṇa explains the term Nārāṇsa as praise of men like the Rbhus or Aṅgirasas. In vi. 32 the Nārāṇsi verses (Dānastutis) are mentioned. Cf. however the Nārāṇsa hymn, RV. x. 62 in AB. vi. 27; KB. xxiii. 8. There can be no real doubt that the real reference is to RV. x. 62 with its generative reference. The reply to the objection is twofold; in the first place the seed when developed needs no further aid and as the Achāvāka is late in the ritual it is developed when it reaches him. Secondly the hymn is soft and so a bad ending. The term Nārāṇsa occurs in yet another use of the cups of the libations (Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 220: the connexion with Nārāṇsa and the manes is discussed by Oldenberg, ZDMG. liv.49 seq. and Hillebrandt, Vedo Myth. ii. 102), but this is not here in place.

the Pragāthas the same,² the beginnings³ the same, the hymns⁴ the same. Indra is a house frequenter; where Indra goes first, then he returns again; verily (it serves) to secure Indra in the sacrifice.

vi. 18 (xxix. 2). These Sāmpātas Viçvāmītra first saw; them seen by Viçvāmītra Vāmadeva created,¹ 'Thee, O Indra with the thunderbolt'; 'That which of ours Indra rejoiceth in and desireth', and 'How? of what Hotr hath he made great?' To them he swiftly moved; in that he swiftly moved (samapatat), that is why the Sāmpātas have their name. Viçvāmītra considered 'The Sāmpātas which I saw Vāmadeva has created; what hymns now can I create as counter Sāmpātas?' He created these hymns as Sāmpātas their counterparts.² 'Straightway on birth, the bull, the youngling,' 'Indra, breaker of citadels, overcame the Dāsa with his beams,' 'This offering do thou make attain,' 'Thy comrades, Soma-loving, desire thee,' 'Ordering the bearer hath gone to the grandson of the daughter', and 'Like a carpenter, have I fashioned a thought.' 'Who alone is to be invoked by mortals' Bharadvāja³ (saw). 'With sharp horns, like a terrible wild beast', and 'Praises have been offered in desire of glory' Vasiṣṭha⁴ (saw). 'To him the eager, the impetuous' Nodhas⁵ (saw). Having recited at the morning pressing the strophes of the six-day (rite), at the midday they recite the Ahīna hymns. These are the Ahīna hymns; 'Let the true one come hither, the bounteous, he of the Soma lees' the Maitrāvaruṇa⁶ (recites) containing (the word) 'true'. 'To him the eager, the impetuous' (this hymn) containing (the word) 'prayer' in 'To Indra the prayers most truly given' and 'O Indra, these prayers have the Gotamas made' the Brāhmaṇācchāsin⁷ recites. 'Ordering the bearer' (this hymn) containing (the word) 'bearer' in 'They have produced the bearer' the Achāvāka⁸ recites. They say 'Why does the Achāvāka recite this hymn containing (the word) "bearer" both in the days that go away and those that come up again?'

This is repeated both on the days of the Ṣaḍahas and also on the days, which once past do not recur, here specified; for its use on the Ṣaḍahas, see AB. vi. 19. 4. The term Ahīna is here a quite peculiar one, the days being single days in se. The order is (1) strophe and antistrophe; (2) the Kadvant Pragātha; (3) the Āram bhāṇīya; (4) the aharahaṇṇasya; (5) the Ahīna for the Maitrāvaruṇa; (4) and (5) being inverted for the other two; see ĀÇS. vii. 4.

The knower of many Rcs is powerful; the hymn contains (the word) 'bearer'; the bearer bears the yoke to which it is yoked. Therefore the Achāvāka recites in both cases this hymn containing (the word) 'bearer', both in the days that go away and in those that come up again. These are on five days, the Caturvīṇṇa, Abhijit, Viṣuvant, Viṣvajit and Mahāvṛata; these days are Ahīnas, for nothing in them is left out; these days go away without recurring; therefore they recite them on these days. In that they recite them, (they hope) 'Let us obtain the worlds of heaven without defect, with all forms, with all perfection. In that they recite them, they invite Indra with them, like a bull to a cow. In that moreover they recite them, it is for the continuity of the Ahīna; verily thus they continue the Ahīna.

vi. 19 (xxix. 3). These three Saṃpāta (hymns) the Maitrāvaruṇa recites one by one day by day, alternating their order;¹ on the first day (he recites) 'Thee O Indra, with the thunderbolt', on the second 'That which of ours Indra rejoiceth in and desireth', on the third 'How? of what Hotṛ hath he made great?' Three Saṃpātas the Brāhmaṇācchaṣin recites one by one day by day, alternating their order,² on the first day 'Indra, breaker of citadels, overcame the Dāsa with his beams', on the second 'Who alone is to be invited by mortals', on the third 'With sharp horns, like a terrible wild beast'. Three Saṃpātas the Achāvāka recites one by one, day by day, alternating their order,³ on the first day 'This offering do thou make attain', on the second 'Thy comrades, Soma-loving, desire thee', on the third 'Ordering the bearer hath gone to the grandson of the daughter'. These number nine; there are three to be recited every day;⁴ these make up twelve; the year has twelve months; Prajāpati is the year; the sacrifice is Prajāpati; thus they obtain the year and Prajāpati; thus they continue day by day to find support in the year, in Prajāpati, in the sacrifice. Between them they should insert an insertion, Virāj verses and verses⁵ by Vimada without repetition of o on the fourth day, Paṅkti⁶ verses on the fifth,

⁵ RV. vii. 22. 5-8; vii. 31. 10-12; see KB. xxix. 5 where they are called Ḡilpas. These are made into three triplets and inserted by the three priests on the fourth day of the Ṣaḍaha; the verses by Vimada are not an alternative as suggested by Sāyaṇa (ekah pakṣaḥ . . . pakṣāntaram) but an addition, and the Ānand. ed. reads vaimadiḥ ca caturthe (which is of course palaeographically practically the same as the reading vaimadiḥ caturthe). The verses are RV. x. 23. 1-7; the first three verses in each case go to the Maitrāvaruṇa; the Brāhmaṇācchaṣin has 3-5; the Achāvāka 5-7. See ĀḠS. vii. 11. 34 seq.; Vait. xxxii. 7.

and verses by Parucchepa⁷ on the sixth. Moreover on those days which have great Stomas the Maitrāvaruṇa⁸ should insert 'What friend of man to-day, god-loving?', the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin,⁹ 'He who hath been placed as it were in the forest delighting,' and the Achāvāka¹⁰ 'Come hither, standing on thy chariot seat'. These are the insertions; by means of these insertions the gods, the seers, conquered the world of heaven. Verily thus also the sacrificers by these insertions conquer the world of heaven.

vi. 20 (xxviii. 4) 'Straightway on birth the bull, the youngling' the Maitrāvaruṇa¹ recites day by day before the hymns. That hymn is heavenly; by this hymn the gods conquered the world of heaven, by this the seers. Verily thus also the sacrificers by this hymn conquer the world of heaven. It is by Viṣvāmitra; Viṣvāmitra was the friend of all; all becomes friendly to him who knows thus and to those for whom a Maitrāvaruṇa, knowing thus, recites this before the hymns day by day. It contains (the words) 'bull' and 'cattle'; (it serves) to win cattle. It is of five verses; the Paṅkti has five Padas; food is the Paṅkti; (it serves) to win proper food. 'Praises have been offered in desire of glory' the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin² recites day by day the hymn containing (the word) 'praise' and so perfect. This hymn is heavenly; by this hymn the gods conquered the world of heaven, by this the seers. Verily thus also the sacrificers by this hymn conquer the world of heaven. It is by Vasiṣṭha; by it Vasiṣṭha went to the dear abode of Indra, he conquered the highest world. He goes to the dear abode of Indra, he conquers the highest world who knows thus. It has six verses; the seasons are six; (it serves) to win the seasons. He recites it after the Sāmpātas. Having obtained thus the world of heaven the sacrificers find support in this world. 'Like a carpenter have I fashioned a thought', the Achāvāka³ recites day by day, containing (the word) 'towards' and a symbol of continuity. 'Pondering on the dear (days) to come' (he says); the days to come are dear; verily thus they proceed pondering on, laying hold of, them. The world of heaven is to come as compared with this world; verily thus he alludes to it. 'I long to see the sages, with wisdom' (he says), our seers who are departed are the sages; verily thus he refers to them. It is by Viṣvāmitra; Viṣvāmitra was the friend of all; all becomes friendly to him who knows thus. That which he recites has no deity mentioned and is connected with Prajāpati. Prajāpati is he whose name is not mentioned; (it serves) to obtain Prajāpati. Once⁴ he mentions Indra; thereby he departs not from the Indra form. It is in ten verses; the Virāj has ten syllables; the Virāj is food; (it serves) to win food. As to its being of ten verses, the breaths are ten; verily thus they obtain the breaths, they place breaths in the body. He recites it after the Sāmpātas; verily thus having obtained the world of heaven, the sacrificers find support in this world.

vi. 21 (xxix. 5). 'Who, O Indra, him that hath thee as his wealth', 'What newest of praises', and 'What hath not been wrought by him' are the Pragāthas¹ containing the word 'who' which are recited day by day at the beginning. Prajāpati is Who; (verily they serve) to obtain Prajāpati. Moreover in that they contain (the word) 'who' and who is food, (they serve) to win food. Moreover as to their containing (the word) 'who', day by day they praise employing the Ahīna hymn, duly appeased, and it is by the Pragāthas containing (the word) 'who' that they appease them. Appeased they bring them prosperity (ka); appeased they carry them towards the world of heaven. The beginnings of the hymns which they recite should be in Triṣṭubh; these some recite before the Pragāthas, calling them inserted verses. That he should not do so. The Hotṛ is lordly power, the Hotṛāṇsins are the people; verily thus they would make the people refractory to the lordly power which is a confusion. He should know 'These my hymn beginnings are Triṣṭubhs'. Just as men set sail on an ocean so set they sail who perform the year or a twelve day (rite); just as men desiring to reach the other shore mount a ship well found,² so do they mount the Triṣṭubhs. That metre having made them go to the world of heaven does not fail, for it is the strongest of all. He should not utter the call for these (verses) (thinking) 'The metre is the same; moreover let me not make them inserted verses.' In that they recite these (verses), (they think) 'Let us mount the hymns with the recognized beginnings of the hymns.' In that they recite these (verses), verily with them they summon Indra, like a bull to the cow. Moreover in that they recite them, (it serves) for the continuity of the Ahīna; verily thus they continue the Ahīna.

vi. 22 (xxix. 6). 'O Indra drive away all our enemies in front' the Maitrāvaruṇa¹ recites day by day before the hymns:

Drive away those to the north, O hero, those below to the south
That we may delight in thy wide protection’

(he says); it is a symbol of freedom from fear; for he desires as he proceeds freedom from fear. ‘Those yoked with prayer, I yoke with prayer’ the Brāhmaṇācchaṇsin² recites day by day; in ‘I yoke’ it contains (the word) yoke, since the Ahīna is yoked as it were; (therefore) it is a symbol of the Ahīna. ‘To wide space thou leadest us after knowing’ the Achāvāka³ recites day by day; since the Ahīna goes as it were, (the words) ‘Thou leadest after’ are a symbol of the Ahīna; (the words) ‘Thou leadest’ are a symbol of the proceeding of the sacrificial session. These are recited day by day. They should conclude with the same verses;⁴ Indra is a home-goer as regards their sacrifice; as a bull to the cow, or as a cow to its well-known place of pasture, so does Indra come to their sacrifice. He should not conclude with the ‘Prosperity let us invoke’ verse⁵ the Ahīna (hymn); the Kṣatriya departs from his kingdom; his rival he then summons.

vi. 23 (xxix. 7). Then follows the yoking and releasing of the Ahīna (rite), with¹ ‘He traversed the atmosphere’ he yokes; with ‘So Indra’ he releases; with² ‘I of the two connected with Sarasvatī’ and ‘Surely this of thee’ he yokes the Ahīna; with³ ‘Let us be thine, O god Varuṇa’ and ‘Chant ye’ he releases. He is worthy to weave the Ahīna who knows how to yoke and to release it. In that they are yoked on the Caturviṇṇa day is the yoking; in that they are released before the concluding Atirātra is the releasing. If on the Caturviṇṇa day they were to conclude with (the verses) of the one day (rite), they would conclude the sacrifice, and would not make it an Ahīna; if they were again to conclude with the concluding verses of the Ahīna, the sacrifice would perish, just as one wearied and not being released perishes. With both sets should they conclude.⁴ That is as if one were to go a long journey unyoking from time to time; the sacrifice becomes continuous, and yet they release (it). He should not over-recite the Soma by more than one or two verses at the two pressings⁵; when a Stoma is over-recited by many verses then come into existence long stretches of wild; he may use an unlimited number at the third pressing; the world of heaven is unlimited; (it serves) to obtain the world of heaven. He grasps the Ahīna continuous and firm who knowing thus performs the Ahīna.

vi. 24 (xxix. 8). The gods saw the cows in a cave; they sought to win them with the sacrifice; they obtained them with the sixth day. At the morning pressing with Nabhāka's (hymn) they tore open (nabh) the cave; in that they tore it open, verily thus they loosened it. On the third pressing having destroyed the cave with the Vālakhilyās as the thunderbolt and (the verse) of one Pada as the hammer of speech, they drove out the cows. Verily thus also the sacrificers tear open the cave at the morning pressing with Nabhāka's (hymn); in that they tear it open, verily thus they loosen it. Therefore the Hotrakas at the morning pressing recite triplets¹ by Nabhāka. 'When supporting the summits', the Maitrāvaruṇa, 'O Indra, ancient are thine addresses', the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin; 'The middle of conflicts', the Achāvāka. At the third pressing having destroyed the cave with the Vālakhilyās as the thunderbolt and (the verse) of one Pada as the hammer of speech they obtain the cows. First he transposes by Padas² the six hymns of the Vālakhilyās, by half verses the second time, by verses the third time. When transposing by Padas he should place (a verse) of one Pada in each Pragātha; that is the hammer of speech. There are five (verses) of one Pada; four from the tenth day, one from the Mahāvrata. There are the Mahānāmnī Padas of eight syllables; he should recite as many of these as he requires to complete; he should disregard the others. When transposing by half verses he should recite these (verses) of one Pada, and these eight-syllable Padas of the Mahānāmnīs. When trans-syllable verse is added, viz. indro viṣvasya gopatiḥ; indro viṣvasya bhūpatiḥ; indro viṣvasya rājati; indro viṣvasya cetati; indro viṣvaṁ virājati; further the eight-syllable Padas of the Mahānāmnīs are added (from AĀ. iv. pracetana pra cetaya, &c.) so far as is needed to fill up the number of Pragāthas. The transposition of half verses follows in precisely the same way, thus viii. 49. 1 a and b; 50. 2 c and d; that by verses viii. 49. 1; 50. 2, &c. ĀCS. viii. 2. 23 says that the Mahānāmnīs yield with the purīṣas 23 sets of eight syllables to fill up the 28 Pragāthas of the six Vālakhilyā hymns. Below in AB. vi. 28 two other ways of the recitation are referred to.

¹ RV. viii. 41. 4-6; 40. 9-11; 3-5; ĀCS. vii. 2. 17. They follow the Anurūpas or Triṣṭubhs.

² The mode of recitation is given by ĀCS. viii. 2. 19-21. The first six hymns (RV. viii. 49-54) are recited by Padas, half verses, and verses; the order is first Pada of first verse of first hymn, then second Pada of second verse of second hymn; first Pada second verse second hymn, second Pada first verse first hymn and so forth. The Pragāthas are made up of two verses; this done, an eight-

posing by verses, he should recite these (verses) of one Pada and these eight-syllable Padas of the Mahānāmnis. In that he transposes for the first time the six hymns of the Vālakhilyās, verily thus he transposes breath and speech; in that for the second time, thus he transposes eye and mind; in that for the third, thus he transposes ear and self. Thus is the desire in the transposition obtained, in the Vālakhilyās as the thunderbolt, in (the verse) of one food as the hammer of speech, in the arrangement of the breaths. For the fourth time he recites the Pragāthas without transposition; the Pragāthas are cattle; (they serve) to win cattle. He should not here insert (the verse) of one Pada; if he were to insert (the verse) of one Pada, by the hammer of speech he would strike off cattle from the sacrificer. If a man were to say to him then 'You have struck off cattle from the sacrificer, you have made him without cattle', it would certainly be so. Therefore he should not insert (the verse) of one Pada. He inverts the last two hymns; this is their transposition. This to Saubala Sarpis Vātsi recited; he said 'I have secured³ the most abundant cattle in this sacrifice; not the least will come to me.' To him he gave (fees) as to great priests. That recitation is rich in cattle and heavenly; therefore he recites it.

vi. 25 (xxix. 9). He mounts the difficult mounting; the explanation of this has been given.¹ In (a hymn) to Indra² should he mount for one desiring cattle; cattle are connected with Indra. It should be in Jagatī; cattle are connected with the Jagatī; it should be a great hymn; verily thus he establishes the sacrificer in most numerous cattle. In (a hymn) by Baru should he mount; it is a great hymn and in Jagatī. In (a hymn) to Indra and Varuṇa³ should he mount for one desiring support. This Hotṛ's office has these as deities, and has support in these; in that (the offering verse is) addressed to Indra and Varuṇa,⁴ verily thus he establishes it in its own support as the end. As to (his mounting) in (a hymn) to Indra and Varuṇa, there is here a Nivid; by a Nivid are desires obtained. If he mounts in (a hymn) to Indra and Varuṇa, it should be in (a hymn) by Suparṇa. Thus is obtained the desire in (the hymn) to Indra and Varuṇa, in (the hymn) by Suparṇa.

vi. 26 (xxix. 10). They say 'Should he recite together¹ on the sixth day?

Or should he not recite together?' 'He should recite together' they say; 'Why should he recite together on the other days and why not recite together on this?' Or rather they say 'He should not recite together. The sixth day is the world of heaven; the world of heaven is not a place where all meet; only certain ones meet in the world of heaven'. If he were to recite together, he would make it common; in that he does not recite together, it is a symbol of the world of heaven. Therefore he should not recite together. Again as to his not reciting together, the strophe is the body, the Vālakhilyās the breaths; if he were to recite together, from these deities he would sever the breaths of the sacrificer; if one were to say of him then 'From these two deities he has severed the breaths of the sacrificer; breath will leave him', it would certainly be so. Therefore he should not recite together. If he should reflect 'I have recited the Vālakhilyās; let me recite together before the difficult mounting', he should not on any account so desire. But if pride seizes him, let him recite many hundreds after the difficult mounting; therein is obtained that in desire of which he does so. The Vālakhilyās are addressed to Indra; they have Padas of twelve syllables; therein is there obtained the desire that is in the Jagatī (hymn) to Indra.² Moreover there is this hymn to Indra and Varuṇa,³ and a closing verse for Indra and Varuṇa; therefore he should not recite together. They say 'As is the Stotra, so the Ṣastra; the Vālakhilyās are recited transposed, is the Stotra transposed or not transposed?' 'Transposed' he should reply, 'A twelve-syllable within eight-syllable⁴ (Padas).' They say 'As is the Ṣastra, so the offering verse; three deities are praised, Agni, Indra, Varuṇa, but he uses (a verse) to Indra and Varuṇa as offering verse; how is it that Agni is not omitted?' Varuṇa is Agni, this also is declared by a seer.⁵ 'Since thou, O Agni, art born as Varuṇa'; thus in that he uses (a verse) to Indra and Varuṇa as offering verse, Agni is not omitted.

works of art; a work of art is accomplished in him who knows thus. As to these 'works of art' (Çastras), the Çilpas are a perfection of the self; verily by them the sacrificer perfects himself as composed of the metres. He recites the *Nābhānediṣṭha*² (hymn); the Nābhānediṣṭha (hymn) is seed; thus he pours seed; he recites it without mention (of the deity); without mention is seed secretly poured in the womb. He becomes mingled with seed: 'United with earth he sprinkled seed' (he says); verily (it serves) to perfect seed. He recites it with the *Nārāṇsa*³ (hymn); man is offspring praise speech; verily thus he places speech in offspring; therefore offspring are born speaking. Some recite it before saying 'Speech has its place in front'; others after saying 'Speech has its place behind'; in the middle should he recite it; speech has its place in the middle; in a place nearer the end; speech is nearer the back as it were. It the Hotṛ having poured in seed form hands over to the Maitrāvaruṇa,⁴ (saying) 'Do thou provide the breaths for it'.

vi. 28 (xxx. 2). He recites the Vālakhilyās;¹ the Vālakhilyās are the breaths; verily thus he provides breaths for him. He recites them transposed; these breaths are transposed, expiration (linked) with inspiration, cross breathing with inspiration. He transposes by Padas the first two hymns, by half verses the second two, by verses the third two. In that he transposes the first two hymns, thus he transposes breath and speech; in that the second two, thus he transposes eye and mind; in that the third two, thus he transposes ear and self. Some transpose, putting Brhatī verses and Satobṛhatī verses in twos together; then the desire that is in transposition is obtained, but Pragāthas do not come about. He should transpose with intermingling; thus are Pragāthas produced. The Vālakhilyās are to be Pragāthas; therefore should he transpose with intermingling; as to his intermingling, the Brhatī is the body, the Satobṛhatī the breaths; he recites

and the Maitrāvaruṇa using only the Brhatī hymns; see ĀÇS. viii. 4. 4-12.

the Brhatī, it is the body, then the Satobṛhatī, it is the breaths; then the Brhatī, then the Satobṛhatī; thus he continues to strengthen the body with the breaths around. Therefore should he transpose with intermingling. Again as to his intermingling, the Brhatī is the body, the Satobṛhatī cattle; he recites the Brhatī, it is the body, then the Satobṛhatī, it is cattle; then the Brhatī, then the Satobṛhatī; thus he continues to strengthen the body with cattle around. Therefore should he transpose with intermingling. He inverts the two last hymns; ² this is their transposition. The Maitrāvaruṇa having made the breaths for it hands it over to the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin (saying) 'Do thou propagate it'.

vi. 29 (xxx. 3). He recites the Sukīrti ¹ (hymn); the Sukīrti hymn is a birthplace of the gods; thus he produces the sacrificer from the sacrifice as a divine birthplace. He recites the Vṛṣākapi ² (hymn); the Vṛṣākapi is the body; verily thus he makes a body for it. He recites it with the sound o; the sound o is food; thus to it on birth he gives food as the breast to a child. It is in Pañkti verses; man is fivefold and arranged in five divisions, hair, skin, flesh, bone, marrow. As great as is man, so great does he make the sacrificer. Having produced him the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin hands him over to the Achāvāka (saying) 'Do thou fashion a support for him'.

vi. 30 (xxx. 4). He recites the Evayāmarut ¹ (hymn); the Evayāmarut (hymn) is a support; verily thus he makes a support for him. It he recites with the sound o; the sound o is food; verily thus he places food in him. It is in Jagatī or Atijagatī; all the world is connected with the Jagatī or Atijagatī. It is addressed to the Maruts; the Maruts are waters, food is water; verily thus in order he places proper food in him. These they call the accompanying (hymns), the Nābhānediṣṭha, the Vālakhilyās, the Vṛṣākapi, the Evayāmarut. These he should recite together or not recite together; if he recites them separately; that would be as if one were to divide in two a man or seed; therefore he should recite them together or not recite them together. vi. 31 (xxx. 5). So the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin: while the Nābhānediṣṭha is not recited, he recites the Vṛṣākapi; it is the body; seed is first, then the body; how then is the sacrificer produced? How are the breaths not confused?' 'By means of the whole sacrificial rite they prepare the sacrificer; like an embryo in the womb, so he lies growing. Not at once in the beginning does it come into being whole; separately each member comes into being as it comes into being' (is the reply). If they perform all on the same day, the sacrifice comes into order, the generation of the sacrificer comes into order. Moreover the Hotṛ recites at the third pressing the Evayāmarut (hymn); verily thus at the end he establishes him in a support.

Thus he placed again the sap in the metres. He sacrifices with metres full of sap, with metres full of sap he extends the sacrifice who knows thus. He recites the Nārāṇsī (verses)¹; men are offspring, praise is speech; verily thus he places speech in offspring; therefore offspring here are born speaking (for him), who knows thus. In these he should not say the sound o, nor should he accent specially⁸ (thinking) 'Let me not make to move these quarters'. These he recites by half-verses, for support. He recites the man-ordering (verses); the man-ordering (verses) are offspring; verily thus having put in order the quarters he establishes offspring in them. In these he should not say the sound o nor accent specially (thinking) 'Let me not make to move these offspring'. These he recites by half-verses, for support. He recites the Indragāthās¹⁰; by the singing against them of the Indragāthās, the god overpowered the Asuras; verily thus also the sacrificers by singing the Indragāthās against the hated rival overpower him. By half-verses he recites these, for support.

vi. 33 (xxx. 7). He recites the prattle of Aitaṇa¹; Aitaṇa, the sage, saw the life of Agni; 'the unwearied part of the sacrifice' say some. He began 'These horses float up to Pratiṣa Prāṭisatvana'; (his son) Abhyagni Aitaṇāyana, having come, arriving at a wrong moment, seized his mouth (saying) 'Our father has become out of his mind'. He said to him 'Go hence; thou hast been a sluggard in spoiling my speech; I was about to make the cow of a hundred (years of) life, man of a thousand (years of) life; worst of all do I make thine offspring since thou here hast fastened on me'. Therefore they say 'The Abhyagnis Aitaṇāyanas are the least of the Aurvas'. Some recite it of longer length; he should not prevent it; 'Recite as much as is desired' he should say; the prattle of Aitaṇapa is life; verily thus he prolongs the life of the sacrificer who knows thus. As to there being the prattle of Aitaṇa; the prattle of Aitaṇa is the sap of the metres; verily thus he places sap in the metres. He recites the prattle of Aitaça, taking it by Padas, like a Nivid. He says om with the last Pada as in the case of a Nivid. He recites the riddle verses.² The gods having confounded the Asuras with the riddles overcame them ; verily thus also the sacrificers having confounded the hated rival with the riddles overcome him. These he recites by half verses, for support. He recites the Ājijñāsenyā (verses) ;³ by means of the Ājijñāsenyā verses the gods recognizing the Asuras overcame them ; verily thus also the sacrificers by means of the Ājijñāsenyā (verses) recognizing the hated rival overcome him. refuse fame; therefore I did not refuse'. If one desire to refuse (to officiate at a sacrifice) on account of (another) sacrifice³ should he refuse it. But if (the offerer) is one for whom it is not suitable to sacrifice, spontaneous refusal is appropriate.

vi. 35 (xxx. 9). The Āṅgirasas sacrificed for the Ādityas; to them as sacrificing for them, they gave this earth full of fees; being accepted it caused them to burn; they cast her away; she becoming a lioness with gaping jaws assailed men. Of her as she burned came forth thin fissures which are now upon her; aforetime she was all even, as it were. Therefore they say 'He shall not accept a gift laid aside', (thinking) 'Let it not, being pierced with heat, pierce me with heat.' But if he should accept it, he should give it to a hated rival; he is ruined. Now as to yonder sun: he having taken the form of a white horse with its body bound with a horse halter went (to them) (saying) 'This we bring (as a fee) for you.' Thus is the *Devanītha*¹ recited,

'The Ādityas, O singer, brought a fee to the Āṅgirasas;
This, O singer, they did not approach'; for they did not approach the (earth).

'But this, O singer, they did approach' for they did approach yonder (sun).

'This, O singer, they did not accept,' for they did not accept this (earth).

'But this, O singer, they did accept,' for they did accept yonder (sun).

'Lest the days be without discrimination'

he is the discriminator of the days.

'Without a leader² the sacrifices' the fee is the leader of the sacrifices; just as in this world a wagon without a leader comes to harm, so the sacrifice without a fee comes to harm; therefore they say 'At the sacrifice a fee should be given, if but a small one.'

'White and swift of motion,
And most rapid of foot,
Swiftly it accomplisheth its purpose;
The Ādityas, Rudras, Vasus praise thee,
This gift do thou accept, O Āṅgiras';

³ This must be the sense, as Sāyaṇa takes it:
asmāt = ārtvijyāt.

ix. 306) suggests neḍ asann 'that they may not be' in this and the next case.

² Again the text is hopeless. Haug as before renders 'he being carried away', the wise men were without a leader (from Sāyaṇa). Read below atyalpakāpi.

Verily thus they sought acceptance of their gift.

‘This gift, great and broad,
Let the gods give as a boon,
Let that be pleasing to you,
Given be it day by day,
Do ye accept it.’

Verily thus they accepted³ it. He recites this Devanītha taking it by Padas like a Nivid; he says om with its last Pada as in the case of a Nivid.

vi. 36 (xxx. 10). He recites the Bhūtechads¹; by means of the Bhūtechads the gods assailed the Asuras with battle and with craft. The gods, having obscured by the Bhūtechads the might of the Asuras, overcame them; verily thus the sacrificers having obscured by the Bhūtechads the might of the hated rival overcame him. These he recites by half verses, for support. He recites the Āhanasyā (verses);² from this organ is seed poured, from seed offspring are born; verily thus he secures propagation. Ten he recites; the Virāj has ten syllables; the Virāj is food; from food is seed poured; from seed offspring are born; verily thus he secures propagation. In them he inserts the sound o; the sound o is food; from food is seed poured, from seed offspring are born; verily thus he secures propagation. In ‘I have celebrated Dadhikrāvan’ he recites the Dadhikrā (verse);³ Dadhikrā is the divine filter; herein he has said a speech full of impurity; thus speech he purifies with the divine filter. It is in Anuṣṭubh; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; thus with its own metre he purifies speech. In ‘The most sweet draughts are pressed’ he recites (verses) to Soma, the purifying;⁴ (verses) to Soma, the purifying are a divine filter; herein he has said a speech full of impurity; thus with the divine filter he purifies speech. They are in Anuṣṭubh; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; verily thus with its own metre he purifies speech. In ‘The drop hath mounted Aṅgumati’ he recites a triplet to Indra and Brhaspati;⁵

‘The hosts, godless, as they attacked,
With Brhaspati to aid, Indra overwhelmed’

³ Sāyaṇa clearly read ajagrabhaīṣan which in sense is right, despite Aufrecht. In AB. vi. 24 occurs parjagrabhaīṣam. The most probable reading is ajigrabhaīṣan with i as elsewhere (Whitney, Sansk. Gr. § 1031 b; cf. § 801 i), unless we allow ai as an abnormality for i.

(he says); the Asura folk were rebellious towards the gods; Indra with Br̥haspati as companion smote away the Asura hue when attacking; verily thus also the sacrificers by means of Indra and Br̥haspati as aid smite away the Asura hue when attacking. They say 'Should he recite together⁶ on the sixth day.'⁷ Or should he not recite together?' 'He should recite together' they say,⁸ 'why should he recite together on the other days and not recite together on this?' Or rather they say 'He should not recite together; the sixth day is the world of heaven; the world of heaven is not a place where all meet; only certain people meet in that world. If he were to recite together, he would make it common. In that he does not recite together, that is a symbol of the world of heaven; therefore he should not recite together. Again as to his not reciting together; the litanies here are the Nābhānediṣṭha, the Vālakhilyās, the Vṛṣākapi and the Evayāmarut; if he were to recite together, he would loose the desire that is in these. The Vṛṣākapi is connected with Indra; the prattle of Aitaṇa is all the metres; herein is the desire obtained which is in (the hymn) in Jagatī to Indra; moreover the hymn is addressed to Indra and Br̥haspati;⁷ the concluding verse is addressed to Indra and Br̥haspati; therefore he should not recite together.

SUPPLEMENTARY MATTER AND THE RĀJASŪYA.

ADHYĀYA I

The Division of the Sacrificial Animal.

vii. 1 (xxxi. 1). Now¹ regarding the division of the sacrificial animal ; we shall declare the division. The two jaws along with the tongue belong to Prastotr̥; the breast in eagle shape to the Udgātṛ, the palatal part of the throat to the Pratihar̥, the right loin to the Hotṛ, the left to the Brahman, the right thigh to the Maitrāvaruṇa, the left to the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin, the right side with the shoulder to the Adhvaryu, the left to the Upagātṛs, the left shoulder to the Pratipasthātṛ, the right lower foreleg to the Neṣṭṛ, the left to the Potṛ, the right foreleg to the Achāvāka, the left to the Agnīdh, the right upper foreleg to the Ātreya, the left to the Sadasya, the seat and spine to the householder, the two right feet² to the man who gives the fast milk to the householder, the two left feet to him who gives the fast milk to the wife of the householder,³ the lip is common to the two ; this the householder should leave over. They take the tail to the wives, but they should give it to a Brahman. The fleshy growth on the neck and three ribs belong to the Grāvastut ; three ribs and half the flesh⁴ to the Unnetṛ, the other half of the flesh and the lungs to the slaughterer ; it he should give to a Brahman, if he is not a Brahman. The head belongs to the Subrahmanyā priest, the skin to him who declares the pressing on the next day ;⁵ the sacrificial food to all or to the Hotṛ. These thirty-six each

³ Apparently this sense is meant, and so with enayoh, but Sāyaṇa's comment is confused.

⁵ I. e. the Agnīdh ; see ĀṢ. vi. 11. 16. Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 308) cites PB. xvi. 18. 10 ; LṢ. i. 1. 9, 12 ; Ṣ. xiv. 40. 21 ; of one foot support the sacrifice; the Brhatī has thirty-six syllables; the worlds of heaven are connected with the Brhatī; verily thus they obtain the breaths and the worlds of heaven; verily thus they proceed finding support in the breaths and in the worlds of heaven. It is a heavenly victim for those who thus divide it. But those who do it otherwise, it is as if robbers or evildoers should rend an animal. This division of the victim Çrautarṣi Devabhāga knew; but he left the world without proclaiming it. But it is a superhuman being proclaimed to Girija Bābhavya; since that time on men study it.

Expiations for Errors in the Agnihotra, &c.

vii. 2 (xxxii. 1). They¹ say 'If one who has established the fires dies on the fast day, how is it with his sacrifice?' 'He should not sacrifice for him', they say, 'for he has not arrived at the sacrifice.' They say 'If one who has established the fires dies when the Agnihotra has been put on the fire or the Sāmnāyya milk or the oblations, what is the expiation here?' He should put them all around so that they may all be burned together. That is the expiation here. They say 'If one who has established the fires dies when the oblations have been put in place, what is the expiation here?' (Saying) 'Hail!' to those deities for whom the libations were drawn he should offer them whole in the Āhavanīya. That is the expiation here. They say 'If one who has established the fires dies in absence, how is his Agnihotra to be performed?' He should offer with the milk of (a cow) with a calf to which it is to be won over;² the milk of (a cow) with a calf to which it is to be won over is different, as it were, the Agnihotra of the dead is different as it were. Or they may offer with milk from whatever source. Moreover they say 'They should keep kindled these fires, without offering, until the bones are collected.' If the bones cannot be found, having gathered three hundred and sixty leaf stalks,³ and having made of them

41. 11. The presence of the Sadasya, who is not recognized by the Āçvalāyana school, but only by the Kauṣītaki, is another sign of later origin, as in the use of the word vibhāga; probably, as Lindner (Pāṇini, p. 79) suggests, an older account has been superseded by the Sūtra version.

² See TS. i. 8. 5. 1; TB. i. 6. 8. 4; Sāyana's derivation from $\sqrt{rā}$ is very bad: Nārāyaṇa on ĀÇS. iii. 10. 17 recognizes the root van; Vedic Index, i. 452.

a human figure as it were, they should perform on it the usual round (of ceremonies) and thus after mingling, the (fires) with the bones gathered together remove them. A hundred and fifty should be placed on the body, a hundred and forty on the thigh bones, fifty on the thighs, and the rest on the head. That is the expiation here.

vii. 3 (xxxii. 2). [As in AB. v. 27.¹]

vii. 4 (xxxii. 3). They say 'If a man's Sāmnāyā¹ milked in the evening becomes spoiled or some one carries it away, what is the expiation here?' Having divided into two the morning's milking, he should curdle one half of it and sacrifice with it. That is the expiation here. They say 'If the morning milking of the Sāmnāyā becomes spoiled or some one carries it away, what is the expiation here? He should prepare in its place a cake for Indra or Mahendra and sacrifice with it. That is the expiation here. They say 'If the whole of his Sāmnāyā becomes spoiled or some one carries it away, what is the expiation here. (He should offer) a cake for Indra or Mahendra just as above. That is the expiation here. They say 'If the whole of his oblation becomes spoiled or men take them away, what is the expiation then?' Having made them according to the deities out of butter, he should offer with a butter oblation and thus perform another offering without a flaw. The sacrifice is the expiation of the sacrifice.

vii. 5 (xxi. 4). They say 'If on to a man's Agnihotra when put on the fire something not fit for sacrifice falls, what is the expiation here?' Having poured it all into the offering spoon, and having gone east, he places the kindling stick on the Āhavanīya, and having taken off a hot coal from the north of the Āhavanīya he should pour the offering, either in silence or with a verse to Prajāpati.¹ That is both offered and not offered. If it happens when (the spoon) has been filled once or twice, the same procedure applies. If he can remove it, having poured off the spoilt portion, and having poured the unspoilt portion (into the offering spoon) he should offer it in the ordinary way.² That is the expiation here. They say 'If a man's Agni-

Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 310) suggests parṇasadaḥ (cf. ÇÇS. xii. 23. 13). The parallel texts giving the rite have palāṇṇasatāni (ÇÇS. iv. 15. 19; KÇS. xxv. 8. 15) or ṣarūṇām (Kaup. 83) or pālāṇṇasatāni (Ath. Prāy. iii. 8). For vinṣe = diviṇṣe cf. Wackernagel, Altind. Gramm. II. i. 30, 31.

¹ The only changes are the omission of the last sentence and the insertion of 'They say' before each hypothesis.

² I. e. in the usual mode of unnayana, pouring into the spoon; TB. ii. 1. 3. 5. The form vyapanayitum is very irregular; for parallels see Whitney, Sansk. Gr. § 968 d. Cf. JAOS. xxxiii. 73, n. 49. sa yadā is a sign of lateness.

hotra when put on the fire spills or pours over, what is the expiation here?' He should pour water on it for expiation; waters are expiation; then he touches (the rest) with his right hand and mutters. 'To the sky a third, to the gods the sacrifice hath gone; thence may wealth come to me; to the atmosphere, a third, to the fathers the sacrifice hath gone; thence may wealth come to me; to the earth a third, to me the sacrifice hath gone; thence may wealth come to me.' He then mutters (a verse) to Viṣṇu and Varuṇa,³ 'By whose might the regions are established; Viṣṇu guards that of the sacrifice which is well sacrificed, Varuṇa that which is ill sacrificed; verily (it serves) to appease both of them. That is the expiation here. They say 'If, as he goes eastwards,⁴ the Agnihotra which has been put on the fire spills or falls out, what is the expiation here?' If he were to fetch it again, he would turn the sacrifice away from the world of heaven; he should stay where he is and others should fetch to him the remains of the Agnihotra and he should offer it in the usual way. That is the expiation here. They say 'If the offering spoon splits, what is the expiation here?' He should fetch another spoon and offer; then he should put on the Āhavanīya the broken spoon; handle in front, bowl behind. That is the expiation here. They say⁵ 'If there is fire on a man's Āhavanīya, but that on the Gārhapatya is extinguished, what is the expiation here?' If he were to take out (the fire) to the east, he would fall away from his abode; if to the west he would perform the sacrifices like the Asuras; if he were to kindle afresh he would produce a rival for the sacrificer; if he should make (the Āhavanīya) also go out, breath would forsake the sacrificer; verily having gathered the whole of it with the ashes he should put it in the place of the Gārhapatya and from it take out the Āhavanīya to the east. That is the expiation here.

vii. 6 (xxxii. 5). They say¹ 'If they take out a fire (and put it with) tinguish the Āhavanīya also, and (5) to remove the whole fire to the Gārhapatya and then take out the Āhavanīya. All the modes are allowed by ĀÇS. iii. 12. 21-25 in defiance of the Brāhmaṇa. The same result is arrived at by the ÇB. xii. 4. 3. 6-10 by somewhat different arguments. Cf. Āth. Prāy. i. 5; JB. i. 61. 3-7 which agrees closely with ÇB. (JAOS. xxiii. 343, 344).

¹ The readings (abhyudāharet and abhyudāhareyuk) of JB. i. 65. 2 and ÇB. xii. 4. 3. 4 suggest the rendering followed; the fire taken out being from the Gārhapatya;

a man's fire what is the expiation then?' If he can see it, removing the former (fire) he should put down the other; if however he cannot see it, he should offer a cake on eight potsherds to Agni with Agni; the invitatory and offering verses for it are² 'Agni by Agni is kindled' and 'For thou, O Agni, by Agni.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni with Agni hail!' That is the expiation here. They say 'If a man's Gārhapatya and Āhavanīya unite together what is the expiation here?' He should offer to Agni as delight a cake on eight potsherds; its invitatory and offering verses are³ 'O Agni come for delight', and 'Who Agni for the delight of the gods.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni as delight hail!' That is the expiation here. They say 'If all a man's fires should unite together, what is the expiation here?' He should offer a cake on eight potsherds to Agni as discrimination; its invitatory and offering verses are⁴ 'He hath shone like the sun at the breaking of the dawns' and 'Thee, O Agni the tribes of men praise.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni as discrimination hail!' That is the expiation here. They say 'If a man's fire unite with other fires, what is the expiation here?' He should offer a cake on eight potsherds to Agni the charred;⁵ its invitatory and offering verses⁶ are 'Agni hath roared like Dyaus thundering' and 'As our fathers of old.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni the charred hail!' That is the expiation here.

vii. 7. (xxxii. 6). They say 'If a man's fires are involved in a village fire, what is the expiation here?' He should offer a cake on eight potsherds to Agni, the spoiler; the invitatory and offering verses are¹ 'In our cattle fray' and 'Do not as in the great contest.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni, the spoiler, hail!' That is the expiation here. They say 'If a man's fires be united with a divine conflagration, what is the expiation here?' He should offer a cake on eight potsherds else the sense might be, if people needlessly take out an Āhavanīya, where there is an Āhavanīya; then the old one if still recognizable is to be extinguished. The reading of Aufrecht yady u for yadya of the MSS. is essential.

a cake on eight potsherds to Agni as Varuṇa; its invitatory and offering verses are⁵ 'Thou for us O Agni, knowing Varuṇa' and 'Thou O Agni be nearest with aid to us.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni as Varuṇa hail!' That is the expiation here. They say 'If one who has established the fires should eat the food of a woman with child, what is the penance here?' He should offer a cake on eight potsherds to Agni of the thread; its invitatory and offering verses are⁶ 'Extending the thread of the atmosphere do thou follow the light' and 'Do ye, O Soma born, bind the axle strings.' Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni of the thread hail!' That is the expiation here. Or he should offer a libation in the Āhavanīya with 'To Agni with the Maruts hail!' That is the expiation here. They say 'Should a man without a wife offer the Agnihotra? Or should he not offer it?' 'He should offer' they say; if he were not to offer he would be a mock man.¹⁰ 'What is a mock man?' (they ask); 'One who (offers) neither to gods nor to the fathers nor to men.' Therefore, even if one has no wife, he should offer the Agnihotra. With regard to this a sacrificial verse¹¹ is recited

'Even one who has no wife and who drinks no Soma Should sacrifice in the Sautrāmaṇī;
"Sacrifice to free thyself from debt to father and mother"
In accord with this command is this rule of scripture.'

Therefore should he make one, who is connected with the Soma, sacrifice.

⁶ RV. x. 53. 6 and 7. In ĀṢS. ix. 10. 15 the first verse is used otherwise; see below AB. vii. 12.

⁷ The construction is so odd that jīvet seems obviously needed; ĀṢS. iii. 13. 11 has yaśmin jīve mṛtaśabdah. Cf. JAOS. xxxiii. 98, n. 498.

⁸ RV. v. 1. 6; x. 53. 3; ĀṢS. iii. 13. 11 has surabhaye for surabhināte.

[vii. 10 (xxxii. 9). They¹ say 'Why does a man without a wife offer at command the Agnihotra? 'If one has commenced² (the sacrifice), and his wife dies or disappears, how does he offer the Agnihotra?' 'Sons, grandsons, and great grandsons (he wins)' they say, 'in this and yonder world; in this world is yonder (world) of heaven, by that which is not heaven one mounts to the world of heaven.' He maintains the continuity of yonder world. Therefore they perform the piling for one without a wife. How does one without a wife perform the Agnihotra? 'The wife is faith, the sacrificer truth; faith and truth are the highest pair; by faith and truth as a pair he conquers the worlds of heaven' (he should reply).

vii. 11 (xxxii. 10). They¹ say, 'In that he fasts at the new and full moon, it is because the gods do not eat the oblation of one who does not keep his vow of fasting; therefore does he fast (thinking) 'May the gods eat my oblation.' 'On the first² full moon day should he fast' is the view of Paiṅgya; 'on the second' that of Kauṣītaki. The first full moon day is Anumati, the second Rākā; the first new moon day is Sinivālī, the second Kuhū. The period is that when (the sun) sets near or rises towards the moon. On the first full moon should he fast. In that he begins not having manyā might do as a correction. Aufrecht points out that anṛṇī is really the origin of the gloss anṛṇārthāt. The construction seems to be abbreviated: the rule is laid down in the first line and the reason given in the second, and ṣrutih strictly speaking requires iti in front of it. The Sautrāmaṇī is to be performed; a fortiori the Agnihotra. Sāyaṇa cites the rule of the three debts to the gods, fathers, Ṛṣis (TS. vi. 3. 10. 5), and Viṣṇu's rule that sacrifices are to be continued even on a wife's death using a substitute for the wife, for which he cites the Smṛti authority. On the other hand Manu (v. 168) prescribes the burning of a wife in the fires and a repiling, contrary to ĀGS. vi. 10. 9; Bhāradvāja and a Maitrāyaṇī Ṛuti. Cf. Yājñ. i. 88.

² nivṛtī, according to Sāyaṇa, refers to one who has commenced his duties as a householder including the Agnihotra. The repetition of agnihotram is as in § 4. The point of the sentence following is hopelessly obscure. Haug takes āruroha as a first person and, following Sāyaṇa, yas-yaiṣām patnīm naichet as 'who does not wish for a (second) wife', but this is impossible unless ya . . nechet is read. Weber despairs of the passage; perhaps yas-yaiṣā patnī naçyēt.

vii. 11. ¹ This is a mutilated and partially unintelligible version of KB. iii. 1; cf. Weber, Jyotiṣa, pp. 61, 62.

² This is clearly a reference to the doctrine of two (new and) full moon days (ÇÇS. i. 3. 3-6), one of which is when the sun and moon when full are visible together at sunset, and one when the full moon is only visible after sunset. Sāyaṇa, however, takes the sense that the time for the rite falls on the period between sunrise and sunset, which may be connected with the fourteenth and first days of the two halves of the month. Haug gets the same result by taking tithi as defined in terms of the setting and rising of the moon. But the sentence is a mere corruption of KB. iii. 1: yām paryastumayam utsarped iti sa sthitiḥ; the tithi is a conception of the Sūtra period only. For the names cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. v. 228, 229.

discerned the moon in the east at the new moon, and in that he sacrifices, thereby they purchase the Soma, thereby the second.³ On the second should he fast; on the latter days Soma sacrifices in accord with Soma the deity⁴; the moon is the Soma of the gods; therefore should he fast on the second day.]

vii. 12 (xxxii. 11). They say,¹ 'If the sun rises or sets on a man's fire before it is taken out, or if being taken forward it dies out before the oblation, what is the expiation here?' He should put gold in front when taking it out in the evening; gold is a pure light, yonder sun is a pure light; verily thus gazing on the pure light he takes it out. Having interposed silver he should take it out in the morning; that is a symbol of the night. Before the blending of the shadows he should take out the Āhavanīya; the shadow is the darkness, death; verily thus with this light he crosses over the shadow, the darkness, death. That is the expiation here. They say, 'If a wagon or a chariot or a dog² come between the Gārhapatya and the Āhavanīya, what is the expiation here?' 'He should not pay heed to it,' they say, 'on his self are the (fires) placed³.' If he should pay heed to it, he should draw a continuous stream of water from the Gārhapatya to the Āhavanīya with⁴ 'Stretching the thread of the atmosphere do thou follow the light.' That is the expiation here. They say, 'When he is piling on fuel to the fires should he procure the Anvāhāryapacana? Or should he not procure it?' 'He should procure,' they say; he places the breaths in himself who piles the fires; the Anvāhāryapacana is the most fond of food of them; in it he offers the libation with 'Hail to Agni, the eater of food, the lord of food.' An eater of food, a lord of food, he becomes, he attains with his offspring proper food who knows thus. When about to offer he should move between the Gārhapatya and the Āhavanīya; when he moves by this way the fires know 'He is going to offer in us.' 'When he moves by this way the Gārhapatya and the Āhavanīya smite away his guilt; he with guilt smitten away goes aloft to the world of heaven'; so they quote a Brāhmaṇa. They say, 'How should one revere the fires when about to go away, or when having returned after absence or

² Açvā in Aufrecht's edition is improbable though açva occurs in MÇS. iii. 4. 9, as the verb is singular and çvā seems clearly right, açvāḥ is also used by Haug; Sāyaṇa does not interpret, naturally enough. Cf. ĀÇS. iii. 10. 10-15 where çvā is mentioned. So ÇÇS. ii. 6.13: çvāpade gate; ĀÇS. ix. 10. 15; ÇB. xii. 4. 1. 4; JB. i. 51. 4.

³ hi tā apparently was read by Sāyaṇa and so the Ānand. ed. But hitāḥ is much better.

day by day?' 'In silence,' they say; in silence men await a superior's orders. But also they say, 'Day by day they fear through the sacrificer's lack of faith removal or extinction. He should revere them with, 'Safety to you, safety to me.' Safety becomes his lot.⁵

ADHYĀYA III

vii. 13 (xxxiii. 1). Hariçcandra¹ Vaidhasa Aikṣvāka was the son of a king; a hundred wives were his, but he had no son from them. In his house dwelt Parvata and Nārada; he asked Nārada:

'Since² now men desire a son,
Both those that have and those that have not knowledge
What doth a man gain by a son?
Tell me that, O Nārada.'

He, asked in one verse, replied in ten:

'A debt he payeth in him,
And immortality he attaineth,³
That father who seeth the face Of a son born living.
The delights in the earth,
The delights in the fire,
The delights in the waters of living beings,
Greater than these is that of a father in a son.
By means of a son have fathers ever⁴
Passed over the deep darkness;
The self is born from the self

¹ The tale of Çunaḥçepa is to be repeated to the king after the anointing at the end of the Marutvatīya, by the Hotṛ sitting on a golden seat south of the Āhavanīya; the response of the Athvāryu to each Gāthā is tathā, to each Ṛc om, to the prose of course nothing; see ĀÇS. ix. 3. 9-16. The legend also occurs in ÇÇS. xv. 17 seq. It has been edited in both versions by Max Müller in his History of Ancient Sanskrit Literature (1859), pp. 573-588, by Fr. Streiter (Berlin, 1861), and translated also by Roth (IS. i. 457; ii. 112). A revised text is given in the 2nd ed. of Böhtlingk's Chrestomathie.

² yan = yad should be read, perhaps, though yan is good enough sense. ÇÇS. has tan naḥ prabrūhi Nārada.

³ vindate, ÇÇS.

⁴ Or 'the fathers passed assuredly'. For sa ivivati which is the reading of all the MSS. in ÇÇS. also, Böhtlingk has sairā-vatī; see AB. vi. 21. In v there is in the MSS. of the ÇÇS. a variant yajña and so the Mitākṣarā cited by Max Müller.

The (son) is (a ship), well-found, to ferry over.
 What is the use of dirt, what of the goat-skin?
 What of long hair, and what of fervour?
 Seek a son, O Brahmins,
 This is the world's advice⁶.
 Food is breath, clothing a protection,
 Gold an ornament, cattle lead to marriage,
 A wife is a comrade, a daughter a misery,
 And a son a light in the highest heaven.⁶
 The father entereth the wife, Having become a germ (he entereth) the mother,
 In her becoming renewed,
 He is born in the tenth month.⁷
 A wife hath her name of wife,
 Since in her he is born again
 He is productive, she productive,
 The seed is placed here.⁸
 The gods and the seers Brought her together as great brilliance;
 The gods said to men
 "This is your mother again."⁹
 "A sonless one cannot attain heaven,"
 All the beasts know this;
 Therefore a son his mother
 And his sister mounteth.
 This is the broad and auspicious path
 Along which men with sons fare free from sorrow;

⁶ avadāvaḥ is probably to be read as an intensive like calācala, carācava, cf. Wackernagel, Altind. Gramm. ii. 1. 147. Sāyaṇa has avaḍāvaḥ as = not deserving blame, Roth (Ind. Stud. i. 458) rendered 'He is a blameless world'; so Streiter and Weber; 'he is undoubtedly the world' Max Müller. The comm. sees here a reference to the four ācramas, but without ground.

⁶ The connexion of cattle and marriage is reasonable enough, and the conjecture accepted by Böhrtlingk 'vivāhāḥ' is very unnatural. Böhrtlingk also suggests kanyā for duhitā metri causa, but this is wholly unnecessary and in A.B. viii. 22. 6 we have ādhyadukhīṇām where duhi^o = one syllable. He takes annam, as is natural, predicatively, but this is against the context.

⁷ ÇÇS. has atha for sa mātaram. For the ten-month year of gestation cf. the old Roman year, Censorin. de die natali, c. 20; Vedic Index, ii. 159.

⁸ The sense of ābhūtir eṣā ābhūtiḥ as is necessary for the metre is uncertain and obscure: Böhrtlingk quite needlessly reads ā bhūmīr eṣā bhavati. Hillebrandt suggests that the sense is 'She is procreation; the germ is procreation; it is hidden in her,' but it is more reasonable to assume that the two ābhūti forms are father and mother. Sāyaṇa renders as if bhūtiḥ and ābhūtiḥ were read. Max Müller has 'She is a mother, because she brings forth'.

⁹ This verse is transposed in ÇÇS. with the next.

On it beasts and herds gaze
For it they unite even with a mother.¹⁰

Thus he told him.¹¹

vii. 14 (xxxiii. 2). Then he said to him, 'Have recourse to Varuna, the king, (saying) 'Let a son be born to me; with him let me sacrifice to thee.' 'Be it so,' (he replied). He went up to Varuna, the king, (saying) 'Let a son be born to me; with him let me sacrifice to thee.' 'Be it so' (he replied). To him a son was born, Rohita by name. To him he said 'A son hath been born to thee; sacrifice to me with him.' He said 'When a victim is over ten days old then it becomes fit for sacrifice; let him become over ten days old; then let me sacrifice to thee with him.' 'Be it so' (he replied). He became over ten days old. He said to him 'He hath become over ten days old; sacrifice to me with him.' He said 'When the teeth of a victim appear, then it becomes fit for sacrifice; let his teeth appear; then let me sacrifice to thee (with him).' 'Be it so' (he replied). His teeth appeared; he said to him 'His teeth have appeared; sacrifice to me with him.' He said 'When the teeth of a victim fall, then it becomes fit for sacrifice; let his teeth fall; then let me sacrifice to thee.' 'Be it so' (he replied). His teeth fell; he said to him 'His teeth have fallen; sacrifice to me with him.' He said 'When the teeth of a victim appear again, then it becomes fit for sacrifice; let his teeth appear again; then let me sacrifice to thee.' 'Be it so' (he replied). His teeth appeared again; he said to him 'His teeth have appeared again; sacrifice to me with him.' He said 'When the Kṣatriya is fit to bear arms,² then is he fit for sacrifice; let him win his arms; then let me sacrifice to thee.' 'Be it so' (he replied). He won³ his arms; he said to him 'He hath now won⁴ his arms; sacrifice to me with him.' 'Be it so' he said and addressed⁵ his son 'O my dear one, this one gave thee to me;

¹⁰ ÇÇS. has vīrato devayājñah in a, and in b yenākramante putriṇo ye viçolāḥ; in c it omits ca; and in d ends mīthunam caranti and has mātary api. tat te is preferred by Böhtlingk, and tasmāt without te is also possible. The practice here referred to is reported of the Irish by Strabo iv. 5. 4; its prevalence in Iran (cf. Meyer, Hist. de l'Antiq. i. 33) is not in all probability here referred to, though, of course, it may be suggested that a reference is meant.

¹¹ hāsmāi is, of course, necessary for the grammar. ÇÇS. omits it. Aufrecht (p. 431) prefers ha smāsmā ākhyāya; Böhtlingk (BKSGW. 15 Dec. 1900, p. 417), however, prefers hāsmā, as suggested by Weber, on the ground that iti ha sma does not elsewhere precede an absolute; for atha after an absolute see Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 409.

² samñāham prāpnoti ÇÇS., clearly inferior. The form sāmñāhuka is irregular for samñāhuka.

³ prīpat in both versions must be prāpa as Böhtlingk points out.

⁴ prāpat of ÇÇS. is clearly necessary.

⁵ cakre ÇÇS., which is, of course, the older form; but contra below AB. vii. 16, n. 4.

come, let me sacrifice to him with thee.' 'No' he said and taking his bow went to the wild, and for a year he wandered in the wild.

vii. 15 (xxxiii. 3). Then Varuṇa seized Aikṣvāka; his belly swelled up. This Rohita heard; he went from the wild to the village. To him Indra came in human form and said

“Manifold is the prosperity of him who is weary,”
So have we heard, O Rohita;
Evil is he who stayeth among men,
Indra is the comrade of the wanderer.¹

Do thou wander². (Thinking) 'This Brahman hath bidden me "wander", he³ wandered for a second year in the wild. He came from the wild to the village. To him came Indra in human form and said

'Flower-like the heels of the wanderer,
His body groweth and is fruitful;
All his sins disappear,
Slain by the toil of his journeying.⁴

Do thou wander'. (Thinking) 'This Brahman hath bidden me "wander", he wandered for a third year in the wild. He came from the wild to the village. To him came Indra in human form and said

'The fortune of him who sitteth also sitteth,
But that of him who standeth standeth erect;
That of him that reclineth lieth down;
The fortune of him that moveth shall move indeed.⁵

Do thou wander'. (Thinking) 'This Brahman hath bidden me "wander", he wandered for a fourth year in the wild. He came from the wild to the village. To him came Indra in human form and said

'Kali he becometh who lieth, Dvāpara when he riseth, Tretā when he standeth erect
And Kṛta when he moveth.⁶

² Rohita is added in ÇÇS. here and throughout.

³ sa in ÇÇS. throughout.

⁴ ÇÇS. puts the verse after Kaliḥ, &c. It has phalagrahikā and perate 'sya.

⁵ carāti is not only certain, but clearly correct, both for metrical reasons and as more pointed than carati.

Do thou wander.' (Thinking) 'This Brahman hath bidden me "wander", he wandered for a fifth year in the wild. He came from the wild to the village; to him Indra came in human form and said 'Wandering one findeth honey, Wandering the sweet Udumbara fruit,

Consider the pre-eminence of the sun,
Who wearieth never of wandering.'

Do thou wander.' (Thinking) 'This Brahman hath bidden me "wander", he wandered for a sixth year in the wild.⁸ He found in the wild Ajīgarta Sauyavasi, a seer, overcome with hunger.⁹ Three sons were his, Çunaḥpucha, Çunaḥçepa, and Çunolāṅgula. He said to him¹⁰ 'O seer, I offer thee a hundred; let me redeem myself with one of these.' Keeping back the eldest son, he said 'Not this one'; 'nor this one' (said) the mother, (keeping back) the the youngest son. They made an agreement regarding the middle one, Çunaḥçepa. Having given a hundred for him¹¹, taking him, he went from the wild to the village. Going to his father he said, 'O father dear, come, let me redeem myself with this one.' He went¹² to Varuṇa, the king (saying) 'With this one let me sacrifice to thee.' 'Be it so' (he replied); 'A Brahman is higher¹³ than a Kṣatriya' Varuṇa said. To him he proclaimed this sacrificial rite, the Rājasūya. On the day of anointing he took the man as victim.

vii. 16 (xxxiii. 4). For him Viçvāmitra was the Hotṛ, Jamadagni the Adhvaryu, Vasiṣṭha the Brahman, and Ayāśya the Udgāṭṛ.¹ When he had been brought up they could not find one to bind him; Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said 'Give me another hundred, and I shall bind him.' They gave him another hundred; he bound him. When he had been brought up, bound, and the Āprī verses had been said over and fire carried round him,² they could not find one to slaughter him; Ajīgarta Sauyavasi said 'Give me another hundred, and I shall slaughter him.' They gave him another hundred and he whetting³ his knife went forward. Then Çunaḥçepa

⁸ ÇÇS. has another verse and another year of wandering.

⁹ ÇÇS. has the insertion of putraṁ bhakṣ(y)a-māṇam and reads aṇāyāparitam, which is a much better form.

¹⁰ ÇÇS. varies the wording slightly and inverts the two clauses, reading dadāni and inserting gavām, both less primitive features.

reflected ⁴ 'Like one that is not a man, they will slaughter me; come, let me have recourse to the deities.'⁵ He had recourse to Prajāpati first of the deities with the verse ⁶ 'Of whom now, of which of the immortals?' To him said Prajāpati 'Agni is the nearest of the gods; do thou have recourse to him.' He had recourse to Agni with the verse ⁷ 'Of Agni first of the immortals we.' To him said Agni 'Savitṛ is the lord of instigations; do thou have recourse to him.' He had recourse to Savitṛ with the triplet ⁸ 'To thee O god Savitṛ.' To him Savitṛ said 'For Varuṇa, the king, art thou bound; do thou have recourse to him.' He had recourse to Varuṇa the king with the following thirty-one⁹ (verses). To him said Varuṇa 'Agni is the first of the gods, the best friend¹⁰; praise him, and we shall deliver thee¹¹.' He praised Agni with the next twenty-two¹² (verses). To him said Agni 'Praise the All-gods, then we shall deliver thee.' He praised the All-gods with the verse ¹³ 'Homage to the great, homage to the small!' To him said the All-gods 'Indra¹⁴ is the mightiest, most powerful, strongest, most real, and most effective of the gods; praise him and we shall deliver thee.' He praised Indra with the hymn ¹⁵ 'Whatever, O true one, the drinkers of Soma' and fifteen (verses) of the following one. To him Indra, delighted in mind with the praise,¹⁶ gave a chariot of gold. He approached him with this ¹⁷ (verse) 'Ever Indra.' To him said Indra 'Praise now the Aṅvins, then shall we deliver thee.' He praised the Aṅvins with the following triplet.¹⁸ To him said the Aṅvins 'Praise now Uṣas, then we shall deliver thee.' He praised Uṣas with the following triplet.¹⁹ As each verse was said by him a bond was loosened ²⁰ the belly of Aikṣvāka became smaller; when the very last verse was said ²¹ the (last) bond was loosened and Aikṣvāka became ²² free from disease.

But this is needless, and nitarām may easily be a correction by some one who could not understand the sense of vi pāpo mumuce; Weber (*Ind. he pressed with these four verses ¹ 'Whatever thou in every house'. Then he carried it to the wooden tub with the verse ² 'Take up what remaineth in the bowls'. Then he next made him pay reverence to the Āhavanīya ⁵ with 'Çunaḥçepa bound from a thousand'. Then Çunaḥçepa sat on the lap of Viçvāmītra. Ajigarta Sauyavasi said 'O seer, give back to me my son'. 'No' said Viçvāmītra; 'the gods have given him to me'. He was Devarāta Vaiçvāmītra, and his descendants are the Kāpileyas and the Bābhravas. ⁶ Ajigarta Sauyavasi said 'Come now; let us invite him ⁷'. Ajigarta Sauyavasi said

⁶ The clause tasyaite as omitted in ÇÇS., and Delbrück suspects the whole from devā on.

⁷ team v elī is clearly meant by Pāṇini, viii. 3. 33, as Böhlingk points out. The two are not mother and father, as taken by Sāyaṇa and Max Müller, nor father and son. ÇÇS. has tvam vai vihvayāvīhai which Hillebrandt alters to tam, and the sense is really good, as it is the boy the two invite in turn, first the father talks to the son, and then Viçvāmītra as taken by Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 316, 317.

⁹ nihnave is the reading of the overwhelming authority of the MSS. of the AB., and though ÇÇS. has nihnuve, it is a mistake to insert it as is done in the Ānand. ed. of AB. d may mean as rendered or 'go back' to the giver, as taken by Weber.

Çunaḥçepa said

‘He who once doth what is evil
Would do that evil again ;
Thou hast not abandoned thy Çūdra way ;
What thou hast done is irreparable¹⁰.’

At the word ‘irreparable’ Viçvāmitra joined in (the discussion¹¹); Viçvāmitra said ‘Dread indeed was Sauyavasi when,

Knife in hand, ready to slaughter ;
He stood erect ; be not his son ;
Become thou a son of mine¹².’

Çunaḥçepa said

‘As thou hast intimated to us,
So, O son of a king, tell How being an Aṅgiras
I can become thy son¹³.’

Viçvāmitra said

‘Thou wouldst be the eldest of my sons,
Thy offspring would hold the highest place.
Accept my divine inheritance, Unto this I invite thee¹⁴.’

¹⁰ ÇÇS. in some MSS. reads enas, but this is needless, and enat is found in the best MSS. there also. Sāyaṇa seems to recognize enat, while the comm. on ÇÇS. has enas. In c ÇÇS. has māpagāḥ: metrically na apāgāḥ must be read ; in both cases there are variants of çaudrān nyāyāt which is certain and is recognized by Sāyaṇa. Max Müller has ‘Thou wilt not abstain’.

¹² ÇÇS. has viçāçīṣat.

¹³ Jñāpaya is read in ÇÇS. Sāyaṇa renders jñāyase ‘as a Brahman’, but this is not possible, though Max Müller accepts it, and is not supported by a verse cited by him as expressing the sense: purātmānam

nyṣpaṇḍi vipra tapasā kṛtātān asi which means that he had made himself a king by tapas, and not vice versa; apparently this verse took the sense as jñāpaya rājaputra ‘thou art known as a king’s son’; clearly in view of the agreement of the MSS. (both Aufrecht’s and those of the Ānand.) any alteration of this verse is incorrect, and also clearly it is only to be explained as above. jñāpaya is, if it is to be taken as correct, a subj., and the sense must be ‘tell us how thou wilt arrange’, or something similar. It seems easier to read jñāpaya and render ‘as thou hast said’, referring to his offer made just above. Böhtlingk adds ‘nam before sann, metri causa.

¹⁴ Here Viçvāmitra offers only daivam dāyam, but in point of fact he allowed him succession to both; see AB. vii. 18. 9.

Çunaḥçepa said

‘ Bid these agree
For friendship and prosperity to me That I may, O bull of the Bharatas, Become thy son ¹⁵.’

Then Viçvāmitra addressed his sons

‘ Do thou, Madhuchandas, and do ye hearken, Rṣabha, Reṇu, and Aṣṭaka
And all their brothers,
Do ye accept his superiority ¹⁶.’

vii. 18 (xxxiii. 6). Viçvāmitra had a hundred and one sons, fifty older than Madhuchandas, fifty younger. Those that were older did not think this right. Then he cursed (saying) ‘ Your offspring shall inherit the ends¹ (of the earth).’ These are the (people), the Andhras, Puṇḍras, Çabaras, Pulindas, and Mūtibas,² who live in large numbers beyond the borders; most of the Dasyus are the descendants of Viçvāmitra. Madhuchandas with the other fifty said

‘ What our father agreeth to
That we accept;
We all place thee before us,
We are after thee.’³

Then Viçvāmitra, pleased, praised his sons

‘ O my sons, rich in cattle
And with heroic offspring, shall ye be,
Who, accepting my will,
Have made me possessed of heroic offspring.’⁴

¹⁵ brūyāḥ is read in some MSS. of ÇÇS., but in most brūyāt, and Sāyaṇa as well as the MSS. have brūyāt at this place. It cannot be rendered satisfactorily as ‘ every one of your sons ’ with Sāyaṇa, nor as ‘ may the leader of the Bharatas say so, in the presence of his agreeing sons ’, and very possibly saṃjñānam eṣu should be read with Aufrecht. In ÷ Böhlingk restores mama, and Hillebrandt has me . . . me by conjecture, but this is not probable as the Pāda is independent and should not begin with an enclitic.

¹⁶ ÇÇS. has sthā and tiṣṭhādhvam. Böhlingk suggests tiṣṭhata, metri causa. Haug’s interpretation of sthāna as sthā na is quite impossible.

² ÇÇS. has no Pulindas, and reads Mūcīpāḥ. It also reads, very badly, udañicāḥ, and bahudasyavaḥ, and ends ity udāharanti, and extends the sentence regarding Madhuchandas. For the tribes mentioned, doubtless non-Aryan in the main, see Vedic Index, s.vv.

⁴ viravantaḥ is replaced by prajāvantaḥ in ÇÇS. It is possibly really a reference as in the next verse to the vīra Devarāta, and not to prajā generally.

With a hero to lead you,
 With Devarāta, O Gāthinas, Shall ye all prosper, O my sons ;
 He shall discern the truth for you.⁵
 This is your hero, O Kuçikas, Devarāta ; him follow ;
 As inheritance from me shall he obtain you
 And the knowledge which we know.⁶
 In agreement the sons of Viçvāmītra,
 All together joyously,
 Accepted the control of Devarāta,⁷
 And his pre-eminence, the Gāthinas.
 Devarāta was granted
 Both inheritances, the sage,
 The overlordship of the Jahnuś,
 And the sacred lore of the Gāthinas.⁸

⁵ Gāthina in some MSS. of ÇÇS. is needless.

ÇÇS. has in a majority of MSS. rādhyās tu and eṣa vas iad viṭācanaḥ, while Hillebrandt with Streiter would read sadrivācanaḥ. The change is clearly needless.

⁸ ÇÇS. ends Jahnuṇām cādhitasthīre daive vede ca Gāthināḥ. This version cannot be made to mean anything else than a statement that the Gāthinas were prominent among the Jahnuś and in sacred lore (cf. Weber, Episches im vedischen Ritual, pp. 16 seq.), the two ca's being explained in this way (daive and vede cannot really, as by Weber, be made consistently contrasts). This view then treats the Jahnuś as the whole and the Gāthinas a class of them, not necessarily rulers (even priestly), but as great priests. The AB. version must be regarded as an explanation of the ubhayor and the term seems to need explanation, and therefore a priori, pace

Weber, the AB. is the older version, as it normally is superior to the ÇÇS. More-over the term rājanputra in AB. vii. 17. 6 points to royal claims on the part of Viçvāmītra (quite contrary to the Rgveda tradition, where he is the Purohita of Sudās, a view here also accepted from the tradition), and this agrees with the tradition of the PB. xxi. 12. 2 where Viçvāmītra is styled Jāhnavo rājā. The AB. version must therefore mean that Devarāta succeeded to the overlordship over the Jahnuś and the divine lore of the Gāthinas at one time. Sāyaṇa's version treats the two inheritances, as is Weber's view and also that of Max Müller (Anc. Sansk. Lit. p. 418, n. 2), as that of the Ajigarta family (Jahnuś), and of Viçvāmītra, but there is to this the serious objection that the young man definitely leaves his connexion with Ajigarta, and therefore cannot be said to succeed to the overlordship of that family in any sense, even if there were any other suggestion that the Ajigarta family was called Jahnu, as there is not. adhīyata is no doubt from dhā, not, as Max Müller, from adhi + i. Gāthinām is merely, in all probability, a brief form of Gāthinānām, though a change of stem is conceivable ; if the former, the use is rare ; cf. Lanman, Noun Infl. p. 353 ; Macdonell, Ved. Gramm. p. 262.

This is the tale of Çunaḥçepa, with a hundred Ṛc verses as well as Gāthās.⁹ This the Hotṛ tells to the king after the anointing. He tells it seated on a golden cushion; seated on a golden cushion he¹⁰ responds; gold is glory; verily thus he makes him prosper by glory. Om is the response to a Ṛc, 'Be it so' to a Gāthā; om is divine, 'Be it so' human; verily thus with what is divine and what is human he frees him from evil¹¹ and from sin. Therefore a victorious¹² king should, even when not sacrificing, make him narrate this tale of Çunaḥçepa; not the least tinge of sin will be left over in him. A thousand should he give to the narrator, a hundred to him who makes the response; the seats and a white mule chariot¹³ (should also be given) to the Hotṛ. Those who desire sons also should¹⁴ have it narrated; they obtain sons.

ADHYĀYA IV

vii.19(XXXIV.1). Prajāpati created the sacrifice;¹ after the creation of the sacrifice the holy power and the lordly power were created; after the holy power and the lordly power both kinds of offspring were created, those who eat the oblations and those who do not eat the oblations; after the holy power those that eat the oblations, after the lordly power those that do not eat the oblations. The Brahmins are the offspring that eat the oblations; the Rājanya, Vaiçya, and Çūdras those that do not eat the oblations.² From them the sacrifice departed; it the holy power and the lordly power pursued; the holy power pursued with the weapons of the holy power; the lordly power with those of the lordly power. The weapons of the holy power are the weapons of the sacrifice; the weapons of the lordly

¹⁰ I.e. the Adhvaryu.

¹¹ ÇÇS. has sarvasmād enasaḥ sanipramuñcati (with v.l. sanipramucyate, °ete, °nte).

¹² ÇÇS. has rājā vijitā understood by the comm. as vijayāsamarthaḥ. But this is not at all necessary and Nārāyaṇa on ĀÇS. ix. 3. 13 has clearly yaḥ parabalaṁ yuddhena vijitavān where yudhe na is not really possible, pace Hillebrandt. The v.l. in ÇÇS. aiha yajamānaḥ is a bad one. Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 318) prefers

'vijitā, but Aufrecht retains the view of Sāyaṇa. In his Rājasūya, p. 8, n. 2, Weber renders rājāvijitā in the Kāṭhaka as 'von (anderen) Königen unbesiegt'.

¹³ This sentence down to hotuḥ is not in ÇÇS. which divides the spoil less unfairly.

¹⁴ Indic. in ÇÇS.

² Cf. ÇB. iv. 5. 2. 16.

power are the horse chariot, the corslet, the bow and arrow. The lordly power returned without attaining it; from its weapons it turns away trembling. The holy power followed it and obtained it; having obtained it it kept blocking it from above; it being obtained and blocked from above standing, recognising its own weapons, went up to the holy power. Therefore even now the sacrifice finds support in the holy power and in the Brahmans. The lordly power then followed it; it said 'Do thou call upon me in this sacrifice'. 'Be it so' it replied; 'Lay aside thine own weapons, and with the weapons of the holy power, the form of the holy power, becoming the holy power, do thou come to the sacrifice'. 'Be it so' (it said). Thus the lordly power, having laid aside its own weapons, with the weapons of the holy power, with the form of the holy power, becoming the holy power, went to the sacrifice. Therefore now also the Kṣatriya, as sacrificer, having laid aside his own weapons, with the weapons of the holy power, with the form of the holy power, becoming the holy power, goes to the sacrifice.

vii. 20 (xxxiv. 2). Then comes the begging of a place of sacrifice. They say 'Seeing that a Brahman, a Rājanya, a Vaiçya, when about to consecrate himself asks a Kṣatriya for a place of sacrifice, whom is the Kṣatriya to ask?' 'He should ask the divine lordly power' they say. The divine lordly power is the sun; the sun is the overlord of these beings. On the day on which he is going to consecrate himself, on that day in the forenoon he should revere the rising sun; with¹

'This is the best of lights, the highest light.'

With 'O god Savitr, give me a place of sacrifice for sacrifice to the gods' he asks for a place of sacrifice. In that being asked here he goes on his upward course,² 'Yes, I give it' he says in effect. No harm befalls him instigated by the god Savitr; ever increasing prosperity he attains; he attains lordship over offspring and supremacy, who having thus paid reverence, having asked for, having settled on a place of sacrifice, consecrates himself, being a Kṣatriya.³

vii. 21 (xxxiv. 3). Then comes the prevention of decay of the sacrifice and the gifts (to the priests) for a Kṣatriya as sacrificer. Before the consecration he should offer a libation of butter in four portions, in the Āhavanīya to prevent the decay of the sacrifice and the gifts, with

'Let Indra, the bounteous, restore to us

The holy power; let him give again the sacrifice, the gifts; hail!'

² uttarām is adverbial as in AB. iii. 44: abhitārām; 24: nicaistarām and often.

³ For the devayajana cf. SB. ii. 10; PB. xxiv. 18. 2; ÇB. iii. 1. 1. 4; Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 356, n. 3.

Then after the concluding formulas of the final offering of a cow ¹

‘Let Agni, all knower, restore to us

The lordly power; let him give again the sacrifice, the gifts; hail!’

These two libations are the prevention of decay of the sacrifice and the gifts for a Kṣatriya as sacrificer; therefore should they be offered.

vii. 22 (xxxiv. 4). As to this Saujāta Ārāḥi used to say ‘These two libations are not a winning again of what has decayed’. ‘As he desires he may perform these two, who takes his instruction hence’ (he said¹); but the following he should certainly offer with

‘I have recourse to the holy power; may the holy power guard me from the lordly power; to the holy power hail!’

‘Thus, thus’ (he said). He who has recourse to the sacrifice has recourse to the holy power; the sacrifice is the holy power; moreover from the sacrifice is he who consecrates himself born again. Him who has recourse to the holy power the lordly power does not oppress. ‘May the holy power guard me from the lordly power’ he says, in order that the holy power may guard him from the lordly power; ‘To the holy power hail’ (he says); thus he delights it. Thus it delighted guards him from the lordly power. Then after the concluding formulas of the final offering of a cow (he says)

‘I have recourse to the lordly power; may the lordly power guard me from the holy power; to the lordly power hail!’

‘Thus, thus’ (he said). He who has recourse to the kingship has recourse to the lordly power, for the kingship is the lordly power. Him who has recourse to the lordly power the holy power does not oppress, ‘May the lordly power guard me from the holy power’ he says, in order that the lordly power may guard him from the holy power; ‘To the lordly power hail!’ (he says); thus he delights it. Thus it delighted guards him from the holy power. These² two libations are the prevention of decay of the sacrifice and the gifts; therefore they must be offered.

vii. 23 (xxxiv. 5). Now the Kṣatriya has Indra as his deity, the Trīṣṭubh as his metre, the Pañcadaśa as his Stoma, and is Soma in kingship, the Rājanya in relationship. Being consecrated he attains Brahmanhood in that he puts on the black antelope’s skin, in that he performs the vow of one vii. 22. ¹ The iti is a little awkward; but presumably it represents the views of Saujāta. Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 320) does not indicate how he takes the clause, translating as if there was no iti.

tat tad iti recurs in AB. vii. 25; viii. 6 and 9. BR. take ajīta^o as a Dvandva; Sāyaṇa treats ajīta as ajīta, both without point. ito refers to the view in vii. 21, not to Saujāta.

consecrated, in that Brahmans come around him. As he is being consecrated Indra takes his power, the Trīṣṭubh his strength, the Pañcadaṣa Stoma his life, the Soma his kingdom, the fathers his fame and renown, saying 'He is becoming other than we; he is becoming the holy power; he is joining the holy power'. He should offer a libation before the consecration and adore the Āhavanīya (saying)

'I depart not from Indra as my deity, nor from the Trīṣṭubh metre, nor the Pañcadaṣa Stoma, nor Soma the king, nor my relationship with the fathers. Let not Indra take my power, nor the Trīṣṭubh my strength, nor the Pañcadaṣa Stoma my life, nor Soma my kingdom, nor the fathers my glory and fame. With my power, strength, life, kingdom, glory, relationship, I approach Agnī, the Gāyatrī metre, the Trivṛt Stoma, Soma the king; I have recourse to the holy power; I become a Brahman.'

Indra does not appropriate the power, nor the Trīṣṭubh the strength, nor the Pañcadaṣa Stoma the life, nor Soma the kingdom, nor the fathers the glory and fame of him who having offered thus this libation and having adored the Āhavanīya consecrates himself, being a Kṣatriya.

vii. 24 (xxxiv. 6). Now the Kṣatriya has Agnī for his deity, when consecrated, the Gāyatrī for his metre, the Trivṛt for his Stoma, and is the Brahman in relationship; when he concludes he assumes his Kṣatriya character; when he concludes Agnī takes his brilliance, the Gāyatrī his strength, the Trivṛt Stoma his life, the Brahmans his glory and fame, saying 'He is becoming other than we; he is becoming the lordly power; he is joining the lordly power'. After the concluding formulas of the final offering of a cow he should offer a libation and adore the Āhavanīya with

'I depart not from Agnī as my deity, nor from the Gāyatrī metre, nor from the Trivṛt Stoma, nor from the holy power as relation. Let not Agnī take my brilliance, nor the Gāyatrī my strength, nor the Trivṛt Stoma my life, nor the Brahmans my holy power, glory, and fame. With brilliance, strength, life, the holy power, glory and fame, I approach Indra the deity, the Trīṣṭubh metre, the Pañcadaṣa Stoma, Soma the king; I have recourse to the lordly power; I become a Kṣatriya.

O gods, O fathers, O fathers, O gods, I offer being he who I am.

This is my sacrifice, my gift, my toil, my offering.

Be Agnī here my witness, Vāyu my hearer, Āditya yonder my proclaimer;

I who am I am I.'

Agnī does not appropriate his brilliance, nor the Gāyatrī his strength, nor the Trivṛt Stoma his life, nor the Brahmans his holy power, glory and fame who having offered thus this libation and having adored the Āhavanīya concludes, being a Kṣatriya.

vii. 25 (xxxiv. 7). Then as to the announcement of the consecration. They say 'Seeing that they announce the consecration of a Brahman when consecrated with "The Brahman hath consecrated himself", how is one to announce (the consecration) of a Kṣatriya?' 'As in the case of a Brahman when consecrated they announce the consecration with "The Brahman hath consecrated himself", so should he announce (the consecration) of a Kṣatriya, with the Ṛṣi descent of his Purohita¹' (they say); 'Thus, thus' (they say). Having laid aside his own weapons, with the weapons of the holy power, with the form of the holy power, having become the holy power, he resorted to the sacrifice. Therefore should they announce his consecration with the Ṛṣi descent of his Purohita; with the Ṛṣi descent of the Purohita they should perform the ancestral invocation.²

vii. 26 (xxxiv. 8). Then as to the share of the sacrificer. They say 'Should a Kṣatriya eat the sacrificer's share? Or should he not eat?' If he who is not an eater of the oblations were to eat, by eating the oblation he would become worse; if he were not to eat, he would shut himself out from the sacrifice; the share of the sacrificer is the sacrifice. It is to be handed over to the Brahman. The Brahman priest is in the relation of Purohita to the Kṣatriya; the Purohita is half the self of the Kṣatriya. Secretly verily it obtains the appearance of being eaten; it is not openly consumed by him. The Brahman is manifestly the sacrifice, for in the Brahman the whole sacrifice finds support, in the sacrifice the sacrificer. They place the sacrifice in the sacrifice, as water in water, fire in fire; thus it is not superfluous, thus it harms him not. Therefore should it be handed over to the Brahman. Some make an offering in the fire with 'Prajāpati's is the world named Vibhāt; in this I place thee with the sacrificer; hail!'

That he should not do so. The share of the sacrificer is the sacrificer; he places on the fire the sacrificer. If a man were here to say to him 'Thou hast placed the sacrificer on the fire; Agni will burn his breaths; the sacrificer will die', it would certainly be so. Therefore he should not desire this.

¹ For this rule see ĀCS. i. 3. 3; xii. 15. 4.

² I. e. on the invocation of Agni by the ancestral names; cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 321-326. In this, as in the exclusion of the prince from the drinking of the Soma, the Brāhmaṇa shows its high claim for its caste.

ADHYĀYA V

vii. 27 (xxxv. 1). Viçvantara Sauṣadmana, despising the Çyāparṇas, performed a sacrifice without the Çyāparṇas.¹ Perceiving this the Çyāparṇas went to the sacrifice and sat down within the altar. Seeing them he said 'There sit those doers of an evil deed, speakers of impure speech, the Çyāparṇas; remove them; let them not sit within my altar'. 'Be it so' (they replied). They removed them. They being removed cried aloud 'Heroes had the Kaçyapas among them in the Asitamṛgas who, at the sacrifice from which Janamejaya Pāriṣita excluded the Kaçyapas, won the Soma drinking from the Bhūtavīras. What hero have we among us who will win this Soma drinking?'² 'I am the hero for you', said Rāma Mārgaveya; Rāma Mārgaveya was a learned member of the Çyāparṇas. When they were rising up, he said 'Can it be that they are removing, O king, from the altar one who knows thus?' 'What is that thou knowest, O worthless Brahman' (he replied).

vii. 28 (xxxv. 2). 'When the gods excluded Indra (saying) 'He hath misused Viçvarūpa, son of Tvaṣṭṛ, he hath laid low Vṛtra, he hath given the Yatis to the hyaenas, he hath killed the Arurmaghas, he hath contended with Bṛhaspati',¹ then Indra was deprived of the Soma drinking, and in accordance with the deprivation of Indra the lordly power was deprived of the Soma drinking. Indra obtained later a share in the Soma drinking, having stolen the Soma of Tvaṣṭṛ, but to day even the lordly power is deprived of Soma drinking. How can they remove from the altar him who knows the food which belongs to the lordly power now that it is deprived of the Soma drink, and by which the holy power is made prosperous?' 'Dost thou know, O Brahman, this food?' (he asked) 'I know it' (he replied).

¹ Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 32, 33, who seeks to see in this a case of punishment for disloyalty, as in PB. xiv. 6. 8, where, however, the position is much clearer than here. The impure speech need not be more than a ritual defect of the priests, especially as it is made good by a point of ritual. Cf. also ZDMG. lii. 737; liv. 611.

vii. 28. ¹ Cf. the similar lists in KU. iii. 1; TS. ii. 5. 1; Weber, Ind. Stud. i. 409; Rājasūya, p. 109, n. 2. In Bṛhaspateḥ pratyavadhū Sāyaṇa sees the sense vākyam, and this is apparently meant: he cites ĀpDS. ii. 2. 5. 11. The aorist is natural and proper and needs no special explanation (cf. Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 281). The Arurmaghas are connected by Eggeling (SBE. xii. 57, n. 1) hesitatingly with the demon Araru; cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. i. 411. The curious way in which Indra loses his place in favour of the priestly Bṛhaspati is noted by Weber, Rājasūya, p. 110.

‘Do thou tell it to me, O Brahman’ (he said). ‘(I shall tell it) to thee, O king’ he said.

vii. 29 (xxxv. 3). ‘They will bring one of three foods, the Soma or curds or water. If¹ the Soma (they bring up), that is the food of the Brahmins; with this food thou wilt strengthen the Brahmins; in thine offspring will be born one like a Brahman, an acceptor of gifts, a drinker (of Soma), a seeker of livelihood, one to be moved at will.² When evil happens to a Kṣatriya one like a Brahman is born in his offspring; the second or third from him may become a Brahman; he is fain to live as a sort of Brahman. If curds (they bring), it is the food of the Vaiçyas; with this food thou wilt strengthen the Vaiçyas; in thine offspring one like a Vaiçya will be born, tributary to another, to be eaten by another, to be oppressed at will. When evil happens to a Kṣatriya, there is born in his offspring one like a Vaiçya; the second or third from him may become a Vaiçya; he is fain to live as a Vaiçya. If water (they bring), it is the food of the Çūdras; with this food thou wilt strengthen the Çūdras; in thine offspring one like a Çūdra will be born, the servant of another, to be removed at will, to be slain at will. When evil happens to a Kṣatriya, there is born in his offspring one like a Çūdra; the second or third from him may become a Çūdra; he is fain to live as a Çūdra.’

vii. 30 (xxxv. 4). ‘These are the three foods, O king’, he said ‘which a Kṣatriya as sacrificer should not desire. Now this is his proper food; he should press together¹ the descending growths and the fruits of the Nyagrodha and (the fruits of) the Udumbara, Aṣvattha and Plakṣa trees, and partake of them. This is his proper food. On the place whence by offering the sacrifice the gods went to the world of heaven they tilted over (nyubjan) the goblets; they became the Nyagrodha trees. Even to-day in Kurukṣetra they call them the Nyubjas. They were the firstborn of Nyagrodhas; from them are the others born. In that they grew downwards, therefore the Nyagroha grows downwards; its name is Nyagroha; it being Nyagroha the gods call Nyagrodha mysteriously, for the gods love mystery as it were.’

vii. 31 (xxxv. 5). ‘The sap of the goblets which went downwards became

² Sāyaṇa recognizes the passive sense of yathākāmaprayāpyah, but Haug suggests ‘roam about according to pleasure’ which is impossible, though allowed by Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 326; x. 14), who prefers ‘dwelling everywhere’ for āva-sāyī; cf. Vedic Index, ii. 82.

vii. 30. ¹ The construction is awkward; the nom. a varodhāt ca phalāni ca which, as AB vii. 31 shows, applies to the Nyagrodha, is altered to the acc. with abhiṣṭuyāt.

the descending growths; that which went up the fruits. This Kṣatriya does not depart from his proper food, who eats the shoots and the fruits of the Nyagrodha. Mysteriously verily he obtains the Soma drinking; it is not consumed openly by him. The Nyagrodha is mysteriously Soma the king; mysteriously does the Kṣatriya assume the form of the holy power, through the Purohita, through the consecration, through the ancestral invocation. The Nyagrodha is the lordly power of the trees, the Rājanya is the lordly power, for the Kṣatriya here dwells fastened as it were to the kingdom, and supported as it were, and the Nyagrodha is fastened as it were by its descending growths to the ground, and supported as it were. In that the Kṣatriya as sacrificer eats the descending growths of the Nyagrodha and the fruits, verily thus he establishes in himself the lordly power of the plants and in the lordly power himself. In the lordly power, in himself he establishes the lordly power of the plants, like the Nyagrodha with its descending shoots in the earth, in the kingdom he finds support, dread becomes his sway and unassailable, who as a Kṣatriya when sacrificing eats thus this food.¹

vii. 32 (xxxv. 6). 'Now as to the (fruits) of Udumbara. The Udumbara tree was born from strength and proper food; this is the pre-eminence of the trees; verily thus he places in the lordly power strength, proper food, and the pre-eminence of the trees. Now as to the (fruits) of Aṣvattha. The Aṣvattha tree was born from brilliance; this is the overlordship of the trees; verily thus he places in the lordly power the brilliance and the overlordship of the trees. Now as to the (fruits) of Plakṣa. The Plakṣa tree was born of might; it is the self rule and the control of the trees; verily thus he places in the lordly power the self rule and the control of the trees. These are first of all prepared and then they buy Soma, the king. They proceed with the rites¹ according to the manner of the (sacrifice of Soma) the king up to the fast day; then comes the fast day. These things the Adhvaryu should make ready in advance; the skin for pressing, the two pressing boards, the wooden tub, the filter cloth, the pressing stones, the vessel for the pure Soma, the stirring vessel, the vessel, the drawing cup, and the goblet. When they press the king in the morning,

vii. 32. ¹ prativeṣaiḥ is not certain in sense:

Sāyana has prasiddhaiḥ kriyāviṣeṣaiḥ, and this can be made to agree with the sense 'auxiliary' by referring it to the rites prior to the first day. Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 327) has, instead, the rendering 'the fruits substituted for the Soma', but this is doubtful, for the ordinary Soma sacrifice is daily offered.

then he should divide these (fruits) in two; some he should press, the rest leave over for the midday pressing.'

vii. 33 (xxxv. 7). 'When they fill up the goblets, then he should fill up the goblet of the sacrificer; in it should have been cast two Darbha shoots. When the vaṣaṭ call has been uttered he should throw the first of them within the altar, with the verse¹ 'I have celebrated Dadhikrāvan' accompanied by the call of Hail! The second (he should throw) after the second vaṣaṭ call has been said with² 'Dadhikrā with his brilliance the five folks'. When they take up the goblets, then he should take up the goblet of the sacrificer. When they lift them up (to the mouth), then he should lift it up after them. When the Hotṛ invokes the sacrificial food, when he partakes of the food in the goblet, then he should partake of it with³

'That which is left over of the pressed juice rich in sap,
Which Indra drank mightily,
Here with auspicious mind this of him,
I partake of Soma the king.'

Auspiciously to him this (food) from the trees is consumed with auspicious mind, dread is his sway, unassailable, who as a Kṣatriya when sacrificing partakes thus of this food. With

'Be thou kindly to our heart when drunk,
Do thou extend our life, to live long, O Soma';⁴

the touching of himself (is accompanied). If not touched this (drink) is liable to destroy the life of man (thinking) 'An unworthy one is partaking of me'. In that he touches himself with it, verily thus he prolongs life. With the appropriate (verses⁵) 'Swell up, let them come together for thee' and 'Let the milk unite for thee, the strengths' he makes the goblet full; that which is appropriate in the sacrifice is perfect.'

vii. 34 (xxxv. 8). 'When they put the goblets in place, then he should put in place the sacrificer's goblet. When they move them forward, he should move it forward after them. Then he should take it and partake of it.

'O god Soma, of thee that art drunk by Narāṇsa, that findest the mind, that art partaken of by the fathers, the helpers, I partake',¹ is the partaking connected with Narācaṇsa at the morning pressing; at the midday (pressing) 'the great' is used; at the third pressing 'the sages' is used (as epithet of the fathers). The fathers are helpers at the morning pressing, the great at the midday, and the sages at the third pressing; verily thus he makes the fathers immortal and sharers of the pressings. 'Every one is immortal', Priyavrata Somāpa used to say, 'who is a sharer in the pressings.' Immortal become his fathers and sharers in the pressings, dread his sway becomes and unassailable, who as a Kṣatriya when sacrificing partakes thus of this food. The touching of himself is the same and the same the filling up of the goblet. They should proceed at the morning pressing in the manner of the morning pressing, in that of the midday (pressing) at the midday, and in that of the third pressing at the third pressing.' This food Rāma Mārgaveya proclaimed to Viçvantara Sauṣadmana; when it had been proclaimed he said 'A thousand we grant to you, O Brahman; my sacrifice will be performed by the Āyāpāṇas'. This also Tura Kāvaṣeya proclaimed to Janamejaya Pārikṣita; this Parvata and Nārada proclaimed to Somaka Sāhadevyā, to Sahadeva Sārṇjaya, Babhru Daivāvṛdha, Bhīma of Vidarbha, Nagnajit of Gandhāra;² this Agni proclaimed to Sanāgruta Arimḍama and to Kratuvid Jānaki;³ this Vasiṣṭha proclaimed to Sudās Paijavana. All of them attained greatness having partaken of this food. All of them were great kings; like Āditya, established in prosperity, they gave heat, obtaining tribute from all the quarters. Like Āditya, established in prosperity, he gives heat, from all the quarters he obtains tribute, dread his sway and unassailable, who as a Kṣatriya when sacrificing partakes thus of this food.

derived from the use here, or because Soma is addressed as Narācaṇsa in the Mantra (ÇS. vii. 5. 21), or because the fathers are praised by men (Sāyana on PB. 1. c.). Cf. AB. vi. 16 for another use of Narācaṇsa in a different connexion; ZDMB. liv. 49 seq.

² Sāyana, who is hopelessly perverse in dissecting the names, tries to make out a succession of teachers; this is clearly wrong: the names are those of kings, not of sages.

³ Agni is no doubt the god, not the imaginary sage of Sāyana. This is a variant provācāgniḥ whence Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 330) creates an Āgni, but this is no more than a misread gn as gn, though Weber (Rājasūya, p. 109) still keeps the other reading.

PAÑCIKĀ VIII

THE RĀJASŪYA

ADHYĀYA I

viii. 1 (xxxvi. 1). Now regarding the Stotras and the Çastras. The morning pressing follows the one day (rite), the third pressing follows the one day (rite). The pressings which follow the one day (rite) are appeased, well ordered, and established; (they serve) for expiation, arrangement, support, and to prevent falling. The midday Pavamāna of the day with two Sāmans and the Bṛhat as its Prṣṭha has been described,¹ for both Sāmans are employed. 'Thee like a car for aid' and 'This juice hath been pressed, O bright one' are the strophe and antistrophe² connected with the Rathantara. The Marutvatiya is the litany of the Pavamāna; in the Pavamāna here they employ the Rathantara (tune), and the Bṛhat for the Prṣṭha to create a balance. The Rathantara when sung he follows in recitation with these (verses) as strophe and antistrophe. Now the Rathantara is the holy power, the Bṛhat the lordly power; the holy power is prior to the lordly power; (it is his wish) 'Let my sway, with the holy power before, be dread and unassailable.' Now the Rathantara is food; verily thus he places food before for him. Again the Rathantara is this earth; this earth is a support; verily thus he places a support in front for him. The invocation of Indra is the same, and unaltered; it is (that) of the days. (The Pragātha) addressed to Brahmanaspati contains (the word) 'up';³ it is a symbol of that which has two Sāmans, for both Sāmans are performed. The inserted verses are the same and

¹ The form has been mentioned in so far as the verses are mentioned in AB. iv. 29, where also the Rathantara Sāman is mentioned. The rule is a rare one as two Sāmans, viz. Bṛhat and Rathantara, are rarely used together, the Abhijit and Viśvant days being the chief exceptions (others are given in ÇS. xi. 2. 1; 11. 2). The Rathantara is used for the Pavamāna, the Bṛhat for the Prṣṭha Stotra. See ĀÇS. ix. 3. 8.

² RV. viii. 68. 1-3; 2. 1-3; ĀÇS. v. 14. 4. For the invocation of Indra (RV. viii. 53. 5, 6), see AB. iii. 16.

³ I. e. RV. i. 40. 1 and 2; above AB. iv. 31; the inserted verses are in iii. 18.

unaltered; they are (those) of the days. The Marutvatiya Pragātha⁴ is that of the one day (rite).

viii. 2 (xxxvi. 2). 'Thou hast been born dread, for impetuous strength' is the hymn¹ containing (the words) 'dread' and 'strength'; this is a symbol of the lordly power. In 'Exalting, most mighty' it contains (the word) 'might'; that is a symbol of the lordly power; in 'Full of pride (abhi-māna)' it contains (the word) 'towards (abhi)'; this is a symbol of overpowering. It is of eleven verses; the Triṣṭubh has eleven syllables; the Rājanya is connected with the Triṣṭubh; the Triṣṭubh is might, power, strength; the Rājanya is might, the lordly power, strength; thus he makes him prosper with might, the lordly power, strength. It is by Gauriviti; the Gauriviti (hymn) is the perfect Marutvatiya; the explanation of it has been given. In 'Thee we invoke' it has the Bṛhat as Prṣṭha;² the Bṛhat is lordly power; verily thus he makes the lordly power prosper with the lordly power. Moreover the Bṛhat is the lordly power; the Niṣkevalya is the body of the sacrificer; in that it has the Bṛhat as Prṣṭha, and the Bṛhat is lordly power, verily thus he makes it prosper with the lordly power. Moreover the Bṛhat is the highest; verily thus he makes him prosper with the highest. Moreover the Bṛhat is the best; verily thus he makes him prosper with the best. In 'To thee, O hero, we utter praise' they make the Rathantara the antistrophe;³ the Rathantara is this world; the Bṛhat yonder world; yonder world is the counterpart of this world; of yonder world this world is the counterpart. In that they make the Rathantara the antistrophe, verily thus they make both these worlds possessed of enjoyment for the sacrificer. Moreover the Rathantara is the holy power, the Bṛhat the lordly power; on the holy power is the lordly power established, on the lordly power the holy power; moreover (it serves) to secure the Sāman its birthplace. 'What he hath won' is the inserted verse;⁴ the explanation of this has been given. 'Both let him hear for us' is the Pragātha⁵ of the Sāman; it is a symbol of (the day) with both Sāmans, for both Sāmans are performed.

⁴ RV. viii. 89. 3 and 4; above AB. iii. 19. The days are, of course, naturally taken by Weber and Haug as rites extending over several days, Ahinas. But this is not the view of Sāyana, and in fact the verses referred to are used at the day rite as well as the Ahinas, and in the case where there is a divergence, the Pragātha for Bṛhaspati, the reference to the days is omitted.

³ RV. vii. 32. 22 and 23; AÇS. v. 15. 2.

viii. 3 (xxxvi. 3). 'Praise him who hath force to overcome' is the hymn;¹ as containing (the word) 'to' it is a symbol of overcoming. In 'Unsupportable, dread, enduring' it contains (the words) 'dread' and 'enduring'; it is a symbol of the lordly power. It is in fifteen verses; the Pañcadaça (Stoma) is, might, power, and strength; the Rājanya is might, the lordly power, and strength; thus he makes him prosper with might, the lordly power, and strength. It is by Bharadvāja; the Bṛhat is by Bharadvāja; by reason of the authorship it is similar.² That sacrifice of a Kṣatriya is perfect which has the Bṛhat for its Prṣṭha; therefore whenever a Kṣatriya sacrifices, the Bṛhat should be the Prṣṭha; that is perfect.

viii. 4 (xxxvi. 4). The Hotṛ offices are taken from the one day (rite); the Hotṛ offices as taken from the one day (rite) are appeased, well ordained, and supported; (they serve) for expiation, arrangement, support, and to prevent falling away. These are of all forms, all perfect (and serve) to secure all forms, all perfection; (they think) 'With the Hotṛ offices of all forms, all perfect, let us obtain all desires.' Therefore, whenever the one day (rites) have not all the Stomas and the Prṣṭhas, the Hotṛ offices of the one day (rite) should be used; that is perfect. 'This should be a fifteenfold Ukthya' they say¹; 'the Pañcadaça (Stoma) is might, power, and strength; the Rājanya is might, the lordly power, and strength; thus he makes him prosper with might, the lordly power, and strength. It has thirty Stotras and Çastras; the Virāj has thirty syllables; proper food is the Virāj; verily thus he establishes him in the Virāj as proper food. Therefore should it be a fifteenfold Ukthya' they say. It should be a Jyotiṣṭoma of the Agniṣṭoma form. The Trivṛt of Stomas is the holy power, the Pañcadaça the lordly power; the holy power is prior to the lordly power; (it is his wish) 'May my sway with the holy power in front be dread and unassailable.' The Saptadaça is the people, the Ekaviṇça the Çūdra class; verily thus they make the people and the Çūdra class obedient to him. Moreover the Trivṛt of Stomas is brilliance, the Pañcadaça strength, the Saptadaça generation, the Ekaviṇça support; thus he makes him prosper with brilliance, strength, generation, and support at the end. Therefore it should be a Jyotiṣṭoma. It has twenty-four Stotras and Çastras; the year has twenty-four half months; in the year is all proper food; verily thus he establishes him in all proper food. Therefore it should be a Jyotiṣṭoma of the Agniṣṭoma form.

² This is clearly the sense, and Sāyaṇa seems to have had it in mind on taking saloma = saṃpūrṇaḥ. Haug renders 'is in direct relationship with the ancestral fire' in accord with his theory of ūrseya. Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 331.

viii. 4. ¹ So ĀÇS. ix. 3. 8, despite the decision here; in the very faintly parallel rite in ÇÇS. v. 12. 14 the sutya day is ṣoḍaça.

ADHYĀYA II

viii. 5 (xxxvii. 1). Now as to the renewed anointing. His lordly power is consecrated, who being a Kṣatriya consecrates himself. When he concludes, after coming out of the concluding bath and having offered the final offering of a cow, then they again anoint him when the concluding offering has been completed. For him in advance the following preparation has been made: a throne of Udumbara¹; its feet should be a span in size, the head (and foot) and the cross (boards) an ell in size, the cover seat of Muñja grass, the spread a tiger skin; a goblet of Udumbara; a branch of Udumbara. In this goblet are poured eight elements; curds, honey, melted butter, the waters of rain during heat, grass and green barley, liquor and Dūrvā grass. Where the line drawn by the sword on the south of the altar is, there he places the throne facing east. Two of its feet are within, two outside the altar. Prosperity is the (earth). What is within the altar is its limited form; what is without the altar is the unlimited space. In that its two feet are within the altar, two outside of the altar, (it serves) to obtain both desires, that which is within the altar and that without the altar.

viii. 6 (xxxvii. 2). He covers(it) with a tiger skin, skin uppermost, neck in front. The tiger is the lordly power of the wild animals, the Rājanya is the lordly power; thus he makes the lordly power prosper with the lordly power. From behind it he approaches it facing east bending the right knee, and taking hold of it with both hands he addresses it with

‘May Agni in unison with the Gayatrī metre mount thee; Savitr with the Uṣṇih, Soma with the Anuṣṭubh, Bṛhaspati with the Bṛhatī, Mitra and Varuṇa with the Pañkti, Indra with the Triṣṭubh, the All-gods with the Jagatī.’

With ‘After them I mount for kingship, for overlordship, for paramount rule, for self rule, for sovereignty, for supreme authority, for kingship,¹ for great kingship, for suzerainty, for supremacy, for preeminence.’

¹ For the throne cf. AV. xv. 8. 2 in the case of the Vratya; Vedic Index, i. 71. The ĀṢ. and ṢṢ. have nothing of this or of the following rites. Sāyaṇa explains the Punarabhiṣeka as one following on that already performed by the Adhvaryu after the Māhendra Sāman, clearly referring to ĀpṢ. xviii. 15. 10: māhendrasya stotraṃ praty abhiṣīcati. Āp. quotes in viii. 8. 7 a Bahvṛcabrahmaṇa (read trīṇi saṣṭīcatāni) which is not A.B. or K.B. Cf. Weber, Rājasūya, pp. 110 seq.; Goldstücker, Sanskrit Dict. pp. 279 seq.

viii. 6. ¹ Weber (Rājasūya, p. 112, n. 3) suggests that the original list was rājyāya alone, since it twice occurs here.

He should mount the throne, with the right knee first, then the left. 'Thus, thus (is it to be performed)' (they say). The gods in unison with the metres increasing by four syllables mounted on the prosperity on which they now are established, Agni with the Gāyatrī, Savitr with the Uṣṇih, Soma with the Anuṣṭubh, Bṛhaspati with the Bṛhati, Mitra and Varuṇa with the Paṅkti, Indra with the Triṣṭubh, the All-gods with the Jagatī. These two are mentioned² in 'The Gāyatrī hath become the yoke fellow of Agni'. Fortune attends him, prosperity ever increasing he attains, he attains control and overlordship over people who, being a Kṣatriya, thus mounts this throne after those deities. Then being about to anoint him, he makes him recite the appeasing of the waters

* 'With eye propitious regard me, O waters ;
With propitious body touch my skin ;
All the Agnis that sit on the waters I invoke you ;
Confer on me radiance, force and might,'

(thinking) 'Let not the waters, unappeased, strike away the strength of him when anointed.'³ viii. 7 (xxxvii. 3). Then he anoints him, placing the Udumbara branch between, with 'These waters are most auspicious,

These healing all,
These prosper the realm,
These support the realms and are immortal.
With these by which Prajāpati anointed Indra, Soma the king, Varuṇa, Yama, Manu,
With these waters I anoint thee,
Do thou become here the overking of kings.
Thee great, of the great People the ruler,
The lady, thy mother, bore
The noble lady, thy mother bore.

On the impulse of the god Savitr, with the arms of the Aṅvins, with the hands of Pūṣan, with the brilliance of Agni, with the radiance of the sun, with the power of Indra I anoint thee, for might, for prosperity, for glory, for the eating of food.'

With bhūh (he concludes) if he desire of him 'May he eat food'; with bhūh, bhuvah, if he desire thus of him with two descendants;¹ with bhūh,

¹ Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 335) prefers to take divipuruṣa as the sacrificer and his son, but Aufrecht prefers Sāyaṇa's version quoting tripuruṣa, 'with three assistants', of the Hotr. There is no reference to a temporary kingship.

bhuvah, sva if he desire thus of him with three descendants, or without rivals. Some say 'These exclamations are an obtaining of all; by using too much it is performed by him for another.' He should anoint him with this (formula)

'On the instigation of the god Savitr, with the arms of the Aṇvins, with the hands of Puṣan, with the brilliance of Agni, with the radiance of the sun, with the power of Indra I anoint thee, for might, for prosperity, for glory, for the eating of food.'

This again they reject. 'If he is anointed without the whole of speech, he is liable to depart before his day', Satyakāma Jābāla used to say, 'whom they do not anoint with these exclamations.' 'He is liable to live the whole of his life, and to obtain² all by conquest', Uddālaka Āruṇi used to say, 'whom they anoint with these exclamations. Him he should anoint with this (formula)

'On the instigation of the god Savitr, with the arms of the Aṇvins, with the hands of Puṣan, with the brilliance of Agni, with the radiance of the sun, with the power of Indra I anoint thee, for might, for prosperity, for glory, for the eating of food; bhūh, bhuvah, sva.'

These things have departed from a Kṣatriya who has sacrificed; the holy power and the lordly power, strength, the eating of food, the sap of the plants and the waters, splendour, refreshment,³ growth and propagation; moreover, as this is a symbol of the lordly power, the sap of food, the lordly power of the plants and support. In that he offers beforehand these two libations, thus he confers on him the holy power and the lordly power.

viii. 8 (xxxvii. 4). In that the throne is of Udumbara, the goblet of Udumbara, and there is a branch of Udumbara, and the Udumbara is strength and the eating of food, verily thus he confers upon him strength and the eating of food. In that there is curd, honey, and ghee, and it is the sap of the plants and the waters, verily thus he confers upon him the sap of plants and the waters. In that there are waters of rain in sunshine, and the waters of rain in sunshine are brilliance and splendour, verily thus he confers on him brilliance and splendour. In that there are grass and green barley, and these are a symbol of refreshment and growth, and also of propagation, verily thus he confers upon him refreshment and growth and also propagation. In that there is Surā, and this is a symbol of the lordly power, and also the sap of food, verily thus he confers upon him the symbol of lordly power and also the sap of food. In that there is Dūrvā grass, the Dūrvā is the lordly power of the plants, the Rājanya is the lordly power, for the Kṣatriya dwelling in the kingdom is fastened here as it were, and supported as it were; the Dūrvā is fastened as it were to the ground with descending growths, and is supported as it were. Thus in that there is Dūrvā grass, verily thus he confers upon him the lordly power of the plants and also a support. Those that have departed from him after sacrificing he thus confers upon him; verily thus he makes him prosper with them. Then he places in his hand a bowl of Surā with ¹

‘With thy sweetest, most intoxicating
Stream be thou purified, O Soma,
Pressed for Indra to drink.’

Having placed it with (this verse), he makes him recite the expiation ‘Separate for you is the place made by the gods,

Be ye not united in the highest heaven,
Surā thou art, the impetuous; he is king Soma;
Harm him not, when entering your own place of birth.’ ²

This is the discrimination of the drinking of Soma and of Surā. Having drank he should give it to him whom he deems generous, for that is a symbol of friendship; verily thus at the end he establishes it in a friend; for he thus finds support in a friend. He finds support who knows thus.

viii. 9 (xxxvii. 5). Then he descends towards ¹ the Udumbara branch; the Udumbara is strength and the eating of food; verily thus he descends towards strength and the eating of food. Sitting down he places his feet on the earth and says the descent formula ²

‘I find support in the sky and the earth; I find support in expiation and inspiration; I find support in day and night; I find support in food and drink; in the holy power, in the lordly power, in these three worlds I find support.’

At the end he finds support with his whole self; in all this he finds support, prosperity ever increasing he attains, he attains sovereignty and overlordship over people, who, anointed with the renewed anointing, being a Kṣatriya descends thus. Having descended with this descent formula he sits facing east, making a lap, and thrice pays honour to the holy power with 'Homage to the holy power! Homage to the holy power! Homage to the holy power.' Then he utters speech with 'A boon I give for conquest, for victory, for winning, for success.' In that he pays thrice homage to the holy power with 'Homage to the holy power! Homage to the holy power! Homage to the holy power!' verily thus the lordly power falls under the influence of the holy power. When the lordly power falls under the influence of the holy power, that kingdom is prosperous, rich in heroes; in it³ a heir is born. In that he utters speech with 'A boon I give for conquest, for victory, for winning, for success', that is the conquest [of speech in that he says 'I give'. Moreover as to the conquest of speech, (he thinks) 'Through this my rite shall be completed'. Having uttered speech, and having risen up he places a kindling stick on the Āhavanīya with

'Thou art a kindling stick; kindle thou,⁴ with power, with strength, hail!'

Verily thus at the end with power and strength he makes himself to prosper. Having put on the kindling stick he steps out three strides north-east. (Saying)

'Thou art the orderer of the quarters,
In me be ye ordered for the gods;
Mine be good fortune Freedom from fear be mine,'⁵

he reveres the unconquered quarter, to secure the permanence of his conquest. 'Thus, thus (is it to be performed)' (they say).

viii. 10 (xxxvii. 6). The gods and the Asuras strove for these worlds; they strove for the eastern quarter; the Asuras drove them thence; they strove for the southern quarter; the Asuras drove them thence; they strove for the western quarter; the Asuras drove them thence; they strove for the northern quarter; the Asuras drove them thence; they strove for this intermediate quarter, the north-east ; they thence defeated them. If, when two armies meet, a Kṣatriya runs up to him (saying) 'So do for me that I shall conquer that army', and if he reply 'Be it so', he should touch the body of his chariot with¹ 'O tree, be thou strong limbed' and then say to him

³ Or, as Sāyaṇa, 'to him'.

'Do thou mount, to this quarter for thee let the chariot, well tied, advance, to the north (let it advance), to the west, to the south, to the east, against the foe.'

With² 'With the attacking oblation' he should make him turn ; then he should look at him with the Apratiratha,³ Čāsa,⁴ and Sauparna⁵ hymns. He conquers that army. If again he runs up to him when about to engage in battle (saying) 'So do for me that I shall conquer in this battle', he should make him contend in this quarter ; he conquers in this battle. If again he run up to him, being expelled from his kingdom (saying) 'So do for me that I may be restored to this kingdom', he should make him go away to this quarter ; so does he again become restored to his kingdom. After the paying of reverence, he goes to the house saying (the verse) for the driving away of foes,⁶ 'Drive away, O Indra, all my foes to the east' ; from all sides freedom from foes and danger becomes his, prosperity ever increasing he attains, he attains sovereignty and overlordship over people who goes to the house saying thus this (verse) for the driving away of foes. Having gone to the house he sits down behind the household fire and holds on to the priest who at the end offers three butter libations to Indra, in four portions, with the bowl, in the Prapad way,⁷ for freedom from distress, injury, loss, and danger.

The treatment accorded is to insert after 16 + 16, irrespective of the forms and metre, the insertion ; thus in a sense the verses are reduced to normal Anuṣṭubh verses. The Prapad mode is defined in a verse cited by Sāyaṇa as—pādā yasya tu yāvanto yāvadaḥparasamīlāḥ with might the milk ;

In eagerness with the milk that is thy living gift ; hail !

Free from harm and injury, unoppressed, protected on every side, by the form of the threefold knowledge he wanders through all the quarters, finding support in the world of Indra, for whom the priest at the end offers those three libations of butter in four portions with the bowl, in the Prapad manner. Then at the end he invokes propagation for cows, horses, and men with²

Here ye horses, here ye men ;

Here with a thousand fees to give

Let the hero, the protector, sit down.’

He becomes multiplied with offspring and cattle who thus at the end invokes the propagation of cows, horses, and men. This Kṣatriya is never brought low, for whom those knowing thus sacrifice, But they bring him low for whom they sacrifice not knowing thus: just as outcasts,³ or robbers, or evildoers, seizing a wealthy man in the wild, fling him into a pit and run away taking his wealth, so these priests fling the sacrificer into a pit and run away taking his wealth. Knowing this Janamejaya Pāriṣita used to say ‘Those who know thus sacrifice for me who know thus ; therefore I conquer the assailing host, I conquer with an assailing host. Me neither the arrows of heaven nor of men reach. I shall live all my life, I shall become lord of all the earth.’ Him neither divine nor human arrows reach, he lives all his life, he becomes lord of all the earth, for whom men, knowing thus, sacrifice.

ADHYĀYA III

viii. 12 (xxxviii. 1.) Now comes the great anointing of Indra. The gods with Prajāpati said 'He is of the gods the mightiest, the most powerful, the strongest, the most real, the best to accomplish; let us anoint him.' 'Be it so' (they replied). Thus (they did anoint) Indra. For him they brought together the throne called Ṛc; as its two front feet they made the Br̥hat and the Rathantara,¹ as its two back feet the Vairūpa and the Vairāja, as the head (and foot) (planks) the Çākvara and the Raivata, as the cross (planks) the Naudhasa and Kāleya, as the lengthwise ropes the Ṛc verses, as the cross-ties the Sāmans, as the holes the Yajuses, as the coverlet glory, as the pillow prosperity. Savitṛ and Br̥haspati supported its front feet, Vāyu and Pūṣan the back feet, Mitra and Varuṇa the head (and foot) (planks), the Açvins the cross (planks). He mounted this throne with²

'Let the Vasus mount thee with the Gāyatrī metre, the Trivṛt Stoma, the Rathantara Sāman; after them I mount for overlordship. Let the Rudras mount thee, with the Triṣṭubh metre, the Pañcadaça Stoma, the Br̥hat Sāman; after them I mount for paramount rule. Let the Ādityas mount thee with the Jagatī metre, the Saptadaça Stoma, the Vairūpa Sāman; after them I mount for self rule. Let the All-gods mount thee with the Anuṣṭubh metre, with the Ekaviṃṣa Stoma, the Vairāja Sāman; after them I mount for sovereignty. Let the Sādhya and the Āptya gods mount thee with the Pañkti metre, the Triṇava Stoma, the Çākvara Sāman; after them I mount for kingship. Let the Maruts and the Aṅgirases the gods mount thee with the Atichandas metre, the Trayastrīṇa Stoma, the Raivata Sāman; after them I mount for supreme authority, for great kingship, for suzerainty, for supremacy, for pre-eminence;'

he mounted the throne. When he was seated on the throne the All-gods said 'If Indra is not proclaimed he cannot display his strength; let us proclaim him.' 'Be it so.' Him the All-gods proclaimed (saying)

'Do ye proclaim him, O gods, as overlord and overlordship, as paramount ruler and father of paramount rulers, as self ruler and self rule, as sovereign and sovereignty, as king and father of kings, as supreme lord and supreme authority. The lordly power hath been born, the Kṣatriya hath been born, the suzerain of all creation hath been born, the eater of the folk hath been born, the breaker of citadels hath been born, the slayer of the Asuras hath been born, the guardian of the holy power hath been born, the guardian of the law hath been born.'

When he had been proclaimed Prajāpati, being about to anoint him, addressed him with the verse viii. 13 (xxxviii. 2).

'Varuṇa within the waters'¹

Hath set him down, preserving order,

For overlordship, for paramount rule, for self rule, for sovereignty, for supreme authority, for kingship, for great kingship, for suzerainty, for supremacy, for pre-eminence, the wise one.'

Him when seated on the throne, Prajāpati, standing in front of him, facing west, anointed through a branch of Udumbara, dry but with leaves, and a golden strainer, to the accompaniment of the triplet² 'These waters are most auspicious', the Yajus formula '(On the instigation) of the god thee', and the exclamations bhūh, bhuvah, svar.

viii. 14 (xxxviii. 3). Then the Vasus, the gods in the eastern quarter anointed him with six days with the Pañcaviṇṣa,¹ and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for overlordship. Therefore in this eastern quarter, whatever kings there are of the eastern peoples, they are anointed for overlordship; 'O Overlord' they style them when anointed in accordance with the action of the gods. Then in the southern quarter the Rudras, the gods, anointed him with six days with the Pañcaviṇṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for paramount rule. Therefore in this southern quarter, whatever kings there are of the Satvants, they are anointed for paramount rule; 'O paramount ruler' they style them when anointed in accordance with the action of the gods. Then in the western quarter the Ādityas, the gods, anointed him with six days with the Pañcaviṇṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for self rule. Therefore in this western quarter, whatever kings there are of the southern and western peoples, they are anointed for self rule; 'O self ruler' they style them when anointed in accordance with the action of the gods. Then in the northern quarter the All-gods anointed him with six days with viii. 14. ¹ Sāyaṇa has ekatriṅgaśv ahassu, which is no doubt wrong. But Aufrecht in suggesting $6 \times 25 = 150$ seems unjustified: his reason is that there is no Pañcaviṇṣa Stoma at the Rājasūya, but here we have direct evidence that it was used in that of the gods, and we need not go beyond that. There is no use of 150 days in the Rājasūya either, so that Aufrecht's own suggestion is equally out of place, and it is bad grammar.

the Pañcaviṇṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for sovereignty. Therefore in this northern quarter, the lands of the Uttara Kurus and the Uttara Madras, beyond the Himavant, their (kings)² are anointed for sovereignty; 'O sovereign' they style them when anointed in accordance with the action of the gods. Then in this firm middle established quarter the Sādhyas and the Āptyas, the gods, anointed him with six day with the Pañcaviṇṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for kingship. Therefore in this firm middle established quarter, whatever kings there are of the Kuru-Pañcālas with the Vaças and Uçīnaras, they are anointed for kingship; 'king' they style them when anointed, in accordance with the action of the gods. Then in the upward quarter the Maruts and the Aṅgirases, the gods, anointed him with six days with the Pañcaviṇṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for supreme authority, for great kingship, for suzerainty, for supremacy, for pre-eminence. He became the supreme authority, as connected with Prajāpati. Anointed with this great anointment Indra won all victories, found all the worlds, attained the superiority, pre-eminence and supremacy over all the gods, and having won the overlordship, the paramount rule, the self rule, the sovereignty, the supreme authority, the kingship, the great kingship, the suzerainty in this world, self-existing, self-ruling, immortal, in yonder world of heaven, having obtained all desires he became immortal.

ADHYĀYA IV

viii. 15 (xxxix. 1). If he who knows thus should desire of a Kṣatriya 'May he win all victories, find all the worlds, attain the superiority, pre-eminence and supremacy over all kings, and overlordship, paramount rule, self rule, sovereignty, supreme authority, kingship, great kingship, and suzerainty; may he be all encompassing, possessed of all the earth, possessed of all life, from the one end up to the further side of the earth bounded by the ocean, sole ruler', he should anoint him with this great anointing of Indra, after adjuring him

² The sense is clear, though the construction is careless: Haug, however, seeks to render the janapadāḥ as subject and as being 'without kings', which is wholly incon-

³ Here rājā is meant, and therefore the other names of no distinct form may be nom. or voc. as bhōja clearly is.

‘From the night of thy birth¹ to that of thy death, for the space between these two, thy sacrifice and thy gifts, thy place, thy good deeds, thy life, and thine offspring let me take, if thou dost play me false.’

If a Kṣatriya who knows thus desire ‘May I win all victories, find all worlds, attain the superiority, pre-eminence, and supremacy over all kings and overlordship, paramount rule, self rule, sovereignty, supreme authority, kingship, great kingship and suzerainty; may I be all encompassing, possessed of all the earth, possessed of all life, from the one end up to the further side of the earth bounded by the² ocean sole ruler’, he should not doubt, but say with faith

‘From the night of my birth to that of my death, for the space between these two, my sacrifice and my gifts, my place, my good deeds, my life, and mine offspring mayest thou take, if I play thee false.’³

viii. 16 (xxxix. 2). Then should he say ‘Bring together four things of the trees, of the Nyagrodha, Udumbara, Aṣvattha, and Plakṣa’. The Nyagrodha is the lordly power of the trees; in that they bring together Nyagrodha (products), verily thus he confers on him the lordly power. The Udumbara is the paramount rule of the trees; in that they bring together Udumbara (products), verily thus he confers upon him the paramount rule. The Aṣvattha is the overlordship of the trees; in that they bring together Aṣvattha (products), verily thus he confers upon him overlordship. The Plakṣa is the self rule and sovereignty of the trees; in that they bring together Plakṣa (products), verily thus he confers upon him self rule and sovereignty. Then should he say ‘Bring together the four things of the plants, in the shape of the green shoots of rice, large rice, panic seed and barley.’ The rice is the lordly power of the plants; in that they bring together the green shoots of rice, verily thus he confers upon him the lordly power. Large rice is the overlordship of the plants; in that they bring together the green shoots of large rice, verily thus he confers upon him overlordship. Panic seeds are the paramount rule of the plants; in that they bring together the green shoots of panic seeds, verily thus he confers upon him paramount rule. Barley is the leadership of the plants; in that they bring together the green shoots of barley, verily thus he confers upon him leadership.

² Sāyana sees in parārdha a term of time.

Weber (Ind. Stud. ix. 343) suggests the rendering adopted.

viii. 17 (xxxix. 3). They then bring for him a throne of Udumbara ; the explanation of it has been given. There is a goblet of Udumbara or a bowl, and a branch of Udumbara. Having collected these preparations, they should throw them together in the bowl or goblet of Udumbara, and, when these have been mixed together, he should put curds, honey, melted butter, and water of the rains with sunshine, and, setting them down, he should address the throne with ¹

‘Let the Br̥hat and the Rathantara be thy two front feet, and the Vairūpa and the Vairāja thy back feet, the Çakvara and the Raivata the head (and foot) (planks), the Naudhasa and Kāleya the cross (planks), the R̥c verses the lengthwise ropes, the Sāmāns the cross-ties, the Yajuses the holes, glory the coverlet, prosperity the pillow. Let Savitr̥ and Br̥haspati support thy front feet, Vāyu and Pūṣan thy back feet, Mitra and Varuṇa the head (and foot) (planks), the Aṇvins the cross (planks).’

Then he should make him mount the throne. With

‘Let the Vasus mount thee with the Gāyatrī metre, the Trivṛt Stoma, the Rathantara Sāman ; after them do thou mount for overlordship. Let the Rudras mount thee with the Triṣṭubh metre, the Pañcadaça Stoma, the Br̥hat Sāman ; after them do thou mount for paramount rule. Let the Ādityas mount thee with the Jagatī metre, the Saptadaça Stoma, the Vairūpa Sāman ; after them do thou mount for self rule. Let the All-gods mount thee with the Anuṣṭubh metre, the Ekaviṅça Stoma, the Vairāja Sāman ; after them do thou mount for sovereignty. Let the Maruts and the Āṅgirasas, the gods, mount thee with the Atichandas metre, the Trayastrīṅça Stoma, the Raivata Sāman ; after them do thou mount for supreme authority. Let the Sādhyā and the Āptya gods mount thee with the Pañkti metre, the Triṇava Stoma, the Çakvara Sāman ; after them do thou mount for kingship, great kingship, suzerainty, supremacy, and pre-eminence’ ;

he should make him mount the throne. When he is seated on the throne the king-makers should say ‘The Kṣatriya if not proclaimed cannot show his strength ; let us proclaim him’. ‘Be it so’ (they reply). Him the king-makers proclaim (saying)

‘Him do ye proclaim, O men, as overlord and overlordship, as paramount ruler and father of paramount rulers, as self ruler and self rule, as sovereign and sovereignty, as supreme lord and supreme authority, as

(cf. AB. viii. 5) than the number (17) of the Yajus ritual, and sees in this a sign of the old character of the simple punar-abhiṣeka at least (ibid. p. 113).

When he has been proclaimed one knowing thus, being about to anoint him, should address him with this verse viii. 18 (xxxix. 4).

'Varuna¹ within the waters

Hath sat him down, preserving order, him when seated on the throne one who knows thus standing in front, facing west, anoints through a branch of Udumbara, dry but with leaves, and a golden strainer, to the accompaniment of the triplet 'These waters are most auspicious', the Yajus ' (On the instigation) of the god thee', and the exclamations bhūh, bhuvah, svar.

viii. 19 (xxxix. 5).

'In the¹ eastern quarter let the Vasus, the gods, anoint thee with six days with the Pañcaviṅṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for overlordship.

In the southern quarter let the Rudras, the gods, anoint thee with six days with the Pañcaviṅṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for paramount rule.

In the western quarter let the Ādityas, the gods, anoint thee with six days with the Pañcaviṅṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for self rule.

In the northern quarter let the All-gods anoint thee with six days with the Pañcaviṅṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for sovereignty.

In the upright quarter let the Maruts and Aṅgirases, the gods, anoint thee with six days with the Pañcaviṅṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for supreme authority.

In this firm middle established quarter let the Sādhyas and the Āptya gods anoint thee with six days with the Pañcaviṅṣa, and with this triplet and this Yajus and these exclamations, for kingship, for great kingship, for suzerainty, for supremacy, and for pre-eminence.'

He becomes the supreme authority, as connected with Prajāpati. The Kṣatriya anointed with this great anointing of Indra wins all victories, finds all worlds, attains the superiority, pre-eminence, and supremacy over all kings, and having won overlordship, paramount rule, self rule, supreme authority, kingship, great kingship and suzerainty in the world, self-existing, self-ruling, immortal, in yonder world of heaven having obtained all desires he becomes immortal, whom as a Kṣatriya he anoints with this great anointing of Indra, after adjuring him.

viii. 20 (xxxix. 6). Curds is power in this world; in that he anoints him with curds, verily thus he confers power upon him. Honey is the sap in plants and in trees; in that he anoints with honey, verily thus he confers sap upon him. Ghee is the brilliance of animals; in that he anoints with ghee, verily thus he confers brilliance upon him. Waters are the immortal in the world; in that he anoints with water, thereby he confers immortality upon him. Being anointed he should give gold to the Brahman who anoints; a thousand should he give, a field and quadrupeds; moreover they say 'He should give an uncounted, an unlimited, guerdon; the Kṣatriya is unlimited; (it serves) to attain the unlimited.' Then he places in his hand a bowl of Surā (saying¹)

' With thy sweetest, most intoxicating
Stream be thou purified, O Soma,
Pressed for Indra to drink.'

He should drink it (saying²)

'That which is left over of the pressed juice, rich in sap
Which Indra drank mightily
Here with auspicious mind this of him,
I partake of Soma, the King.
To thee, O bull (the Soma) being pressed,
I offer the pressed juice to drink;
Rejoice and make thyself glad.'

The Soma drink which is in the Surā is what is drunk by the Kṣatriya when anointed by this great anointing of Indra; not the Surā. Having drunk it he should address it with³ 'We have drunk the Soma' and 'Be thou propitious to us.' Just as in the world a dear son touches a father or a dear wife a husband pleasantly and auspiciously up to decay,⁴ even so Surā or Soma or any other food in the case of a Kṣatriya anointed by the great anointing of Indra touches him auspiciously and pleasantly up to decay.

viii. 21 (xxxix. 7). With this great anointing of Indra Tura Kāvaseya anointed Janamejaya Pārikṣita. Therefore Janamejaya Pārikṣita went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. Regarding this a sacrificial verse¹ is sung

‘At Āsandīvant a horse, grass eating, Adorned with gold and a yellow garland,
Of dappled hue, was bound
By Janamejaya for the gods.’

With this great anointing of Indra Cyavana Bhārgava anointed Çāryāta Mānava. Therefore Çāryāta Mānava went around the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice; at the sacrificial session of the gods he was the householder. With the great anointing of Indra Somaçuśman Vājaratnāyana anointed Çatānika Sātrājita. Therefore Çatānika Sātrājita went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. With the great anointing of Indra Parvata and Nārada anointed Āmbāsthya. Therefore Āmbāsthya went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. With this great anointing of Indra Parvata and Nārada anointed Yudhāmçrauṣṭi Augrasainya. Therefore Yudhāmçrauṣṭi Augrasainya went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. With this great anointing of Indra Kaçyapa anointed Viçvakarman Bhauvana. Therefore Viçvakarman Bhauvana went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. The earth sang, they tell²

‘No man whatsoever ought to give me,
O Viçvakarman Bhauvana, thou hast been fain to give me;
I shall plunge into the middle of the water;
Vain was this thy compact with Kaçyapa.’

With this great anointing of Indra Vasiṣṭha anointed Sudās Paijavana. Therefore Sudās Paijavana went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. With this great anointing of Indra Saṁvarta Āṅgīrasa anointed Marutta Āvikṣita. Therefore Marutta Āvikṣita went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. Regarding this, this verse is sung³

¹ See also ÇB. xiii. 5. 4. 2; ÇÇS. xvi. 9. 1, with the reading abadhnād apvam sārāṇgam.

² Cf. ÇB. xiii. 7. 1. 15 where manda āsītha replaces didāsītha, upamañkṣyati syā and mṛṣaiṣa te saṁgaraḥ Kaçyapāya; ÇÇS. xvi.

16. 8 has ā as in ÇB. and upamañkṣye but otherwise agrees with AB.

³ So ÇB. xiii. 5. 4. 6 with Āvikṣitasyaṅniḥ kṣattā, ÇÇS. xvi. 9. 16 agrees with ÇB. These texts deal with the horse sacrifice. Cf. Oldenberg, ZDMG. xxxvii. 80, 81.

‘The Maruts as attendants Dwelt in the house of Marutta ;
Of Āvikṣita Kāmāpri
The All-gods were the assessors.’

viii. 22 (xxxix. 8). With this great anointing of Indra Udamaya Ātreya anointed Aṅga. Therefore Aṅga went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. He whose limbs were not defective said ‘Ten thousands of elephants, ten thousands of female slaves, I offer to thee. O Brahman ; invite me to the sacrifice.’ Regarding this these verses are sung

‘Of the cows for which Udamaya
The Praiyamedhas aided in his sacrificing¹
Two thousand of the myriads (day by day)
Ātreya gave at the middle (of the offering).
Eight and eighty thousand White horses, Vairocana, Side steeds,² loosing them,
Gave when his Purohita was sacrificing.
Of those brought from each country,
All daughters of wealthy men,
Ten thousands he gave,
Ātreya, with necklaces on their necks.
Ten thousands of elephants,
Ātreya, having given at Avacatnuka,
Wearied, sought for attendants,³
By reason of the gift of Aṅga, the Brahman.
“A hundred to you, a hundred to you,”
So saying he grew weary ;
By saying “A thousand to you”
He got back his breath.’

viii. 23 (xxxix. 9). With this great anointing of Indra Dirghatamas Māmateya anointed Bharata Dauḥṣanti. Therefore Bharata Dauḥṣanti went round the earth completely, conquering on every side, and offered the horse in sacrifice. Regarding this these verses are sung¹

¹ This seems to be the sense accepted by Sāyaṇa, Colebrooke, and Weber ; assuming the Praiyamedhas to be Ṛṣis, as it seems they were from the other references to their ancestors, as seers of RV. viii. 1-40, &c. Otherwise the more natural way would be to treat them as princes who gave fees, but the plur. is against this.

² praṣṭi is here as usual of doubtful sense and possibly is more generally merely ‘leading horses’ ; Vedic Index, ii. 515.

³ To give the gifts away.

viii. 23. ¹ See ÇB. xiii. 5. 4. 11 seq.

'Covered with golden trappings,
 Beasts black with white tusks,
 As Maṣṇāra Bharata gave,
 A hundred and seven myriads.
 This is the fire of Bharata Dauḥṣanti Piled at Śāciguṇa,
 At which a thousand Brahmans Divided cows in myriads.²
 Eight and seventy did Bharata Dauḥṣanti on the Yamunā,
 On the Gaṅgā for the slayer of Vṛtra he bound Five and fifty steeds.
 A hundred and thirty-three steeds,
 The king having bound for the sacrifice,
 Dauḥṣanti surpassed all other kings,
 In craft, the more crafty.³
 The great deed of Bharata, Neither men before or after,
 As the sky a man with his hands
 The five peoples have not attained it.'

This great anointing of Indra Bṛhaduktha the seer proclaimed to Durmukha, the Pāñcāla. Therefore Durmukha Pāñcāla, being a king,⁴ by this knowledge went round the earth completely, conquering on every side. This great consecration of Indra Vāsiṣṭha Sātyahavya proclaimed to Atyarāti Jānaṁtapi. Therefore Atyarāti Jānaṁtapi, though not a king, through his knowledge went round the earth completely, conquering on every side. Vāsiṣṭha Sātyahavya said 'Thou hast conquered entirely the earth on every side: do thou make me great.' Then said Atyarāti Jānaṁtapi 'When I conquer, O Brahman, the Uttara Kurus, then thou wouldst be king of the earth, and I should be thy general.' Vāsiṣṭha Sātyahavya replied 'That is a place of the gods; no mortal man may conquer it. Thou hast been false to me; therefore I take this from thee.'⁵ Then Amitratapana Ṣuṣṇīṇa Čaibya, a king, slew Atyarāti Jānaṁtapi, whose strength

² badva as a hundred koṭis is given by Sāyaṇa; sahasram is taken by Weber with gāḥ and badvaḥ as 'by flocks', but this makes the number too low.

had been taken away and who had lost his power. Therefore one should not play false with a Brahman who knows thus and has done thus (thinking) 'Let me not loose my kingdom,⁶ nor let breath forsake me.'

ADHYĀYA V

viii. 24 (xl. 1). Now as to the Purohitaship. The gods eat not the food of a king without a Purohita. Therefore a king when about to sacrifice should select as Purohita a Brahman (wishing) 'May the gods eat my food.' The king in appointing a Purohita takes out the fires that lead to heaven. The Purohita is the Āhavanīya, his wife the Gārhapatya, his son the Anvāhāryapacana. What he does to the Purohita, verily thus he offers in the Āhavanīya; what he does to his wife, verily thus he offers in the Gārhapatya; what he does to his son, verily thus he offers in the Anvāhāryapacana. They, being appeased in body, having received the offerings and propitiated, carry him to the world of heaven, to the lordly power, might, the kingdom, and the people. They, if not appeased in body, not having received the offering and not being propitiated, repel him from the world of heaven, from the lordly power, might, the kingdom, and the people. The Purohita is Agni Vaiṣvānara, possessed of five missiles; in his speech is one missile, in his feet one, in his skin one, in his heart one, in his organ one. With these flaming and blazing he approaches the king. In that he says 'Where, O blessed one, hast thou been dwelling? Bring ye grass for him', thereby he appeases that missile of his that is in his speech. In that they bring to him water for the feet, thereby he appeases that missile of his that is in his feet. In that they adorn him, thereby he appeases that missile of his that is in his skin. In that they delight him, thereby he appeases that missile of his that is in his heart. In that he dwells unimpeded in his dwelling, thereby he appeases that missile of his which is in his organ. He, having been appeased in his body, and having received offering and being delighted, carries him to the world of heaven, the lordly power, might, the kingdom, and the people. He also, if not appeased in body, and not offered to and delighted, repels him from the world of heaven, from the lordly power, might, the kingdom, and the people.

viii. 25 (xl. 2.) The Purohita is Agni Vaiṣvānara with five missiles; with these he keeps enveloping the king as the ocean the earth. His kingship perishes not in its youth, life leaves him not before his time, up to old age

⁶ For avapaṇyeyam cf. AB. viii. 15, n. 1. The constr. with neḍ is unparalleled. See

he lives, he lives a full life, he dies not again,¹ who has for Purohita to guard the kingdom a Brahman with this knowledge.²

By the lordly power he conquereth the lordly power,
By might he attaineth might,
Who hath for Purohita to guard the kingdom
A Brahman with this knowledge,
For him are his people in harmony,
With one aspect and one mind,
Who hath for Purohita to guard the kingdom
A Brahman with this knowledge.

viii. 26 (xl. 3). This is also declared by a seer¹

‘The king all hostilities
With his onset, his might, doth overcome’,

Hostilities are the rivals who vie with and hate him; verily thus he overcomes them with his onset and his might.

‘Who supporteth Brhaspati in comfort’,

Brhaspati is the Purohita of the gods; analogues of him are the other Purohitas of human kings. In that he says ‘Who supporteth Brhaspati in comfort’, verily he says in effect ‘Who supporteth a Purohita in comfort’.

‘Who treateth him kindly, and maketh welcome the first sharer’,

(he says); verily thus he mentions honour for him.

‘He dwelleth in ease in his own abode’²

(he says); the abode is the house; verily thus he dwells at ease in his own house.

‘For him fare is ever plentiful’

(he says); fare is food; verily thus for him food is ever full of strength.

‘To him the peoples of themselves pay homage’

(he says); the peoples are the kingdoms; verily thus spontaneously the kingdoms pay him homage.

‘In whose reign the Brahman goeth first’,

(he says); verily thus he refers to the Purohita.

‘Unsurpassed he winneth wealths’³

² The true character of the passage now be-

Wealths are kingdoms; them he wins unsurpassed.

‘Of his foe as of his kin’

(he says); the foe are the rivals that vie with and hate him; them he conquers unsurpassed. In that he says

‘Who maketh wide room for him that seeketh aid,’ verily he says in effect ‘Who maketh riches for the poor.’

‘The king for the Brahman, him the gods aid’,

(he says); verily thus he refers to the Purohita.

viii. 27 (xl. 4). He who knows the three Purohitas and the three appointers, that Brahman is to be made Purohita. He should say for the Purohitaship ‘Agni is the Purohita, the earth the appointer; Vāyu is the Purohita, the atmosphere the appointer; Āditya is the Purohita, the sky the appointer.’

He who knows this is chosen as Purohita, he who does not know this is rejected.

A king is the friend of him,

He repulseth the foe

Who hath for his Purohita to guard the kingdom

By the lordly power he conquereth the lordly power,

By might he attaineth might

Who hath for his Purohita to guard the kingdom

A Brahman with this knowledge.

For him are his people in harmony,

With one aspect and one mind,

Who hath for his Purohita to guard the kingdom

saṁvāhāvahai is possible, but the text may mean ‘let us fare together’; cf. Oldenberg, Rel. des Veda, p. 376.

² purāṇi appears corrupt (pur is the old form); possibly it might be an irregular form, ‘let me escape from’, but, as no special danger is mentioned, it may be an old error for pārayā ṇo (glossed asmān).

I purify my left foot ; I increase power in this kingdom.

First one, then another, I purify my two feet, viii. 28 (xl. 5). Now comes the dying round the holy power. He who knows the dying round the holy power, round him the rivals that vie with and hate him die. He who blows here is the holy power ; round him die these five deities, the lightning, the rain, the moon, the sun, the fire. The lightning after lightening enters into the rain ; it is concealed ; then men do not perceive it. When a man dies, then he is concealed, then men do not perceive him. He should say at the death of the lightning 'Let my enemy die, let him be concealed, may they not perceive him.' Swiftly they perceive him not. The rain having rained enters into the moon ; it is concealed ; then men do not perceive it. When a man dies, then he is concealed, then men do not perceive him. He should say at the death of the rain 'Let my enemy die, let him be concealed, may they not perceive him.' Swiftly they perceive him not. The moon at the conjunction enters into the sun ; it is concealed ; men do not perceive it. When a man dies, then he is concealed, then men do not perceive him. He should say at the death of the moon 'Let my enemy die, let him be concealed, may they not perceive him.' Swiftly they perceive him not. The sun on setting enters into the fire ; it is concealed ; men do not perceive it.¹ When a man dies, then he is concealed, then men do not perceive him. He should say at the death of the sun 'Let my enemy die, let him be concealed, may they not perceive him.' Swiftly they perceive him not. The fire, breathing forth, enters into the wind ; it is concealed ; men do not perceive it. When a man dies, then he is concealed, then men do not perceive him. He should say at the death of the fire 'Let my enemy die, let him be concealed, may they not perceive him.' Swiftly they perceive him not. Thence are these deities born again ; from the wind is born the fire, for from breath it is Having seen it he should say 'Let the rain be born; let not my enemy be born; far hence may he hasten away.' Far hence he hastens away. This is the dying round the holy power. This dying round the holy power Maitreya Kauṣārava proclaimed to Sutvan Kairiṣi Bhārgāyana the king. Round him died five kings; then Sutvan attained greatness. His vow is 'One should not sit down before the foe; if he think him to be standing, he should stand also. Nor should he lie down before the foe; if he think him to be sitting he should sit also. Nor should he go to sleep before the foe; if he think him awake, he should keep awake also. Even if his enemy has a head of stone,³ swiftly he lays him low.'

of hi and as act. with parāt adverbial.

The Establishing of the Fires.

i. 1. In¹ this world both the gods and men were. The gods going to the world of heaven said to Agni 'Be thou for us the overseer of this world.' To them replied Agni 'But, since I am he among you whose contact is most dangerous, and men do not pay honour (to me), how will that become yours which is among men?' The gods said 'The dread forms of thee as such we will deposit apart, and then wilt thou be here for man with that form of thine which is auspicious, helpful, and worthy of sacrifice.' Then in the waters they placed (his form as) blowing, in the wind (his form as) purifying, in the sun (his form as) bright. Then with his auspicious, helpful, and sacrificial form he burned here for men. These indeed are the forms of Agni. In that he offers to these deities, then Agni becomes delighted with his limbs and with his forms. These are three; three indeed are these worlds; verily thus he obtains these worlds. The full-moon offering is the model of the first (sacrifice), the new-moon offering of the second; thereby does he commence the new- and full-moon (offerings). The invitatory and offering verses² of the first contain (the words) 'praise' and 'bearer of the oblation'; that is the form of the invitatory and invoking verses. Paṇubandha offerings have seventeen Sāmidhenī verses;⁴ therefore he obtains the Iṣṭi and Paṇubandha offerings. The offerings of the butter⁵ portions have (the word) 'be'; (with the desire) 'Let me be', he establishes the fires; 'May I be' he desires. He, even if being very contemptible as it were he establishes the fires, quickly prospers; he attains enjoyableness, who makes them possessed of (the word) 'be'. The invitatory and offering verses are Virāj verses;⁶ prosperity and proper food are the Virāj, (and so they serve) for the winning of the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. These are Gāyatrī verses;⁷ Agni is connected with the Gāyatrī and has the Gāyatrī for his metre; verily thus with his own metre he establishes the fires. They are uttered inaudibly; the establishing of the fires is an outpouring of seed; inaudibly is seed outpoured. They are appropriate what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; (so they serve) for the perfection of the sacrifice. Twelve (cows) should he give; the year has twelve months; verily (they serve) to make up the year. He gives a horse as thirteenth, to make up the thirteenth month.

The gods, having been victorious and having slain the Asuras, sought for him; Yama and Varuṇa discerned him. Him (the gods) invited, him they instructed, to him they offered a boon. He chose this as a boon, '(Give) me the fore-offerings and the after-offerings for my own, and the ghee of the waters and the male of plants.' Therefore they say 'Agni's are the fore-offerings and the after-offerings; Agni's is the butter.' Then indeed did the gods prosper, the Asuras were defeated. ⁴ At the new- and full-moon sacrifices there are used 15, Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, pp. 74-79; 17 at the animal sacrifice, Schwab, Das altindische Thieropfer, pp. 82, 83. For 17 as the characteristic number as an Iṣṭi see ÇB. i. 6. 2. 12.

⁵ RV. v. 13. 14 which has asi and i. 91. 9 which has sānti. We must read yadi ha and svaiṣāvīra iva; Vināyaka has svaiṣā vīra but this is nonsense; see Weber, Ind. Stud. i. 228; x. 153, n. 1; Keith, JRAS. 1915, p. 501.

⁶ These are RV. vii. 1. 3 and 18; see ÇB. i. 6. 2. 12.

as with sprdh, AB. vi. 34. 2; Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 119. The construction appears in Sanskrit in the well-known example carmaṇi dvīpinam hanti dantayor hanti kuñjaram (Kāçikā on Pāṇini, ii. 3. 36) which need not be traced to Pāli as Kielhorn (JRAS. 1898, p. 19) was inclined to do.

i. 3. ¹ This chapter with i. 4 and 5 deals briefly with the Punarādheya of the fires; there is nothing parallel in AB., but cf. TS. i. 5. 1 seq.; KS. viii. 14-ix. 3; KapS. viii. 2-6; MS. i. 7. 1-5; ÇB. ii. 2. 3. 2-6. For the ritual see ÅÇS. ii. 8. 4 seq.; ÇÇS. ii. 5. 1; BÇS. iii. 1-3; MÇS. i. 6. 5; v. 1. 2. 6 seq.; ÅpÇS. v. 26; KÇS. iv. 11; Vait. viii. 3; Hillebrandt, Ritualliteratur, § 60.

the rains' some say; in the rains are all desires; verily (it serves) to obtain all desires. In the middle of the rains, with regard to the Nakṣatra, the Punarvasūs, he should re-establish (the fires) (saying) 'May riches and wealth again come to me.' Thus (it serves) for the winning of a repeated desire. In this period (the new moon) does not in the first half (of the month) come into conjunction with the Punarvasūs. On the new moon which follows after (full moon) in the Aṣādhās² should he re-establish; it is in conjunction with the Punarvasūs. The desire is obtained that is in the new moon, there is obtained that in the rains, there is obtained that in the Punarvasūs; therefore on that day should he re-establish. The cake is offered on five potsherds;³ the Pañkti has five feet; the sacrifice is fivefold; (so it serves) to obtain the sacrifice.

i. 4. With discriminations¹ he offers the fore-offerings and the after-offerings; the fore-offerings and the after-offerings are the seasons; thus does he gather him from the seasons. The discriminations are the head words of these Ṛcs, 'O Agni, come for enjoyment'; 'Agni we choose as messenger'; 'By Agni Agni is kindled'; 'May Agni smite the foes'; 'Of Agni the praise we meditate'; 'To Agni that mortal who doth service.' They are six; the seasons are six; verily from the seasons for a second time he gathers him. The last fore-offering and after-offering are unaltered. Thus he does not depart from the fore-offerings and the after-offerings. The first butter-portion is connected with the slaying of Vṛtra;² verily (it serves) for the destroying of the evil one. Thus he does not depart from the model of the full-moon sacrifice. 'He should make the first (butter-portion) for Agni, the wise, (saying) "Agni do ye awaken with the praise",' ³ some say, 'the offerings the normal forms are changed by the addition, after the word denoting the object of offering, of a case of the word Agni; the other two are left unaltered. According to Eggeling (SBE. xii. 317, n. 4) and Hillebrandt, vibhakti-yaḥ directly denote the 'cases' of the word Agni, but this is not, it seems, precisely the sense, but rather (cf. TS. i. 5. 2. 2) they are 'discriminations' between the ordinary forms of the fore- and after-offerings. The sense 'cases' cannot here be regarded as natural. The verses cited are RV. vi. 16. 10; i. 4. 1; 12. 6; vi. 16. 34; v. 18. 2; vi. 14. 1. Cf. ZDMG. xxxvii. 25.

² The date fixed is a refinement on that of TS. and ÇB. ii. 1. 2. 10 which prescribe merely the Punarvasūs. BÇS. iii. 1 fixes the date as on the new moon in the Punarvasūs preceding the full moon in the Aṣādhās, a variance in view possibly because of the duplicate nature of the Nakṣatra Aṣādhās as the 18th and 19th Nakṣatras, while Punarvasūs is the fifth. Cf. Caland, Ueber das rituelle Sūtra des Baudhāyana, pp. 36, 37.

³ This refers to the fact that in place of the three Iṣtis of i. 1 a cake is offered to Agni on five Kapālas; the verses of the offering are in Pañkti metre, viz. RV. iv. 10. 2 and 4, and for the Sviṣṭakṛt offering, iv. 10. 4 and 1.

¹ The point is that in the case of the first four fore-offerings and the first two after-

² Because it has the words (RV. vi. 16. 34) Agnir vṛtrāṇi jāñghanat; see Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, pp. 102 seq.

³ RV. v. 14. 1. So ÇB. ii. 2. 3. 21.

fire of him who removes the fire is asleep as it were, verily so does he again awaken it.' But that connected with the slaying of Vṛtra is the approved one. 'O Agni, thou purifiest lives'⁴ is the invitatory verse of the second (butter-portion). 'Thou purifiest' is the symbol of Soma, for the sacrificial offering is wholly for Agni; in that he makes mention of the purifying, so he departs not from the butter-portion for Soma. The offering and the invitatory verses are Padapañktis; the Pañkti has five feet; the sacrifice is fivefold; verily (they serve) to obtain the sacrifice.

i. 5. (The verses) are intertwined¹ (on the ground that) 'Intertwined as it were these breaths support the self.' The whole (offering) is performed including the kindling verses in a low tone up to the first two after-offerings. After the (word) butter the discriminations are interwoven; further all desires are in the discriminations; therefore they are uttered in a low tone, for the obtaining of all desires. Aloud he sacrifices with the last after-offering, aloud he utters the Sūktavāka and the Çamyorvāka.² Just as a man makes to appear what is lost (saying) 'I have found', so he makes to appear his desires (saying) 'I have obtained.' Some, however, perform three (parts) in a low tone, the discriminations, the second butter-portion, and the oblation (on the ground that), 'So much is there which is adventitious.'³ The (offering) is both uttered in a low tone and uttered aloud;⁴ Agni has two forms, the expressly declared and that which is not expressly declared; thereby he obtains that (characteristic) of him. Some make it with Agni all through, but that he should not do. The sacrificial fee is a bad chariot, resown, with an old wrapper, renewed, a draft ox, or gold, for this is a renewed ceremony. The second (offering) is for Aditi;⁵ Aditi is a support; verily (it serves) for support.

¹ For the intertwining see ÇS. ii. 5. 18 where RV. iv. 10. 1 and 3 are for the oblation itself, and iv. 10. 2 and 4 for the Svīṣṭakṛt.

³ The reading of both eḍḍ. etāvadyāgantū is clearly a blunder for etāvadyāgyāgantū, which, indeed, is probably read by M., though in a Grantha MS. before y consonants like dh are normally doubted. But āgantū is uncertain in sense, and a Sūtra word like others in this Brāhmaṇa. The simplest view is to take the reference as to the new matter of this rite, as opposed to the ordinary form, which does comprise precisely the three in question.

⁴ This must be the sense here of niruktā as contrasted with upāñṇu. Cf. KB. iii. 6.

⁵ The offering for Aditi breaks the predominance of Agni; it is put in slightly different places in the different Sūtras.

ADHYĀYA II

The Agnihotra.

ii. 1. In¹ that (there is performed) the Agnihotra the cauldron here is heated. Now he who makes heat yonder is yonder cauldron; verily him thus he delights. He offers in the evening and in the morning, to Agni in the evening, to Sūrya in the morning; the day is connected with Sūrya, the night with Agni; verily thus at the beginning he delights day and night. With milk should he offer; milk is the sap of all the plants; verily so with all kinds of sap he delights the fires. As to this they say: 'He may offer any kind of food; all this is Agni's food; so with their own food he delights the fires. Having put (it) over the Gārhapatya, he should offer in the Āhavanīya; the Gārhapatya is the fire for cooking, the Āhavanīya that for offering; therefore having put (it) over the Gārhapatya, he should offer in the Āhavanīya. He makes the embers have their ends apart;² verily thus he severs these two worlds; therefore these two worlds though being together are as it were separate. Now in that he lights up (the fire) after putting (the milk) over it, thus he makes it cooked. In that he brings up the waters, and the waters are complete,³ all the oblations become complete; verily (they serve) to complete the oblation. In that a second time he lights up, verily thus he cooks the waters. Thrice he sets down the vessel for the offering and removes it northwards,⁴ to make a threefold characteristic, for threefold is the performance for the gods. Without spilling⁵ should he take (it); thus the sacrificer is not likely to fall into ruin. Then with the poking-stick he touches the embers

¹ The second Adhyāya deals with the Agnihotra, and has a vague parallel in AB. v. 26-31; cf. for the Agnihotra, and especially the Agnyupasthāna which is connected with it, TS. i. 5. 5 seq.; KS. vi. 9 seq.; KapS. iv. 8; MS. i. 5. 1 seq.; ÇB. ii. 2. 3. 1 seq. For the ritual see ĀÇS. ii. 2-5; ÇÇS. ii. 7-12; BÇS. iii. 4-9; MÇS. i. 6. 1-3; ĀpÇS. vi; Vait. vii; Hillebrandt, Ritualliteratur, § 61.

² vyantān (which is read pr. m. in M., but with a correction by a later hand to dvya) is Caland's necessary correction of Lindner's text; see VOJ. xxiii. 61; so the Ānand ed.; cf. ĀpÇS. vi. 5. 6; and often in BÇS. e.g. iii. 5.

³ Lindner's text must be corrected, and the insertion of kṛtsnāḥ before kṛtsnāni is easy and gives fairly good sense. Caland (VOJ. xxiii. 62) suggests omitting sarvāṇi (as a gloss) and replacing it by kṛtsnāni, which is very good sense but a less easy corruption. M. has avadīyotayati.

⁴ udag is probably not compounded with homīyam which must refer to the vessel in which the oblation is carried.

on the south side (saying) 'Homage to the gods!', for the gods are not above the paying of homage. He should arrange the embers broadly; thus not even the outermost (of his offering) is wasted. Four times should he ladle out; fourfold is all this (universe); verily (it serves) for the obtaining of all this. Five times should he ladle out; the sacrifice is fivefold; verily (it serves) to obtain the sacrifice.

ii. 2. The settings down in the Agnihotra must be explained. Having ladled out he sets down to the north of the Gārhapatya; thus he obtains this world. In the Āhavaniya (he sets down) for the second time when about to offer; thus he obtains the world of the atmosphere. After offering (he sets down) for the third time; thus he obtains yonder world. He puts on a kindling stick of Butea frondosa; the Butea frondosa is Soma; this is the first Soma libation. It is a span in measure, for these breaths are a span over¹ the body. Making two finger breadths of the kindling stick jut over and making a knot as it were,² he offers over it; in two finger breadths of the mouth here food is placed. When it smokes, in it should he offer for one who desires a village; when it flames, for one who desires radiance; in the embers, for one who desires cattle. But the established practice is after putting it on, for then (they say)³ all these desires are obtained. Having offered the two libations, he mutters 'May the blessing of the sacrifice as successful be successful for me.' The blessing of the sacrifice as successful belongs to the sacrificer. He should offer the libations over one another; verily thus he obtains the worlds of heaven over one another. He touches the embers with the base of the offering ladle; verily thus he places the sacrificer in the world of heaven. Twice he holds out the offering ladle to the north; verily thus having pleased Rudra in his own quarter he lets (him) go. Therefore one should not stand to the north of the offering as it is made, lest he be in the vicinity of this dread god. In the evening he rubs it on the north side as it points west; thus he makes the sun to set. In the morning (he rubs it) on the south side as it points upwards; thus he leads upwards the sun. That which he rubs the first time he smears on the mat; thereby he delights the plants; in that

² The samidh above referred to must be meant: it is therefore impossible to render samidhaḥ as plural, as apparently it is taken by PW. and MW. The idea is that in some way the two finger breadths of the samidh are made into an outline of a human mouth, as the next words clearly prove. The Ānand. ed. has atiritya.

³ The rule laid down is that the offering should be made on the samidh as soon as it is put on, and the reason is evidently given here by iti, though no word of quotation of opinion is included. The term abhyādhā refers to the laying of the samidh on the fire, not to the placing of the offering on the samidh.

(he rubs) the second time, he lays down his outstretched hand to the south of the mat; thereby he delights the fathers. In that he twice eats by means of his forefinger, with the first he delights foetuses; therefore though not eating, foetuses draw breath; with the second birds; therefore birds eat very multifarious⁴ matter as it were, but exude what is white as it were. In that he eats with the offering ladle, thereby he delights what has been and what will be. In that he licks the offering ladle, thereby he delights the serpents, the god folk. In that he cleanses the offering ladle, thereby he delights the Rakṣases, the god folk. In that he pours forth the waters to east and north,⁵ thereby he delights the Gandharvas and the Apsarases. In that he directs the offering ladle to east and north,⁵ verily thus he places Rudra in his own quarter; thus with the Agnihotra he delights all creatures.

ii. 3. 'In the Āhavanīya only should he offer' some say, but he should offer in all, for they are established for the offering. Four (are offered) in the Gārhapatya, four in the Anvāhāryapacana, two in the Āhavanīya; these make up ten;¹ the Virāj consists of series of ten; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (they serve) for obtaining the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. He who offers the Agnihotra with the Virāj thus included obtains all desires.

ii. 4. In that, after offering, he pays reverence to the fires, verily thus having given pleasure, at the end he declares his purpose among the gods. In that also he touches the calf, therefore there is the hymn of Vātsapri;¹ thus cattle are not liable to stray away from the sacrificer. In that he releases his vow, after sipping water, verily in the waters he places the vow; they guard his vow until his next offering.

ii. 5. In¹ that when about to go on a journey or having gone on a journey he pays reverence to the fires, this is an address to the deity, in

⁵ The reading of M. prācīr udiṁ and below prācīm udiṁ seems to deserve preference over the prāgudīr prāgudīr of the ordinary MSS. In the latter case we have been only told above udiṁ, but it is now rendered more precise to accord with the general view of the north-east as i. 1. 1. 12 with variants as here (Wackernagel, Altind. Gramm. II. i. 171).

¹ ÇB. ii. 3. 1. 18 has a quite different series of ten to make up the Virāj.

ii. 4. ¹ The play on vatsam sprṣati and Vātsapram is quite untranslatable. The Vātsapra is RV. x. 45.

ii. 5. ¹ For this rite see ÇCS. ii. 14. 1 seq.; MṢ. i. 6. 3. 1 seq.; ApṢ. vi. 24 1 seq. The Mantras of the rite are in TS. i. 5. 10. 1; VS. i. 5, 6; ÇB. ii. 4. 4. 3 seq. AB. vii. 12 is only vaguely similar; cf. ĀCS. ii. 5. 1 seq.

that there is a going out.² Verily also thus he confides himself to the fires, and those that follow after him.

ii. 6. In that he causes the fires to mount on the two Aranis,¹ and the two Aranis are a chariot of the gods, verily he causes them to mount on a chariot of the gods, and he with this chariot of the gods attains in safety the world of heaven. In that also he repeatedly churns out (the fire), thereby verily by him is the re-establishment (of the fires) obtained.

ii. 7. All the joys that are in food, in drink, in union, verily these are made, together, without break, from the night. For them the sieve is the night; whatever joys there are are all born of food. The gods said 'How now shall we accept these joys from one like ourselves?' They pushed upwards the sap of the waters; it became the plants and the trees. They pushed upwards the sap of the plants and the trees; it became fruit. They pushed upwards the sap of fruit; it became food. They pushed upwards the sap of food; it became seed. They pushed upwards the sap of food; it became man. Man here, in that he breathes out or breathes in, does not say by means of expiration or inspiration, 'Thus have I breathed out or breathed in'; by speech only does he say this. Thus expiration and inspiration enter into speech, and become composed of speech. Again, in that he sees with the eye, he does not say by means of the eye, 'Thus have I seen'; by speech only does he say this. Thus the eye enters into speech, and becomes composed of speech. Again, in that he hears with the ear, he does not say by means of the ear, 'Thus have I heard'; by speech only does he say this. Thus the ear enters into speech, and becomes composed of speech. Again, in that he resolves with the mind, he does not say by means of the mind, 'Thus have I resolved'; by speech only does he say this. Thus mind enters into speech, and becomes composed of speech. Again, in that he touches with his limbs something pleasant or unpleasant to lie upon, he does not say by means of the limbs, 'Thus have I touched what is pleasant or unpleasant to lie upon'; by speech only does he say this. Thus the whole self enters into speech, and becomes composed of speech. That is set forth in a Ṛc,¹ 'Not without Indra is any form made pure'; Indra is speech; for not without speech is any form made pure. He offers in the evening (saying),²

ii. 8. 'The light is Agni, Agni is the light.' Him that is light he calls 'Light'; he speaks the truth; his self here, being composed of speech, becomes composed of truth; the gods also are composed of truth. Again,

² This seems the sense of the curious neuter utkāṣam.

he offers with 'Hail!' This offering of him of true offering the gods accept. At the head of night he speaks truth; if indeed even henceforth he speaks falsely, still truth is uttered by him,¹ for at the head of night he speaks truth. He offers in the morning (saying) 'The light is the sun, the sun is the light.' Him that is light he calls light; he speaks the truth; his self here, being composed of speech, becomes composed of truth; the gods also are composed of truth. Again, he offers with 'Hail!' This offering of him of true offering the gods accept. At the head of day he speaks truth; if indeed even henceforth he speaks falsely, still truth is uttered by him, for at the head of day he speaks truth. The fire here offers itself in the rising sun; yonder sun, when setting, offers itself in the fire at evening; the night also (offers itself) in day, the day in night; the expiration also offers in inspiration, the inspiration in expiration. These six sacrifice themselves, each in the other; he who knows these six in the sacrificer, by him even if he sacrifices not is offering made; and if he does sacrifice twice is offering made by him who knows thus. If indeed even from a very small portion,² knowing thus, he offers the Agnihotra, these two offerings of his the gods accept, and he whose (offerings) the gods once eat, from that time he is immortal. Composed of truth and immortality does he become who knows thus. Just as is the offering of a man who has faith as his deity,³ who speaks the truth, and is full of fervour, such is the offering of him who, knowing thus, offers the Agnihotra. Therefore (they say) one knowing thus should offer the Agnihotra.

ii. 9. 'Should¹ the offering be made when the sun has risen, or before it is risen?' they debate. He who offers when the sun has risen thus offers hospitality to the great god when gone on a journey. He who offers when the sun has not risen, thus offers hospitality to the great god when close at hand. Therefore the offering should be made when the sun has not risen.

² suriṣṭāt, the reading of most MSS. is meaningless, and the variants, of which M.'s suruṣṭāt is the most important, render no help. The Ānand. ed. has suriṣṭānēvam. The reading adopted for trans. is the conjecture sureṣṭāt = suleṣṭāt, leṣa, a small portion.

³ For this exception see Lévi, La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 114; Sāyaṇa on TS. vii. 1. 8. 2. The view of BR., that praddhādeva is 'one who believes in god', is now generally abandoned.

ii. 9. ¹ There is an earlier version of this discussion in AB. v. 29 which resolves that the time after the rising of the sun is the proper time in the morning, so that the performance is daily, not only in effect once in two days. In this version the rôle of the two authorities has been curtailed, the antithesis of gods and fathers being suppressed, and as a result the kumārī is left with a rather meaningless opinion. ĀÇS. ii. 4. 24 and ÇÇS. ii. 7. 8, 4 have upodayaṁ vyūṣṭa udite vā which Nārāyaṇa takes as a threefold choice; ÇB. ii. 3. 1. 9, 36 and KÇS. iv. 14. 1; 15. 1 agree with KB. Cf. Weber, Ind. Stud. ii. 293-298; BÇS. iii. 4; MÇS. i. 6. 1. 8.

Thus also declared Vṛṣaṣuṣma Vātāvata, one of the men of old, when lying worn out, having seen these two offerings being offered at night, 'At night verily they offer the two offerings.' 'For it is at night (they offer)' he said, 'and we shall proclaim,² having gone to yonder world, to the fathers, and they will believe us in it, that the Agnihotra which used to be performed on successive days is now performed on one day out of two, in the night only.' That also declared the maiden seized of the Gandharva, 'In the night verily they offer both offerings'. 'For it is at night (they offer)' she declared. At the twilight should he offer. Night and day are the flood that takes all; the two twilights are the fordable crossings of it; just as a man may cross the flood by the two fordable crossings, so is it in that he offers at the twilight. Again night and day are the missile of the god that goes on its way eager to kill; the two twilights are the two wings; just as with wings³ it may swiftly perform a journey, so is it in that he offers at the twilight. Again, night and day are the encircling arms of death; just as a man, who is about to grasp⁴ with encircling arms, may be evaded in the interval (between the arms), so is it in that he offers at the twilight. Kauṣītaki used to declare 'In the evening, after sunset, before the darkness, at this time should he offer; this is the time of the going to the gods; grasping it he reaches safely the world of heaven. In the morning, before sunrise, when the darkness has been smitten away, at this time should he offer; this is the time of the going to the gods; grasping it he reaches safely the world of heaven. He that at another time offers the Agnihotra, the dark and the dappled⁵ rend apart his Agnihotra; the dappled is day, ² For nv eva yam we must, of course (JRAS. 1915, pp. 498-500) read nvai vāyam (a pluralis maiestatis). The periphrastic future here has perhaps a sense of fixed intention of future action, but Whitney, (Sansk. Gramm. § 949) thinks that the parallel AB. passage is merely an equivalent of the future. Cf. Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 296. The comm. has Vādhāvata (√dhāv) and as a v. l. piḍḍbhyo, corrected by Benfey (GGA. 1852, p. 134) to °dybīmah-naḥ is necessary with B below for na and perhaps enam for enam. Caland (VOJ. xxiii. 62) reads nv eva vāyam, ignoring Aufrecht's previous correction (AB. p. 442).

³ pakṣau may very possibly here mean two side horses, which gives excellent sense, while 'wings' is rather absurd: pakṣa, however, has not this sense for certain anywhere else (cf. Keith, JRAS. 1914, p. 1085). pakṣaḥ is generally taken with BR. as the wings of an army, but senā here rather seems to be a 'missile' and the pakṣaḥ its feathers, as wings, a view which of course may explain the use of pakṣau if that is 'wings'; cf. KB. vii. 7. For the metaphor of the ford, cf. the Çailālī Brāhmaṇa in ĀpÇS. vi. 4. 7.

⁵ For the two dogs cf. Bloomfield, JAOS. 1893, pp. 163 seq.; Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 173. The Ānand. ed. has the impossible viṣidataḥ; M. has the necessary vikhidataḥ.

the dark night. He who offers in the midnight,⁶ the dark rends apart his Agnihotra; he who offers in the afternoon, the dappled rends apart his Agnihotra. Therefore assuredly whenever he may offer he should have regard to the prosperity of the offering.'

ADHYĀYA III

iii. 1. In¹ that he fasts at the new and full moon it is because the gods do not eat the oblation of him who does not perform the fast. Therefore he fasts (desiring) 'May the gods eat my oblation'. 'On the first full moon (day) should he fast' is the view of Paīngya; 'on the second' that of Kauṣītaki; 'that on which (the moon) appears (full) about the setting of the sun' is the rule;² he should fast on the second full moon day.

The definition in GGS. i. 5. 10 agrees with the Brāhmaṇa as interpreted by Oldenberg (SBE. xxx. 26), in the opinion of that scholar, and Weber also (Über den Vedakalender, p. 62) treats the Brāhmaṇa as agreeing with the ÇÇS. Yet, as is clear, the Brāhmaṇa as it stands makes the second the day on which the moon appears full about sunset, while the Sūtras make that day the first. This discrepancy suggests that it is quite probable that the second set, the new moons, do not correspond with those of the Sūtras either, and in point of fact it seems natural to hold that çvo na draṣṭā cannot be paralleled by anirjñāyu purastāt amāvāsya yām candramasam which is rather yad ahaç ca na drçyeta. The Brāhmaṇa in fact would put its days each one day further back or on than the Sūtras. The only way to produce agreement with the Sūtras would be to assume that yām paryastamayam utsarpet is either misplaced or a mere gloss, or less probably that it explains the Paīngyan view, the conclusion beginning with sū sthitiḥ. purastāt is difficult: possibly it = before the sunset, not before the next day (cf. SBE. xxx. 383). 'In the east' is, however, alone probable; in Atharvaprāyaścitta, ii. 2, it seems to have this sense, and the same

In that he fasts on the new moon day not discerning the moon in the east, thereby he delights the first (new moon day); in that he sacrifices, thereby the second. He should fast on the second; on the second the ocean swells in accordance with the moon, its deity. The moon is the truth of the gods; therefore should he fast on the second.

iii. 2. In that before the kindling verses he mutters, verily thus he makes a benediction. After uttering the sound hiñ he repeats the kindling verses; the sound hiñ is a thunderbolt; verily thus with a thunderbolt he smites the misfortune of the sacrificer. Three times he utters the sound hiñ; the thunderbolt is threefold; verily thus he produces a thunderbolt. By this threefold thunderbolt the gods drove away the Asuras from these worlds, and verily so the sacrificer with this threefold thunderbolt drives away the enemies who hate him from these worlds. He repeats eleven kindling verses; the Trīṣṭubh has eleven syllables; Indra is connected with the Trīṣṭubh; thus both Indra and Agni he obtains. The first he thrice repeats, the last thrice; they make up fifteen; the days of the first and the second halves of the month are fifteen; thus by the kindling verses he obtains the first and the second halves of the month. Again, the kindling verses are a thunderbolt; the thunderbolt is fifteenfold; verily thus by a thunderbolt he smites the misfortune of the sacrificer. In that (he repeats) the first thrice and the last thrice, verily thus he ties the two ends of the sacrifice for firmness and to avoid slipping. There are three hundred and sixty syllables in these (verses); three hundred and sixty are the days of the year; thus by the kindling verses he obtains the days of the year. They are Gāyatrī verses; Agni is connected with the Gāyatrī, and has the Gāyatrī as his metre; verily thus he praises Agni with his own metre. They are appropriate; what in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect; verily (they serve) for the perfection of the sacrifice. With the om in the third uttering of the last (verse) he connects the address, 'O Agni, thou art great, O Brāhmaṇa, O Bhārata¹.' Agni is Bhārata; he bears (bharati) the oblation to the gods. In that he utters the Ṛṣi descent² of the sacrisense appears in KB. iv. 2. In his commentary on AB. vii. 11 Sāyaṇa renders 'in the eastern quarter'. The double kind of amāvāsyā and paurṇamāsī may reflect a confusion of dating due to the alternative commencement of day with night or morning; cf. Hirt, Die Indogermanen, ii. 540 with Fleet, JRAS. 1915, p. 218; Keith, 1916, pp. 143-146. The version in AB. has the term tithi, which alone would show that the passage is corrupt, as the tithi is an idea wholly unknown to any text earlier than the Sūtras and is there mainly a late passage of the Grhya Sūtras.

² See Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 323; Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, p. 81, n. 1. ÇS. i. 4. 15-18 requires three ancestors to be cited, or six in the case of a son of two Gotras (an adopted son); if the sacri-ficer, it is because the gods do not eat the oblation of one who has not descent from a Ṛṣi. Therefore he utters his descent from a Ṛṣi. He connects the address of fifteen elements; it is the Nivid³ of the kindling verses; therefore has it fifteen elements; for the kindling verses are fifteen. It is not in metre; all this is twofold, metrical and not in metre; (he says it thinking), 'With all this let me praise Agni.' Having connected seven elements he should stop; the metres are seven; verily (they serve) to obtain all the metres. Then (come) four, then four; all this is fourfold; verily (they serve) to obtain all this.

iii. 3. In¹ that he summons the deities severally, it is because the oblations are taken separately for them. In that he summons Agni through Agni, the form of Agni which bears the oblation is his sacrificial form. It is what there over yonder sun shines like light; therefore the sun (appears) to every man. Thus in that he says 'O Agni bring Agni', verily thus he says 'That (form) bring.' In that he invites the gods that drink the butter, thus he invites the fore-offerings and the after-offerings. In that he invites Agni for the Hotṛ's function, thus he invites the Svīṣṭakṛt (offering). In that he invites his own greatness, thus he invites Vāyu; Agni's own greatness is Vāyu, for by him he acquires and attains greatness. In that he recites by order, and sacrifices by order, thereby verily sacrifice is made to his own greatness. 'Bring, O All-knower, and offer with good sacrifice', (with these words) he says to him, 'Bring the gods, O All-knower, and offer to the gods with good sacrifice.' In that he mutters before the kindling verses, and the kindling verses are a thunderbolt, verily thus he appeases him both before and after. In that he takes up the two ladles with the verse for taking up the ladles,² verily thus he yokes a chariot of the gods, being about to bestow the oblation upon the gods. With this chariot of the gods he attains safely the world of heaven.

iii. 4. He¹ offers the fore-offerings. The fore-offerings are the seasons; verily thus he delights the seasons. They are five; with them he obtains whatever there is fivefold pertaining to the self or to the gods. He offers to the kindling sticks; verily (thus he delights) the spring; in the spring all ficer is not a Brahman then the Hotṛ's ancestors may be named, or in all cases mānava may be used.

³ The fifteen pada character of the Nivid must be made up by the use of some addition. MṂS. v. 1. 4. 12 has mānuṣa, giving fifteen syllables, and T.B. iii. 5. 3. 1 asāv asau. The fifteen additional words are given in sets of 7, 4, and 4, in ṂS. i. 4. 19-21.

4. 22 seq.; Hillebrandt, p. 84. The Sandhi in devāṇ ājyapāṇ is due to quotation of the words of the summons.

² The phrase is found also in ṂS. i. 14. 22; the śrucau are the juhū and the upabṛt; cf. ĀṂS. ii. 2. 4; Hillebrandt, p. 85. The verse is given in ṂS. i. 6. 16. It precedes the fore-offerings.

iii. 4. ¹ For the five fore-offerings see ṂS. i. 7; Hillebrandt, pp. 96-101. yaj is strictly = 'say the offering verse for'.

this is kindled. He offers to Tanūnapāt; verily (thus he delights) the hot season, for the hot season heats the body. He offers to the sacrificial food; verily (thus he delights) the rains, for through the rains sacrificial food arises. He offers to the strew; verily (thus he delights) the autumn, for in the autumn the plants on the strew grow best. He offers at the end to the making of Hail!; verily (thus he delights) the winter, for in the winter over all this is Hail! made. They say 'Seeing that there are five fore-offerings and six seasons, where does he offer to the sixth season?' In that in the fourth fore-offering he mingles (the butter),² thus he gives it a share in the others. Again, in that in the last fore-offering he mixes together the gods, he makes them sharers in the fore-offerings. Just as Agni has a share in all oblations, so he makes the deities sharers in the share of Agni. He does not say here³ 'Agni from the Hotṛ's office' (thinking), 'The fore-offerings are cattle; the Sviṣṭakṛt is Rudra; let me not bring the cattle of the sacrifice into contact with Rudra.' Some⁴ say 'Hail! May the gods, drinking the butter, rejoicing, O Agni, enjoy this butter.' He should not so do. The butter is one half of the sacrifice, the oblation is the other half; if he were to say one only of these, then one half of the sacrifice would have an accompaniment, the other half not. Therefore he should say 'Hail! May the gods, drinking the butter, rejoicing, O Agni, enjoy this butter, this oblation.'

iii. 5. In¹ that the butter portions at the full moon offering contain references to the slaying of Vṛtra, it is because Indra slew Vṛtra with the full moon offering. In that they have references to growth at the new moon offering, it is because then the moon becomes destroyed and verily thus does he cause it to swell up and to increase. The offering verses in these offerings contain the word 'rejoicing', for they include the same oblations as the fore-offerings. Now 'rejoicing' is the holy power; verily thus by the holy power he offers the oblation to the gods. These offerings are threefold, ye yajāmahe, the Nigada, the sound *vaṣaṭ*²; the butter portions ² This refers to the putting of butter from the upabṛht into the juhū; see BṚS. i. 16; Hillebrandt, p. 94, n. 4.

² The Nigada is the material part in the offering verse, which runs in ĀCS. i. 5. 34: ye 3 yajāmahe agnim agnir juṣāṇa ājyasya vetū 3 varu 3 ṣaṭ. The rules for Pluti in the sacrifice are given by ÇṢS. i. 2. 2 seq., who gives as the Nigada havi-ṣaṭ as well as above in KB. iii. 4 ad fin.

are the eye; the eye is threefold, white, black, and red. These offerings he does not perform in the animal or Soma sacrifice (thinking), 'Through the animal offering the Soma sacrifice is possessed of eyes; let me not make the sacrifice four-eyed and loathsome.' In that the invitatory verses contain the words 'to' and 'offered',³ and the offering verses the words 'forward', that is, 'given', verily thus having sacrificed he gives the oblation to the gods. These (verses) are Gāyatrī and Trīṣṭubh; the Gāyatrī is the holy power; the Trīṣṭubh is lordly power; verily thus with the holy and lordly power he gives the oblation to the gods. So great is the extension of the metre; verily thus with the whole extension of the metre he gives the oblation to the gods. At the end of the Ṛc he utters the sound vaṣaṭ; so do all his offering verses become beautiful. With ṣaṭ he utters vaṣaṭ; the seasons are six; verily thus he pleases the seasons. He should utter vaṣaṭ as connected with the Brhat and the Rathantara,⁴ with a long in front and short behind; the short is the Rathantara, the long the Brhat; again, the Rathantara is this (earth); the Brhat is yonder (sky); verily thus in these two he finds support. So great is the extension of speech; verily thus with the whole extension of speech he gives the oblation to the gods. 'bhūr bhuvah'⁵ he mutters before ye yajāmahe, 'Strength is might, might is strength; light' after the sound vaṣaṭ: the sound vaṣaṭ is a thunderbolt; verily thus he quietens it, both in front and behind. Strength and might are the two most dear forms of the sound vaṣaṭ; verily with them he quietens it.

iii. 6. In¹ that he offers to Agni first of the deities, and because Agni is the mouth (beginning) of the gods, verily thus at the beginning he delights the gods. Now as to his sacrificing to Agni and Soma at the full moon offering, Agni and Soma were within Vṛtra; with regard to them Indra could not hurl his bolt; for them he arranged the portion at the full moon

⁴ Cf. Ānartīya on ÇS. i. 2. 18, where this sentence is cited by Suyajña, the reputed author. vaṣaṭ is to be made vau ; ṣaṭ.

⁵ See ÇS. i. 1. 38 for the standing rule of the use of this formula.

¹ This chapter deals with the chief oblation (pradhānahaviṅśi) of the two sacrifices: as here treated they clearly are for the full moon (1) a cake for Agni; (2) an Upāṅcuyāja; (3) a cake for Agni and Soma, for the new moon (1) a cake for Agni;

(2) an Upāṅcuyāja; (3) a cake for Indra and Agni or a milk offering (Sāmnāyā) for Indra. In the case of the second alternative under (3) the Sāmnāyā is divided into two parts by the extension of the Upāṅcuyāja. This is in general accord with ÇS. i. 13-18 which, however, is less explicit as to the position of the Upāṅcuyāja and which specifies the duties of the Upāṅcuyājas as Agni and Soma normally, but in the case of no Sāmnāyā Viṣṇu. The other Sūtras agree generally, but vary in detail; see Hillebrandt, pp. 111-115. The last paragraph of the chapter deals with the offering to Agni Viṣṭakti.

sacrifice; the two are offered to inaudibly, and in a higher tone, to prevent sameness. In that he sacrifices inaudibly, thereby he delights Soma; in that (he sacrifices) in a higher tone, thereby (he delights) Agni. In that he sacrifices to Indra and Agni at the new moon sacrifice, it is because Indra and Agni are supports; verily (the offering serves) for a support. In that, mingling, he sacrifices to Indra at the new moon sacrifice, that is the light of the new moon sacrifice, for the moon is not then seen. In that, without mingling,² he offers the butter of the inaudible (sacrifice) between the two cakes, it is for preventing sameness. In that, mingling, he offers the butter of the inaudible (sacrifice) in the midst of the milk offering (sāmnāyā), the explanation of that has been given.³ In that he sacrifices at the end to Agni Sviṣṭakṛt, it is because he gives the oblation to the gods; he who divides out food tastes it himself last. Again Sviṣṭakṛt is Rudra and he enjoys at the end. Therefore to him at the end he sacrifices. In that (offering) the invitatory and offering verses are of the same metre, but the Nigada differs; though this sameness is avoided. After saying vaṣaṭ, he touches water; the waters are healing and medicine; verily thus are healing and medicine produced at the end in the sacrifice.

iii. 7. In¹ that he smears on the lower lip the first anointing of the sacrificial food on the forefinger, the lower lip is this world, the upper lip is yonder world, what is between the lips is the atmosphere here; therefore in that he eats, verily thus he delights these worlds continuously. In that he invokes the sacrificial food, verily thus he seeks renown among all beings. Again, the sacrificial food is food; verily thus he places food in himself; again the sacrificial food is cattle; verily (the invocation) serves to obtain cattle. On it four times he breathes; all this (universe) is four-fold; verily (it serves) to obtain all this (universe). Again, in that after invoking the sacrificial food he smells it and the sacrificial food is cattle, verily thus he confers cattle upon himself. Again, in that the Adhvaryu makes the cake to sit on the strew, verily thus he delights the fathers. Again, in that he eats the second² portion of the sacrificial food with

³ I. e. it is to avoid sameness, as in the case of the intervention of the offering between the two cakes.

¹ This chapter gives explanation of the details of the invocation of the sacrificial food (idā), for which see ÇÇS. i. 10, 11; Hillebrandt, pp. 125 seq. Then came notes on the anvāhārya, a mess of food cooked with rice which is the fee for the priests and the recitation over the kindling stick which is prescribed in ÇÇS. i. 12.

² uttareḍā (also in KB. xiii. 7) is the portion of the Hotṛ of the five portions into which the idā proper is divided. It may be called 'second' as being the second part cut, or, because it is held in the left hand, perhaps 'left' is meant; cf. Ānartīya on ÇÇS. i. 10. 4. The AB. has avāntareḍā; see Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 225, 226; AÇS. ii. 9. 7.

muttering, and the muttering is the holy power ; verily thus with the holy power he appeases it. Again, in that they cleanse themselves on that (part of the strew) where the strainers are, and the waters are healing and medicine, verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine made. Again, in that they bring up the mess of food, it is because the new and full moon sacrifices have that as the sacrificial fees ; therefore they bring up the mess of food. Again, in that he addresses³ the kindling stick, it is because it alone is left over of the kindling fuel ; therefore he celebrates it.

iii. 8. In¹ that he offers three after-offerings, and these worlds are three, verily thus he obtains these worlds. In that he says all last, and the Sviṣṭakṛt is a support, verily (it serves) for a support. In that he says the Sūktavāka, and the Sūktavāka is a support, verily (it serves) for a support. In that he makes mention of earth and sky, and earth and sky are supports, verily (it serves) for a support. Some say 'Agni hath rejoiced in this oblation'. This he should not do ;² the deity to whom he is sacrificing comes forward thinking 'It is a renewed sacrifice ; again will he give me the oblation', and takes away the blessings of the sacrificer ; therefore 'He hath rejoiced in oblation, he hath rejoiced in oblation' only should he say. The deities to whom he sacrifices in the beginning, verily in the end through them he finds support. In that in the Sūktavāka he mentions the name³ of the sacrificer, it is because it is the divine self of the sacrificer which the priests make ready ; therefore he mentions his name ; for here is he born. He should mention it aloud, even if he be a teacher ; thus is the sacrificer not likely to fall into ruin. Five⁴ blessings he utters ; there are three in the sacrificial food ; they make up eight ; by them the gods attained all attainments (iṣṭiḥ) ; verily thus does the sacrificer by means of them attain all attainments. Having placed his clasped hands pointing east on the strew he mutters 'For homage', for the gods are not superior to homage. In that he says the Çamyuvāka, and the Çamyuvāka is a support, verily (it serves) for a support ; again Çamyu Bārhaspatya appeased all sacrifices ; therefore he utters the Çamyuvāka.

³ The Ānand. ed. has anumantrayeta.

¹ This chapter briefly touches on the three after-offerings and the Sūktavāka and the Çamyuvāka, which here is called Çamyuvāka and attributed to Çamyu Bārhaspatya ; see ÇQS. i. 12. 13-14. 24 ; Hillebrandt, pp. 134-149.

² The point is idam, which is found with agnir in TS. ii. 6. 9. 6 ; TB. iii. 5. 10. 2 ; MS. iv. 13. 9 (cf. MS. v. 1. 4. 28) ; ÇB. i. 9. 1. 9 and even in ĀÇS. i. 9. 1 (without Agnir).

But the god's name is apparently also to be omitted contrary to ÇQS. unless we are to understand that merely idam is to be rejected, as is reasonable.

³ nāmanī has Çāṅkhāyana, explained as the personal and Nāksatra name ; see Hillebrandt, p. 145, n. 1.

In that he touches the waters, and the waters are healing and medicine, verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced.

iii. 9. In¹ that they perform in the Gārhapatya the sacrifices to the wives with (the gods), the wives share the Gārhapatya, the sacrificer the Āhavanīya; therefore they perform the sacrifices for the wives with (the gods) in the Gārhapatya. They are four in number; up to four (degrees), are pairing, union, propagation; (they serve) for generation.² They are performed inaudibly; the sacrifices to the wives with (the gods) are a pouring of seed; inaudibly is seed poured; they are appropriate; what in the sacrifice is appropriate is perfect; verily (they serve) for the perfection of the sacrifice. He sacrifices to Soma, Tvaṣṭṛ, the wives of the gods; and Agni, lord of the house; these deities are the controllers of unions; them here he delights; they here being delighted confer unions. To Soma first he sacrifices; thus he pours seed; to Tvaṣṭṛ second, Tvaṣṭṛ transmutes the seed that is poured; then to the wives, for these are joint sacrifices for the wives; in that he sacrifices last to Agni, lord of the house, the wives are those of him that makes the sacrifice well performed; therefore he sacrifices to him at the end. In that he mutters the R̥c, verily thus he procures a blessing. In that he invokes the sacrificial food, in that he purifies himself, in that he utters the Çamyuvāka, the explanation of that has been given.³ In that he causes the wife to speak on the grass bundle, and the grass bundle is male and the wife female, verily thus he confers union upon women; therefore the wife puts between her thighs blades of the grass bundle. In that he strews the grass bundle, thereby the new and full moon offerings are continued by him; verily also thereby the strew for his Agnihotra is spread. In that he pays reverence to the remnant of the grass bundle, verily thus he utters a prayer for blessing; in that he pays reverence to the Āhavanīya, verily thus having delighted (them) he speaks at the end his purpose to the gods; in that he touches the waters, and the waters are healing and medicine, verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced.

² Possibly the four nouns express the four things exemplified in the four sacrifices, the dative in the last case being natural enough; it is also possible to stop at mithunam and make prajananam prajāyati the description of the effort of the four, but in that case eva would be expected. More probable, however, is the version of the text; cf. MS. i. 7. 3; Schol. on Pāṇ. viii. 1. 15; the reference may be to the limits of human marriage; cf. ÇB. i. 8. 3. 6, ā being exclusive (cf. AB. iv. 24), not animal mating. Possibly it only means a pair union, and propagation make up four; cf. viii. 2, n. 6.

ADHYĀYA IV

iv. 1. By¹ means of the supplementary offering the gods smote away the Asuras; verily so also does the sacrificer by the supplementary offering smite away the foes that hate him. He offers to Indra, driver away of enemies, a cake on eleven potsherds. Indra is the smiter away of enemies; verily he smites away his enemies. Again, he adds on the new moon ceremonial. In that at the full moon sacrifice he offers to Indra, therein the sacrificer has the new and full moon sacrifices completed²; if he were to incur a disaster in the second half of the month, there would not be a dragging apart of his sacrifice. In that in the new moon sacrifice he offers to Aditi, it is to balance the sacrifice. From the invitatory and offering verses it is possessed of the characteristic of driving away enemies.³

iv. 2. Next¹ as to the Abhyudītā sacrifice. He wanders from the path of the sacrifice at whose fast the moon is seen in the east. He offers to Agni, the giver, a cake on eight potsherds; Agni is the giver; verily he gives the sacrifice to him. (He offers) to Indra, the bestower, curds milked in the evening; Indra is the bestower; verily he bestows the sacrifice upon him. (He offers) to Viṣṇu Āpiviṣṭa² a pap in milk milked in the morning; Viṣṇu is the sacrifice; verily he gives to him the sacrifice. In that he sacrifices to these deities, (it is because he thinks) 'Let me not wander from the path of the sacrifice.' The sacrificial fee is a bow with three arrows; that is a symbol of a safe journey.

² The ordinary offerings may end with a milk offering to Indra.

³ The samyājyās of the offering to Vaimṛdha are used for the Sviṣṭakṛt in the offering after the new moon offering to Aditi which is thus connected with vimṛdh.

The Ānand. ed. has absurdly samyājyā 'to.

iv. 2. ¹ This chapter (cf. Atharvaprāyaścitta, ii. 2 and 3) deals with the case when a new moon offering is begun before the actual time acc. to ÇS. iii. 2, purastāt presumably meaning 'before new moon', and in iii. 3 paścāt 'after new moon'. But the terminology of the Brāhmaṇa can hardly be so interpreted and the sense seems to be as above; cf. KB. iii. 1. The distinction is thus one of degree of lateness, as suggested by the expression abhyud in both cases.

iv. 3. Next ¹ as to the Abhyuddrṣṭā sacrifice. He wanders from the path of the sacrifice at whose fast the moon is seen in the west. He offers to Agni, maker of paths, a cake on eight potsherds; Agni is the maker of paths; verily he sets him again ² on the path of the sacrifice. To Indra, slayer of Vṛtra, (he offers a cake) on eleven potsherds; Indra is the slayer of Vṛtra; verily he sets him again on the path of the sacrifice. To Vaiṣvānara (he offers a cake) on twelve potsherds; he who yonder gives heat is Vaiṣvānara; verily he sets him again on the path of the sacrifice. In that he sacrifices to these deities, (it is because he thinks) 'Let me not wander from the path of the sacrifice.' The sacrificial fee is a pair of shoes and a staff; that is the symbol of fearlessness.

iv. 4. Next as to the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice.¹ He who means to proceed with the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice begins on the full moon night in the Phalgunis; the full moon night in the Phalgunis is the beginning of the year; therefore on it the proceedings of the unconsecrated are begun. Now Dakṣa Pārvaṭi, having sacrificed with this sacrifice, obtained all desires; in that he sacrifices with the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice, verily (it serves) for the obtaining of all desires. He should not take pleasure in eating ²; 'Soma, the king, the moon I eat', thus thinking in his mind should he eat; now the moon is Soma, the king, the wise; it on the second half of the month the gods press out. In that on the second half of the month he performs the vows of the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice, (it is because he wishes) 'Let me share in the Soma drinking of the gods.' In that during the fast day ³ he offers a cake on eleven potsherds to Agni and Soma, thereby he obtains the victim for

² āpīpāthayati is clearly the correct term, and is read by the Ānand. ed.; the variants abhipāthayati and āpīpāyati both pointing to it.

iv. 4. ¹ This important offering is to be performed for fifteen years or every year according to Çāṅkhāyana, taking the place of the new and full moon offerings of which it is an elaborated variant. It is a substitute for the Sattras of the Soma sacrifices with which in this chapter its details are equated. The offerings are (1) day before full moon, the usual full moon offerings including cakes to Agni and Agni and Soma; (2) full moon, cake to Agni and milk for Indra, which of course is the usual new moon offering and hence is here so called (āmāvāsya); (3) day before new moon, the usual offerings of a cake to Agni and a cake to Indra and Agni; (4) new moon, a cake to Agni and payasyā for Mitra and Varuṇa; see ÇÇS. iii. 8, which has a further offering for the steeds, here ignored. The Dākṣāyaṇa is also dealt with by Hillebrandt, Neu- und Vollmondsopfer, pp. 177-185; cf. Eggeling, SBE. xii. 374 seq.

² āpeti, which Lindner reads, is wrong; the āpīpā of M (āpīti other MSS.) is the correct reading which the scribes have misunderstood. The Sūtra (iii. 8. 14) has na saukhyam prāpnuyāt which shows what it read. The Ānand. ed. has āpayati.

³ The ordinary rite has an upavasatha day before the actual offering day. This rite has for that day a special performance of the ordinary offerings, giving up the next day to the special offerings.

Agni and Soma which is offered on the fast day of the Soma (sacrifice). In that he sacrifices in the morning with the new moon offerings, and the pressing day is Indra's, thus he obtains the pressing day. In that at the new moon offering on the fast day he offers a cake on twelve potsherds to Indra and Agni and the third pressing belongs as regards its Sāman to Indra and Agni, thus he obtains the third pressing. In that there is a milk mess for Mitra and Varuṇa, and the offering (of a cow) is for Mitra and Varuṇa, thus he obtains the offering of a cow. Thus Soma is present, having penetrated the Haviryajñas; therefore though unconsecrated he performs the vows of the consecrated.

iv. 5. Next ¹ as to the Idādadha sacrifice. He who means to proceed with the Idādadha sacrifice begins on the same full moon night; the explanation of it has been given. It is a sacrifice for one desiring cattle or desiring proper food. With it should one desiring cattle or one desiring proper food sacrifice; verily in it thus also does he perform the vows, for it is a combination of the Dākṣāyaṇa sacrifice.

iv. 6. Next ¹ as to the Sārvaseni sacrifice. He who means to proceed with the Sārvaseni sacrifice begins on the same full moon night; the explanation of it has been given. It is a sacrifice for one desiring propagation; with it should one desiring propagation sacrifice. In that the Adhvaryu produces the oblation, that is the symbol of propagation.

iv. 7. Next ¹ as to the Çaunaka sacrifice. He who means to proceed with the Çaunaka sacrifice begins on the same full moon night; the explanation of this has been given. It is a sacrifice for one desiring to lay low (his enemies); with it should one desiring to lay low sacrifice; he who desires 'May I lay low the rival who hates me', should sacrifice with this; he lays him low indeed.

¹ According to ÇÇS. iii. 9 the four days have the following offerings, (1) cake for Agni, pap for Sarasvatī; (2) cake for Agni and Soma with the Upāṅguyāja, and milk for Indra; (3) cake for Agni, pap for Sarasvatī; (4) cake for Indra and Agni, and milk mess for Mitra and Varuṇa. He adds the vājina offerings as in the Dākṣāyaṇa. The sacrifice is just mentioned in AB. iii. 40. 9; ĀÇS. ii. 14. 11; ĀpÇS. iii. 17. 12.

iv. 6. ¹ According to ÇÇS. iii. 10 the point of distinction in this rite is the combination of the new and full moon offerings at full moon and their omission in toto at new moon. Cf. AB. iii. 40. 7; AÇS. ii. 14.

7-10; ÇB. ii. 4. 4. 4; xi. 1. 2; ĀpÇS. iii. 17. 12.

iv. 7. ¹ According to ÇÇS. iii. 10. 7 there is no distinction in this case for the Hotras compared with the normal model. Ānartīya points out that the Anunirvāpyās are to be performed in this case, and that the rule of prakṛti and vikāra which usually holds is not applicable to these rites. Cf. ĀpÇS. iii. 17. 12. The mention of Çaunaka is probably a piece of evidence for the later date of the KB., as the family appears to have been prominent in the late Brāhmaṇa epoch, as indicated by the citations in Vedic Index, ii. 396.

iv. 8. Next¹ as to the Vasiṣṭha sacrifice. He who means to proceed with the Vasiṣṭha sacrifice begins on the new moon in the Phalgunis (thinking) 'The full moon night is the holy power; the new moon night is the lordly power; this sacrifice is, as it were, the lordly power. By means of the lordly power let me overcome my foes.' Vasiṣṭha desired, when his sons were slain, 'May I be propagated with offspring, with cattle, may I overcome the Saudāsas.' He saw this sacrificial rite, the Vasiṣṭha sacrifice; he grasped it and sacrificed with it; having sacrificed with it, he was propagated with offspring, with cattle; he overcame the Saudāsas. Verily thus also the sacrificer, in that he sacrifices with the Vasiṣṭha sacrifice, is propagated with offspring, with cattle; he overcomes the rivals who hate him.

iv. 9. Next¹ as to the Sākamprasthāyya sacrifice. He who means to proceed with the Sākamprasthāyya begins on the same new moon night; the explanation of it has been given. It is a sacrifice for one desiring pre-eminence, desiring heroism; with it should one desiring pre-eminence, desiring heroism, sacrifice. In that together they move forward, together they sacrifice, together they eat, therefore is it called Sākamprasthāyya (moving forward together).

iv. 10. Next¹ as to the Munyayana. He who means to proceed with the Munyayana begins on the same full moon night; the explanation of it has been given. It is a sacrifice for one desiring all; with it should one desiring all sacrifice.

iv. 11. Next¹ as to the Turāyana. He who means to proceed with the Turāyana begins on the same full moon night; the explanation of this has been given. It is a sacrifice for one desiring heaven; with it should one

iv. 9. ¹ Like the Çaunaka sacrifice (iv. 7) this is discussed in ÇÇS. iii. 10. 7 as being like the new and full moon offerings.

iv. 10. ¹ According to ÇÇS. iii. 11. 7-10 the sacrificer sacrifices to Agni and Agni and Viṣṇu every time save at the Parvan, i.e. the new and full moon offering, the four monthly offerings, the Ayana (animal), and the Year (Soma) offerings. Two different Munyayanas are given in BÇS. xvi. 30.

iv. 11. ¹ According to ÇÇS. iii. 11. 11-15 the characteristics of this Ayana are a cake for Agni and Indra and a pap for the All-gods. But while the former is based on the full moon sacrifice, the latter follows the new moon as its model and includes the imitation of the Dikṣā for the Soma sacrifice in the use of a black antelope's skin. Both are to last a year, ÇÇS. iii. 11. 16. Cf. ĀÇS. ii. 14. 4-6. For the name Weber compares Pān. v. 1. 72, and suggests (Ind. Stud. ii. 312) a possible relation to Tura Kāvaseya.

desiring heaven sacrifice. In that he puts on a black antelope's skin, and the black antelope's skin is the holy power, verily thus he unites the sacrifice with holy power. There are three oblations; these worlds are three; verily thus he obtains these worlds.

iv. 12. Next¹ as to the Āgrayaṇa. He who desires proper food should sacrifice with the Āgrayaṇa. In the rains when the millet harvest has come, he gives orders to pluck millet. The new moon night which coincides with that time, on it should he sacrifice and then offer this sacrifice. If he is a full moon sacrificer, he should sacrifice with this and then offer the full moon sacrifice. If again he desires² a Nakṣatra, he should in the first half of the month look out for a Nakṣatra and offer under the Nakṣatra³ which he desires. There are seventeen kindling verses in this sacrifice, the butter portions⁴ contain the word 'being'; the invitatory and offering verses (of the Sviṣṭakṛt offering) are Virāj verses⁵; the explanation of that has been given⁶. There is a pap for Soma; Soma is the king of the plants; thus he delights him with his own subjects. In that he gives the honey drink, it is because this is the sap of the forest things.

iv. 13. When¹ spring has come and the bamboo seeds are ripe, he gives orders to pluck bamboo seeds. Of this (sacrifice) there is the same time, the same model, the same deity, the same fee, the same explanation. Some perform (the offering) for Agni, or Varuṇa, or Prajāpati, but with the same model and the same explanation.

iv. 14. When¹ the rice harvest or the barley harvest has come, he gives orders to pluck (grains) for the Āgrayaṇa: of this (sacrifice) there is the same time, the same model. In that there is (a cake) on twelve potsherds for ¹ This and the next two rites are dealt with together by ÇÇS. iii. 12: the chief rites are beside the Soma offering of çyāmāka or veṇuṇyavas, in the case of the vrihiyava form a cake for Indra and Agni or Agni and Indra, a pap for the All-gods, and a cake for sky and earth, these last being Upāṇḍuyājas; ÇÇS. iii. 12. 10. Cf. BÇS. iii. 12; MÇS. i. 64. ĀpÇS. vi. 31. 13 quotes a different practice from a Bahvrcabrāhmaṇa.

² upepset is preferable to Rs. apepset, the corruption being easy.

³ M inserts kalyāṇe, but this looks like a mere gloss.

⁴ I. e. RV. iv. 13. 4 (asi); i. 91. 9 (sānti).

⁵ I. e. RV. vii. 1. 3 and 10.

⁶ See KB. i. 1. There is a calf as the fee of the Indra and Agni offering as opposed to the honey mixture (dadhi and madhu) for the Soma offering.

iv. 13. ¹ To this account ÇÇS. iii. 12 adds nothing, but Ānartīya on iii. 12. 10 cites this passage.

iv. 14. ¹ This is the full form of the Āgrayaṇa where rice and barley are offered with three oblations for Indra and Agni, the All-gods and earth and sky, and with a number of simpler variants. For the various forms of the ritual see ĀÇS. ii. 9; BÇS. iii. 12; ĀpÇS. vi. 29, 30; Vait. viii. 4; Hillebrandt, Ritualliteratur, § 65. The offering is not so much, as Lindner (Festgruss an Böhlingk, pp. 79 seq.) suggests, a thank-offering, as an offering to secure the fruitfulness of the new crop as this Brāhmaṇa shows (Oldenberg, Die Religion des Veda, p. 305).

Indra and Agni, and Indra and Agni are the beginning of the gods, verily thus at the beginning he delights the gods. In that there is a pap for the All-gods, and the All-gods are all the gods, verily (it serves) to delight all the gods. In that there is (a cake) on one potsherd for sky and earth, (it is because) sky and earth are the preparers of the harvest, and earth is a support, and by the flooding yonder (sky) co-operates.² In that he sacrifices to these deities, (it is because he thinks) 'By these deities shall I eat food made calm.' In that he gives an ox of the first birth, it is because this is a first ceremony. If he is wearied of this (sacrifice),³ he should offer the oblation of the full or the new moon, with the new (plants)⁴ to obtain both. Or again he may employ the oblations at the full moon or the new moon (sacrifice) to secure the presence of the deities. Or again he may offer in the morning and in the evening the Agnihotra with barley gruel of the new (plants), to obtain both. Or again having cooked milk in a pot on the Gārhapatya he should make an offering of the new (plants) in the Āhavanīya to the gods of the Āgrayana, with Svīṣṭakṛt for a fourth (saying) 'To N.N. hail. To N.N. hail!' to secure the presence of the deities. Or again having made the Agnihotra cow to eat the new (plants), he should offer in the morning and in the evening the Agnihotra with its milk, to obtain both. These are so many possibilities; he may offer with whichever he may desire, but the established rule is that of three oblations. Three are these worlds; verily thus he obtains these worlds.

ADHYĀYA V

THE FOUR-MONTHLY SACRIFICES

The Vaiṣvadeva

v. 1. Next¹ as to the four-monthly sacrifices. He who prepares the four-monthly sacrifices begins on the full moon night in the Phalgunis.

² oḍmanāsām, the version of the MSS., with a variant oḍmanāsāv, read in M, in the comm. is difficult and obscure. The instr. is probably to be understood and reference may be to the swelling of the grain, but āsām is unexpected, as vṛthi and yava are masculine. The gen. with anuvēda is not unnatural if not paralleled. āsām is, however, an attempt to explain away āsāv which has been misinterpreted. asau is the sky which co-operates or sympathizes with earth, anuvēda being used absolutely.

³ For the dative see Delbrück, Altind. Synt. p. 142. The Ānand ed. has lāyāt.

⁴ navānām apparently goes with kurvīta not ubhayaśya; cf. ÇS. iii. 12. 14.

¹ The first two chapters deal with the Vaiṣvadeva, the first of the four-monthly sacrifices; then the next two with the Varunapraghāsa, the second; then the next with the Sākamedhas, the last, and

The full moon night is the Phalgunī in the beginning of the year; the latter two Phalgunas are the beginning, the two former the end. Just as the two ends of what is round may unite, so these two ends of the year are connected. In that he sacrifices with the Vaiṣvadeva sacrifice on the full moon night in the Phalgunī, verily thus at the beginning he delights the year. Again the four-monthly sacrifices are sacrifices of healing; therefore are they performed in the joinings of the seasons, for in the joinings of the seasons pain is born. There are eight oblations, the oblations of four full moon days amount to eight; the Vaiṣvadeva is a compound of four full moon days. In that Agni is kindled, it is because the Vaiṣvadeva is propagation; therefore he generates this divine embryo. As to there being seventeen kindling verses, the butter portions containing the word 'being', the invitatory and offering verses being Virāj verses, the explanation of that has been given.² In that there are nine fore-offerings and nine after-offerings,³ eight oblations and the offering for the steeds as the ninth, thus he obtains the brilliance of the Nakṣatras.

v. 2. In¹ that he sacrifices to Agni and Soma first of the deities, it is because these are the deities of the new and full moon sacrifices; therefore to them first he sacrifices. In that he sacrifices to Savitr, and Savitr is lord of instigations, (it serves) for the creation of instigation by Savitr. In that he sacrifices to Sarasvatī, and Sarasvatī is speech, verily thus he delights speech. In that he sacrifices to Pūṣan and Pūṣan is he who yonder gives heat, verily thus he delights him. In that he sacrifices to the Maruts as impetuous, and the Maruts as impetuous are terrible, verily thus he makes healing. In that there is a milk mess for the All-gods, and the All-gods are all these gods, verily (it serves) to delight all the gods. In that there is (a cake) on one potsherd for the sky and earth, and sky and earth are supports, verily (it serves) for support. In that he gives an ox of the first birth, it is because that is a first ceremony. In that before or after the Çam̐yuvāka, he sacrifices to the steeds uninvited, and the steeds are the horses of the gods, verily thus he delights these steeds.

eight to ten with the Çunāsiriya rite which is connected with these sacrifices. The AB. has nothing to correspond, but the rites are explained in the Yajur texts, TS. i. 8. 2-7; KS. ix. 4-7; xv. 2; KapS. viii. 7-11; MS. i. 10. 1-4; ii. 6. 3; VS. iii. 44-61; ix. 35-8; ÇB. ii. 5 and 6. For the ritual see ĀÇS. ii. 15-20; ÇÇS. iii. 13-18; BÇS. v; MÇS. i. 7 and 8; v. 1. 3, 4; ĀpÇS. viii; KÇS. v; Vait. viii. 8 seq.; Hillebrandt, Ritualliteratur, § 64; Eggeling, SBE. xii. 383 seq. For Phalgunī as the beginning of the year cf. Hopkins, JAOS. xxiv. 20; Macdonell and Keith, Vedic Index, i. 424 seq.

¹ The offerings here are enumerated in ÇÇS. iii. 13. 6-11; the vājina offering is described in iii. 8. 20-27 in connexion with the Dākṣāyaṇa.

Therefore the gods with their horses become delighted. Now the steeds are also the seasons; verily thus he delights the seasons. In that he sacrifices afterwards with the full moon offering, thus by him in the first half² of the month is the Vaiṣvadeva offered.

The Varuṇapraghāsas

v. 3. By¹ means of the Vaiṣvadeva sacrifice Prajāpati created offspring; they, being created, not born, ate the barley of Varuṇa; Varuṇa grasped them with Varuṇa's nooses. The offspring having gone ran up to their father Prajāpati, 'Do thou devise that sacrificial rite by which we may sacrifice and be set free from the nooses of Varuṇa, from all ill.' Then Prajāpati saw this sacrificial rite, the Varuṇapraghāsas; he grasped it, and sacrificed with it; having sacrificed with it he delighted Varuṇa; Varuṇa being delighted, freed offspring from the nooses of Varuṇa and from all evil. From the nooses of Varuṇa and from all evil are freed the offspring of him who knowing thus sacrifices with the Praghāsas. In that they bring forward the fire, verily thus do they bring forward yonder fire which they kindle at the Vaiṣvadeva. In that the fire is kindled, the explanation of that has been given. In that there are seventeen kindling verses, the butter portions contain the word 'being' and the invitatory and offering verses are Virāj verses, the explanation of that has been given. In that there are nine fore-offerings and nine after-offerings, and nine oblations, thus he obtains the brilliance of the Nakṣatras; the five accompanying oblations ending with that to Pūṣan are the same; the explanation of them has been given.

v. 4. In that there is (a cake) on twelve potsherds for Indra and Agni, and Indra and Agni are supports, verily (it serves) for support. Indra is in the middle; therefore to him in the middle he sacrifices. In that there is a milk mess for Varuṇa, (it is because) Varuṇa is Indra, and he has milk as his portion; therefore there is a milk mess for Varuṇa. In that there is a milk mess for the Maruts, (it is because) the Maruts are situated in the waters; therefore with milk he sacrifices to them, for milk is the waters. Moreover the Maruts are Indra's, milk is Indra's; therefore is there a milk mess for the Maruts. In that there is (a cake) on one potsherd for Ka, and Ka is Prajāpati, verily thus he delights him; moreover the word Ka is a name of happiness; verily thus he confers happiness upon himself. In that he gives two pairing cattle, that is the symbol of propagation. In that he sacrifices to the steeds, the explanation of that has been given. In that he sacrifices to Varuṇa in the waters, verily thus he delights him in his own home. In that afterwards he sacrifices with the full moon sacrifice, thus in the first half of the month does he sacrifice with the Varuṇapraghāsas.

² This clearly shows that the full moon for this part of the Brāhmaṇa was in the middle of the month; yet in v. 1 the full moon begins the year, one of the many inconsequences of the Brāhmaṇas. So iv. 4.

The Sākamedhas

v. 5. The¹ Sākamedhas are a sacrificial rite for Indra. Just as a great king placing in front the advance guard of his army, pursues his way in safety, verily so does he sacrifice in front to the gods. Just as there is that Mahāvratā in the Soma sacrifice, even so is this a Mahāvratā in the Iṣṭi sacrifice. In that he offers to Agni of the front first of the deities, and Agni is the beginning of the gods, thus at the beginning he delights the gods. In that at midday he sacrifices to the Maruts, the heaters, (it is because) it is hot at midday; therefore at the midday he sacrifices to the Maruts, the heaters. Moreover, the Maruts are Indra's, the midday is Indra's; therefore at the midday he sacrifices to the Maruts, the heaters. In that in the evening they proceed with the householder's sacrifice and the householder's sacrifice is a rite for prosperity, and prosperity is in the evening, therefore he offers the butter portions with the word 'prosperity';² verily thus he makes the sacrificer to prosper. In that in the morning they proceed with a full ladle, verily thus he unites the ceremony in the morning with the ceremony on the previous day. In that he sacrifices to the Maruts, the playful, and the Maruts, the playful, are Indra's, therefore he sacrifices to them in conjunction with Indra. In that they bring forward the fire, that it is kindled, the explanation of that has been given. In that there are seventeen kindling verses, the butter portions contain the word 'being', and the invitatory and offering verses (of the Sviṣṭakṛt) are Virāj verses, the explanation of that has been given.³ In that there are nine fore-offerings, nine after-offerings, eight oblations and the Sviṣṭakṛt as ninth, thus he obtains the brilliance of the Nakṣatras. The six accompanying oblations ending with that to Indra and Agni are the same, the explanation of them has been given.⁴ In that he sacrifices at the end to Mahendra, (it is because) the leader⁵ occupies the end; therefore at the end he sacrifices to him. In that there is (a cake) on one potsherd for Viṣvakarman, and he yonder that gives heat is Viṣvakarman, verily thus he delights him. In that he gives a bull, (it is) because the sacrificial rite is Indra's.

¹ ÇS. iii. 15 gives the offerings thus referred to. Only one fire is taken forth, and there is no vājina offering or final bath as in the Varuṇapraghāsas, and the fee is only a bull.

² Viz. RV. i. 1. 3 (yoṣam) and 91. 12 (puṣṭi-vārdhanah). The offering is to the Maruts as householders (grhamedhinaḥ).

v. 6. In¹ that in the afternoon they proceed with the sacrifice to the fathers, (it is because) the fathers have the waning as their portion; therefore in the afternoon they proceed with the sacrifice to the fathers. They say 'Seeing that the fathers have the second half as their portion, then why do they sacrifice to them on the first half (of the month)?' The fathers are connected with the gods; therefore they sacrifice to them on the first half of the month. In that he recites one kindling verse only², it is because the fathers are one (offering) as it were, therefore he recites one kindling verse only. It is an Anuṣṭubh verse; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; the fathers are turned away; verily thus with the Anuṣṭubh as speech he causes them to come. In that he does not recite the Ṛṣi descent of the sacrificer, (it is because he thinks) 'Let me not place the sacrificer in the fire'. He recites this Nigada; the explanation of it has been given.³ In that he invites Soma with the fathers, or the fathers with Soma, the fathers sitting on this strew, and the fathers made ready by Agni⁴, (it is because) the fathers are connected with the gods; therefore he unites them. In that he invites Agni, bearer of the oblations, (it is because) the fathers are Sviṣṭakṛt's; therefore he invites him. Some do not invite his greatness, saying 'This is the greatness of the sacrificer'; but the rule is 'He should invite', for it is the greatness of Agni.

v. 7. In¹ that from the fore-offerings and the after-offerings he leaves out the two for the strew, (it is because he thinks) 'The strew is offspring; let me not cast offspring in the fire.' They are six; the seasons are six; the fathers are the seasons; verily thus he delights the fathers. In that he offers the butter portions² with the word 'living', verily thus he causes the sacrificer to live. In that there are three³ for each oblation, (it is because) there are three oblations, and he cuts off from them together; therefore ⁴ That is the five of the Vaiṣvadeva (KB. v. 2) and the Indra and Agni offering of the Varuṇapraghāsa.

⁵ For the gṛeṣṭhin see Vedic Index, ii. 262, 403.

¹ The ritual of the offering to the Pitṛs is given by ÇÇS. iii. 16. The offerings are not eaten but smelt and then given to the fathers.

² Viz. RV. x. 16. 12.

⁴ iti here is probably not merely enumerative, but is a quotation of the actual words of invitation preceded by ā vaha.

v. 7. ¹ This chapter completes the Sākamedhas; the two offerings to the straw are omitted, reducing the fore-offerings to four and the after-offerings to two; see ÇÇS. iii. 16 and 17.

² I. e. RV. i. 79. 9; 91. 7.

³ Three for each set of offering, viz. two Puroṇuvākyās and one Yājyā, see ÇÇS. iii. 16. 4-9.

there are three for each oblation. Moreover thus he discriminates the rite for the fathers from the rite for the gods. Now the fathers are at a great distance; verily he summons them with the first, brings them with the second, and offers with the third. In that he sacrifices at the end to Agni, bearer of the oblation, (it is because) the fathers are Sviṣṭakṛt's; therefore he sacrifices to him at the end. In that after invoking the sacrificial food and smelling it they do not eat it, (it is because they think) 'The sacrificial food is cattle; let us not cast the sacrificer's cattle in the fire'. In that the Adhvaryu gives to the fathers, verily thus he delights the fathers. In that they cleanse themselves (in the place) where the filters are, and the waters are healing and medicine, verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced. In that they mutter the Ṛc, verily thus they produce a benediction. In that having gone north they reverence the Gārhapatya and the Āhavanīya, verily thus having given delight, they declare at the end their purpose to the gods. Moreover the sacrifice to the fathers is terminated in the south; verily thus they make it terminated in the north. In that having gone eastwards⁴ they reverence the sun, and the sun is the world of the gods, and the fathers are the world of the fathers, verily thus they ascend from the world of the fathers to the world of the gods. In that in the Sūktavāka he does not mention the name of the sacrificer, (it is because he thinks) 'Let me not cast the sacrificer in the fire.' In that they do not perform the offering to the wives with (the gods), (it is because they think) 'Let us not cast the wives in the fire.' In that having gone north they perform the offerings to Tryambaka⁵, verily thus they delight Rudra in his own quarter. Moreover, the sacrifice to the fathers is terminated in the south; verily thus they make it terminated in the north. In that at the end having sacrificed he sacrifices with an Iṣṭi, (it is because) the Sākamedhas terminate in that; therefore at the end having sacrificed he sacrifices with an Iṣṭi. In that afterwards he sacrifices with the full moon offering, thus in the first half of the month he sacrifices with the Sākamedhas.

v. 8. He¹ obtains the thirteenth month in that he sacrifices with the

⁵ The offerings to Tryambaka are described in full detail in ĀpṛS. viii. 18; BṚS. v. 16, 17.

It may be treated either as a Vaiṣṇavada modification or as merely a modification of the full moon sacrifice, and its characteristics are the offerings to Ānāsīrau, to Vāyu and to Sūrya. Ānāsīrau are apparently the ploughshare (ṇa) and the plough (sira); see Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 155. Cf. Weber, Naxatra, ii. 334.

Çunāsīrya sacrifice; so great is the year as the thirteenth month; in that there is the thirteenth month, verily thus here is the whole year obtained. If the fire is kindled, the model is the framework of the Vaiṣṇvadeva; if it is not kindled, then the model is the full moon sacrifice; the full moon sacrifice is a support; verily (it serves) for support. In that the fire is kindled, the explanation of that has been given. In that there are seventeen kindling verses, the butter portions contain the word 'being', and the invitatory and offering verses are Virāj verses, the explanation of that has been given. In that there are nine fore-offerings, nine after-offerings, eight oblations and the Sviṣṭakṛt as the ninth, thus he attains the brilliance of the Nakṣatras. The five accompanying oblations ending with that for Pūṣan are the same; the explanation of them has been given. In that he sacrifices to Çunāsīrau, and Çunāsīrau are healing and medicine, verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced. In that he sacrifices to Vāyu, and Vāyu is breath, verily thus he delights breath. In that there is (a cake) on one potsherd for Sūrya, and he yonder that gives heat is Sūrya, verily thus he delights him. In that the sacrificial fee is a white (cow²), verily thus he delights him; verily thus is his form produced.

v. 9. In¹ that they perform the expiations and the substitutions, in that they offer the libations, verily thus do they produce a benediction, for the healing of the sacrifice and the medicine of the sacrificer.

v. 10. In that they lay to rest the sacrificer with his own fires¹, and the fires are a chariot of the gods, verily thus they lay him to rest on a chariot of the gods; he with this chariot of the gods goes to the world of heaven, where is the world of those who do good.²

² This is an interesting case of the Sūtra not following the Brāhmaṇa, as the cow is only optional there, the ox being specified first.

¹ ÇÇS. iii. 19. 1, 2 explains that expiations are in the case of disregard of rules, and substitutions in the absence of the proper material. The expiatory verses are given with directions for the libations in iii. 19. 3-8, and in 20 much regarding substitutes.

v. 10. ¹ There is a reference to this topic in AB. vii. 2. He is burnt with his sacred fires.

² The last words make a Triṣṭubh and the phrase is clearly poetic.

ADHYĀYA VI

THE BRAHMAN PRIEST.

The Creative Activity of Prajāpati.

vi. 1. Prajāpati, being desirous of propagation, underwent penance; from him when heated were born five, Agni, Vāyu, Āditya, Candramas, and Uṣas as fifth. He said to them, 'Do ye also practise fervour.' They consecrated themselves; then when they had consecrated themselves and had acquired fervour, Uṣas, offspring of Prajāpati, taking the form of an Apsaras, came out in front of them; to her their minds inclined; they poured out seed; they went to Prajāpati, their father, and said, 'We have poured out seed; let it not remain here²'. Prajāpati made a golden bowl, an arrow breadth in height and similar in breadth; in it he poured the seed; then arose he of a thousand eyes, of a thousand feet, with a thousand fitted (arrows).

vi. 2. He grasped¹ his father Prajāpati; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a name, for without a name assigned I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art Bhava.' Since the waters are Bhava, thereby Bhava harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus; his vow is 'A wet garment should one wear.'

vi. 3. A second time he grasped him; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a second name, for with one name only I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art Ṣarva.' Since the fire is Ṣarva, thereby Ṣarva harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'All (*sarva*¹) one should not eat².'

² amuyā bhūt thus means 'be lost', but not directly. asicāmāhā in Lindner's ed. is read in the Ānand. ed. as asiñcāma hā. The form is, of course, not correct, and is presumably a blunder. In any event the aorist is essential. M reads retovu asicāmahai; this suggests reto vā asicāmahi (with lengthening of -i in prolongation misunderstood) which is obviously better, and which Lindner has overlooked.

vi. 2. ¹ abhyāyachat is rather odd and abhyāga- chat is an obvious correction, but hardly necessary; M has the former reading.

vi. 3. ¹ The play of words on Ṣarva and Sarva is obvious, and early evidence for that similarity in sound which accounts for the constant doubt as to the real first letter of many words in Sanskrit lexicography (cf. Wackernagel, Altind. Gramm. i. 226 seq.).

² nācñiyāt is the obvious reading and is in M. nācñiyāt in Lindner is a mere misprint.

vi. 4. A third time he grasped him ; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a third name, for with two names only I shall not eat food here. He answered, 'Thou art the lord of cattle.' Since Vāyu is the lord of cattle, the lord of cattle harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'One should not speak ill of a Brahman.¹'

vi. 5. A fourth time he grasped him ; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a fourth name, for with three names only I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art the dread god.' Since the plants and trees are the dread god, thereby the dread god harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'One should not look at the cavity of a woman.'

vi. 6. A fifth time he grasped him ; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a fifth name, for with four names only I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art the great god.' Since the sun is the great god, thereby the great god harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'One should not look at him on his rising or on his setting.'

vi. 7. A sixth time he grasped him ; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a sixth name, for with five names only I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art Rudra.' Since the moon is Rudra, thereby Rudra harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'What is deformed one should not eat, nor the narrow.'

vi. 8. A seventh time he grasped him ; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me a seventh name, for with six names only I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art Īcāna.' Since food is Īcāna, thereby Īcāna harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'One should not repulse one who desires food only.'

vi. 9. An eighth time he grasped him ; he said to him, 'Why dost thou grasp me?' He replied, 'Give me an eighth name, for with seven names only I shall not eat food here.' He answered, 'Thou art the thunderbolt.' Since Indra is the thunderbolt, thereby the thunderbolt harms him not, nor his offspring, nor his cattle, nor any one claiming to be his. He who hates him becomes worse, not he who knows thus. His vow is 'Let him speak truth only, and let him bear gold.' This is the great god of eight names, distributed eightfold; up to the eighth generation his offspring eats food; ever more brilliant is a son born in the offspring of him who knows thus.

vi. 10. Prajāpati practised fervour; he, having practised fervour, developed from his expiration this world, from his inspiration the world of the atmosphere, from his cross-breathing yonder world. He practised fervour over these three worlds; from this world he created Agni, from the world of the atmosphere Vāyu, from the sky Āditya. He practised fervour over these three lights; from Agni he created the Ṛc verses, from Vāyu the Yajus formulae, from Āditya the Sāmans. He practised fervour over the threefold lore; he stretched out the sacrifice; he recited with the Ṛc, he proceeded with the Yajus, he sang with the Sāman. He developed the sap of the brilliance of this threefold lore, for the healing of these Vedas; he developed bhūh of the Ṛcs, bhuvah of the Yajuses, and sva of the Sāmans.¹ On the south side of Ka was the Brahman, the sacrifice of Ka ended as broader to the south and sloping to the north; his sacrifice ends as broader to the south and sloping to the north, whose is a Brahman who knows thus.

They say, 'How much of the sacrifice does the Brahman perform? How much the other priests?' 'A half' should he reply. There are two tracks of the sacrifice; one is performed with speech, the other with the mind; that which is performed with speech the other priests do; that which (is performed) with the mind, the Brahman does; therefore so long as they perform with the R̥c, the Yajus, the Sāman, so long should the Brahman sit, for he performs a half of the sacrifice.

tions. All indeed does he know who knows these exclamations. Just as there may be a string or leather fastening of wood,⁴ so these exclamations are the fasteners of the threefold lore.

vi. 13. In¹ that he casts away a blade of grass from the seat of the Brahman, verily thus he purifies it. Then he takes his place (saying) 'Here I sit down on the seat of Arvāvasu; Arvāvasu is the Brahman of the gods; verily thus he makes him sit down first (saying) 'May he continue uninjured the sacrifice.' Then, having taken his place, he mutters 'Brhaspati the Brahman'; Brhaspati is the Brahman of the gods; verily thus from him he seeks approval. When the Praṇītā waters are being brought forward, he keeps silence until the uttering aloud of (the word) haviṣkṛt. That is the door of the sacrifice; thus he makes it not vacant. (He keeps silence) after the Svīṣṭakṛt sacrifice has been offered until the instigation of the after-offerings. That is the second door of the sacrifice; thus he makes it not vacant. When the gods performed the sacrifice they kept the Brahman's portion for Savitr; it cleft his two hands; to him they gave instead two golden ones; therefore is he celebrated as 'Golden handed'. They kept it for Bhaga; it destroyed his eyes; therefore they say 'Bhaga is blind'. They kept it for Pūṣan²; it knocked out his teeth; therefore they say 'Pūṣan is toothless and an eater of gruel.' The gods said, vi. 14. 'Indra is the most forcible, most mighty, of the gods; for him keep it.' They kept it for him; he appeased it with the holy power; therefore he says 'Indra the Brahman.'¹ He gazes on it (saying), 'With the eye of Mitra I gaze on thee'; verily thus with the eye of Mitra he appeases it; he accepts it (saying) 'On the instigation of the god Savitr, with the arms of the Aṅvins, with the hands of Pūṣan I take thee'; verily with these deities he appeases it. Then separating the blades of grass he places (the vessel containing the Brahman's portion) with handle pointing east on the bare earth (saying) 'On the navel of earth I set thee, in the lap of Aditi'; the earth is the appeaser of foods; verily thus he appeases it. Taking thence he eats (saying) 'With the mouth of Agni I eat thee'; Agni is the appeaser of foods; verily thus he appeases it. Then he sips water (saying) 'Thou art healing'; the waters are healing and medicine; verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced. He touches his vital airs; whatever of the breaths has been ill used or injured, verily thus he makes it to fill up, he heals it. At the end he touches his navel (saying), 'In the belly of Indra I place thee', for Indra thus appeased it. In that he instigates with a muttered prayer for Savitr,² and Savitr is the instigator, verily (it serves) to instigate the rite.

vi. 15. Prajāpati is the creator of the sacrifice¹; by the establishment of the fire he created seed, gods, men, and Asuras² by the Agnihotra, by the new and full moon offerings Indra he created. For them he has created food and drink in the Haviryajñas and the Soma sacrifice. Moreover, whatever desire they had, that they obtained by these proceedings (ayana), and proper food by the Āgrayaṇa. They say, 'Why are they proceedings?' They are goings to every desire and to the world of heaven; by the four-monthly sacrifices they obtained the worlds of heaven, all desires, all attainments, all immortality. The four-monthly sacrifices are Prajāpati here, the twentyfour-fold year; the Vaiṣvadeva is, as it were, his mouth; the new and full moon sacrifices his joints; the days and nights his bones and marrow; the Varuṇapraghāsas his two arms; the three Iṣṭis his expiration, inspiration, and cross-breathing; the great oblation his body; the other Iṣṭis the deities within him, and the Çunāsīriya³ sacrifice his support. The four-monthly rites are Prajāpati here, the twentyfour-fold year; Prajāpati is all; the four-monthly sacrifices are all; thus by all all he obtains who knows this.

ADYĀYA VII

THE SOMA SACRIFICE.

The Consecration.

vii. 1. The¹ consecration is speech, for by speech is he consecrated. The consecrated is breath; by the consecration as speech, by the consecrated as breath, the gods, having encompassed all desires on both sides, conferred them upon themselves. So verily also the sacrificer, by the consecration as speech, by the consecrated as breath, having encompassed all desires on both sides, confers them upon himself. He offers a cake on eleven potsherds to Agni and Viṣṇu; Agni is of the lower end of the gods, Viṣṇu of the upper end; verily through the two who are of the lower end and the upper end of the gods having encompassed the gods, he obtains identity of world with them. Therefore he who first has consecrated himself will attain his desire, for by him first are the gods encompassed. He consecrates himself with incorporeal breath consecrations; the fore-offerings are expirations, the after-offerings inspirations. In that they proceed with the fore-offerings and the after-offerings, thus expirations and inspirations are consecrated; in that (they proceed) with an oblation, thus the body (is consecrated). He with the body being consecrated obtains all desires; with expirations and inspirations being consecrated, identity of world and union with all the deities.

vii. 2. He recites fifteen kindling verses; the kindling verses are a thunderbolt and the thunderbolt is fifteenfold. The butter portions refer to the slaying of Vṛtra; the butter portions referring to the slaying of Vṛtra are a thunderbolt. The invitatory and offering verses of the oblation are Triṣṭubh verses; the Triṣṭubh is a thunderbolt; by this thrice-formed thunderbolt the gods pushed away the Asuras from these worlds. Verily thus also the sacrificer with this thrice-formed thunderbolt pushes away the rivals who hate him from these worlds. The butter portions refer to the slaying of Vṛtra; they have been described. Next as to the invitatory and offering verses² of the oblation, the former contains (the word) 'to', 'Let your tongue move up to the ghee'; that is the symbol of the invitatory

vii. 2. ¹ The Dikṣanīyeṣṭi is described in ÇṢ. v. 3: it is based on the full moon sacrifice with a cake for Agni and Viṣṇu as its component offering.

² See ÇṢ. ii. 4. 3 for the verses. For caranyat TS. i. 8. 22. 1 has caranyet; AV. vii. 29. 1 caranyāt.

verse. The latter contains the word 'out', 'Let your tongue move out towards the ghee'; that is the symbol of the offering verse. The invitatory and offering verses are Trīṣṭubh verses; the Trīṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he confers upon the sacrificer might and strength. 'The conclusion of the approving formula' he says at the sacrificial food offering and at the Sūktavāka; when the cake for Agni and Viṣṇu is offered then he says 'Consecrated'; therefore he should say only 'The conclusion of the approving formula.'³ Just as in the case of the consecrated, he does not utter the name of the sacrificer in the Sūktavāka; the consecrated is a divine embryo; they give no name to an embryo unborn; therefore he does not utter his name.

vii. 3. He¹ does not make the wife (of the sacrificer) speak on the grass bundle; he does not strew it (thinking) 'In that it is a Soma sacrifice, this sacrifice is not here complete as it were; let me not conclude the Soma sacrifice before its time.' They say 'Why do others not utter the name of the consecrated?' He who is consecrating himself consecrates himself as Agni; in that others do not utter his name, (it is because they think), 'Let us not sit down in Agni.' Again, in that he does not utter the name of another, (it is because he thinks) 'Let me not, having become Agni, burn him.' If he hate a man, he should mumble his name when consecrated; verily thus, having become Agni, he burns him. If he desire a man, he should utter² his name with a clear voice; that is the expiation here; the clear is the eye; for with the eye he sees clearly. But this exclamation is the speech of the consecrated, and it is verily truth. 'He who speaks truth, he is consecrated,' so used he to say. They say 'Why do they not eat the food of the consecrated?' In that he consecrates himself, he becomes an oblation; it would be as one might eat of the undivided oblation. He may eat at pleasure when there is continuous pressing; that would be as one might eat of the oblation when fresh.³ They say 'Why does the consecrated not offer the Agnihotra?' The Asuras offered (it) in themselves without fire which was blown out; they were defeated, when they sacrificed in what had no fire; then the gods appropriated this breath, Agni. In that in the evening and in the morning the fast drink is bestowed, the Agnihotra is offered continuously and without a break in this breath, Agni.

¹ This chapter contains a discussion of some minor points in the Dikṣā and an explanation of the omission of the Agnihotra on that day, which is represented by the fast food (milk) of the consecrated.

² The Ānand. ed. inserts na.

³ So the edd. reading ayātayāmasya; much more probable than the sense 'used' if the a is not kept.

This is the continuity of the Agnihotra in the consecrations.⁴ They proceed (with the ceremony) on the Upasads. What is there to discuss as to the day of pressing?

vii. 4. Next the consecration of Keçin. Keçin Dārbhya, not being consecrated,¹ sat down. To him flew up a golden bird and said 'Thou hast not been consecrated; I know the consecration; let me tell it to thee; I have² sacrificed once; I am afraid of it perishing; thou dost know the imperishableness of that which once has been offered; it do thou (tell) to me.' He said 'Yes'; they two discussed together. It was he, or Ula Vārṣṇivṛddha or Itant Kāvya or Çikhaṇḍin Yājñasena or whoever it was, it was he. He said 'The bodies are consecrated by that sacrifice; but the man is consecrated indeed whose gods within are consecrated', so he used to say. Where the Adhvaryu offers the uplifting offerings, then the sacrificer should offer five libations, the first with 'May mind for me with mind be consecrated; hail!'; the second with 'May speech for me with speech be consecrated; hail!'; the third with 'May breath for me with breath be consecrated; hail!' The breath (he mentions) in the middle, for breath is in the middle. The fourth (he offers) with 'May the eye for me with the eye be consecrated; hail!'; the fifth with 'May the ear for me with the ear be consecrated; hail!' But Kauṣītaki used to say 'These offerings should not be made; if they were made the libations would be superabundant; he should merely take hold of the Adhvaryu as he offers and pronounce as accompaniment the commencement (of the verses), first 'May mind for me with mind be consecrated'; second, 'May speech for me with speech be consecrated'; third, 'May breath for me with breath be consecrated'; fourth, 'May the eye for me with the eye be consecrated'; fifth, 'May the ear for me with the ear be consecrated.' Verily also he consecrates the deities in man, and the libations which are superfluous are not offered. Now the imperishableness of what has once been offered is faith; he who sacrifices with faith, his sacrifice perishes not. Imperishableness is the waters, both those which are in these worlds, and those which are about the self. He who knowing 'In me there is imperishableness,' sacrifices, his ⁴ There are any number of Dikṣās if desired; see ÇṢ. v. 4. 7. The next clause seems to denote that on the Upasad days the practice of using vrata food is also equivalent to Agnihotra, and on the sutyā day the question does not arise.

¹ dikṣitaḥ in Lindner's and the Ānand. texts and in the comm. (Weber, Ind. Stud. ii. 308) contradicts the statement of the golden bird, and presumably the obvious correction 'dikṣitaḥ' should be adopted.

Dārbhya is read in the Ānand. ed. and the comm., which has āgalya. For Keçin cf. Vedic Index, i. 186, 187.

² ayaje is very odd, and yaje perhaps should be read. The Ānand. ed. has ayajet. Lévi omits the words in his translation, La doctrine du sacrifice, p. 108; aho may be interrog., as Lévi, but this seems improbable. His observation (p. 109, n. 1) as to a difference of Weber's and Lindner's texts is erroneous.

sacrifice perishes not. This imperishableness of what has once been offered Keçin Dārbhya proclaimed to the golden bird. In the afternoon he consecrates himself; in the afternoon he commingles all creatures; further the beams go over him³; therefore making red as it were he goes to his setting. He who consecrates himself consecrates himself as him who yonder gives heat; therefore on the afternoon he consecrates himself, to obtain all desires.

vii. 5. The¹ gods obtained expiration by the introductory sacrifice², breathing out by the concluding sacrifice; verily thus also the sacrificer by the introductory sacrifice obtains expiration and by the concluding sacrifice breathing out; the introductory and concluding sacrifices are expiration and breathing out; therefore those who are priests for the introductory sacrifice should also act for the concluding sacrifice, for expiration and breathing out are alike.

vii. 6. The gods having reached the world of heaven by means of the introductory sacrifice could not discern the quarters. To them said Agni, 'Do you offer to me one libation of butter; then shall I discern one quarter.' To him they offered; he discerned the eastern quarter; therefore they lead Agni forward to the east; the sacrifice is extended eastwards, sitting eastwards they offer in it (the fire), for this was the quarter discerned by him. Then said Soma, 'Do you offer to me one libation of butter; then shall I discern one quarter'. To him they offered; he discerned the southern quarter; therefore they carry round in the south¹ the Soma when purchased; standing in the south he praises; standing in the south he concludes; sitting in the south they press it, for this was the quarter discerned by him. Then said Savitr, 'Do ye offer to me one libation of butter; then shall I discern one quarter'. To him they offered; he discerned the western quarter; Savitr is he yonder who gives heat; therefore him men see day by day going westwards, not eastwards, for this was the quarter discerned by him. Then said Pathyā Svasti, 'Do ye offer to me one libation of

¹ For the introductory offering (KB. vii. 5-9), made on the first Upasad day, see AB. i. 7-11. The ritual is very briefly given in ÇÇS. v. 5; it consists of butter offerings to Pathyā Svasti, Agni, Soma, and Savitr, a pap for Aditi; there are no butter portions.

² A mere play on prāyaṇīya and udayaṇīya with prāṇa and udāna, for which see Vedic Index, i. 86; ii. 47.

vii. 6. ¹ dakṣiṇā is, as usual in the Brāhmaṇa style, adverbial; so in the parallel TS. vi. 1. 5. 1, 2; cf. MS. iii. 7. 1; ÇB. iii. 2. 8. 14-19; AB. i. 17.

butter ; then shall I discern one quarter.' To her they offered ; she discerned the northern quarter ; Pathyā Svasti is speech ; therefore in the northern quarter is speech uttered with more discernment, and northwards go men to learn speech ; he who comes thence, to him men hearken, so he used to say,² for this was the quarter discerned by speech. Then said Aditi, 'Do ye offer to me one libation of food ; then shall I discern one quarter.' To her they offered ; she discerned the zenith ; Aditi is this (earth) ; therefore on this (earth) plants grow upright, trees upright, men upright, Agni is kindled upright, whatever there is on this (earth) that stretches upright, for this was the quarter discerned by her.

vii. 7. Thus¹ did the gods discern by means of the introductory sacrifice the world of heaven ; verily thus also does the sacrificer by the introductory rite discern the world of heaven. The introductory and concluding sacrifice should be alike. The sacrifice is a chariot of the gods ; the introductory and concluding sacrifices are the two sides² of it ; he who makes them alike, just as one can perform a journey as desired by driving on in a chariot with two sides, so safely he attains the world of heaven. He who makes them unlike, just as one cannot perform a journey as desired by driving on in a chariot with one side only, so he does not safely attain the world of heaven. Therefore the introductory and the concluding sacrifices should be alike, the introductory ending with the Çamyuvāka, and the concluding sacrifice ending with the Çamyuvāka.

vii. 8. He sacrifices first at the introductory sacrifice to Pathyā Svasti, then to Agni, then to Soma, then to Savitr, then to Aditi ; he advances with the introductory sacrifice to the world of heaven. In that he sacrifices to Pathyā Svasti in front, verily thus he produces a benediction, for the attainment of the world of heaven. To Agni first he sacrifices in the concluding sacrifice, then to Soma, then to Savitr, then to Pathyā Svasti, then to Aditi ; he goes with the concluding sacrifice to this world. In that behind he offers sacrifices to Pathyā Svasti, verily thus he produces a benediction, for the attainment of this world. To those five deities he sacrifices ; with these

For the north as a specially important place see Keith, TS. pp. 408, 442, n. 1. Weber (Ind. Stud. i. 153) and Muir (OST. ii.² 328, 329) cite this passage in connexion with the northern origin of the Aryans, and it is clearly evidence of speech cultivation in the north (Vedic Index, ii. 279), perhaps, as Vināyaka holds, Kashmir (cf. Franke's theory of the cultivation of Sanskrit there ; Pāli und Sanskrit, pp. 87–9). āha cannot be taken as referring to tasya as taken by Muir ; the lack of iti is in the context fatal.

² Or 'side-horses' (cf. Keith, JRAS. 1914, pp. 1084, 1085). But the use of such phrases as ubhayataṣṭakra (AB. v. 33. 4) renders this uncertain and indeed improbable. Cf. above, ii. 9.

deities he obtains all that is fivefold regarding the deities and regarding the self. Of these the invitatory and offering verses¹ contain (the words), 'safe', 'path', 'bring across', 'forward', and 'lead'. The Maruts, the subjects of the gods, enjoying the atmosphere, have the power to confound the sacrifice of the sacrificer as he goes to the world of heaven. In that they contain (the words) 'safe', 'path', 'bring across', 'forward', and 'lead', verily the Maruts, the subjects of the gods, harm him not; safely he attains the world of heaven. Then he inverts; the invitatory verses in the introductory sacrifice he makes the offering verses in the concluding sacrifice, the offering verses (he makes) the invitatory verses.

vii. 9. He falls away as it were from this world who advances with the introductory sacrifice; in that he inverts (the verses), thus he finds support in this world on a support which cannot be moved. Moreover the metres are the breaths; verily thus in the self he intertwines the breaths, to prevent severance; therefore these breaths though blowing in diverse directions do not blow out.¹ 'Thee, O thou of most varied fame,' 'What is best, that to Agni,' are the Anuṣṭubh invitatory and offering verses² (of the Śviṣṭakṛt offering). The introductory sacrifice is the continuance of the sacrifice, the concluding sacrifice is speech; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; with speech the sacrifice is continued. These two he does not invert, (thinking) 'The invitatory and offering verses are supports; let me not intertwine two supports.' (The sacrifice) ends with the Çamyuvāka; that is the symbol of approach. It is as if having advanced one should dwell in the vicinity of the world of heaven. Again, as to (the sacrifice) ending with the Çamyuvāka, all the deities unite in the introductory sacrifice; he who would here cause joint offering to be made to the wives with (the gods), it would be as if he were to bring the wives of the gods to the place of their assembling; then it would be as if a man there were to say of him, 'This (fellow) has brought the wives of the gods to the place of their assembly; his wife will be following him to the assembly'.³ Therefore it ends with the Çamyuvāka, to prevent the coming together of the deities.

¹ RV. x. 63. 15 and 16 both contain svasti or svastih; i. 189. 1 and 2 (for Agni) have naya and pāraya; i. 91. 1 (Soma) has pra; x. 63. 15 has pathyāsu.

² RV. i. 45. 6; v. 25. 7.

³ For the idea see Vedic Index, ii. 427. The Ānand. ed. has abhyaya iṣyasi The acc.

denotes the person spoken of; Hopkins' view (JAOS. xxviii. 404 seq.) that even when the 3rd person is used, as here, the sense 'say to' can be intended is clearly impossible; in BAU. i. 4. 8, cited by him, sa yo 'nyam ātmanah priyaṁ bruvānaṁ brūyāt priyaṁ rotsyatīti must mean 'say of him "he will lose"', not 'say to him'. saṁgatām if correct must be a gen. pl., a very remarkable form in prose; saṁgatīm or saṁgatam, as a noun, is possible.

vii. 10. The¹ Asuras in this quarter obstructed the gods. Being in the north-east quarter they anointed Soma in the kingship, they with Soma as king pushed away the Asuras from these worlds. Verily thus also the sacrificer with Soma the king pushes away his rivals who hate him from these worlds. Him he buys with four things, a cow, gold, a garment, a female goat; up to four (degrees) are pairing, union, propagation; (they serve) for generation.² The moon yonder is Soma the king, the discerning; it enters into him when bought; in that he buys Soma the king, (it is because he thinks) 'The moon yonder as Soma, the king, the discerning, be it pressed out.' Nine verses he recites for him when bought; these vital airs are nine; verily thus he confers vital airs on the sacrificer, for completeness of life in this world and for immortality in yonder world. 'From good to better do thou advance forward,' (this verse³) containing the word 'forward' he recites for him being brought forward, 'Let Bṛhaspati be thy harbinger'; Bṛhaspati is the holy power; (thus it serves) for the winning of the glory of holiness. He recites two *Trīṣṭubh*⁴ verses to Varuṇa, 'This prayer of the seeker, O god,' 'Within the woods he hath extended the atmosphere'; the Trīṣṭubh is the lordly power; Varuṇa is the Trīṣṭubh; (thus it serves) for the winning of the glory of lordliness. He recites four Gāyatrī verses⁵ to Soma, 'O Soma, thy wondrous'; the Gāyatrī is the holy power; Soma is the lordly power; (thus it serves) for the winning of the glory of holiness and the glory of lordliness. He pauses after uttering the half of the last verse; the verse is immortality; thus he enters immortality. Moreover the verse is the holy power; verily thus he makes a defence on both sides in the holy power and the half verses. Wherever he stops at a half verse or a quarter verse, this is the explanation. He recites the verse,⁶ 'Thine abodes which they worship with oblation,' containing (the word) 'forward', for him as he starts forward. He concludes with (the verse⁷), 'He hath come, the god, with the seasons, let him prosper the house,' containing the words 'come' and 'season'; 'Soma, the king, is the year,' used to say Kauṣītaki, 'He, coming, with the seasons approaches.' He repeats (verses) which are appropriate; what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (it serves) for the perfection of the sacrifice. Nine⁸ he recites; the explanation of them has been given; thrice (he repeats) the first, thrice the last; they make up thirteen; the year has twelve months; verily (it serves) to win the year. In that he recites a thirteenth, (it is because) there is a thirteenth month, supplementary and distinct as it were; (thus it serves) for its obtainment.⁹

viii. 1. By¹ means of the guest reception (to Agni) the gods obtained both biped and quadruped animals; verily thus also the sacrificer by means of the guest reception obtains both biped and quadruped animals. When the oblation for the guest reception is brought up, they kindle the fire; the guest reception is the head of the sacrifice; Agni is the breath; verily thus he places breath in the head. He recites twelve (verses) for the kindling of the fire;² the year has twelve months; verily (it serves) to obtain the year. He recites first (a verse³) to Savitr, 'To thee, O god Savitr', to secure instigation by Savitr; to one instigated by Savitr no possible injury happens; (verily it serves) to secure freedom from injury. He recites to sky and earth (the verse⁴), 'May the two great ones, sky and earth, for us'; sky and earth are supports; verily (it serves) for support. He recites for him as he is kindled the three verses⁵ containing (the word) 'kindle', 'Thee, O Agni from the lotus'; for him when born (the verse⁶) containing (the word) 'born', 'Let men say'; for him when borne in the hand (the verse⁷) containing (the word) 'hand', 'Whom with the hand like a quoit'; for him when being taken forward (the verse) containing (the word⁸) 'forward', 'Forward the god to the feast for the gods'; for him when being summoned (the verse⁹) containing (the word) 'hither', 'Hither born in the All-knower'; for him when being lighted, 'Agni is lighted by Agni' and 'For thou, O Agni, by Agni', two (verses¹⁰) containing the word 'lighted'. 'They cleanse him with keen insight', he says in conclusion, with (a verse¹¹) ending 'The strong steed in his own abodes'; the abode is the end; the concluding verse is the end; in the end he places the end. (He recites) the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up sixteen; (all this universe) has sixteen parts; verily (it serves) to obtain all this (universe).

viii. 2. With this (verse he concludes) here and in the four-monthly sacrifices; when an animal is offered, after reciting this first¹ he concludes with a Trīṣṭubh, 'By the sacrifice the gods sacrificed the sacrifice'; cattle are connected with the Trīṣṭubh; verily (it serves) to obtain cattle. (He recites) the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up seventeen; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is commensurate with Prajāpati. He recites seventeen kindling verses; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is commensurate with Prajāpati. The two butter portions contain references to the slaying of Vṛtra; verily (they serve) for the slaying of evil; moreover he does not depart from the model of the full moon sacrifice. Some² make them contain the word 'guest'; but the rule is that they should contain references to the slaying of Vṛtra. Some say 'They should have Ṛc verses as the offering verses,' stating 'These deities have Ṛc verses as the offering verses³ in the Upasads.' But the rule is that they should have offering verses with the word 'delighting'. To him that is Soma he sacrifices as Viṣṇu;⁴ in that being bought he enters this (universe) as it were, that is his form as Viṣṇu. ADHYĀYA VIII

viii. 1. By¹ means of the guest reception (to Agni) the gods obtained both biped and quadruped animals; verily thus also the sacrificer by means of the guest reception obtains both biped and quadruped animals. When the oblation for the guest reception is brought up, they kindle the fire; the guest reception is the head of the sacrifice; Agni is the breath; verily thus he places breath in the head. He recites twelve (verses) for the kindling of the fire;² the year has twelve months; verily (it serves) to obtain the year. He recites first (a verse³) to Savitr, 'To thee, O god Savitr', to secure instigation by Savitr; to one instigated by Savitr no possible injury happens; (verily it serves) to secure freedom from injury. He recites to sky and earth (the verse⁴), 'May the two great ones, sky and earth, for us'; sky and earth are supports; verily (it serves) for support. He recites for him as he is kindled the three verses⁵ containing (the word) 'kindle', 'Thee, O Agni from the lotus'; for him when born (the verse⁶) containing (the word) 'born', 'Let men say'; for him when borne in the hand (the verse⁷) containing (the word) 'hand', 'Whom with the hand like a quoit'; for him when being taken forward (the verse) containing (the word⁸) 'forward', 'Forward the god to the feast for the gods'; for him

'They cleanse him with keen insight', he says in conclusion, with (a verse¹¹) ending 'The strong steed in his own abodes'; the abode is the end; the concluding verse is the end; in the end he places the end. (He recites) the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up sixteen; (all this universe) has sixteen parts; verily (it serves) to obtain all this (universe).

viii. 2. With this (verse he concludes) here and in the four-monthly sacrifices; when an animal is offered, after reciting this first¹ he concludes with a Trīṣṭubh, 'By the sacrifice the gods sacrificed the sacrifice'; cattle are connected with the Trīṣṭubh; verily (it serves) to obtain cattle. (He recites) the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up seventeen; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is commensurate with Prajāpati. He recites seventeen kindling verses; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is commensurate with Prajāpati. The two butter portions contain references to the slaying of Vṛtra; verily (they serve) for the slaying of evil; moreover he does not depart from the model of the full moon sacrifice. Some say 'They should have Rc verses as the offering verses,' stating 'These deities have Rc verses as the offering verses³ in the Upasads.' chariot', and 'Who thee, of good horses, of good gold, O Agni.' That is like what is fourfold and complete.⁶ The chariot comes to him who uses these two. (The sacrifice) ends with the sacrificial food; that is the symbol of approach; it is as if having advanced one should dwell in the vicinity of the world of heaven.⁷ The oblations in these sacrifices, that of consecration, the introductory, the guest offering and the Upasads, are performed inaudibly; these sacrifices are a pouring of seed; inaudibly is seed poured. They proceed, ceasing (the various) rites; the consecration sacrifice ends with the joint sacrifice for the wives with (the gods); the introductory sacrifice ends with the Çamyuvāka; the guest reception with the sacrificial food; in the Upasads he sacrifices to the gods. Ceasing with these rites Prajāpati went to the world of heaven; verily thus also the sacrificer ceasing with these rites proceeds to the world of heaven.

The Pravargya.

viii. 3. The¹ Mahāvira is the head of the sacrifice; he should not at the first sacrifice place it on the fire; the second sacrifice condescends to him who does not place it on the fire in the first sacrifice. Nevertheless for him who is a learned Brahman² he may place it in the fire. It is the self of the sacrifice; verily thus with the self he completes the sacrifice. The Mahāvira is he yonder that gives heat; verily thus he delights him. Him should he praise with a hundred and one (verses); at a hundred leagues hence he gives heat;³ with a hundred he attains the journey of a hundred leagues; the hundred and first is the world of the sacrificer; of this self the sacrificer becomes master. The man of whom men speak in the sun is Indra, is Prajāpati, is the holy power; thus herein the sacrificer attains identity of world and union with all the deities. Without taking in breath, should he praise, for the continuity of the breaths, for these breaths are continuous as it were. Both aloud and audibly should he praise; the praise is the breaths, for it is expressed, for it has speech as its deity. He utters in praise verses to Savitr first, to secure instigation by Savitr; to one instigated by Savitr no possible injury happens; (verily thus it serves) to secure freedom from injury.

viii. 4. 'The holy power born first in the east ¹' (he says); the holy power born first in the east is yonder where yonder (sun) gives heat; verily thus here he places the sacrificer. He utters in praise two appropriate verses ² containing the words 'anoint' and 'sit', 'Whom extending as it were the sages anoint' and 'Sit down; great art thou.' He utters in praise three appropriate (verses ³), containing the word 'burn', 'Be thou well disposed to us, O Agni, at our approach,' 'Burn thou well, O Agni, the foes that are near,' and 'The foe who secretly may attack us, O Agni'; what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (it serves) for the perfection of the sacrifice. He utters in praise (verses ⁴) referring to the slaying of Rakṣases, 'Make thou thy brilliance, like a broad net,' for the smiting away of the Rakṣases; Agni is the smiter away of the Rakṣases; they are five; by the symbol of the quarters from the quarters he smites them off. Moreover, the number of spans the Adhvaryu measures, those he accompanies with these (verses). He utters in praise two appropriate (verses ⁵) addressed to Indra, 'Around thee, O singer, the songs,' and 'In the two hast thou placed the word of praise'; verily with these two he accompanies the call of Hail! to Indra. Moreover, the number of splinters the Adhvaryu gathers round, those he accompanies with the first, the last which he deposits with the last. He utters in praise two appropriate (verses ⁶) to Pūṣan and to Rudra, 'Pure is one of them, worthy of sacrifice one,' and 'Worthily dost thou bear the missiles and the bow'; verily with these two he accompanies the call of Hail! to Pūṣan and to Rudra. Moreover the two golden chips which the Adhvaryu makes of gold and silver, those two with these two he accompanies. 'The bird anointed by the craft of the Asura' (he says ⁷); the bird is breath; breath is Vāyu; verily thus with these (verses) he accompanies the call of Hail! to Vāyu. 'I beheld thee perceiving with thy mind,' this ⁸ he should utter in praise in the house of him who desires offspring. Moreover both (should he utter) when there is something unaccomplished.

Of this (hymn) one verse, 'The eagle flying in the vault,' he omits; this is the radiance of the self; this (verse) he inserts in the later (verses), thereby it is not removed. For one who is spoken ill of on both sides of the Vena (hymn) he should utter in praise (the verses) for (Soma) the purifying; Vena is the self; (the verses) for (Soma) the purifying are a purifier; verily thus he purifies him. He utters in praise verses for Brahmanaspati⁴ which are appropriate, 'Thee, lord of hosts, we invoke'; that is the head; Brahmanaspati is the holy power; verily by the holy power he perfects the head. When he approaches (the verse⁵) 'May we speak aloud in the assembly with good sons,' he should think of a son for one desiring a son; she obtains a son. Now they say 'After the pressing⁹ should it be put on the fire'; when the Bahispavamāna (Stotra) has been sung, they invoke the two Aṣvins, the gods; at that moment should they put it on the Agnīdh's fire; just as there in the Upasads, so here on the pressing day the procedure is without taking breath. Then after due performance (the pot) is put on, and the animal sacrifice is undertaken; the Mahāvira terminates¹⁰ at midday; in that with it they proceed at midday, and the Mahāvira is he yonder that gives heat, verily thus they delight him; verily thus his symbol is produced.

The Upasads.

viii. 8. The Asuras made citadels¹ in these worlds, iron in this, silver in the world of the atmosphere golden yonder in the sky they made; the gods when these worlds were invested² saw the fifteenfold thunderbolt; three kindling verses repeated together make up nine, the invitatory and offering verses six; they make up fifteen. By means of this fifteenfold thunderbolt the gods pushed away the Asuras from these worlds; verily thus also the sacrificer with this fifteenfold thunderbolt pushes away the rivals who hate him from these worlds. In the forenoon he should repeat the three verses,³ 'To the bounteous one, to him to be attended'; for these are the Upasads. That rite is successful over which the first (three verses) are said, (for, they say), 'This day is as it were to be attended on by yonder sun.' 'This kindling-stick of mine, O Agni' (he says⁴) in the afternoon; that is the symbol of night, (for they say) 'In the evening they sit round this fire kindled as it were.' Then on the second day (he says) in the forenoon 'This kindling-stick of mine, O Agni'; that is the symbol of day, (for they say) 'This day is kindled as it were by yonder sun.' (He says) in the afternoon 'To the bounteous one, to him to be attended'; that is the symbol of night, (for they say) 'They sit round in the evening this fire which is to be attended as it were.' Both these symbols are recognized;

therefore day by day in alternation should he repeat (hoping) 'Let both symbols, both desires be attained.' He should repeat without taking breath, for the continuity of the breaths; for continuous as it were are these breaths. Thrice each one should he repeat; these worlds are three; verily thus he obtains these worlds. They repeated together make up nine; the seasons are six; these worlds are three; verily thus they make up that. He should not say this Nigada⁵ in the kindling verses; the Nigadas are omitted; it would be repetition if one were to say this Nigada. 'He should not invite at all,' some say; 'But how without inviting can he say the offering verse for a deity?' (For this reason). After the Ṛc he should invite with (the invitatory verses), 'Bring Agni, bring Soma, bring Viṣṇu.' For these three gods he says the offering verses; these worlds are three; verily thus he makes these worlds full of light.

viii. 9. The two verses¹ for Agni are Gāyatrī verses; this world is connected with the Gāyatrī; thus he obtains this world. Those for Soma are Triṣṭubh verses; the world of the atmosphere is connected with the Triṣṭubh; thus he obtains the world of the atmosphere. Those for Viṣṇu are Jagatī verses; yonder world is connected with the Jagatī; thus he obtains yonder world. These he inverts; those which in the forenoon were invitatory verses he makes offering verses in the afternoon; those which were offering verses he makes invitatory verses, to avoid exhaustion, (thinking) 'The Ṛc becomes exhausted through the vaṣaṭ call; let me perform the vaṣaṭ call with (verses) unexhausted on the same day'.² In that he inverts also, (it is) for the strength of the neck; therefore the joints of the neck are as it were intertwined. The gods have butter as their oblation, the sacrificer has milk as his fast food; that is in accord. He should treat them as broader above; on the first day (he should milk) three teats, then two, then one;³ verily thus he makes the worlds mutually broader. He should not take out; they advance to the world of heaven who undertake the Upasads; the world of heaven is twelve journeys away; he who takes out once, it is with him as if one should follow after those with one object sent on a single ⁵ The point of this, if ṛca = ṛcaḥ, is that he is not to use the usual formula (Nigada) Agne mahān asi (ÇÇS. i. 4. 44) and the terms ā vaha devān yajamānāya, but merely after the last Prāṇava of the preceding Ṛc to use the three invitatory formulae given; if ṛca = ṛce then the translation is less easy; it seems most probable that kim u begins a new clause, answering the previous, though it might = 'but rather'. caned read by Lindner and the Ānand.

ed. is really impossible. caneti should be read with WM.

¹ For the verses see ÇÇS. v. 11. 7: they are RV. vi. 16. 34 and 39 for Agni; i. 91. 2 and 21 for Soma; i. 156. 2 and 3 for Viṣṇu. They follow the invitatory formulae.

² The offering verses end with vaṣaṭ, but not the invitatory verses.

³ The discussion evidently touches on the usual question of possible mitigations of the unpleasantness of fasting.

night before. If he takes out twice, it is as if the time were two nights; through a third (taking) he loses the world of heaven, he cannot attain it. 'He may however follow,' used to say Paiṅgya. 'But he should not take out; wherever he wishes, there first should he go in the world of heaven and stop: such a completion is better,' used Kauṣītaki to say. In the case of (need of) eating his compeers⁴ may bring curds for him, but not in the time of the fast food; curds is Soma; his food becomes unobstructed; he obtains it. If they purchase (the Soma) together, the others should proceed for two days with the middle Upasad, for it is an insertion, being in position the world of the atmosphere: so without conflict⁵ he proceeds.

ADHYĀYA IX

ix. 1. Agni¹ is the holy power; in that on the fast day they bring forward the fire, with the holy power do they strike away the evil of the sacrificer, in front with the Āhavaniya, behind with the Gārhapatya, on the north with the Āgnīdhriya, on the south with the Mārjāliya, in the middle with those within the Sadas. Therefore on the fast day they lead forward the fire to the east, they take out the fires of the priests; verily (they serve) to smite away the evil of the sacrificer. The gods being about to consecrate themselves had recourse to speech, 'Thou hast much and varied experience; but we wish to be compact of truth, compact of restraint.' She desired a portion in the consecration, but the gods would not give her a share therein. She (desired a share) in the introductory sacrifice, and they would not (give) her (a share) therein; in the sale, and they would not (give) her (a share) therein; in the guest reception, and they would not (give) her (a share) therein. She did not at all approach the Upasads being as it were vexed; therefore there should they proceed inaudibly so that they can just hear one another. She came when the fire was being brought forward on the fast day; the gods gave her a share therein; therefore there first should he recite aloud, so that they may know that she has arrived and has been given a share in the sacrifice.

⁴ kṛtanājapeyāḥ, comm.; otherwise samrāj is Soma, the king.

⁵ It may be 'it' proceeds: there is no certainty: asamūtram would be more simple, but the concurrence of the MSS. including M establishes this text. Cf. KB. vii. 9.

¹ For the Agnipraṇayana see AB. i. 27 and 28. For the ritual see ÇCS. v. 12. 5; iii. 14. 8-14.

ix. 2. He recites for him as he is taken forth the three verses¹ containing forth', 'Forth the god with the thought divine.' 'Thee in the footstep of the sacrificial food', he says²; the sacrificial food is this (earth), for in it he praises (ītte) all. He praises him when deposited with the half verse³ containing (the word) 'deposit', 'O All-knower, we deposit thee.' He praises him when he has sat down with (the verses⁴) containing (the word) 'sit', 'O Agni, of fair face, with all the gods'; 'Sit, O Hotṛ, in thine own place, discerning', and 'The Hotṛ in the Hotṛ's seat, well knowing.' He concludes with (a verse⁵) containing the word 'herald', 'Thou art a herald; thou also our protector from afar.' He recites appropriate verses; what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (it serves) for the perfection of the sacrifice. Eight he recites; the Gāyatrī has eight syllables; Agni is connected with the Gāyatrī, and has the Gāyatrī as his metre; verily thus with his own metre they bring Agni forward. (He recites) the first thrice, the third thrice; they make up twelve; the year has twelve months; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. They repeated together make up eighteen Gāyatrī verses; verily by the metre it is connected with Agni. Of whatever even metre there are six⁶, they make up a Gāyatrī; of whatever there are seven, an Uṣṇih, of whatever there are eight an Anuṣṭubh, of whatever there are nine a Br̥hatī, of whatever there are ten a Pañkti, of whatever there are eleven a Triṣṭubh, of whatever there are twelve (syllables) a Jagatī.

The Moving forward of the Soma Carts.

ix. 3. The¹ two oblation holders are speech and mind; in speech and in mind is all this (universe) placed. In that they move forward the two oblation holders, verily (it serves) to obtain all desires. The oblation holders are two, the cover as the third they deposit; with them he obtains all that which is threefold regarding the gods or the self. He recites for them as they are moved forward (a verse²) containing (the word) 'forward', 'Let the two come forward with weal for the sacrifice', 'May sky and earth for us this', and 'Rich in ghee is their milk' he says³; the first (verse) contains a benediction; the second mentions two deities: the libation which the Adhvaryu offers in the track of the two oblation holders he accompanies with the first (verse); in that they move forward the two oblation holders, that he accompanies with the latter. He praises the two oblation holders with the appropriate (verse⁴), 'What time ye came like twins striving.' 'Let men in service to the gods' (he says⁵), for many drag the two. 'In the two hast thou placed the word of praise' and 'All forms the sage doth assume', (he says)⁶; in that they put on the cover third, that he accompanies with the first, in that they enclose the two oblation holders, that with the latter.

ix. 4. Moreover (he accompanies) with the latter the offering on the front¹. When he thinks of the two, 'They will not move them there', when they make them standing in the middle, then (should he say²) 'To your lap, O ye that deceive not'; when there is rest, then a lap³ is made. He concludes with (a verse⁴) containing (the word) 'around', 'Around thee, O singer, the songs.' He recites appropriate (verses); what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (they serve) for the perfection of the sacrifice. They make up eight; with them the gods attained all attainments; verily thus also with these the sacrificer attains all attainments. (He recites) the first thrice, the last thrice; they make up twelve; the year has twelve months; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. Further, in that (he recites) the first thrice and the last thrice, verily thus he ties the two ends of the sacrifice, for firmness and to avoid slipping. Then they say to the Hotṛ 'Do thou, O Hotṛ, act so that there may be freedom from fear.' Thus exhorted, before pronouncing the R̥c, he pushes a clod westwards with the fore part of his right foot (saying⁵).

'From hence the fear from men and from others than men, O Vṛtra slayer.

Away the wheels have rolled';

Hence is there risk from the wheels; thus for this region there is freedom from fear. He⁶ should resort to the left track of the right

M. has apparently prāṇayan (prāṇ yan?), ayāmi in M. agrees, and suggests this use of yan; Lindner's pratidādhyāt is nonsense, and M and the Ānandācrama ed. have the certain paridādhyāt. Cf. Caland, VOJ. xxiii. 62, who compares ÇQS. v. 13. 5 anusānyan, but does not suggest yan here.

oblation holder, which is facing east, (thinking) 'The right oblation holder is this world; this world is a support; let me be unmoved in going on this support.' He should not move to right or left from the place where he stands as he says the final verse. If he should move from it to right or left, and if some one were to say of him, 'He shall fall away', so would it be. After concluding, having wheeled round on his right arm, keeping silence, have gone as he came, having stood where standing he has uttered the first (verse), both in the rite and in the taking forth of the fires,⁷ he should go to his place.

ix. 5. Agni¹ is the holy power; Soma the lordly power; in that on the fast day they lead forward Agni and Soma, verily thus by the holy power and by the lordly power, they smite away the evil of the sacrificer. They say 'Sitting the Hotṛ should recite this first (verse); all beings move forward with the leading forward of Soma, the king; in that sitting the Hotṛ recites this R̥c, verily thus² he restrains all beings in their due place.' 'Do thou pour forth, O god, for the first the father', this verse³ for Savitr̥ he first recites, to secure instigation by Savitr̥; to one instigated by Savitr̥ no possible injury happens; (verily it serves) to secure freedom from injury. (With the verse⁴), 'Rise up, O Brahmanaspati', he causes (the fire) to be removed; (with the verse⁵), 'Let Brahmanaspati move forward' he leads (it) forward. He recites two appropriate (verses) for Brahmanaspati; Brahmanaspati is the holy power; verily thus by the holy power he makes the sacrifice successful. 'The Hotṛ, the god, the immortal' and 'To thee, O Agni, day and day', these sets of three verses⁶ for Agni alone he recites, for Agni they take first. These contain (the word) 'go', for he praises Agni as he is taken. When he comes to (the words⁷), 'The embryo of beings I take up', then he should think of an embryo for one who desires an embryo; she obtains an embryo. In the Agnīdh's altar they put down the fire. When the Adhvaryu offers the libation, then should he repeat this (verse⁸), 'O Agni, rejoice; be glad in this prayer.' This is the offering verse for this (libation), being appropriate as containing the words 'rejoice' and 'be glad'.

ix. 6. Then they lead Soma alone eastwards; therefore he recites verses¹ for Soma alone, 'Soma goeth, who knoweth the way.' Reciting the three verses, which contain a reference to 'going', he follows on. There the Adhvaryu offers again a libation in the Āhavanīya; then he should recite this (verse²), 'To the dear one, the strengthener.' This is the offering verse for this (libation), being appropriate as containing (the word) 'increasing the libation'. Then they cause the king to enter by the eastern door; as he is made to enter, he recites for him made to enter (the verse³), 'This of him King Varuṇa, this the Aṅvins,' which is appropriate in having (the words), 'This stall doth Viṣṇu, with his companions, reveal.' For him when he has arrived he recites (the verse⁴) 'Within hast thou come forward; thou shalt be Aditi', which contains (the word) 'forward'. He praises him when seated with the verses⁵ containing (the word) 'sit', 'Like an eagle his nest, the seat wrought with devotion', 'Thee, lord of hosts, we invoke', and 'He hath established the sky, the Asura, all-knower.' He concludes with (a verse⁶) containing a benediction, 'Do thou welcome Varuṇa the great.' He recites appropriate verses; what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (they serve) for the perfection of the sacrifice. He recites twenty verses; they make up the Virāj; Soma is connected with the Virāj; the Virāj is food; Soma is food; thus by food he causes proper food to abound. (He recites) the first thrice and the last thrice; they make up twenty-four; the half months of the year are twenty-four; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. If they cause the king to enter by the eastern door thus is it; but if they (cause him to enter) by the western (door) the Hotṛ should follow after⁷ (thinking) 'The Hotṛ is the body of the sacrificer; Soma is the breath; let me not sever the body from the breath.' He concludes standing facing south to the north (of the oblation holder); Soma the king is glory; proper food from thence onwards he confers and glory upon himself.

ADHYĀYA X

The Animal Sacrifice.

x. 1. The¹ sacrificial post is a thunderbolt. In that they erect the post on the fast day, verily thus with a thunderbolt they smite away the evil of the sacrificer. It should not be bent, as it were, for to be bent in the stomach is the symbol of one hungry. Again it should be turned towards the Āhavanīya; that is the symbol of one well fed; his wives² are not like to be hungry, who makes a post so formed. One of Palāṣa wood he should make who desires splendour, of Bilva wood he who desires proper food, and of Khadira he who desires heaven. It should be three cubits with the symbol of these worlds, four cubits with the symbol of cattle, five cubits with the symbol of the Pañkti, six cubits with the symbol of the seasons, seven cubits with the symbol of the metres, eight cubits with the symbol of the Gāyatrī, nine cubits with the symbol of the Br̥hatī, ten cubits with the symbol of the Virāj, eleven cubits with the symbol of the Triṣṭubh, twelve cubits with the symbol of the Jagatī. These measures are suitable forms for the post. One suitable form should he produce and make the post. They say³, however, 'One should not measure the post; let it be unmeasured; the measured by the measured one wins; the unmeasured by the unmeasured; (therefore it serves) to win the incommensurable.' 'Both for the post and the altar (he should choose⁴) the size which he considers in his mind suitable', (Kauṣītaki) used to say. Mind is Prajāpati; Prajāpati is the sacrifice; the sacrifice itself rejoices in the sacrifice when mind in mind. The post in the Vājapeya alone is determined as of seventeen cubits. It is placed in with eight corners, for the attainment of all desires. Then they wash it; thus what of it has here been harshly treated as it were with the axe and hewn as it were, that of it verily he makes whole, that he heals. Then they⁵ anoint it; thus the waters which are in man, these they place in it; well anointed himself should the sacrificer make it; so does the sacrificer become not rough as it were.

² bhāryā bhavanti is to be read with WwbMμK, not bhavati.

³ The quotation is not marked but no doubt ends at avarudāhyai. Cf. KB. x. 3, n. 2.

⁴ M. adds tat kurvīta, a mere gloss but a correct one. The opinion is, of course, Kauṣītaki's.

x. 2. For it when being anointed he recites the appropriate (verse¹) containing the word 'anoint', 'They anoint thee at the sacrifice, pious men'. For it when being placed erect he recites (verses²) containing the words 'erect' and 'up', 'Rise erect, O lord of the forest', 'Rising before the kindled', 'Born he is born in the fairness of the days', 'Aloft to our aid', and 'Aloft do thou guard us from tribulation with thy ray'. He concludes with (a verse³) containing the word 'covered round', 'The youth, well clad, covered round, hath come.' He recites appropriate verses; what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (it serves) for the perfection of the sacrifice. He recites seven (verses); the metres are seven; verily (they serve) to obtain all the metres. (He recites) the first thrice and the last thrice; they make up eleven; the Trīṣṭubh has eleven syllables; cattle are connected with the Trīṣṭubh; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. So is (the ceremony) in the case of one victim and one post. If at one post they should deal with eleven victims, then in the case of each victim the Adhvaryu gives directions, in the case of each victim there is the same concluding (verse), 'The youth, well clad, covered round, hath come'; it is (recited) for it as it is being covered round. 'So in the case of one post, but how in the case of eleven posts?' (they ask). The same seven verses he should recite for them up to ten; in the case of the last post they set up he should apply the remainder of the hymn, before the *Pragātha*⁴, 'Then like horns of the horned they appeared.' Verily all he accompanies; there is the same concluding verse, 'The youth, well clad, covered round, hath come'; it is (recited) for it as it is being covered round. 'It', they say, 'he should throw along; the post is the sacrificer; the Āhavanīya is the world of heaven; verily thus he makes him go to the world of heaven; that is heavenly'. But they say 'Let it stand; in that this is the place of the splinter of the post, the Asuras and the Rakṣases could drink after if this were not so⁵; therefore this (post) should stand erect as a thunderbolt on the place of sacrifice, smiting away the Asuras and the Rakṣases, and repressing them, and also guarding the sacrifice and the sacrificer.' One is suited for the post, one is rich in wood, one is fitted for a hole. That which has its rind downwards, that is fitted for a hole; such a one⁶ he should not wish; that which has its rind pointing up, and is rich in wood⁷, is that connected with man; he may use it if he desires; the tree, whose rind grows from left to right in accord with the course of the sun, is that suited for the post and is heavenly. (The tree), which stands alone, unrivalled, or is covered up to the root with shoots, is not bare; it is connected with cattle; it one desiring cattle should use.⁸

x. 3. He who is consecrated enters the jaws of Agni and Soma; in that on the fast day he offers a victim to Agni and Soma, this is a buying off of himself¹; with this buying off of himself he becomes free from debt and then sacrifices. So he should not eat of it, for it is man in counterfeit. But they say 'Every oblation is a buying off of oneself; he would not eat of any oblation, if he were not willing to eat because it is a buying off of oneself. Therefore at will should one eat².' Agni and Soma are day and night; in that by day they proceed with (the offering of) the omentum, thereby is day pleased. In that the offering to Agni is carried out during the night, thereby is the night as connected with Soma pleased. 'That is the final setting free of day and night' (they say); by the sacrifice are day and night set free; they do not obtain him, who knowing thus offers this victim. They say 'It should be two coloured; white and black with the symbols of day and night; or white and red with the symbols of Agni and Soma.' There are eleven fore-offerings and eleven after-offerings, and eleven supplementary offerings; these are thirty-three; all the gods are thirty-three; verily (they serve) to delight all the gods. The fore-offerings are expirations, the after-offerings inspirations; therefore are they alike, for the expirations and the inspirations are similar. They say 'Why does he sacrifice with a Ṛc in the fore-offerings and with the opening words only in the after-offerings?' 'The fore-offerings are seed to be poured, the after-offerings are seed to be deposited; therefore with a Ṛc he sacrifices in the fore-offerings, and with the opening words in the after-offerings.' In that he says the last whole, verily thus he places the sacrificer in the world of heaven. He invokes with the Āpri verses; with the whole self, with the whole mind, he gathers together the sacrifice, who sacrifices. The self of him becomes empty as it were; he fills it up for him with these (verses). In that he fills it up, therefore are they called Āprīś (fillers). He surrounds the animal with fire, to smite away the Rakṣases; Agni is the smiter away of the Rakṣases; he carries the fire round thrice from left to right; that is as if Agni were to put three forts. Therefore, 'Go round again' he should say to the Agnidh, if he desire of a man, 'May he not fall away.'

⁸ The position of vā makes it clear that it contrasts the tree with shoots and that with no other trees near it, and calls both paçanya as contrasted with the merely svargya tree. It is quite clear that 'bhrātṛvyaḥ' is to be read and taken with ekasthaḥ. The Ānand. ed. here is very careless, having svayūpyasya, and like Lindner it reads bhrātṛvyaḥ. Caland

x. 4. 'O ye divine slayers and ye human make ready; bring (the victim) to the doors of the sacrifice, ordaining the sacrifice for the two lords of the sacrifice'; regarding this¹ some say, 'The lord of the sacrifice is the sacrificer.' 'What man (is the lord)?' he should say, 'the lord of the sacrifice is the deity only.' 'Its bends are twenty-six', (he says); the bends are the ribs. On both sides of the blood he breathes down, (thinking) 'The Rakṣases have the blood as their share; let me not set away the share of the gods with the share of the Rakṣases.' It is the Adhrigu (formula). The instruction is 'Do not mutilate the limbs.' What is unspoilt is the oblation of the gods; they do not eat the oblation which is spoilt. Nine times does he breathe down in the Adhrigu; the breaths are nine; verily thus he places breaths in the sacrificer, to secure full life in this world and immortality in yonder world. Thrice² he utters the concluding verse, to avoid non-recurrence. He says one before; the fathers are one as it were; the victim has as it were the fathers for its deity when it is being offered. In that he says three after, and among the gods (things are) thrice, verily thus he makes it have the gods as its deities, and renews it. Having concluded he mutters inaudibly, 'Both and he that is not evil'; the slayer of the gods is not evil;³ to him verily does he hand it over, for he knows the gods.

x. 5. Then he recites (the verses) accompanying the drops;¹ verily with them he makes the drops suitable for Agni. These are the invitatory verses for them, these the offering verses. Therefore they are appropriate. Having proceeded with the (offering to the) calls of Hail! they proceed with the (offering of the) omentum; verily thus they make the fore-offerings sharers in the victim. He should not utter speech between the (offering to the) calls of Hail! and the (offering of the) omentum,

² adhrigo çamīdhvam suçamī çamīdhvam çamīdhvam adhrigo 3, ÇÇS. v. 17. 10.

³ Haug's ingenious view that apāpa = apa, apa addressed to the slaughterer, though in consonance with probability, is not supported by any real evidence, and the explanation of the word as a symbol of deprecation of sin in the slayer is equally good, and accords with the use of such terms as çamitṛ and saṁjñāpaya.

x. 5. ¹ For the ritual see ÇÇS. v. 18. 1-19. 12. The Puroḍāça offering follows the norm of the Iṣṭīś, i. e. the new and full moon sacrifices, and the Sviṣṭakṛt offering is one of a cake.

(thinking) 'The calls of Hail! are the breaths; the omentum is the body; let me not separate the breaths and the body by anything.' In that the invitatory verses of the victim for Agni and Soma are Anuṣṭubh verses, (it is because) the Anuṣṭubh is the Gāyatrī and the metre of Agni is the Gāyatrī; in that the offering verses are Triṣṭubh verses, it is because the Triṣṭubh is the metre of the lordly power, and Soma is the lordly power. Thus according to the metre he delights the two deities. During the offering of the victim a cake is offered;² the cake is the sap of animals; verily thus he makes (the victim) full of sap and fit for sacrifice. Where a cake in connection with the victim is offered, the Sviṣṭakṛt of the cake (offering) is permanent; the Sviṣṭakṛt is Agni (the unmoved);³ therefore it becomes permanent. Having recited (a verse) of Viṣvāmitra, as the invitatory verse for the cake Sviṣṭakṛt, he recites (a verse) of Viṣvāmitra as the offering verse; the cake is the continuity of the sacrifice; Viṣvāmitra is speech; by speech the sacrifice is continued.

x. 6. Then he recites the Manotā.¹ All the deities gather towards the victim as it is offered, (thinking) 'He will utter my name; he will utter my name.' The minds of all these are woven in the victim; these he delights herein; so it is not in vain that all these have assembled together. They say 'Since the victims are offered to diverse deities, then why does he accompany that for Agni alone?' 'Three are the Manotās of the gods; Agni is the Manotā of the gods, for in him the minds of the gods are woven. Moreover, speech is the Manotā of the gods, for in it are their minds woven. Moreover, the cow is the Manotā of the gods, for in her are their minds woven. All the Manotās are Agni; in Agni the Manotās unite; therefore he accompanies that for Agni only' (is the answer). They make up thirteen; thirteen are the cuttings of the victim; these he accompanies.² (He recites) the first thrice and the last thrice; they make up seventeen; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is commensurate with Prajāpati. He recites seventeen kindling verses; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is

² The construction as the sentence stands is an accusative absolute, but it is obvious, as Lindner points out, that 'nirūpyate must be read. Curiously enough the same change is not suggested by Lindner below, where it is certain as nunirūpyate is found in OLC, na nirūpyate in Ānand. ed. and W & B K, and na nirūpyeta in b, and the reading nirūpyate which he adopts only in M. na nirūpyate could be rendered, but the sense is not better than that given by 'nirūpyate.

³ acyutaḥ (cf. KB. x. 6) goes with the preceding words, but it also applies to Agni, who is the connecting link in the argument. Read puroḍāṣasviṣṭakṛt.

² This is doubtless the real force of samavadyati: he shares in the making portions (avadyati) of the victim by his recitation.

commensurate with Prajāpati. When the victim is offered, then the lord of the forest is unmoved; the lord of the forest is Agni, he bestows the oblation on the gods; therefore he becomes unmoved; he also has milk as his portion; so Agni becomes a sharer in all the oblations. They say 'Since the gods possess the solid³, then why does the lord of the forest possess the liquid as his share?' 'The gods shared the solid of the sacrifice, the fathers the liquid; the victim has, as it were, the fathers as its deities; the milk has the fathers as its deities; therefore is it', he should reply. They say 'Why in the Soma sacrifice do they offer two libations for the choosing⁴ (of priests), and not in the Haviryajña?' 'The Haviryajña is an incomplete sacrifice; the Soma sacrifice is a complete sacrifice; therefore at the Soma sacrifice alone do they offer the two libations for the choosing and not at the Haviryajña' (is the answer). He offers in the first case with the call of Hail! 'Acceptable to speech may I become, acceptable to the lord of speech; O divine speech, what of thy speech is sweetest, in that us may he⁵ to-day place; hail to Sarasvatī.' Thus he releases speech; therefore hence onwards speech being released supports the sacrifice; with the mind (he accompanies) the second (libation); for by mind is mind delighted.

xi. 1. Next¹ comes the morning litany. In that he recites it in the morning, that is why the morning litany has its name. In that he mutters the formulae of recourse, in that he offers the libations, verily thus he produces a benediction. After uttering the sound hiñ he recites the morning litany; the sound hiñ is a thunderbolt; verily thus with a thunderbolt he smites the evil of the sacrificer. He should recite aloud in a clear tone. The clear is the one part of speech which is not infested by evil; therefore in a clear tone should he recite, to smite away the evil of the sacrificer. By half verses should he recite; these worlds are commensurate with the Ṛc; the first half verse is this world, the second yonder world; what is between the two half verses is the atmosphere here. In that he recites by half verses, verily thus he makes the sacrificer to prosper with these worlds; verily thus he places the sacrificer in these worlds.

³ dhāma and pāthaḥ here seem necessarily to have some such sense (pā 'drink' explaining pāthaḥ); read abhajanta. Cf. ZDMG. liv. 603.

⁴ For these libations see ÇÇS. vi. 9. 16-18; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 186.

⁵ See TS. iii. 1. 10. 1 with Keith's note.

xi. 2. 'Now the Paṅkti has five feet; how is it recited by half verses?' (they ask). The syllable om is the third with the last two; so is it recited by half verses. He recites the service² to Agni; thus he obtains this world; he recites that to Uṣas; verily thus he obtains the world of the atmosphere; he recites that to the Aṣvins; verily thus he obtains yonder world. He recites a Gāyatrī; the Gāyatrī is the mouth; he recites an Anuṣṭubh; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; thus he places speech in the mouth; by the mouth he utters speech. He recites a Triṣṭubh; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he places might and strength in the sacrificer. He recites a Bṛhatī; the Bṛhatī is cows and horses; he recites a Uṣṇih; the Uṣṇih is sheep and goats; he recites a Jagatī; the Jagatī is might and strength; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength in the front; the Jagatī is might and strength behind;

xi. 3. in the middle are cattle connected with the Bṛhatī and the Uṣṇih; verily thus with might and strength he encircles the cattle on both sides and confers them upon the sacrificer. So from the sacrificer cattle are not likely to depart. Just as in this world men eat cattle, just as they enjoy them, so in yonder world cattle eat men, so they enjoy them. He wins them here with the morning litany; won here they eat him not in yonder world, they enjoy him not in requital. Just as he eats them in this world, just as he enjoys them, so in yonder world he eats them, so he enjoys them. He recites a Paṅkti verse; the Paṅkti is a support; verily thus in all creatures he makes the sacrificer find support.

xi. 4. Now all the gods resort to the Hotṛ as he is about to recite the morning litany, expecting 'With me will he commence, with me will he commence.' If he were to commence indicating one deity, he would fall a victim to the other deities. He commences with (a verse) not addressed (to one deity); thereby he does not fall a victim to any deity. (With the verse),¹ 'O waters, the rich ones' he commences; all the deities are the waters; verily thus with all the deities he commences. 'Advancing forward up to the sacrifice', (with this)² he continues. 'Up' is the symbol of this world, 'advancing' is that of yonder (world); 'up' is the symbol of Agni, 'advancing' is that of yonder sun; so in all the formulae of recourse, in all the services to Agni, to Uṣas, and to the Aṣvins the first utterance is the symbol of Agni, the second that of yonder sun. There are varied metres and between them pits as it were; these two are the strongest, the uninjured, the untroubled, deities; with these two he commences. With the one hymn³ should he mount; that is the symbol of mounting without falling into a pit and is heavenly. When there occurs in the one hymn a difference of authorship, then without taking breath should he step over. Breath is immortality; thus by immortality he passes by death; just as one steps over a pit by means of a beam or a roller,⁴ so with the Praṇava he steps over; the Praṇava is holy power; verily thus with the holy power he continues the holy power.

xi. 5. The Praṇava¹ should be uttered pure for those who desire offspring, with m at the end for those who desire support. 'The Praṇava should have m at the end', some say; but the rule is that it should be used pure. The Praṇava is investigated as to the fact that 'Here it is pure, here it is in full form'. 'The Praṇava should be pure in the middle of Çastras and of recitations', Kauṣītaki used to say. Thus is continuity. It should have m at the end for the sake of a pause; the pause is a support; verily (it serves) for a support. Verily (the two serve) to obtain both desires. These are the carryings of the metres; they carry the subsequent over the preceding metre. No harm² befalls him, who by the metre is carried over³ the metre. 'When he is passing over, he should pierce with his mind as it were him whom he hates; in the fractures of the metre he either goes to ruin or is crushed,' so he used to say. The Pañktis at the end of the offerings he recites with the same endings; the end is sap, the metres are cattle; verily thus the metres end in sap; cattle ending as it were rejoice in the good grass. This is a Virāj with one syllable short; with one twice repeated it is exactly a Virāj; with one thrice repeated there is one over the Virāj.

² RV. i. 74. 1 (also in KB. xxii. 1).

³ The three kratus have parts in Gāyatrī, Anuṣṭubh, Triṣṭubh, Bṛhatī, Uṣṇih, Jagatī, Pañkti. Hence there are breaks in the metre; but in the case of the samārohanīya verses they are all to be treated as in a single hymn, disregarding differences of hymn (ārṣeya). On this plan the occurrence of gargas is avoided.

For the verses which are reduced to 360 by some see Ānartīya on ÇS. vi. 6. 39 seq.

³ The sense is doubtful, but nothing better seems possible as the text stands in the MSS. and edd.

xi. 6. Three desires are there in the sacrifice, that in its completion, that in its deficiency, that in its superabundance. The complete part of the sacrifice is heavenly, the defective food, the superabundant serves for generation. Verily thus here the sacrificer obtains all desires. He concludes with (a verse) containing a benediction¹, 'Uṣas with her ruddy kine hath appeared'; verily thus he utters a benediction for cattle. So cattle are not likely to stray from the sacrificer. At this verse he lets out his voice²; thus he announces him to the gods, 'He has been born,' for in it is he born. He repeats (the verse³) of two Padas, 'With this let us win the prize set by the gods'; the metres increasing by four (syllables) are cattle; (the verses) with two Padas are the sacrificer's metre; verily thus he places the sacrificer in command of cattle; man stands over cattle, as it were. He recites the thrice seven metres of the services; that makes up twenty-one; the fourfold Stoma, the highest of the Stomas, is the twenty-onefold; thus he obtains the highest of the Stomas. In that there are twenty-one, the months are twelve, the seasons five, these worlds three, and the sun yonder the twenty-first, verily thus he fixes the sacrificer in unity of world with him.

xi. 7. They say 'Seeing that there are these kindling verses of the Haviryajña or the animal sacrifice, then what are those of the Soma sacrifice?' 'The morning litany', he should reply, for by the syllables of the others he seeks to obtain the year, by the Ṛcs here. A hundred¹ only should he recite; man has a hundred (years of) life; verily thus he confers life upon him. He should recite a hundred and twenty; the days of a season are one hundred and twenty; thus he obtains the season; by the season the year, and the desires that are in the year. He should recite three hundred and sixty; the days of the year are three hundred and sixty; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. He should recite seven hundred and twenty; seven hundred and twenty are there of the days and nights of the year; thus he obtains the days and nights of the year. A thousand should he recite; a thousand is all, the morning litany is all; thus all he obtains with all, who knows thus. But Kauṣītaki used to say 'The morning litany is Prajāpati; Prajāpati is incommensurable; who ought to measure it?' This is the rule.

xi. 8. They say 'Since the hymns are recited in the Sadas, then why does he recite the morning litany at the two oblation holders?' The two oblation holders are the head of the sacrifice; the metres are the breaths; thus he places breath in the head. In the Sadas the hymns are recited; the Sadas is the stomach; the hymns are food; proper food is suited for the stomach. As is a cart, so is the sacrifice in counterfeit; as the corn, so the morning litany; as the vessels, so the hymns. If a man recites a little just as vessels come together (in a cart) with a little corn only, so his hymns come together, and on account of the coming together of the hymns tottering is liable to befall the sacrificer; therefore should he repeat many; thus he makes strong the hymns. (He says) 'Let the benediction of the sacrifice as successful be obtained for me'; the benediction of the sacrifice as successful is the sacrificer's. Three are these sets of a thousand in the sacrifice, the morning litany, the Aṣvins' litany, and the great litany.¹ He should begin when night is far advanced,² before the emission of speech, before the time when cattle, men, and birds take up speech; speech these creatures make to swell, in that they lie silent (thinking) 'Let us first prosper on speech, swollen, not dissipated.' Between the morning litany and the Upāṅcu and Antaryāma cups he should not set free his speech (thinking) 'The Upāṅcu and Antaryāma cups are expiration and inspiration; the morning litany is speech; let me not separate expiration and inspiration and speech by any other thing.' Some begin with 'O waters, ye wealthy ones', after muttering (thinking) 'This is a yoking of the metres³'; but the rule is 'He should not insert anything before the words 'O waters, ye wealthy ones', to prevent him being laid low.

(a verse³) containing the word 'across', 'The waters have arrived, eager, to this strew.' He recites appropriate (verses); what in the sacrifice is appropriate, that is perfect; verily (they serve) for the perfection of the sacrifice. The morning litany had been recited, the hymns had not been obtained⁴; at this conjunction the Asuras went against them; the gods, perceiving in fear, saw this thriceforged thunderbolt; 'The waters' is the first form of the thunderbolt; 'Sarasvatī' is the second form of the thunderbolt⁵; this⁶ is a hymn of fifteen verses, that is the third form of the thunderbolt. The gods with the thriceforged thunderbolt pushed away the Asuras from these worlds; verily thus also the sacrificer pushes away with this thriceforged thunderbolt the rivals who hate him from these worlds.

xii. 3. The¹ Mādhyamas performed a session on the Sarasvatī. Then Kavaṣa sat down in the midst, they said to him, 'Thou art the son of a female slave; we will not eat with you.' He rushing on in anger praised the Sarasvatī with this hymn; she followed after him; thereupon they felt themselves free from passion²; they went after him and said 'O seer, homage be to thee; harm us not; thou art of us the best, seeing that she follows after thee.' Thus they informed him; they removed his anger. This is the greatness of Kavaṣa and the founder of the hymn (is he). In that they go with their wives, (it is because) the Gandharvas as commissioners³ in the waters guard the Soma of Indra. They love women, and they turn their minds towards them; so it is as if one might take the sacrifice of careless persons. The sacrifice condescends to him who knows thus. He recites twenty (verses); they make up the Virāj; the waters are connected with the Virāj, the Virāj is food, the waters are food; thus by food he causes proper food to abound. (He recites) the first thrice, and the last thrice; they make up twenty-four; the Gāyatrī has twenty-four syllables; the Gāyatrī supports the morning pressing; thus the waters contain the symbol of the morning pressing. So much for the Aponaptriya.

For this chapter see AB. ii. 19; cf. the Chāgaleya Upaniṣad, Weber, Ind. Stud. ix. 42-46.

² nirāgā iva is rendered by Haug (Āitareya Brāhmaṇa, ii. 112, n. 1) as if nirāgā (sinless) iti were read of Kavaṣa, but this cannot very naturally be so taken.

³ pratyāhītāḥ in M is a clear case of a gloss ousting the text; cf. AJP xxxvi. 257, 258. Like nirāgā, the word is late.

The Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma Cups.

xii. 4. The¹ Upāṇḍu (cup) is expiration ; as it is offered he should breathe forth along it (saying) 'Protect my expiration, quicken my expiration ; hail ! Thee of fair birth to the sun !' This is its call of vaṣaṭ and its call of Hail ! These libations go not to the gods over which the vaṣaṭ call or the call of Hail ! is not pronounced. Inspiration is the Antaryāma (cup) ; as it is offered he should breathe down along it (saying) 'Protect my inspiration, quicken my inspiration ; hail ! Thee of fair birth to the sun !' This is its call of vaṣaṭ, and its call of Hail ! These libations go not to the gods over which the vaṣaṭ call or the call of Hail ! is not pronounced. The Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma are expiration and inspiration ; one of these they offer when the sun has risen, the other before the sun has risen ; verily thus they separate expiration and inspiration ; therefore expiration and inspiration, though being together, are separate as it were. 'In that they offer one when the sun has risen and the other before the sun has risen, verily thus from day and night they obstruct² the Asuras, for on both sides of yonder sun are day and night, and the sacrificer (obstructs) evil,' so he used to say.³ He for whom they offer both (cups) after the sun has risen or before the sun has risen is a sacrificer with water, not a sacrificer with Soma ; he for whom these two are offered in their order is a real sacrificer with Soma.⁴ So for the Upāṇḍu and Antaryāma (cups).

The Sarpaṇa.

xii. 5. 'Should¹ the Pavamāna be followed up or not ?' (they ask). 'It should not be followed up,' they say. The abode of the Ṛc is where the Hotṛ stands ; that of the Sāman where they yonder sing the Sāman. He who follows up removes² the Ṛc from its own abode, and makes the Ṛc a follower of the Sāman. Therefore he should not follow up, (thinking) 'Let me not remove the Ṛc from its own abode' and 'Let me not make the ² All the MSS. of Lindner and the Ānand. ed. have antarayanti, a denominative form not found certainly before the classical period.

³ vā is possibly = vai here, but vā may be 'or'. Cf. KB. xvi. 9, n. 5.

⁴ The reading of all MSS. but M, and of the Ānand. ed. somayājñīti may be correct, the first iti being a dictum of Kausītaki as above, but the simpler reading of M is perhaps better, as often ; so the comm.

xii. 5. ¹ For this rule regarding the participation of the Hotṛ in the movement of the other priests to the place for the performance of the Sāman and the eating there of a caru see AB. ii. 22. ÇQS. vi. 8. 3-13 gives the ritual for the Bahiṣpavamāna and in 14 the Mantra for the Hotṛ as here.

² For cyāvayati (in M also) there is a parallel in PB. and it need not therefore be corrected.

Ṛc a follower of the Sāman.' But, if (the sacrificer) be also the Hotr, he should follow up, for to him falls the duty of a chorister, (thinking) 'The Svarasāman³ is the world of heaven; let me place myself in the Svarasāman, the world of heaven.' Then (they ask) 'All the gods rejoice together in the morning in the Pavamāna; how then is it not then completely consumed?' When the Pavamāna has been sung, he should mutter the following, 'Invoked are the gods for the eating of this Soma, the purifying, the discerning; let the gods invoke me for the eating of this Soma, the purifying, the discerning; with mind thee I eat; with speech thee I eat; with breath thee I eat; with the eye thee I eat; with the ear thee I eat.' This is the joint invocation with the gods. So by him yonder Soma, the king, the discerning, the moon, the food, is eaten, that food yonder which the gods eat.

xii. 6. Now¹ as to the victim. The victim is clearly Soma, for if it were not offered it would be as it were a water drinking; thereby he makes firm the pressings. In that they proceed with the omentum, thereby is the morning pressing made firm; in that they cook, in that they proceed with the cake at the animal sacrifice, thereby is the midday pressing made firm; in that they proceed with this (victim) at the third pressing, thereby is the third pressing made firm. This is the making firm of the pressings. The deities who drink the Soma and those who share the victim—there are thirty-three Soma drinking deities who depend on the Soma libations, eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, Indra as the thirty-second, Prajāpati as the thirty-third; then also thirty-three who share the victim—both of these sets are delighted. Of this (victim) which is offered some say 'It should be for Indra and Agni', saying 'All the gods are Indra and Agni; thus by it he delights all the gods.' But others say 'This (victim) should be for Agni, the cakes are for Indra; thus Indra and Agni have equal shares.' 'Agni's is the morning pressing, this (victim) is offered at the morning pressing; they take for another that which is Agni's who make it have another for its deity; it is as if one were to take for another what is another's; further the year is alone for those who perform a session of a year, (the victim) is for Agni only; it should not change,' so some say. In the teaching (of Kauṣītaki) (the victim) is determined as for Agni:

³ The Svarasāman is properly the Sāman of the three days before and after the Viśuvant or central day in the Gavām Ayana, the great sacrificial session, here contemplated (cf. KB. xii. 6). This or a similar passage is cited in ĀpṚS. xii. 17. 2 from the Bahvṛcabrahmana.

xii. 7. The offering verse¹ for the omentum of the victim contains (the word) 'become', 'Thou hast become the leader of the sacrifice and the region'; that² for the cake contains (the word) 'pure'; Forward to the pure radiance do ye bear'; that³ for the oblation contains (the word) 'oblation' 'The singers urged by thought'. 'The set of eleven⁴ they should arrange in order' is the rule. If (the sacrifice) is accompanied with *Prṣṭhyas*⁵, in the invitation he issues invitations for the morning pressing (with the words), 'Bring the gods to the sacrificer; bring Agni, O Agni; bring the lord of the forest; bring Indra with the Vasus'; he issues invitations for the midday pressing (with the words), 'Bring Indra with the Rudras'; he issues invitations for the third pressing (with the words), 'Bring Indra with the Ādityas, with the R̥bhus, with the Vibhus, with Vāja, with Bṛhaspati, with the All-gods.' Some include the lord of the forest in this invitation, saying 'At the end should (the lord of the forest) be invited, for they sacrifice to him at the third pressing.' As to this they say⁶ 'The victim is the body, the lord of the forests the breath; if one there were to say of him, "He hath separated the body from the breath, he shall not live", it would be so. Therefore in connexion with the victim the lord of the forest should be invited.' The victim has been discussed.

xii. 8. *Prajāpati*¹, having created offspring, felt himself empty as it were; he pondered, 'How now can I sacrifice with such a sacrificial rite that by sacrificing with it I shall obtain my desires and win proper food?' He saw the set of eleven (victims); he grasped it and sacrificed with it; having sacrificed with it he obtained his desires and won proper food; verily thus also the sacrificer having sacrificed with this set of eleven obtains his desires, and wins proper food. Of this set of eleven the invitatory and offering verses are distinct and those for the oblation to Manotā, but the rest is the same. The first is for Agni; Agni is the holy power; (it serves) to win the glory of the holy power. The second is for Sarasvatī; Sarasvatī is speech; by speech is food made sweet and eaten; (it serves) to obtain proper food. The third is for Soma; Soma is the lordly power; (it serves) to win the glory of the lordly power. The fourth is for Pūṣan; Pūṣan is food; (it serves) to obtain proper food. The fifth is for Bṛhaspati; Bṛhaspati is the holy power; (it serves) to win the glory of the holy power. The ⁴ ekādaśīm, the reading of the comm., is clearly correct, Anusvāra being easily omitted and nis of M being a facile correction.

⁵ prṣṭhyopāyam is perhaps more probable than prṣṭhopāyam, as it thus refers naturally to a Sattra (cf. KB. xii. 6).

⁶ As often no iti ends the quotation; cf. KB. x. 1, 3; xvii. 1; xxiv. 8.

xii. 8. ¹ ÇCS. vi. 10 has the verses for the eleven victims which differ. For the Manotā oblation see KB. x. 6.

sixth is for the All-gods; of all forms is food eaten; (it serves) to obtain proper food. The seventh is for Indra; Indra is the lordly power; (it serves) to win the glory of the lordly power. The eighth is for the Maruts; the Maruts are the waters; the waters are food; (it serves) to obtain proper food. The ninth is for Indra and Agni; Indra and Agni are the holy and the lordly powers; (it serves) to win the glory of the holy power and the glory of the lordly power. The tenth is for Savitr; instigated by Savitr is this food eaten; (it serves) to win proper food. The eleventh is for Varuṇa; Varuṇa is the lordly power; (it serves) to win the glory of the lordly power. Thus Prajāpati, by the holy power and the lordly power and by the lordly power and the holy power, kept encircling on both sides and winning proper food. Verily thus also the sacrificer, by the holy power and the lordly power and by the lordly power and the holy power, keeps encircling on both sides and winning proper food.

ADHYĀYA XIII

The Creeping to the Sadas.

xiii. 1. The¹ sacrifice is Prajāpati; in it are all desires, all immortality; the altars are the protectors; to them as he creeps² to the Sadas he pays homage, 'Homage, homage', for the gods are not above receiving homage. They, having homage paid, let the Hotṛ pass on. He proceeds to this Prajāpati, the sacrifice; thus herein the sacrificer obtains all desires.

The Set of Five Oblations.

xiii. 2. Then¹ they proceed with the set of five oblations. The set of five oblations is cattle; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. There are five oblations, curds, fried grains, groats, the cake, the milk mess. The Pañkti has five Padas; the sacrifice is fivefold; cattle are fivefold; man is fivefold; for obtaining the sacrifice and cattle this is offered, also for the encircling of cattle and the making firm of the pressings. Breath is the set of five²

¹ For the ritual see ÇṢ. vi. 12 and 13.

² The Ānand. ed. has prasṛpsyān.

xiii. 2. ¹ For the haviṣpañkti see AB. ii. 24. For the ritual see ÇṢ. vii. 1.

² Çāṅkh. more correctly notes that the formal beginnings of the verses must be changed to alter a praiśa into a yājyā.

oblations; therefore the Hotṛ utters as the offering verse the same formulæ as the Maitrāvaruṇa for his directions; for breath is the same. They say 'The R̥c which he uses in the morning as offering verse is wearied for that day; then how is it fresh in all the pressings?' In that he continues to carry on with the pressings, (saying) 'In the morning, (the cakes) of the morning pressing', at the morning pressing, 'Those of the midday pressing', at the midday pressing, 'Those of the third pressing', at the third pressing, thereby is it fresh³. They say⁴ 'Why in the morning only is there a milk mess, and not in the midday or at the third pressing?' 'The Maitrāvaruṇa is the sacrifice; the sacrifice is born at the morning pressing; a young boy's portion is milk; this is as if one should give the breast to a child on birth; it is old at the other two pressings; when one grows one is past the breast then. Therefore in the morning only is there a milk mess, and not in the midday nor at the third pressing' (is the answer).

The Cakes.

xiii. 3. 'O¹ Agni, enjoy the oblation,' he says at each pressing as the offering verse of the Sviṣṭakṛt offering of the cake. Avatsāra Prāsravaṇa² was the Hotṛ of the gods. To him in that glory death attached itself; death is Agni; having delighted Agni by the oblation (saying), 'O Agni, enjoy the oblation,' he was set free. Verily thus also a Hotṛ, who knowing thus delights Agni by the oblation (saying) 'O Agni, enjoy the oblation,' is set free. Through these intermediate spaces the gods went to the world of heaven; to them in that glory death attached itself; death is Agni; they having delighted Agni by the oblation (saying) 'O Agni, enjoy the oblation,' were set free. Verily thus also a Hotṛ who knowing thus delights Agni by the oblation (saying) 'O Agni, enjoy the oblation,' is set free. (The words), 'O Agni, enjoy the oblation,' have six syllables; this body has six members and is sixfold; thus ransoming the self by the self, having become free of debt, he sacrifices. This is the Mantra of Avatsāra Prāsravaṇa; he should not think 'By which now, by which shall I sacrifice?'; he should know 'Let me sacrifice by the Mantra made by a R̥ṣi, the R̥c.'

³ The variants of the yājyās according to the pressing make the decisive difference. The praiṣas are given in Scheffelowitz, Die Apokryphen des R̥gveda, p. 145, where prātaḥ-sāvasya (cf. p. 147) occurs for prātaḥsavanasya here; so in the Prayogas and Ānand. ed.

⁴ For this see A.B. ii. 22.

¹ For the cakes of the pressings see A.B. ii. 23. For this point in the ritual, the yājyā of the Sviṣṭakṛt offering, ÇÇS. vii. 1. 8.

² The v. l. Prāgravaṇa is supported by WwBbMK, the Ānand. ed., and by Max Müller's MS. at least once. There is the same variation in the name of the Plakṣa Prāsravaṇa (Vedic Index, s.v.).

xiii. 4. Now we have called the victim Soma; and so the cakes. Ten are they, shoots of Soma; the old shoot, which they press here; the glad shoot, the waters; the sap shoot, rice; the male shoot, barley; the bright shoot, milk; the living shoot, the victim; the immortal shoot, gold; the Re shoot; the Yajus shoot; the Sāman shoot; these are the ten Soma shoots; when all these unite, then is there Soma, then the pressed (Soma).

The Cups for two Deities.

xiii. 5. Having¹ proceeded with the cakes, they proceed with (the cups) for two deities. The cakes are the body of the sacrificer, (the cups) for two deities the breaths; in that having proceeded with the cakes, they proceed with (the cups) for two deities, verily thus they place² the breaths in the sacrificer, to secure fullness of life in this world and immortality in yonder world. So the sacrificer lives his full life in this world, he obtains immortality, imperishableness in the world of heaven. The first is for Indra and Vāyu; Indra is speech, Vāyu is breath; that for Mitra and Varuṇa is the eye; that for the Aṇvins is the ear; those for two deities are these breaths. Therefore without taking breath he utters the offering verse, for the continuity of the breaths, for these breaths are continuous as it were; he does not utter the second vaṣaṭ (thinking) 'Those for two deities are the breaths, the second vaṣaṭ call marks the completion; let me not before the time make the breaths completed', for these breaths are yoked as it were. He places that for Indra and Vāyu on the front side, for it of these breaths is designated as of the front side; closer together as it were³ around the other two behind he deposits, for the eye and the ear are around this as it were. Then he continues to hold (thinking) 'Let them not start forward⁴.' He does not cover (thinking) '(The cups) for two deities are the breaths; let me not cover the breaths.'

xiii. 6. 'This sweet Soma drink for thee' is the offering verse¹ of the Prasthitas, which distil sweetness, containing (the word) 'sweet'. He utters a second vaṣaṭ, for the appeasing of the libations, for the support of the libations. Then the Hotrakas sacrifice together; verily thus they

² dadhāti is not so probable although it is possible, and has strong MS. support (WwOBK, Ānand. ed., and Max Müller's MS.). Cf. below, xiii. 9.

³ So abhidhānatare is taken by Vināyaka and it is probably thus to be rendered: abhidhānataḥ is less likely and does not explain the variant.

⁴ pravartantai is odd (Whitney, Sansk. Gr. § 737).

xiii. 6. ¹ For the Prasthitas and the Hotrakas' offerings and the eating of the libations see ÇÇS. vii. 4 and 5.

release the sacrificer from indebtedness.² The first eating is that of (the cups) for two deities, then the sacrificial food, then the Hotṛ's goblet. The cakes are the body of the sacrificer, (the cups) for two deities are the breaths the sacrificial food is cattle and food; by food are the breaths and the body combined. Therefore the first eating is of (the cups) for two deities, then sacrificial food, then the Hotṛ's bowl. Then he gives to the Adhvaryu he does not let go (thinking) ' (The cups) for two deities are breaths; let me not let go the breaths.' Twice he eats of (the cup) for Indra and Vāyur for twice he utters the vaṣaṭ call for it; once of (the cup) for Mitra and Varuṇa, once for that for the Aṣvins. Turning it round on all sides he eat of that for the Aṣvins, for by the ear he hears on all sides. The dreg he pours down on the Hotṛ's bowl; verily thus he makes them sharers in the sacrificial food.

xiii. 7. Then¹ he invokes the sacrificial food; carrying in his right hand the second (portion of the) sacrificial food he in the left holds together, but without allowing to touch, the Hotṛ's bowl and the cup (thinking) 'The butter is a thunderbolt; Soma is seed; let me not harm seed by the thunder bolt.' He does not speak the formula of pouring² into it, he does not utter benedictions. Having invoked the sacrificial food and having sniffed it he pauses; he eats the second (portion of the) sacrificial food; then having sipped water he eats of the Hotṛ's bowl. The Soma is the highest kind of proper food; verily thus all, having invoked the highest kind of proper food, eat of it.

xiii. 8. Next¹ the response of the Achāvāka. 'These dear songs the sacrificer, the pourer, hath seized; the Upavakṛ is a support, the cows are invited by us (he should say), if he does not desire to invite; 'He also is invited' he adds, if he desires to invite. The Achāvāka in response to the invitation should run over as many verses as he can of the hymn,² 'Do you stay, go not away.' Or a Hotṛ (may do so) to an unwilling³ Achāvākṛ. That is the expiation here.

The sense of sunvat is very doubtful, and the phrase may be corrupt.

xiii. 8. ¹ For the response of the Achāvāka see ÇÇS. vii. 6, where, however, the verse, RV. x. 19. 1, is attributed to the Achāvāka if not invited. The use of pratyupahava is odd.

² The reading of the KB. is certain but the sense most obscure; Henry (L'Agniṣṭom p. 221) suggests pratiṣṭhātōtopavakṛta (ÇÇS has °opavakṛta), but this is improbable. The rendering given assumes the reading pratiṣṭhōpavakṛta; for the Sandhi see ÇÇS. 4. 5; vii. 14. 9.

³ Cf. KB. xv. 8, n. 4. Read perhaps vā prapṛati°.

The Seasonal Cups.

xiii. 9. The¹ offerings to the seasons are the breaths; in that they proceed with the offerings to the seasons, verily thus they place the breaths in the sacrificer. Breath is in three ways ordered, expiration, inspiration, cross-breathing. Six (priests) sacrifice (saying) 'With the season,' verily thus they place expiration in the sacrificer; four 'With the seasons'; verily thus they place inspiration in the sacrificer; twice (they sacrifice) afterwards, (saying) 'With the season'; verily thus they place cross-breathing in the sacrificer,² to secure fullness of life in this world and immortality in yonder (world). So the sacrificer lives a full life in this world and obtains immortality and imperishableness in the world of heaven. The offerings to the seasons are these breaths; therefore without taking in breath they utter the offering verses, for the continuity of the breaths, for these breaths are continuous as it were. They do not say the second vaṣaṭ (thinking) 'The offerings to the seasons are the breaths; the second vaṣaṭ call marks the completion; let me not before the time make the breaths completed', for these breaths are yoked as it were. They say 'Why does he give directions to all (the priests) (in the words), 'Let the Hotṛ utter the offering verse, let the Hotṛ say the offering verse.' The Hotṛ is speech; he says in effect, 'Let speech utter the offering verse, let speech utter the offering verse.' The seven Hotṛs moreover are all these; further it is said in a Rc,³ 'The seven Hotṛs sacrifice according to due seasons.' In that he arranges two afterwards, it is to avoid repetition. There are twelve; the year has twelve months; verily (it serves) to obtain the year. If he should eat then, and any one should say of him, 'Food over which no second vaṣaṭ has been said is unwholesome; it has penetrated through his breaths,⁴ he will not live,' so would it be. If he does not eat, and any one were to say of him, 'Food is breath; he has separated himself from breath, he will not live,' so also would it be. He should smear as it were, and sniff it, both here and in the case of (the cups) for two deities; this is the rule which they proclaim. In that these two Adhvaryus cross each other and neither interferes with the other, therefore season interferes not with season.

¹ For the offerings to the seasons see AB. ii. 29. For the ritual see QCS. vii. 8.

² For dadhātu see KB. xiii. 5.

³ See VS. xxiii. 58 ā; the allusion here is omitted in the Vedic Concordance.

⁴ prāṇān with vyagāt is difficult but not impossible. There is no obvious correction save, of course, prāṇāt as with prāṇāt below, and possibly that should be read. On the other hand the acc. is found in AB. several times, apparently as 'separate' and so destroy.

ADHYĀYA XIV

xiv. 1. Next¹ as to the Ājya (Çastra). By the Ājya the gods conquered all desires, all immortality; verily thus also the sacrificer by the Ājya conquers all desires, all immortality. The Ājya is sixfold, the silent muttering, the silent praise, the Puroruc, the hymn, the strength of the hymn, and the offering verse. The year is sixfold in having six seasons; by this sixfold Ājya the gods obtained the sixfold year with its six seasons, and by the year all desires, all immortality. Verily thus also the sacrificer by this sixfold Ājya obtains the sixfold year with its six seasons, by the year all desires, all immortality. In that he mutters in front the silent muttering, (it is because) the sacrifice is the world of heaven; thus, in that he mutters the silent muttering in front, verily thus he produces a benediction, for the attainment of the world of heaven. Then he recites inaudibly the silent praise, to obtain all desires. 'Agni, light, light, Agni,' (he says); thus he obtains this world of worlds, the morning pressing of the sacrifice. 'Indra, light, light, Indra,' (he says); thus he obtains the world of the atmosphere of worlds, the midday pressing of the sacrifice. 'Sun, light, light, sun,' (he says); thus he obtains yonder world of worlds, the third pressing of the sacrifice. He who yonder gives heat is the Nivid, for he keeps announcing all this. It is placed in front of the hymn at the morning pressing, for (the sun) then is in front; in the middle of the hymn at the midday pressing, for it is then in the middle; leaving over the last in the third pressing, for then it has gone round to the west. Thus he keeps placing² the Nivid according to its appearance. They say 'Coloured³ (steeds) draw the morning pressing, white-backed the midday pressing, those with a white gloss the third pressing.' Because of the sun also he recites the Puroruc in twelve sentences; the year has twelve months; verily (it serves) to obtain the year.

xiv. 2. Then he recites the seven-versed Ājya¹; the metres are seven;

³ āñjayañ is rarely used as an epithet of colour by itself, but this seems the sense here.

xiv. 2. ¹ RV. iii. 13. The mode of recitation presumes that the second half-verse is to be pronounced samasta with the usual Praṇava at the end, while there is a pause at the end of the first half-verse, which is recited as two Padas but without breathing in. Cf. AB. ii. 35.

verily (it serves) to obtain all the metres. It is in Anuṣṭubh verses; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; whatever is described by speech, the Anuṣṭubh, all that he obtains. He separates the two Padas; that is a symbol of generation; a man takes apart as it were (the limbs) of his wife. Further, in that he takes apart, that is a symbol of support. Now that between these two Padas is the face of death; if a man say of one who breathes in at this place, 'He has entered the face of death, he will not live', so would it be. Therefore without drawing in breath should he pass over; breath is immortality; thus by immortality he crosses death. He utters the Praṇava at the end of the whole half-verse; verily thus he hurls a thunderbolt at his evil rival. They make up ten Gāyatrī verses, for the tenth Pada has eight syllables. The Anuṣṭubh is the Gāyatrī; the metre of Agni is the Gāyatrī; ten cups the Adhvaryu draws at the morning pressing; to nine (verses) they sing with the Bahispavamāna (Stotra), the tenth is the call hīn; these ten they taking separately make up the Virāj; the Virāj is all proper food; having procured that they deposit it in the sacrificer. Thrice (he recites) with the first, thrice with the last; they make up eleven; the twelfth is the offering verse; the year has twelve months; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. They, recited together, make up sixteen Gāyatrīs; thus the Ājya becomes converted into Gāyatrī verses. He utters as offering verse one to Agni and Indra; verily thus he makes Indra a half-sharer in the pressing. 'In the offering verse give the deities a portion,' Kauṣītaki used to say. The Virāj has thirty-three syllables; the gods are thirty-three; he makes the gods sharers in the syllables. 'O Agni, with Indra, in the home of the generous one,' leaving over this Pada,² he breathes in at the half-verse of the Virāj; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; thus on the Virāj as prosperity and proper food he finds support. With the second half of the Virāj he utters the vaṣaṭ call; verily thus in the world of heaven he places the sacrificer; he utters the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

xiv. 3. 'Let us two recite¹,' he calls out at the morning pressing; in that they make the Praṇava pure, it is a symbol of this world; in that they make it end in m, it is one of yonder (world). In that they make the Praṇava pure, (it is thinking) 'Turned away is yonder world; let us not go turning away.' Moreover, this world is generation; verily (it serves) for generation; this world is a support; verily (it serves) for support. 'Let us recite, O divine one,' the Adhvaryu (replies). These are eight syllables. 'The hymn hath been uttered,' the Hotṛ should say inaudibly at the morning pressing; 'Reciter of hymns', the Adhvaryu (replies). These are eight. Having begun the pressing with the Gāyatrī they have found support in the Gāyatrī. 'O Adhvaryu, let us two recite,' he calls out at the midday pressing. 'Let us recite, O divine one,' the Adhvaryu (replies). These are eleven syllables. 'The hymn hath been uttered to Indra', the Hotṛ should say inaudibly at the midday pressing. 'Reciter of hymns', the Adhvaryu (replies). These are eleven. Having begun the pressing with the Triṣṭubh they have found support on the Triṣṭubh. 'O Adhvaryu, let, let us two recite,' he calls out towards (him) at the third pressing. 'Let, let us recite, O divine one,' the Adhvaryu (replies). There are twelve syllables roughly,² thirteen. 'The hymn hath been uttered to Indra, to the gods,' the Hotṛ should say inaudibly at the third pressing. 'Reciter of hymns', the Adhvaryu (replies). These are twelve exactly. Having begun the pressing with the Jagatī they have found support on the Jagatī. This is what is placed in the middle. If he uses here a transposed metre, still the metres are in order and carry the sacrifice of him who knows thus. 'Moreover the following verse has been declared', he used to say, 'That the Gāyatrī is deposited on the Gāyatrī, or that they fashioned the Triṣṭubh from the Triṣṭubh, or that the Jagatī Pada is placed on the Jagatī, they who know this obtain immortality.' In that these deities are fixed on these worlds, Agni as connected with the Gāyatrī here is fixed in this world of the Gāyatrī, Vāyu as connected with the Triṣṭubh is fixed in the world of the atmosphere connected with the Triṣṭubh; yonder sun as connected with the Jagatī is fixed in yonder world connected with the Jagatī.

The Praūga Çastra.

xiv. 4. Having recited the Ājya, he recites the Praūga.¹ The Ājya is the body of the sacrificer, the Praūga the breaths; in that having recited the Ājya he recites the Praūga, verily thus he places breaths in the sacrificer, to secure fullness of life in this world and immortality in yonder world. So the sacrificer lives a full life in this world, and obtains immortality and imperishableness in the world of heaven. When the Pavamāna has been sung, he recites the Ājya. When the Ājya (Stotra) has been sung, (he verily (it serves) to obtain all the metres. It is in Anuṣṭubh verses; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; whatever is described by speech, the Anuṣṭubh, all that he obtains. He separates the two Padas; that is a symbol of generation; a man takes apart as it were (the limbs) of his wife. Further, in that he takes apart, that is a symbol of support. Now that between these two Padas is the face of death; if a man say of one who breathes in at this place, 'He has entered the face of death, he will not live', so would it be. Therefore without drawing in breath should he pass over; breath is immortality; thus by immortality he crosses death. He utters the Praṇava at the end of the whole half-verse; verily thus he hurls a thunderbolt at his evil rival. They make up ten Gāyatrī verses, for the tenth Pada has eight syllables. The Anuṣṭubh is the Gāyatrī; the metre of Agni is the Gāyatrī; ten cups the Adhvaryu draws at the morning pressing; to nine (verses) they sing with the Bahispavamāna (Stotra), the tenth is the call hīn; these ten they taking separately make up the Virāj; the Virāj is all proper food; having procured that they deposit it in the sacrificer. Thrice (he recites) with the first, thrice with the last; they make up eleven; the twelfth is the offering verse; the year has twelve months; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. They, recited together, make up sixteen Gāyatrīs; thus the Ājya becomes converted into Gāyatrī verses. He utters as offering verse one to Agni and Indra; verily thus he makes Indra a half-sharer in the pressing. 'In the offering verse give the deities a portion,' Kausītaki used to say. The Virāj has thirty-three syllables; the gods are thirty-three; he makes the gods sharers in the syllables. 'O Agni, with Indra, in the home of the generous one,' leaving over this Pada,² he breathes in at the half-verse of the Virāj; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; thus on the Virāj as prosperity and proper food he finds support. With the second half of the Virāj he utters the vaṣaṭ call; verily thus in the world of heaven he places the sacrificer; he utters the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

xiv. 3. 'Let us two recite'¹, he calls out at the morning pressing; in that they make the Praṇava pure, it is a symbol of this world; in that they make it end in m, it is one of yonder (world). In that they make the Praṇava pure, (it is thinking) 'Turned away is yonder world; let us not go turning away.' Moreover, this world is generation; verily (it serves) for generation; this world is a support; verily (it serves) for support. 'Let us recite, O divine one,' the Adhvaryu (replies). These are eight syllables. 'The hymn hath been uttered,' the Hotṛ should say inaudibly at the

xiv. 4. Having recited the Ājya, he recites the Praūga.¹ The Ājya is the body of the sacrificer, the Praūga the breaths; in that having recited the Ājya he recites the Praūga, verily thus he places breaths in the sacrificer, to secure fullness of life in this world and immortality in yonder world. ¹ For the Praūga Çastra see AB. iii. 1-4. This chapter deals with the seven Tricas of which it is composed (RV. i. 2. 1-3; 4-6; 7-9; 3. 1-3; 4-6; 7-9; 10-12) and the relation to the Grahas. For the relationship of Ājya and Praūga see Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 373, 374.

recites) the Praūga. The Praūga is the hymn of the Pavamāna; the Ājya is the hymn of the Ājya. Thus he transposes the two; it is as if one were to intertwine the outer reins of a chariot. 'Thus he accompanies the cups', Kauṣītaki used to say; yonder cup for Vāyu and Indra and Vāyu (he accompanies) by that (recitation) for Vāyu and for Indra and Vāyu; that for Mitra and Varuṇa with that for Mitra and Varuṇa; that for the Aṇvins with that for the Aṇvins; in that he utters the offering verses for the Prasthitas, that (he accompanies) with that for Indra; in that the Hotrakas sacrifice together, that with that for the All-gods. Sarasvatī is speech in all the pressings. He yonder who makes heat is the Puroruc, for he shines in front; again breath is the Puroruc, while the hymn is the body; the body is the Puroruc and the hymn is cattle and offspring; therefore he should not utter any call between the Puroruc and the hymn². Reciting the hymn with the Puroruc, he calls aloud for each Puroruc; 'Vāyu, proceeding in front' is the symbol of expiration; 'O Vāyu' is the symbol of inspiration. He recites the Praūga as Gāyatrī; thereby the morning pressing is obtained; (he recites it) as addressed to Indra; thereby the midday pressing is obtained; (he recites it) as addressed to the All-gods; thereby the third pressing is obtained.

xiv. 5. Then¹ he recites a Puroruc addressed to the All-gods. It is of six feet; the seasons some call it. The seasons are six; he recites each two feet of it separately; therefore the seasons are united in pairs and called 'Summer, the rains, and winter.' Some recite the Puroruc for Sarasvatī; he should not do so; it is superfluous; speech has of itself radiance; speech is the Puroruc. 'O Vāyu, come hither, O lovely one' and 'O Aṇvins, sacrificial food', these two (hymns) are the Praūga; (they are) of nine verses and of twelve verses; these make twenty-one; the four (verse) Stoma, the highest of Stomas, is twenty-onefold; thus he obtains the highest Stoma; in that, further, there are twenty-one, and the months are twelve, the seasons five, these worlds three, and yonder sun the twenty-first, verily thereby he places the sacrificer in identity of world with (the sun). There are seven triplets; the metres are seven; verily (they serve) to obtain all the metres. Moreover with these the gods appropriated the seven heptads of the Asuras; verily thus also the sacrificer appropriates the seven heptads of the rival who hates him. In the beginning the morning pressing was Agni's, the midday pressing Indra's, the third pressing the All-gods'. Agni desired 'Let me have a share in the midday pressing, also in the third pressing.'

² The hymn has at the beginning only a Puroruc and then the first verse; afterwards before each new triplet it has an Āhava, with the response of the Adhvaryu, before the Puroruc.

Indra desired 'Let me have a share in the morning pressing, also in the third pressing.' The All-gods desired, 'Let us have a share in the midday pressing, also in the morning pressing.' These deities thenceforward extended the morning pressing from the third pressing; in that they extended (abhīprāyujāta), that is why the Praūga has its name. Therefore many deities are praised at the Praūga; therefore all the pressings have all the deities. Having recited the hymn², 'With all the sweet Soma drink', he utters the offering verse for the All-gods, for the hymn is for the All-gods; in Gāyatrī, the morning pressing is connected with the Gāyatrī. He should recite the second vaṣaṭ.²

xv. 1. The¹ Gods having praised the pressing stones with the Arbuda (hymn²) and the verses for (Soma), the purifying, obtained immortality, obtained truth and resolve. Verily thus also the sacrificer in that he praises the pressing stones with the Arbuda (hymn) and the verses for (Soma), the purifying, obtains immortality, obtains truth and resolve. When the Pavamāna has been sung, they proceed with the pot of milk, for this is the time for it; moreover (it serves) to give the pressing sap. Then they proceed with the set of five oblations; the explanation of this has been given. At the midday he utters a verse of Bharadvāja's as the offering verse for the Prasthitas; at the midday Bharadvāja gave Soma to Indra. It is a Trīṣṭubh verse, addressed to Indra; the midday pressing is connected with Indra and the Trīṣṭubh. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. Then the Hotrakas sacrifice together; the explanation of these (offerings) has been given; then come the sacrificial food and the Hotr's bowl; the explanation of that has been given. When the Dakṣiṇā offerings have been made, the fees are taken, for then the pressing stops. Moreover he ransoms himself in that the fees are taken; moreover with the fees he makes strong the sacrifice; in that with the fees he makes strong (dakṣayati) the sacrifice, therefore has the fee its name. The Sattrā has the self as the Dakṣiṇā; therefore day by day should they mutter, 'Here let me take myself as a fee for fair fame, for the world of heaven, for immortality'; verily thus they take themselves as a fee for fair fame, for the world of heaven, for immortality. Having recited (a verse³) by Viṣvāmitra as the invitatory (verse) of the cup for the Maruts, he utters (a verse⁴) by Viṣvāmitra as the offering verse; the cup for the Maruts is the continuity of the pressing; Viṣvāmitra is speech; by speech the sacrifice is continued. These are two Triṣṭubhs addressed to Indra; the midday pressing is connected with Indra and the Triṣṭubh. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

The Marutvatiya Çastra.

xv. 2. Then¹ he recites the sixfold Marutvatiya; the year has six seasons; verily (it serves) to obtain the year. He recites the six metres, Anuṣṭubh, Gāyatrī, Bṛhatī, Uṣṇih, Triṣṭubh, and Jagatī. Therefore is it sixfold. With an Anuṣṭubh², 'Thee like a car for aid', he begins the Marutvatiya. The Marutvatiya is the hymn of the Pavamāna; the metre of Soma is the Anuṣṭubh. The explanation of the transposition of the Padas has been given. He recites Gāyatrī verses; Gāyatrī verses are breath; verily thus he places breath in himself. 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' is the antistrophe³, containing the words 'pressed' and 'drink', for it is the hymn of the Pavamāna. 'O Indra, come nearer' is a Pragātha⁴ inviting Indra. 'Nearer let us approach', the Maruts said to him encouraging him; he said 'Having conquered and slain Vṛtra, this is my Soma drinking along with you.' This is his Soma drinking along with them. 'Forward now, Brahmanaspati' is (a Pragātha) addressed to Brahmanaspati⁵ and contains (the word) 'Forward'. 'Smite', Brahman said to him, encouraging him; he said, 'Having conquered and slain Vṛtra, this is my Soma drinking along with you.' This is the Soma drinking of Brahman. 'In it give the gods a share', Kausitaki used to say. 'In which Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman, the gods, made their homes', in this⁶ are the gods given a share. They say 'In that in there is no strophe nor antistrophe, but an invitation to Indra and (a triplet) addressed to Brahmanaspati, then why are they recited repeating them and making them into Kakubh (verses)?' The Sāman singers sing with repetition in the Pavamāna; verily thus is a symbol of it produced. 'Agni, like Bhaga, is leader of the folk' and 'Thou with insight art keen of insight, O Soma' are addressed to Agni and Soma.⁷ Agni and Soma were within Vṛtra; Indra was unable to hurl his bolt against them; they went out for this share and for that which is theirs in the full moon sacrifice. The Marutvatīya is a hymn connected with the slaying of Vṛtra; by it Indra slew Vṛtra.

xv. 3. 'The Maruts, rich in dew, swell the waters' is the water-swelling (verse);¹ the water-swelling (verse) is the waters; in that over Vṛtra slain the waters went apart, in that they swelled, thus it is (called) the water-swelling. It is a Jagatī verse; through it all the pressings are Jagatī. 'Thou hast been born, dread, for impetuous strength' is the Marutvatīya² containing the word 'born'. Indra is born, in that he slew Vṛtra; thus he who sacrifices is born. At the first (verse) of it the Adhvaryu responds once with (a response) containing the form mad;³ here Indra for the first time was drunken (amādyat). The Marutvatīya is a hymn, winning battles; thereby Indra won battles. In the middle of it he places a Nivid; in the middle of the body is food placed; then he recites Nivids; the Nivids are the breaths; verily thus he places the breaths in himself. Each quarter verse of these he recites taking it separately; verily thus each breath he places in himself; with the last he utters the Pranava; thus he lets go this breath; therefore all the breaths breath along this breath. Now they say 'The Nivids are food'; therefore should he recite them quietly, for not hastening as it were he eats unpleasant⁴ food. 'Those who magnified thee, O bounteous one, at the slaying of the dragon', having recited the hymn, (this verse⁵) he utters as the offering verse. 'Who in the affair with Çambara, who in the fight for cattle, O lord of the bays', (he says);⁶ with them he performed these heroic deeds; with them is this his Soma drinking. The verse is a Triṣṭubh addressed to Indra, for the midday pressing is connected with Indra and the Triṣṭubh. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. The first Anuṣṭubh is speech; after it follow five Gāyatrīs; the invitation to Indra is the mind⁶; (the couplet) addressed to Brahmanāspati is the ear; the three of common character⁶ are expiration, inspiration, and cross-breathing; the hymn is the body; the Nivid what is within the body; the concluding verse a support; the offering verse food.

The Niṣkevalya Çastra.

xv. 4. (Next)¹ the Niṣkevalya. Both before and after are many gods mentioned in recitation; but the Niṣkevalya is Indra's only; that is why the Niṣkevalya has its name. In that he begins with a Br̥hatī, and he who gives heat here is connected with the Br̥hatī, thus he makes him to prosper with his own symbol. He makes two into three by repetition; that is the symbol of generation; two as it were are there at first, then they are propagated. Having recited the strophe, he recites the antistrophe; the strophe is the self; the antistrophe the offspring; therefore he should make the antistrophe to be corresponding in form; a corresponding one is born in his offspring, not one who does not correspond. He recites a supplementary verse; the supplementary verse is breath; verily thus in himself he places breath. He recites a Pragātha; the Pragātha is cattle; verily (it serves) to obtain cattle. Moreover the Br̥hatī Pragātha is expiration and inspiration; verily thus he places expiration and inspiration in himself. 'I shall proclaim the manly deeds of Indra' is the Niṣkevalya of fifteen verses;² the thunderbolt is fifteenfold; verily thus with the thunderbolt he smites the evil of the sacrificer. In the middle of it he places a Nivid; in the middle of the body is food placed; then he recites Nivids; the Nivids are the breaths; verily thus he places the breaths in himself. Each quarter verse of these he recites, taking it separately; verily thus each breath he places in himself; with the last he utters the Praṇava; thus he lets go this breath; therefore all the breaths breathe along this breath. Now they say 'The Nivids are food'; therefore should he recite them quietly, for not hastening as it were he eats unpleasant food. He should recite the concluding verse in a lower tone; so is his wife unlikely to fall away. (He should recite) in still lower a tone;³ so does his wife become as it were not uplifted in her mind. In that he gives a horse, and the horse is Indra, for the hymn is connected with Indra, verily thus he delights Indra. The strophe is the self; the antistrophe offspring; the supplementary verse the wife; cattle the Pragātha; the hymn the body; the Nivid what is within the body; the concluding verse a support; the offering verse food.

xv. 5. When¹ the Pavamaṇa was being sung, death clung to the Hotṛ; he removed it by the Ājya (Çastra) except from the strophe; when the Ājya² Stotra (was being sung) it clung (to him); he removed it by the Praūga except from the strophe; when the Mādhyam̐dina Pavamāna (was being sung) it clung to him; he removed it by the Marutvatiya except from the strophe. In the Niṣkevalya he begins with the strophe; that is as one in freedom from fear having removed death, like one having been set free.³ They say, 'There is a Niṣkevalya here, and a Niṣkevalya there in the Mahāvratā. There are recited there (metres) increasing by four; how here are they obtained?' There are even more realized here; the strophe and antistrophe, recited together, make up the seven increasing by four, and there is a four-syllable foot left over. They are cattle; these cattle he confers upon the sacrificer. The Agniṣṭoma is the Virāj; they make up a hundred and ninety strophes; he attains clearly the symbol of the Agniṣṭoma in that he uses a Virāj as offering verse. 'Drink the Soma, O Indra, let it delight thee', having left over this quarter verse he takes breath in at the half verse of the Virāj; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; thus he finds support in the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. He says vaṣaṭ with the second half verse of the Virāj; verily thus he places the sacrificer in the world of heaven. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

The Āditya Cup.

xvi. 1. The¹ morning pressing belongs to the Vasus, the midday pressing to the Rudras, the third pressing to the Ādityas. In that he commences the third pressing with the Āditya cup, verily thus he begins with its own deity. Moreover this pressing has the sap extracted, in that it is the third pressing. The Āditya cup is full of sap; thereby verily he makes the third pressing possessed of sap. Having recited a Triṣṭubh as the invitatory verse for the Āditya cup, he utters a Triṣṭubh as the offering verse; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he confers might and strength upon the sacrificer. He does not say the second vaṣaṭ (thinking) 'The Āditya cup is the continuity of the pressing; the xvi. 3. He¹ begins the Vaiṣvadeva with Savitr; on the instigation of Savitr the gods brought together the third pressing; therefore the strophe and antistrophe and hymn² are all Savitr's. He begins the Vaiṣvadeva with an Anuṣṭubh, 'That of Savitr we choose.' The Vaiṣvadeva is the hymn of the Pavamāna; the metre of Soma is the Anuṣṭubh. The explanation of the division of the quarter verses has been given. He recites Gāyatrī verses; Gāyatrī verses are breath; verily thus he places breath in himself. He recites a hymn to Savitr, for a cup has been drawn for Savitr; verily therewith he accompanies it. He recites (a verse) for Vāyu;³ (the verse) for Vāyu is breath; verily thus he places breath in himself. In the recitation of this he releases (the cups) for two deities in Vāyu, the breaths in the breath. He recites (the hymn⁴) to sky and earth; sky and earth are supports; verily (it serves) for support. In this the Adhvaryu responds with (a formula containing the word⁵) mad, for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk' (mad). He recites (the verse⁶) 'Maker of fair forms'; that which has a fair form is food; verily thus he places food in himself. Moreover this is the Soma drinking of the forms; verily thus he places form in himself. He recites (a hymn⁷) to the Ṛbhus, for then Prajāpati made preparation for them; therefore (the hymn) to the Ṛbhus is recited here. Then he recites (verses)⁸ to Vena, to the Ādityas, and to Brhaspati; with these he accompanies the Çukra and Manthin cups and the Āgrayana cup; moreover this is the Vaiṣvadeva Çastra,⁹ (so it serves) to secure that none of the deities are excluded. He recites the Vaiṣvadeva, for the Vaiṣvadeva cup has been drawn; verily therewith he accompanies it. The concluding verse¹⁰ he recites twice by quarter verses, the third time by half verses; it makes up a Virāj; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (verily it serves) to obtain the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. Four hymns he recites in the Vaiṣvadeva; the Vaiṣvadeva is cattle; cattle are fourfold, and also four-footed; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. Therefore he should recite it abidingly; with him cattle abide.

xvi. 4. He recites the Vaiṣvadeva with sixteen calls;¹ all this is of sixteen parts; verily (it serves) to obtain all this. It is seventeenfold; eleven deities, four Nivids, the strength of the litany, and the offering verse; Prajāpati is seventeenfold; that rite is beneficial which is commensurate with Prajāpati. Having recited the litany, he says an offering verse² for the All-gods, 'O All-gods, hearken to this my call', for the litany is for the All-gods; containing (the words) 'be drunk', for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk'; in Trīṣṭubh metre; the Trīṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he places might and strength in the sacrificer. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. The first Anuṣṭubh yonder is speech; five Gāyatrī verses follow the Anuṣṭubh; (the hymn) to Savitr is mind; (the verse) to Vāyu is breath; (the hymn) to earth and sky is the eyes; there is the breath here which is not distinct in (the verse), 'Maker of fair forms'; (the hymn) to the R̥bhus is the ear; the three isolated verses are expiration, inspiration, and cross-breathing; the hymn is the body; the Nivid what is within the body; the concluding verse a support; the offering verse is food. They say 'Why are the holy power and the lordly power unstable, the subjects stable'. 'The morning pressing is the holy power, the midday pressing the lordly power, the third pressing is the subjects; in that at the morning pressing and the midday pressing he concludes just as it may occur, therefore the Brahmins³ rule the people insecurely, insecurely also the Kṣatriyas; in that the concluding verse of the third pressing is stable, therefore are the subjects stable' (is the reply).

xvi. 5. 'Say¹ the offering verse for the ghee' and 'Say the offering verse for the Soma drink', he says; by ghee and by Soma is the sacrifice carried on; these here he delights (thinking) 'They delighted shall support the sacrifice.' Inaudibly he says the offering verse for the ghee; ghee is a pouring of seed; inaudibly is seed poured. In that he says the offering verse aloud for the Soma drink, (it is because) Soma is the moon, and the moon is distinct. 'After it he should not perform any additional offering,' they say, 'So do they yonder from yonder look² back on this (world)'. But the rule is, 'Let him perform'. The butter is the world of the gods, the Soma the world of the fathers; verily thus they arise from the world

³ brāhmaṇāḥ must be read. The Ānand. ed. has brāhmaṇyaprajāḥ.

¹ The question here discussed is whether a third offering should be made to Viṣṇu after the two for Agni and Soma, the first of butter, the latter of a saumya caru. The answer here is in the affirmative, but ÇÇS. viii. 4 treats it as optional. Cf. Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, pp. 362-4.

of the fathers to the world of the gods³. 'Moreover thus they delight the fathers only in that they proceed with the Soma drink; moreover thus the Upasads are left over,' they say. In the Upasads he sacrifices to Agni, Soma, and Viṣṇu and to match this here also to Agni, Soma, and Viṣṇu. They take the Soma drink to the Sadas; the Hotṛ takes it and deposits it; then he looks at himself in the melted butter in it and with two fingers touches the melted butter; (with the words) 'Thou art the guardian of the eye, guard mine eye,' he should rub his eyes; verily thus he guards his eyes. It he hands over to the Udgātṛs.

The Pātnīvata Cup.

xvi. 6. Then¹ they proceed with the Pātnīvata cup; verily thus they make the wives of the gods sharers in the Āhavanīya. He does not say for it the second vaṣaṭ, for it is mixed with butter, and butter has no share in the second vaṣaṭ call. Inaudibly he says the offering verse; the Pātnīvata cup is a pouring of seed; inaudibly is seed poured. He does not say the second vaṣaṭ (thinking) 'The Pātnīvata cup is a pouring of seed; the second vaṣaṭ is completion; let me not before the due time complete the pouring of seed.' The offering verse² contains (the words) 'be drunk', for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk'. They say 'Since this is the offering verse of the Neṣṭṛ, then why does the Āgnīdhra say it as an offering verse?' 'This offering verse is connected with Agni; the Āgnīdhra is connected with Agni; therefore the Āgnīdhra uses it as an offering verse; moreover, thus the vaṣaṭ calls of these unuttered become the same' (is the reply).

The Āgnimāruta Çastra.

xvi. 7. He¹ recites the Āgnimāruta with twenty-one calls; the four-verse Stoma, the highest of Stomas on which support is to be found, is twenty-onefold; verily (it serves) for a support. The (Çastra) is twenty-fourfold; there are twenty joinings; these make forty-four; the Triṣṭubh has forty-four syllables; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he places might and strength in the sacrificer. He recites (a hymn²) to Vaiṣvānara for a cup for Vaiṣvānara has been drawn; verily therewith he accompanies it. He recites (a verse³) to Rudra; Rudra is dread; verily thus he makes medicine; moreover his share is at the end; therefore in the end Çastra he recites it. He recites (a hymn⁴) to the Maruts; Rudra has them as his horde; verily thus he makes him prosper with his own horde. Then come the strophe and antistrophe of the Yajñāyajñīya⁵; these two he recites in the middle to frighten, for in the middle of the body is the womb placed to frighten. He recites (a hymn⁶) to Jātavedas; thereby is it called the Āgnimāruta (Çastra). Therefore should he recite it quickly, just as one escaping a forest fire. He recites (verses⁷) with the waters as deities; the waters are healing and medicine; verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced. Therefore should he recite them slowly, just as one spraying himself in the waters. He recites 'the Dragon of the Deep'⁸; the dragon of the deep is Agni; him with it he makes to glow; moreover, with it he accompanies the altars. He recites 'the wives of the gods'⁹ and 'Rākā'¹⁰; verily with these he accompanies the Pātnīvata cup; moreover, the wives have their portion at the end; therefore in the end Çastra he recites these verses.

xvi. 8. He recites the Akṣarapañktis¹; the Akṣarapañktis are cattle; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle; moreover, the Akṣarapañktis are expiration and inspiration; thereby then he places expiration and inspiration in himself; moreover (they serve) to secure the presence of Indra in the Çastra. He recites (verses) to the fathers² and to Yama³; verily thus he accompanies the Nārāçaṇsa cups; moreover the fathers have their portion at the end; therefore he recites these (verses) in the end Çastra. He recites (the verses⁴) 'Sweet indeed is he'; verily with them he makes sweet the Soma for Indra; moreover, Indra is the world of the gods, Yama the world of the fathers; verily thus he arises from the world of the fathers to the world of the gods. To them the Adhvaryu responds with (a formula containing the word) 'mad', for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk'. He recites (a verse) to Viṣṇu and Varuṇa⁵; the sacrifice is connected with Viṣṇu and Varuṇa; whatever mistake or error there is in the sacrifice, that with this he remedies; verily this is medicine. He recites (a verse) to Viṣṇu⁶ and (a verse) to Agni⁷; of the gods Agni and Viṣṇu are those whose portions are at the end; therefore these he recites in the end Çastra. He concludes with (a verse) to Indra,⁸ for he is Indra's; verily him Indra at the end establishes.⁹

xvi. 9. 'What is the deity of the Soma?'¹ Madhuka asked Gauçra. He, after running over (the words) 'Soma becometh pure', replied 'There may be different ones.' 'As with the Bahvṛcas², it should be connected with Indra' was the rule of Paiṅgya. 'It should be connected with Indra and Agni' is Kauṣītaki's view. 'By Agni it begins in that (it begins) with the Ājya; with Indra it ends (in) this concluding verse³; therefore it should be connected with Indra and Agni.' 'This is the Agniṣṭoma; this is taken for every desire. He who offers with any other sacrifice without having sacrificed with this⁴ prepares for himself a pitfall, he comes to ruin⁵', he used to say. This Agniṣṭoma begins with the Ājya (Çastra) and ends with the Āgnimāruta. What has to be recited makes up three hundred and sixty R̥c verses; three hundred and sixty are the days of the year; verily (it serves) to obtain the year.⁶ After reciting the litany he uses as offering verse,⁷ 'O Agni, with the Maruts, resplendent, loud singing', addressed to Agni and the Maruts, for this litany is addressed to Agni and the Maruts; in Jagatī metre, for the third pressing is connected with the Jagatī; containing (the words) 'be drunk', for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk'. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

⁹ M alone has the necessary causative, the comm. and the other MSS. and the Ānand. ed. having the simple.

¹ It is not clear to what this refers. Somaḥ pavate is the Pratikā of RV. ix. 96. 5, and if anything more than these two words are meant then the reference ought to be to a RV. text. On the other hand they are also the Pratikā of VS. vii. 21, and the Vedic Concordance treats this verse as repeated in the Soma sacrifice at the Bahiṣpavamāna; Caland and Henry (L'Agniṣṭoma, p. 174), however, thinks that there also merely the words themselves are meant, and this may be the case here also. The sense clearly is that Gauçra treated the Soma as having, as deity, diverse gods.

² Apparently the contrast is with a special school name Bahvṛcas, as in the wider sense of that term it covers Paiṅgya. Cf. the Bahvṛcabrahmaṇa of Āpastamba; Keith, JRAS. 1915, pp. 493-498.

The Sautrāmaṇī.

[xvi. 10. Having¹ sacrificed with Soma he should sacrifice with the Sautrāmaṇī who desires prosperity, offspring, and the Virāj. The Sautrāmaṇī is a sacrificial rite for Indra; the third victim is the body of the sacrifice, two victims the arms; therefore the arms are about the body; therefore the two should be at each side about the body; in that, after saying the second vaṣaṭ over the cups of Surā and Soma, all²; therefore having sacrificed with Soma let him perform the Sautrāmaṇī; he who knowing thus, having sacrificed with Soma, sacrifices with the Sautrāmaṇī, obtains prosperity, offspring, and the Virāj, and so he also who knows thus. The Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (verily it serves) to obtain the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. He goes to the final bath, as at the Soma sacrifice. Or he may if he will offer a milk mess to Mitra and Varuṇa.]

The Ukthya Sacrifice.

xvi. 11. The¹ litanies of the Ukthya are addressed to Indra and Agni; all the gods are Indra and Agni; the third pressing is connected with the All-gods; verily (they serve) to delight all the gods. In (verses) to Agni they give the lead for the Maitrāvaruṇa, in (verses) to Indra in the other two cases; thereby these are addressed to Indra and Agni. They recite four hymns each; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fourfold; moreover,

¹ For the Sautrāmaṇī see ÇÇS. xiv. 13 (where the three victims for the Aṅvins, Sarasvatī and Indra are specified), cf. xv. 15 (where the Surā is specified). The form here is that called elsewhere the Kaukilī, an independent rite, while that connected with the Rājasūya is the Caraka; see Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 349–353; Eggeling, SBE. xlv. 213, 214; Hillebrandt, Ritual-litteratur, p. 159. See also MÇS. v. 2. 3 and 11; BÇS. xvii. 31–38.

² These victims are offered (comm.); the text is corrupt. The bad text and the fact, not mentioned by Lindner, that M omits the whole section, taken in conjunction with the unnatural insertion of this paragraph at this juncture, and with the fact that the ÇÇS. shows no knowledge of this portion of the text, justify us in the belief that the chapter is an interpolation. Moreover, the term tripaṇu naturally denotes here the third victim, not a set of three victims, and in either case is an odd form without an early parallel; the apparently similar tridiva hardly means simply the 'third heaven' as taken by MW.; it is rather a collective formed in the normal way (Wackernagel, Altind. Gramm. II. i. 304 seq.) from tri and dyu, meaning a collection of three heavens, and is due to the Vedic triplication of the heaven, which again arose from the triplication of the universe (cf. Macdonell, Vedic Mythology, p. 9). BR.'s view that it refers to the inner space of the highest heaven is likewise implausible.

xvi. 11. ¹ For the three additional Çastras of the Hotrakas after the Āgnimāruta Çastra in the Ukthya rite, see AB. iii. 49, 50. The Çastras are given in detail in ÇÇS. ix. 1–4.

cattle are four-footed; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. They make up twelve; the year has twelve months; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. The Çastras contain four calls; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fourfold; moreover cattle are four-footed; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. The offering verses of the litanies are addressed to two deities; the sacrificer has two feet; (therefore they serve) for support. They make up four;² the litanies are cattle; cattle are fourfold; moreover, cattle are four-footed; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. That of the Maitrāvaruṇa³ is addressed to Indra and Varuṇa, for his litany is addressed to Indra and Varuṇa; that of the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin⁴ to Indra and Brhaspati, for his litany is addressed to Indra and Brhaspati; that of the Achāvāka⁵ to Indra and Viṣṇu, for his litany is connected with Indra and Viṣṇu. The first and last contain (the words) 'be drunk', for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk'. They make up three; these worlds are three; verily thus they obtain these worlds. They are Triṣṭubh verses; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus they place might and strength in the sacrificer. They say the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

ADHYĀYA XVII

xvii. 1. The¹ Ṣoḍaṇin is a thunderbolt composed of the Anuṣṭubh; in that they undertake the Ṣoḍaṇin, they smite away the evil of the sacrificer with the thunderbolt composed of the Anuṣṭubh. It refers to the 'bay steeds'; the bay is breath, for it draws; therefore it refers to the 'bay steeds'. The Ṣoḍaṇin is he yonder that gives heat; verily thus they delight him. There is a sixteenth Stotra, a sixteenth Çastra; therefore is it called the Ṣoḍaṇin. In that they undertake the Ṣoḍaṇin, and all this (universe) is of sixteen parts, verily (it serves) to obtain all this. Moreover, the Ṣoḍaṇin is Indra; therefore it refers to the 'bay steeds', for Indra's bay steeds are praised. 'O Indra rejoice, bring forward, come hither, O hero, of the bay steeds' these (verses)² have twenty-five syllables and one by one have nine syllables added. The self is twenty-fivefold, what is added is offspring and cattle; verily thus he adds to himself in offspring, cattle, servants, and proper food. These make up thirty-four; whatever is of thirty-four syllables, that metre is the Svarāj; verily thereby he obtains self rule. Repeated together they make up five Anuṣṭubh verses and a ten-syllable quarter verse is left over, two syllables for each verse. 'Of such a one as thou, O thou of much light', this Gāyatrī verse³ he recites next, for the completion of these syllables; moreover along with it they make up a strophe of six Anuṣṭubh verses; therefore he recites it, for completion. To match it some make an antistrophe; but as to this they say⁴ 'The Ṣoḍaḥin is he yonder that gives heat; there is none other to be a counterpart of him; if he were to make a counterpart and one were to say of him, "The rival who is hateful will reject him", so would it be. Therefore he should not trouble about a counterpart.'

xvii. 2. Thereafter he transposes the metres which follow; the metres are the breaths; verily thus in the body he interweaves the breaths, to prevent separation; therefore these breaths, though breathing in different directions, do not blow out.¹ Moreover the Ṣoḍaḥin is connected with the Anuṣṭubh; verily thus he brings all the metres into relation with the Anuṣṭubh. He transposes Gāyatrī and Pañkti verses;² the Pañkti is the metre of the sacrificer; the Gāyatrī is brilliance and splendour; verily thus he places brilliance and splendour in the sacrificer. He transposes Uṣṇih and Brhatī verses;³ the Uṣṇih is the metre of the sacrificer; the Brhatī is cattle; verily thus he confers cattle as connected with the Brhatī upon the sacrificer. He transposes a verse of two Padas containing twenty syllables and a Triṣṭubh;⁴ the verse of two Padas

² These verses are given in full in ÇÇS. ix. 5. 2; AV. ii. 5. 1; SV. ii. 302-304; AÇS. vi. 3. 1. hariha of ÇÇS. l. c. and of SV. is absurd. AÇS. has harī iha as trisyllabic (no doubt) and this is presumably the source of hariha. AV. has haribhyām. The verses consist of 5 pentads and after each of the first three syllables are added (here gra vaha, hariha).

³ RV. viii. 46. 1.

⁴ The quotation is not finished by iti; cf. KB. xii. 3, n. 2.

¹ As in KB. vii. 9 all the MSS. save M and the Ānand. ed. read vāñco 'munirvāñcy.

² RV. i. 16. 1-3 and i. 84. 10-12. The viḥaraṇa consists in placing a Pada of the Pañkti after each of the Padas of the Gāyatrī and pausing after the first two, saying om after the second two, pausing after the third pair and saying om after the two remaining Padas of the Pañkti, each by itself.

³ RV. viii. 98. 1-3 and iii. 45. 1-3. The Padas are put together by two's with alternate pause and om; the two eight-syllable feet are made into one followed by a pause, then the two sets of four syllables over are united and combined with the last Brhatī foot into a single verse followed by om.

⁴ RV. vii. 34. 4 and vi. 47. 8. The combination is effected by dividing the Dvipadā into four sets of five syllables.

is the metre of the sacrificer; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he confers might and strength upon the sacrificer. He transposes verses of two Padas containing sixteen syllables and Jagatī verses;⁵ verses of two Padas are the metre of the sacrificer; the Jagatī is cattle; verily thus he confers cattle as connected with the Jagatī on the sacrificer. He recites Gāyatrī verses; Gāyatrī verses are breath; verily thus he places breath in himself. He recites a verse of seven Padas; the metres are seven; verily (it serves) to obtain all the metres; moreover, with it the Gāyatrī verses make up four Anuṣṭubh verses;⁶ therefore he recites it, for completion.

xvii. 3. Then he recites Anuṣṭubhs¹ of normal type; the Ṣoḍaḍin is connected with the Anuṣṭubh; thus he causes it to prosper by its own symbol. They make up eight; by these (verses) the gods attained all attainments; verily thus also with these the sacrificer attains all attainments. With the last verse thrice repeated they make up ten; the Virāj consists of tens; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (they serve) to obtain the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. He concludes with 'When up to the place of the bright one'; yonder is the place of the bright one where he yonder gives heat; verily thus he places the sacrificer there. Three times² he utters the call for the Ṣoḍaḍin, in the strophe, for the Nivid, for the concluding verse; the Ṣoḍaḍin is threefold; verily thus with a threefold thunderbolt he smites the evil of the sacrificer. These are the fame, the sounds, the strengths of the litanies. Famous, resounding, strong, renowned does he become who knows thus the strengths of the litanies. They recited together make up forty Anuṣṭubhs; the Pañkti has forty syllables; the Pañkti is a support; verily thus in all creatures he establishes the sacrificer.

xvii. 4. Some say 'He should use an interpolated Triṣṭubh as offering verse'.¹ 'For indeed the courser.—Thou hast drunk of the ancient draughts, O lord of the bays.—For the courser is a courser.—Now let this pressing be thine only.—The courser is a bearer.—Drink the Soma rich in honey, O Indra.—For the courser is active.—Do thou ever, O strong one, pour into thy belly.' But the rule is not to interpolate. The offering verses are duly prepared dishes for the gods; verily thus with a duly verses. These are nitya as offered to the artificial Anuṣṭubhs above arrived at. The Nivid comes in before RV. viii. 69. 15.

⁵ The Dvipadās are given in ÇÇS. ix. 6. 6; and RV. x. 96. 1-3. The former are divided into four sets of four syllables.

⁶ RV. i. 84. 13-15 with RV. x. 133. 1 make up Anuṣṭubhs by recital by two's and two's with pause and om.

² This is repeated in ÇÇS. ix. 6. 17. The variation in construction is noteworthy.

xvii. 4. ¹ RV. x. 96. 13. ÇÇS. ix. 6. 18 ignores the option, for which cf. AB. iv. 4.

prepared dish for the gods he tenders the oblation to the gods. He should not undertake it at night;² the Ṣoḍaḥin is Indra; there is nothing above Indra; much is accomplished at night, the rounds as it were, and the Āḥvina³ (Çastra); therefore he should undertake it on the fourth⁴ day; that is the abode of the Ṣoḍaḥin; that day concludes with the Ṣoḍaḥin as its end. But they say 'Let him undertake it'; the Ṣoḍaḥin is the day and night complete; in that they undertake the Ṣoḍaḥin it is to make day and night complete.

The Atirātra.

xvii. 5. In¹ that they undertake the Atirātra, (it is because) the year is as great as day and night; in that they undertake the Atirātra, (it serves) to obtain the year. Moreover, all this (universe) is twofold, unguent and brilliance; both of these are obtained by day and night. In that they undertake the Atirātra, (it is) for the obtaining of unguent and brilliance.

xvii. 6. They recite strophes and antistrophes¹ in Gāyatrī; the Gāyatrī is light; night is the evil, the darkness; thus thereby they smite away the evil, the darkness. They recite with repetitions, for so do the Sāman chanters sing; (they say) 'According as it is sung, is it recited.' Then they say 'Why after the final Pratihāra do they call and link the Çastra with the Sāman?'

xvii. 7. The sacrifice is a man; of him the oblation holders are the head, the Āhavanīya the face, the Sadas the stomach, the litanies the food, the Mārjālīya and the Āgnīdhriya the arms, the altars within the Sadas the internal divinities; the Gārhapatya and (the fire) for cooking the fast milk the support. Again, of him the Brahman priest is the mind, the Udgātṛ the expiration, the Prastotṛ the inspiration, the Pratihartṛ the cross-breathing, the Hotṛ the speech, the Adhvaryu the eye, the Sadasya

² The argument is clearly one as to the place of the Ṣoḍaḥin if used in connexion with an Atirātra as it is assumed to be used in this school. Is it to be said at night after the threefold carousal of the Atirātra begins, or is it to be said on the morning of the day after the carousal? The answer first suggested is the latter view. bahurātryām may be a cpd. as taken by the edd., but this is unnecessary.

Cited in Nirukta i. 9 as equivalent to āḥvinam ca paryūyāḥ ca, where the reading as in M has only one tvad. But this is very strange, tvad ata or tvat tata may be read. The Āḥvina Çastra is to be recited up to sun-

xvii. 6. ¹ The explanation follows in KB. xvii. 7. The point is not that the correspondence of Çastra and Stotra is modified by the Çastra beginning after the Pratihāra of the Sāman and not after the Nidhana, but merely, it seems, to explain the parallelism.

generation,¹ the sacrificer the body, the Hotrāṇsins the limbs. In that the Adhvaryu starts the Stotra, verily thus he unites the eye with the breaths; moreover, verily thus he connects inspiration with the mind. In that the Prastotr addresses the Brahman with 'O Brahman, shall we begin the praise, O Praçāstr?' (it is because they think), 'Mind is the leader of these breaths; impelled by mind let us sing the Stoma'; moreover, verily thus he connects inspiration with the mind. In that the Brahman approves the Stotra, verily thus he unites the mind with the breaths; moreover, verily thus he connects inspiration with the mind. In that the Prastotr begins the praise, verily thus he places inspiration in expiration. In that the Udgātr sings, verily thus he places expiration in cross-breathing. In that the Pratihatr utters his part, verily thus he places cross-breathing in expiration. So all these deities find support in expiration. In that the Hotr connects the Çastra with the Sāman, and the Hotr is speech, verily thus he unites speech with the breaths; moreover, verily thus he connects inspiration with mind. In that the Hotrāṇsins make a continuity with the Sāman, verily thus they connect the limbs with the breaths. In that the sacrificer sings in accompaniment to the Stotra, and the singers are the breaths, verily thus he places the breaths in himself. Therefore the sun should not set on him outside the altar place,² nor should it rise on him, nor should he make preparations, nor utter the invitation, nor say the vaṣaṭ, nor should (the sun) heat (him) when in what is not an altar,³ (thinking) 'Let me not sever the body from the breaths.'

xvii. 8. In that in the first rounds they repeat¹ in the first Padas, verily thus from the first night they smite away the Asuras; in that in the middle rounds they repeat in the middle Padas, verily thus from the middle night they smite away the Asuras; in that in the last rounds they repeat in the last Padas, verily thus from the last night they smite away the Asuras. Just as one can by separate repetition² and by repeating severally smite away evil again and again, so with these strophes and antistrophes from day and night they smite away the Asuras.

xvii. 9. They recite the beginnings of the litanies in Gāyatrī verses; the Gāyatri is brilliance and splendour; verily thereby they place brilliance

¹ The Ānand. ed. has prajāpatiḥ for prajātiḥ, but merely, it is clear, by an error.

² The whole emphasis is placed on bahirvedī.

³ Cf. Vait. xii. 3 where pratapet is normal as against pratapeta; perhaps heating implements is meant.

xvii. 8. ¹ The reference is to the repetition of the first Padas in the Stotras and the Çastras. The use of ninartayanti in this sense points to the union of song and recitation and dancing.

² abhyāgāram is doubtful: BR. gave it as 'besprechen', B. as 'in the house'; this is possible, but MW.'s rendering is followed: if abhyāgāram is taken as by B. then there may be a reference to a magic dance as a popular rite.

and splendour in the sacrificer. Having recited Gāyatrī verses, they recite Jagatī verses; between the Gāyatrī and Jagatī verses they insert the calls; verily thus they make the metres of varied strength. Having recited Jagatī verses, they conclude with Trīṣṭubh verses. The Trīṣṭubh is might and strength, the Jagatī cattle; verily thus in might and strength at the end and in cattle they find support. The offering verses¹ are in Trīṣṭubh, and contain (the words) 'Soma juice', 'be drunk', and 'drink' as their characteristics and are perfect; that is the symbol of night. They should keep awake through the night; keeping awake is the light; the night is the dark, the evil; thereby by the light they cross the dark, the evil. So long as there is no singing or reciting, so long are the Rakṣases able to drink after;² therefore 'Do ye lighten up the kindled Āhavanīya, the Āgnidhriya, the Gārhapatya and the altars' they should say aloud; they should lighten up, it should be light as it were, they should lie snoring; them the evil does not attack (perceiving) 'They are in motion';³ they smite away the evil.

ADHYĀYA XVIII

xviii. 1. The¹ Āṇvina (Çastra) is (a sacrifice) wherein there is a redundancy of Soma; wherein in the sacrifice there is a redundancy, thereby the rival of the sacrificer is energetic against him. In that afterwards he sacrifices to the Āṇvins, and the Āṇvins are the physicians of the gods, verily thus he makes medicine. Now when Savitr gave Sūryā to Soma, the king, he made over to his daughter whether she was Prajāpati's² (or his own) on

³ M has clearly tān vi tat ceṣṭanti nvai (misread by Lindner), K. has the same without vi, and BL. nearly the same. The reading must certainly be ceṣṭanti. The Ānand. ed. has tām ceṣṭim tanvā. It, however, has correctly vijvalayateṭi bhāṣeran for Lindner's vijvalayate 'tibhāṣeran. samindhvam is possible, not necessary.

xviii. 1. ¹ For the Āṇvina Çastra see AB. iv. 7-11. For the ritual see ÇS. ix. 20.

² This seems the reasonable sense of the interpolation of these words. Prajāpati figures as the giver and Savitr as the father of the girl in AB. iv. 7, and Prajāpatis is, of course, an easy correction; the genitive cannot well be meant as a dative (Nir. xii. 8), as this is contrary to the usual version. The Ānand. ed. has purastāt, erroneously.

marriage this thousand (of verses) that was in the possession of these deities; they said 'Let us run a race for this thousand'; they ran the race; then the Āṣvins were victorious by means of the ass. Therefore are many gods celebrated, and yet it is called the Āṣvina. Hence, moreover, the ass does not run with his full speed, considering himself worn out (because) 'I have done my running.'³ A thousand should he recite, for a thousand they too won.

xviii. 2. They say 'Seeing that the Prṣṭhas depend on the Br̥hatī, then why does he begin with a Trīṣṭubh?' Thrice repeated it makes three Br̥hatī verses and one Gāyatrī. The three Br̥hatī verses are the symbol of union, the Gāyatrī the symbol of the first. In that he produces the Br̥hatī, (it is because) it is with regard to the Br̥hatī that the vow is produced.¹ In that of the strophes in Br̥hatī he recites the first Pragātha, repeating it and making it into Kakubh form, (it is because) the Sāman chanters sing with repetitions; verily thus the symbol of this is produced. He recites the service for Agni; thus he obtains this world. He recites that for Uṣas; thus he obtains the world of the atmosphere. He recites that for the Āṣvins; thus he obtains yonder world. He recites the service for Sūrya; there is a fourth world of the gods, the waters; verily thereby he obtains it. He recites a Pragātha; the Pragātha is cattle; verily (it serves) to obtain cattle. Moreover the Pragātha in Br̥hatī is expiration and inspiration; verily thus he places expiration and inspiration in himself; also (it serves) to secure the presence of Indra in the Çastra. He recites (a hymn) to sky and earth; sky and earth are supports; verily (it serves) for support. He recites (a verse) of two Padas; (the verse) of two Padas is a metre in which to find support; verily (it serves) for support. He concludes with (a verse) to Br̥haspati; Br̥haspati is the holy power; verily thus in the holy power at the end he finds support. Now this is the completion.

xviii. 3. Three¹ hundred Gāyatrī verses are two hundred Br̥hatī verses;

³ This seems the sense of M's reading sr̥tam; the other MSS. and the comm. have çritam, while the Ānand. ed. has çritam nayeti.

xviii. 3. ¹ The Āṣvina Çastra according to Çāṅkh. is composed as follows, as a vīkṛti of the Prātaranuvāka: it commences with RV. vi. 15.13-15 (to Agni) in place of x. 30. 12; of the Gāyatrī verses 19 are omitted, of the Anuṣṭubh two, of the Trīṣṭubh 113; the hymns by Kakṣivānt (i. 116-118) and Agastya (i. 180, 181, 183, 184) stand, but after i. 116 is placed i. 120. 1-9; after i. 184 come 103 verses of the Suparṇa or in place another 103 to the Āṣvins (given by Ānartīya); then in the Prātaranuvāka, RV. x. 150. 1-3 is omitted; all of i. 47. 1-8 is said (not only 1, 3, 5); 11 verses of the Uṣṇih section disappear and 11 of the Agni section in Jagati; sunrise is to take place at the last Paṅkti Pada, and then the Sūrya hymns begin, viz. i. 50. 1-9; i. 115; x. 37; the Pragātha, vii. 32. 26, 27; i. 22. 13-15; a Dvipadā

seventy Anuṣṭubh and seventy Pañkti verses are one hundred and forty Bṛhatī verses; deducting a hundred Gāyatrī from three hundred Triṣṭubh verses there are three hundred Bṛhatī verses; the hundred Gāyatrī verses and a hundred Jagatī verses are two hundred Bṛhatī verses; fifty Triṣṭubh and fifty Uṣṇih verses make up a hundred Bṛhatī verses; then there are fifty-seven Bṛhatī verses actually found; the fifty-first and fifty-second Triṣṭubh verses and (the verse) of two Padas are three Bṛhatī verses; thus a thousand Bṛhatīs are made up from a thousand of varied metres. 'He should not recite over a thousand, nor less than a thousand' is the rule;² the expansion of the Āçvina is however conspicuous. This is a service for Agni; verily he should not fall away from the service for Agni; if he should pass over the service for Agni before the due time, he should apply there whatever in the Āçvina is addressed to two gods in the Ṛcs; in the service for Sūrya (he should use) (the verses) for Soma, the purifying, according to metre, Gāyatrī in Gāyatrī, Triṣṭubh in Triṣṭubh, Jagatī in Jagatī; all that is connected with Sūrya³ in the place of (the service) for Sūrya; all Pragāthas to Indra in the place of the Pragātha; all to sky and earth in the place of (the hymn) to sky and earth; all (verses) of two Padas in the place of (the verse) of two Padas; all addressed to Bṛhaspati before the final verse. That is whatever of the Ṛcs is not set forth.⁴

xviii. 4. The Āçvina is like (a wagon) with wheels; the two Ālambanas¹ are the wheels, the aimless verses the axle, (the verse²) 'Hither your chariot, O Açvins, with the speed of the falcon' the seat; the four Agastya hymns the yokes. This is the chariot of the gods. With this chariot of the gods he attains in safety the world of heaven. (The Çastra) should include the Suparṇa; the Suparṇa is a bird; like it becoming a winged one, a bird, so he attains in safety the world of heaven. Twice he utters the call for the Āçvina, for the introduction and for the concluding verse; that is as when one, not being covered, makes a covering by an obstruction.³ Now comes the question of the conclusion. Whenever the sun creeps over on to the front (of the oblation holder), whenever the Hotṛ himself can discern it, (12+8); as finale ii. 23. 15 (to Bṛhaspati). The invitatory verse is given in ÇÇS. ix. 20. 31.

² It is clear that the text encourages the use of extra verses which it goes on to enumerate. The last verse being addressed to Bṛhaspati explains the nature of the insertion allowed before it. The comm. takes pro as a paramata, and etaḍ vai as svamata.

³ sūryanyaṅgam of M is clearly to be read, against sauryaṁ nyaṅgam of the edd.

⁴ The sense of this clause is doubtful; yāt seems needed before kimcit.

¹ The sense of ālambana is clearly some part of the Āçvina Çastra, viz. the two supporting parts. For akūḍhryaṅc see KB. viii. 5, n. 6.

² RV. i. 118. 1. For Suparṇa cf. Oldenberg, GGA. 1907, p. 229, n. 6; AB. viii. 10. n. 5.

whenever its ruddiness comes on,⁴ whenever all its rays move out towards him, that is the time for the conclusion; for at this time he is freed from evil, severed from evil. He smites away evil, he is severed from evil, who concludes at this time. If there is rain, that is the form of him by which he supports offspring; this breath in the self is one with it; 'It is not concealed⁵ from me', xviii. 5. so regarding it, he should conclude. He should offer a libation to the shining one, when the sun cannot be discerned, he who is unsuited¹; he becomes then revealed to them. With two (verses) should he sacrifice, for by reason of two it is called the Āçvina. Having recited the Gāyatrī without breathing in, he takes in breath at the half verse of the Virāj; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; verily thus he finds support in the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. With the second half verse of the Virāj he says the vaṣaṭ call; verily thus he places the sacrificer in the world of heaven. 'He should use the Virāj only as offering verse', Kauṣītaki used to say; the Virāj has thirty-three syllables; the gods are thirty-three; the gods he makes to share the syllables. 'O Āçvins, ye of keen insight, with Vāyu', is, however,² the rule, namely a Triṣṭubh to the Āçvins, containing (the words) 'Kept over night', for the Somas are kept over night. Moreover, the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus he places might and strength in the sacrificer. He says the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. When the Sāman chanters have finished, he offers the two libations of the offering for the choosing (of priests) (thinking) 'Speech and mind being delighted shall support³ the great Çastra.'

xviii. 6. They¹ proceed with the offering to the yoker of bays; verily thus they delight the two bays; therein the gods with their horses are delighted. Having recited a Triṣṭubh as invitatory verse, he uses a Jagatī as offering verse; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; the Jagatī is cattle; verily thus in might and strength at the end and in cattle he ⁴ āpīyāt is odd and apīyāt (comm.) seems natural.

⁵ The identity of the breath and the sun is clearly indicated. The Ānand. ed. has atiloḥito mad which is clearly an error due to loḥitam above. It has also yad abhram, and, with M, pratyuṭperan. M runs on the sentence, as is essential.

¹ anupayuktāḥ can hardly apply to the sun, but is rather used to denote one whom the sun does not oblige by his presence.

² Kauṣītaki's rule is here disregarded in favour of a different rule. ÇÇS. ix. 20. 32 gives the rule as a compound of RV. i. 46. 15 and vii. 68. 2. The rule here is to use RV. iii. 58. 7.

xviii. 6. ¹ For the Hāriyojana see ÇÇS. viii. 8. The verses are RV. iii. 53. 2; i. 82. 6.

finds support. The offering verse contains (the words) 'be drunk', for the third pressing is connected with 'be drunk'. He says the second vaṣaṭ for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. He should take the most of the grains; the grains are cattle; verily thus he confers a multitude of cattle upon himself. In that they mutter the Rc, in that they offer the libation, verily thus they produce a benediction, for the healing of the sacrifice, and for the curing of the sacrificer. They cast them down on the ash border of the Āhavanīya; the Āhavanīya is the birthplace² of cattle; verily thus he places them in a secure fold.

The Çākālas.

xviii. 7. Then¹ they offer the Çākālas. Just as a snake is rid of its old skin, or the stem from reed grass, so are they set free from all evil.

The Conclusion of the Jyotiṣṭoma.

xviii. 8. Then¹ turning to the left, they approach the Somas in the waters; they place them here within the altar, for that is the abode of the Soma; they distribute the branches of Darbha grass; when the waters and the plants come together, then the Soma is complete. With a verse to *Viṣṇu*² they pour them down; Viṣṇu is the sacrifice; verily thus they establish them at the end in the sacrifice. Then they stroke the vital organs; verily thus they make whole whatever here has been ill-treated or injured of the vital organs, they cure it. They make enclosures for the food; verily thus the food of the gods they sever from the food of man.

The Final Bath.

xviii. 9. The¹ final bath (is described). Him who yonder gives heat they seek by these pressings to obtain; the rising by the morning pressing, (the sun) in the middle (of his course) by the midday pressing, (the sun) as he sets by the third pressing. He, having entered the waters, becomes Varuṇa; therefore he offers to Varuṇa a cake on one potsherd; prosperity is solitary; Varuṇa is prosperity; verily thus he finds support at the end in prosperity. They depart between the pit and the mound, for that is the proper path of the sacrifice, named Āpnāna. That is declared in a R̥c,² 'Who here hath proclaimed the Āpnāna passage?' Having approached the sacrifice by this passage, they obtained all desires. Verily thus also the sacrificer by this passage having approached the sacrifice obtains all desires.

xviii. 10. Turning¹ to the region in which are the waters, they proceed (with the rite); it is the eastern quarter in which the deities are. He offers four fore-offerings, omitting that for the strew;² that for the strew he omits, for the strew is not strewn here. The butter portions contain a reference to the slaying of Vṛtra, for the slaying of evil; moreover, thus he does not depart from the model of the full moon sacrifice. Some make them contain (the words)³ 'in the waters', but the rule is that they should refer to the slaying of Vṛtra. In that he sacrifices to Varuṇa in the waters, verily thus he delights him in his own abode. In that he sacrifices to Agni and Varuṇa, therein Agni becomes a sharer in all the oblations. He offers two after-offerings, omitting that for the strew; he leaves out that for the strew, (thinking) 'The strew is offspring; let me not cast offspring into the waters.' There are a hundred and one fore-offerings and after-offerings; man has a hundred (years of) life, has a hundred joints, has a hundred strengths, has a hundred powers; the hundred and first is the body. This is the way of the Aṅgirasas; he sets out by this way, he obtains identity of world and union with the Aṅgirasas.⁴ The six or eight vaṣaṭ calls are the way of the Ādityas; he sets out by this way, he obtains identity of world and union with the Ādityas.

xviii. 11. The Anūbandhyā¹ (is explained). The offering of the cow is the fourth pressing; therefore is it immovable, for it is the fourth of the pressings. It is offered to Mitra and Varuṇa, for (the victim) for Agni and Soma has been offered before; therefore is it for Mitra and Varuṇa, to secure the equipoise of the sacrifice. Moreover, in that he sacrifices to Varuṇa in the waters, therein is Mitra neglected;² therefore is it for Mitra and Varuṇa, to secure Mitra also.

² RV. x. 114. 7 c.

² ṛtebarhiṣkūn and ṛtebarhiṣkau must, of course, be read; so xviii. 12 arākṣohatam; xix. 5 tre-dhāvihito; xv. 1; xvi. 1; xxix. 2; and xxx. 1 atrakālo (Caland, VOJ. xxiii. 63) is certain.

xviii. 11. ¹ For the Anūbandhyā offering see ÇÇS. viii. 12. 5-14; Caland and Henry, L'Agniṣṭoma, pp. 406-8.

xviii. 12. If the victim has been brought up but before being prepared for sacrifice dies, he should cause it to be given to the priests; then they should offer another, of the same form and of the same deity.¹ When the Āprīs have been said over it and the fire carried round it, they should lead it northwards and should dispose of it. In the manner of it they should take another. Having forced out their omenta separately and cooked them separately, they should offer them, cutting off portions separately, with one vaṣaṭ call. Having cooked separately the cakes for the victims, and having made portions separately, they should offer them with one vaṣaṭ call. Having cooked separately the oblations and having made portions separately, they should offer them with one vaṣaṭ call. So with the thirds of the intestines, so with the hind portions. 'Even if, however, but one of the Āprīs has been said, with it should they proceed' is the rule.² The Āprīs are the breaths; verily thus he places the breaths in it. Now (they ask) 'If (the victim) is eight-footed, how shall it be?' Having cooked on the slaughtering fire from the skin of the embryo (a portion) shaped like the omentum and from chaff of the pounded grains an embryo itself, they should offer on the slaughterer's fire to the vaṣaṭ calls of the other.³ The Rakṣases go to the sacrifice when such a thing occurs; them thereby he smites away; that is not smitten by Rakṣases. So now if that which is to be offered is an animal, but if it is a milk mess (it is because) the milk mess is Mitra and Varuṇa's own oblation, for it is the rule that to Mitra and Varuṇa the milk mess is offered.

xviii. 13. If the victim is a cow, (it is because) Mitra and Varuṇa are praised with the cow; therefore the victim is a cow. The offering verse¹ for the omentum is 'Ye two are clothed in garments of fatness'; 'fatness' is the symbol of the fat of the omentum. That² of the cake is 'What is most abundant, not to be pierced, O ye rich in dew'; 'most abundant', (he says), for the cake is abundant as it were. 'Do ye stretch forth your arms for life for us' is that³ of the oblation; 'arms' is the symbol of the members of the oblation.

xviii. 14. He¹ concludes facing north, for north is the world of the living. Having concluded facing north, he offers a full libation with a verse to Viṣṇu; Viṣṇu is the sacrifice; verily thus he grasps the sacrifice. The cake is offered on five potsherds, for the Pañkti has five Padas; the sacrifice is fivefold; verily (it serves) to obtain the sacrifice. But, if it is offered on eight potsherds, verily this is the model of the full moon sacrifice; the full moon sacrifice is a support; verily (it serves) for support. In that the invitatory and offering verses are Padapañkti verses, this is obviously the symbol of the re-establishment (of the fires). So also are they interwoven.² When this has been completed, the sacrificer offers the Agnihotra, for on the completion of the establishment of the fires the Agnihotra is offered; therefore, when this is completed, the sacrificer should offer the Agnihotra, (so they say).

ADHYĀYA XIX

The Caturviṅṣa Day.

xix. 1. They¹ being about to consecrate themselves gather together the fires; verily thus they place might and strength in one place in themselves. Then they perform the gathering together sacrifice; they offer a cake on eight potsherds to Agni of the holy power, to Agni of the lordly power one on eleven potsherds, to Agni, supporter of the lordly power, one on twelve potsherds. Verily thus the sacrificers mount on the holy power and the lordly power; verily thus with them in safety they pass over² the year. Of many who are about to pile (the fire) this is the gathering together (offering), connected with the bringing together of the firepan;³ for one who is about to consecrate himself it is the same.

xix. 2. Then¹ they sacrifice with a victim for Prajāpati, (thinking) 'Instigated by Prajāpati,² in safety let us attain this year.' Some make the cake

² The verses are RV. iv. 10. 1-4; 1 and 3 are used as invitatory and offering verses for the oblation, 2 and 4 for the Svīṣṭakṛt; hence they are interwoven. See ÇÇS. viii. 18. 4; ii. 5. 18, being taken from the Purnarādheya.

² caranti is only an obvious correction, though read in the Ānand. ed.

³ For ukhā sambharanāyā, ukhāsam^o is to be read, though both edd. separate. The two words probably go together and the new sentence begins at sā. The whole clause after taranti is omitted by M, which explains perhaps its continuing with ta etena.

xix. 2. ¹ For the ritual see ÇÇS. ix. 23. ² The Ānand. ed. and M have prajāpatih prasūtā, which error—a transposition of the h—points to the use by Ānand. of a MS. with affinities with M though not of its tradition.

for it for Vāyu (saying), 'Vāyu is clearly the symbol of Prajāpati.' Others again make it for Agni as desire; Agni as desire is lord of the gods; verily (it serves) to delight all the gods. Some make the cake for the victim for Vaiṣvānara; Vaiṣvānara is he yonder that gives heat; verily thus they delight him. They make ready beforehand the Soma pressings³ for the consecration. 'They should consecrate themselves on one day after the new moon of Taiṣa or of Māgha,' they say; both of these views are current, but that as to Taiṣa is the more current⁴ as it were. They obtain this thirteenth additional month; the year is as great as this thirteenth month; in it verily the whole year is obtained.

xix. 3. On the new moon of Māgha he rests, being about to turn northwards; these also rest, being about to sacrifice with the introductory Atirātra; thus for the first time they obtain him; on him they lay hold with the Caturviṅṣa; that is why the laying hold rite has its name. He goes north for six months; him they follow with six-day periods in forward arrangement. Having gone north for six months he stands still, being about to turn southwards; these also rest, being about to sacrifice with the Viṣuvant day; thus for the second time they obtain him. He goes south for six months; him they follow with six-month periods in reverse order. Having gone south for six months he stands still, being about to turn north; these also rest, being about to sacrifice with the Mahāvratā day; thus for the third time they obtain him. In that they obtain him thrice, and the year is in three ways arranged, verily (it serves) to obtain the year. With regard to this this sacrificial verse is sung,

Ordaining the days and nights,
Like a cunning¹ spider,
For six months south constantly,²
For six north the sun goeth.

For six months he goes north, six south. They should not consecrate themselves at this time; the corn has not arrived, the days are short; shivering they come out from the final bath. Therefore they should not consecrate themselves at this time. They should consecrate themselves one day after the new moon of Caitra; the corn has come, the days are long, not shivering do they come out from the final bath. Therefore that is the rule.

has been completed, they proceed with the victim for Tvaṣṭr; that for Tvaṣṭr is a pouring of seed; in the hut of the wife they proceed; in wives is seed poured. Inaudibly they proceed; (the victim) for Tvaṣṭr is a pouring of seed; inaudibly is seed poured. After surrounding it with fire they let it go; they do not dispose of it, (thinking) ' (The victim) for Tvaṣṭr is a pouring of seed; let us not dispose of seed poured before the time.' They say 'Seeing that he invites these two deities, Tvaṣṭr and the lord of the forest, in what place are these two sacrificed to by him?' In the fore-offerings he sacrifices to these two deities; then are these two sacrificed to by him.

xix. 7. Following¹ on the cake for the victim in the Anūbandhyā rite, they offer the oblations to the minor deities. The metres of him who offers the Soma sacrifice become exhausted; the minor deities are the metres; in that they offer oblations to the minor deities, thus (his metres) become unexhausted and fresh. The metres of him who offers the Soma sacrifice lose their sap; the minor deities are the metres; in that they offer oblations to the minor deities, verily (it serves) to confer sap on the metres. Now these are deities (devī) and Prajāpati is Ka; therefore are they minor deities (devikā). There are five oblations; the Pañkti has five Padas; the sacrifice is fivefold; verily (it serves) to obtain the sacrifice. Here some offer oblations to the female deities, (thinking) 'The fire piling is all; by all all let us obtain.' There are ten oblations; the Virāj consists of sets of ten; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (verily it serves) to obtain the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. Here some perform the offerings to appease the quarters, (thinking) 'The fire piling is all; by all all let us obtain.' There are six oblations; the year has six seasons; verily (it serves) to obtain the year. When the concluding rite has been completed, he should sacrifice with a milk mess to Mitra and Varuṇa; the explanation of this has been given. 'No piler of the fire should indulge in sexual union without having offered this sacrifice,' (they say).

xix. 8. The Caturviṅṣa¹ is the beginning of the year; therefore it is an Agniṣṭoma, for the Agniṣṭoma is the beginning of the sacrifices; verily thus at the beginning they delight the year. Some make it an Ukthya, for the equipoise of the sacrifice. It has the Caturviṅṣa Stoma; the half months of the year are twenty-four; verily (it serves) to obtain the year. There are in it three hundred and sixty Stotriyās;² three hundred and sixty are the days of the year; verily (they serve) to obtain the year.

xix. 8. ¹ For the ritual see ÇṢ. xi. 2.

² Each of the fifteen triplets is made into twenty-four according to the Caturviṅṣa Stoma rule: hence $15 \times 24 = 360$.

The Prṣṭha (Stotra) in it is the Br̥hat (Sāman); this is the second of the days; the Br̥hat is the second of the Prṣṭhas; therefore is its Prṣṭha the Br̥hat. Again the Mahāvratā is fixed there where they approach the Caturvinṣa; the Br̥hat is in its place the Prṣṭha of the Mahāvratā; therefore (they say) 'Let the Br̥hat be the Prṣṭha of this (day).' It has the word 'together'; the year is uttered around about. There are in its verses the following symbols. 'The Hotṛ is born, the wise' is the Ājya³ of eight verses in Gāyatrī metre; the Stōma is in Gāyatrī metre; that Častra is perfect which accords with the Stoma. The Praūga is of Madhuchandas; it is perfect; in its model are other Praūgas shaped, (thinking) 'May I have accomplished a rite successful from the beginning.' 'Thee like a car for aid' is the strophe⁴ of the Marutvatīya; 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' is the antistrophe.⁵ This is the regular one-day form; the explanation of it has been given.

xix. 9. 'With what array, of one age, of one home?' is the Marutvatīya.¹ The ninth (verse) is 'Thou canst not be overthrown, O generous one, no one'; with it he concludes, having recited in front of it the later verses, for they are verses to the Maruts, and this is connected (with Indra) only. There is in this (Častra) 'The Maruts are joined together' containing² (the word) 'together'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'That was the highest in the worlds' is the Niṣkevalya,³ of Br̥haddiva; here the Hotṛ pours seed with the Br̥haddiva, (thinking) 'That he propagates⁴ yonder with the Mahāvratā day.' After each year the pouring of seed is fruitful. In this there is 'Together they sing to thee, brought forward at the carouses,' containing⁵ (the word) 'together'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'That of Savitṛ we choose' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitṛ' are the normal strophe⁶ and antistrophe⁷ of the Vaiṣvadeva; the explanation of these two has been given. 'That desirable greatness of Savitṛ, the god' is the Savitṛ (hymn)⁸; it contains⁹ (the word) 'together' in 'Wealth with offspring for us together may he instigate'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'They two, sky and earth, all weal producing' is (the hymn) to sky and earth;¹⁰ it contains¹¹ (the word) 'together' in 'Force to be glorified may ye together instigate for us'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'Why hath the best, why hath the youngest come to us?' is (the hymn¹²) to the R̥bhus; 'Thus in the year to-day did ye discern' (it contains¹³); thus openly he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'The charioteer of the sacrifice, the lord of the folk' is the Vaiçvadeva hymn¹⁴ of Çaryāta; it contains¹⁵ (the word) 'together' in 'Together have Indra, Mitra, and Varuṇa pondered'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'To Vaiçvānara the praise, increasing holy order' is (the hymn) to Vaiçvānara¹⁶; it contains¹⁷ (the word) 'together' in 'With skill, as (a carpenter's) axe a car, he brings together'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'To the strong host, majestic, pious' is (the hymn) to the Maruts¹⁸; it contains¹⁹ (the word) 'together' in 'Together I adorn the words, powerful in the assemblies'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of this day. 'With the sacrifice make to increase the All-knower' is (the hymn) for Jātavedas;²⁰ it contains²¹ (the word) 'together' in 'Together giving riches shine among us'; thus he refers to the year; this is the symbol of the day. These are the Āgnimāruta hymns; these are the hymns of this day. So the day is either an Agniṣṭoma or an Ukthya; 'an Agniṣṭoma is it' is the view of Paiṅgya, 'an Ukthya is it' is the view of Kauṣītaki.

xix. 10. Some Sāman chanters make this day have all the Stomas, (saying) 'By this day they obtained the six-day period, by the six-day period the year and the desires in the year; the whole year is the six-day period.' If they do this he should make the Çastra composed of the six-day period. The Ājya should be the Ājya of the first day; the Praūga the Praūga of the second day; the Marutvatiya the Marutvatiya of the third day; the Niṣkevalya the Niṣkevalya of the fourth day; the Vaiçvadeva the Vaiçvadeva of the fifth day; the Āgnimāruta the Āgnimāruta of the sixth day. Then collecting all the verses of the Pr̥ṣṭha Stotras and making them into Pragāthas he should recite them after the Pragātha, to obtain the six-day period. Just as by this day the Sāman chanters obtain the six-day period xx. 1. The¹ year is a revolving wheel of the gods; that is immortality; in it is the there sixfold proper food, wild animals, domesticated animals, plants, trees, that which goes in the waters and that which swims. Mounted on this the gods move round all the worlds, the world of the gods, the world of the fathers, the world of the living, the world of Agni without water,² the world of Vāyu, established in moral order, the world of Indra, unconquerable, the world of Varuṇa over the sky, the world of death the highest sky, the world of Brahman the welkin, the most real³ of worlds the vault. In that they perform the Abhiplava, verily thus the sacrificers mount on the year; in it they obtain this sixfold proper food, wild animals, domesticated animals, plants, trees, that which goes in the waters and that which swims. Twice they perform the Jyotis (Stoma); thereby they obtain a double portion of proper food, wild animals and domesticated animals. Twice they perform the Go; thereby they obtain a double portion of proper food, plants and trees. Twice they perform the Āyus; thereby they obtain a double portion of proper food, that which goes in the waters and that which swims.

ADHYĀYA XX

¹ M has prāvocāma but this is not essential. The Ānand. ed. has the regular blunder aikṣyāma; it has pratiṣya for pradiṣya, suggestive of prati as glossed by pradiṣya.

² RV. i. 164; x. 120.

xx. 1. ¹ For the Abhiplava Ṣaḍaha of the Sattra see AB. iv. 15-17. The six days have the six forms of Jyotis, Go, Āyus, Go, Āyus, and Jyotis, the first and last being Agniṣtomas, the rest Ukthyas, and the Sāmans being Rathantara and Br̥hat; see ÇÇS. xi. 4. 1-7. AB. has only a few remarks on it in iv. 15; cf. ĀÇS. vii. 5-7.

² The Ānand. ed. has upodakam.

³ saptamam is read in the Ānand. ed. and in a marg. note in O from the bhāṣya. It is clearly wrong.

xx. 2. They perform the Jyotis as the first day; it has the same symbols in its verses as the first day. 'Forward to the god Agni' is the Ājya,¹ containing (the word) 'forward'; what contains 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. The Praūga is by Madhuchandas; when the Rathantara Sāman was created, the Praūga by Madhuchandas was created after it; thus he makes the rite successful with its symbol; that rite is likely to cause success which is successful with its symbol. 'Thee like a car for aid' is the strophe of the Marutvatīya;² 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' is the antistrophe;³ this is the normal one-day form; the explanation of it has been given. 'Indra maketh for the car a way forward' is the Marutvatīya,⁴ containing (the word) 'forward'; what contains forward is a symbol of the first day. 'Come hither, standing on thy chariot seat' is the Niṣkevalya,⁵ containing (the word) 'hither'; what contains 'hither' is a symbol of the first day. 'That of Savitr we choose' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitr' are the normal strophe and antistrophe of the Vaiṣvadeva;⁶ the explanation of these two has been given. 'They yoke their minds, they also yoke their thoughts' is (the hymn) to Savitr,⁷ containing (the word) 'yoke'; what contains 'yoke' is a symbol of the first day. 'Forward sky and earth, increasing holy order, with the sacrifices' is (the hymn) to sky and earth,⁸ containing (the word) 'forward'; what contains 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. 'Here, here in mind is your relationship, O heroes' is (the hymn) to the Ṛbhus,⁹ containing (the word) 'to' in 'Desiring they came to these with wealth'; that is the symbol of the Rathantara. 'How, of what one of the gods, in this service?' is (the hymn) to the All-gods,¹⁰ containing the word 'hither' in 'Which one with aid will come hitherward?'; what contains 'hither' is a symbol of the first day. 'To Vaiṣvānara with broad radiance bards' is (the hymn) to Vaiṣvānara,¹¹ containing (the word) 'forward'; what contains 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. 'Forward pressing, mighty and resounding' is (the hymn) to the Maruts,¹² containing (the word) 'forward'; what contains 'forward' is the symbol of the first day. 'The Hotr goeth forward to the sacrifice with the power of him' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas,¹³ containing (the word) 'forward'; what contains 'forward' is the symbol of the first day. This world they move up to with the first day, Agni the god, the name the supreme¹⁴ essence of the deities; they confer speech upon themselves.

xx. 3. They perform the Go as the second day; the symbols in its verses are those of the second day. 'Thou hast a glory of rule' is the Ājya¹ containing (the word) 'apart' in 'Thou, O active one (vicarṣane), fame'; this is the symbol of this atmosphere; for this atmosphere is wide apart as it were. The Praūga is by Gr̥tsamada;² when the Br̥hat Sāman was created, the Praūga by Gr̥tsamada was created after it; thus he makes the rite successful with its symbol; that rite is likely to cause success which is successful with its symbol. 'Lord of every man' is the strophe³ of the Marutvatiya, containing the word 'apart'; the explanation of this has been given. 'Indra alone is the drinker of Soma' is the antistrophe,⁴ containing (the word) 'apart' in 'Indra, drinker of the pressed juice, of all life'; the explanation of this has been given. 'Rise up, O Brahmanaspati' is addressed to Brahmanaspati,⁵ and contains (the word) 'up'; there is 'up' in 'Rise up'; the second day has 'up'. 'These thee of many a poet' is the Marutvatiya,⁶ containing (the word) 'up'; the explanation of this has been given. 'Thou art mingled with the pressed drink, O Indra' is the Niṣkevalya,⁷ containing (the word) 'up' in 'The Stoma, the prayer, the hymn being recited'; the explanation of this has been given. 'Every man of the god that leadeth' is the strophe⁸ of the Vaiṣvadeva, containing (the word) 'apart'; the explanation of this has been given. 'The god of all, lord of the good' is the antistrophe,⁹ containing (the word) 'apart'; the explanation of this has been given. There are two strophes for the Vaiṣvadevas, two antistrophes; the year has six seasons and is six-fold; sky and earth are two; these supports are two; this body has six members; day and night are two: these, expiration and inspiration, are two; thus they depart not from the completion of the year, nor from the perfection of the body, nor the perfection of the breaths. 'The god Savitr hath appeared, to be praised by us now' is (the hymn) to Savitr,¹⁰ containing (the word) 'up'; the explanation of this has been given. 'They two, sky and earth, all weal producing' is (the hymn) to sky and earth,¹¹ containing (the word) 'apart'; the explanation of this has

The Praūga is in Uṣṇih verses by Viṣvamanas;² when the Rathantara Sāman was created, the Praūga in Uṣṇih by Viṣvamanas was created after it; thus he makes the rite successful with its symbol; that rite is likely to cause success which is successful with its symbol. 'Him for great gain' is the strophe of the Marutvatiya;³ at 'him'⁴ there is a repetition; the third day is the end; having gone to the end he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'Three Soma draughts for Indra' is the antistrophe.⁵ This is the symbol of the third day. 'Let Brahmanaspati move forward', containing (the word) 'forward', is addressed to Brahmanaspati⁶; there is repetition⁷ in 'Forward let the kindly goddess move'; the third day is the end; having gone to the end he repeats as it were; for hence whitherward should he go? There are three strophes of the Marutvatiyas, three antistrophes, three (Pragāthas) for Brahmanaspati;

ADHYĀYA XXI

xxi. 1. The gods, desirous of smiting away death, the evil, and desiring identity of world and union with Brahman, saw this Abhiplava six-day (rite); by this Abhiplava they approach, and having smitten away death, the evil, obtained identity of world and union with Brahman;¹ verily thus also the sacrificers approach by the Abhiplava, and having smitten away death, the evil, obtain identity of world and union with Brahman. Having approached with the first set of three days, they sacrificed on the fourth day with the Go, for going; they performed the Āyus as the fifth day, to secure full life; the Jyotis as the sixth day they put around behind again, to prevent evil following after.

xxi. 2. They perform the Go as the fourth day; the symbols in its verses are those of the fourth day. 'The Hotṛ is born, the wise' is the Ājya,¹ containing (the word) 'born'; that which contains (the word) 'born' is a symbol of the fourth day. The Praūga is by Medhātithi;² as the Bṛhat Sāman was created, the Praūga by Medhātithi was created after it; thus he makes the rite successful with its symbol; that rite is likely to cause success which is successful with its symbol. 'Thou hast been born dread, for impetuous strength' is the Marutvatīya,³ containing (the word) 'born'; that which contains 'born' is a symbol of the fourth day. 'He hath been born dread for strength, possessed of will' is the Niṣkevalya,⁴ containing (the word) 'born'; that which contains (the word) 'born' is a symbol of the fourth day. 'That desirable greatness of the god Savitr' is (the hymn) to Savitr,⁵ containing (the word) 'born' in 'Savitr hath made to be born the hymn of good will'; that which contains (the word) 'born' is a symbol of the fourth day. second day, for they go by it; the Āyus as the third day, for they move by it. The first and last days are Agniṣṭomas, in the middle are four Ukthyas; the Agniṣṭoma is the holy power; the Ukthyas are cattle; verily thus by the holy power having surrounded cattle on both sides they confer them upon themselves. Of these four Ukthyas there are a thousand verses in the Stotras; cattle are connected with a thousand; a thousandfold prosperity he obtains who knows thus. Hence they perform sets of four Abhiplavas, ending with a Prṣṭhya; the Abhiplavas are cattle; the Prṣṭhyas are prosperity; verily thus having encompassed prosperity on both sides with cattle they confer it upon themselves. From the Viṣvajit they perform sets of four Abhiplavas beginning with a Prṣṭhya; the Abhiplavas are prosperity; the Prṣṭhyas are cattle; verily thus with prosperity having encompassed cattle on both sides they confer them upon themselves.

xxi. 6. The Abhiplava is a definitely arranged (sacrifice) with definite metres. The Nivids inserted in a sacrificial rite which has definite metres are all in Jagatī at the third pressing. So duly are the Nivids inserted; they being duly inserted place them duly in all worlds and in all desires. In that the Nivids are inserted all in Jagatī at the third pressing, thereby is there obtained whatever is desired in a third pressing all of Jagatī (verses). Again, in that day by day these Triṣṭubh verses from the model are recited, thereby is there obtained whatever is desired in a third pressing all of Triṣṭubh (verses). Again, in that day by day this Gāyatrī¹ from the model, 'Maker of fair forms', is recited, thereby is there obtained whatever is desired in a third pressing all of Gāyatrī. In that this six-day (rite) repeatedly approaches (abhiplavate), therefore is it called Abhiplava, for by it the sacrificers approach the world of heaven.

ADHYĀYA XXII

xxii. 1. The first day is this world in abode, Agni, the Gāyatrī, the Trivṛt Stoma, the Rathantara Sāman, the base by Tanva.¹ It has the following symbols in its verses: the future tense with the god mentioned in the first Pada—that which is to be is the future tense—the word 'hither', (the word) 'forward', (the word) 'this', (the word) 'go', (the word) 'adorn', (the word) 'yoked', (the word) 'yoking', (the word) 'light', (the word) 'bright'. 'Advancing forward up to the sacrifice' is the Ājya,² containing (the word) 'forward'; that which contains 'forward' is a symbol of the first day; it is in Gāyatri, for this set of three days has the Gāyatri at the morning pressing. So in the transposed form.³ Taking out that, 'Forward to the god, Agni' is used in the conjunct form;⁴ the explanation of this has been given. The Praūga is by Madhuchandas;⁵ the explanation of this has been given. 'Let Indra come hither to aid us' is the Marutvatiya,⁶ containing (the word) 'hither'; that which contains (the word) 'hither' is a symbol of the first day; there is a reference to the Maruts in it in 'From the realm of light, with the Maruts, to aid us'.⁷ 'Hither to us, Indra, hither to us from afar, from near' is the Niṣkevalya,⁸ containing (the word) 'hither'; that which contains 'hither' is a symbol of the first day. The Niṣkevalya and the Marutvatiya are contiguous (hymns) on the first day; by the contiguous (hymns) the gods flew up to the world of heaven together; therefore these two are recited first as being heavenly. In that the Niṣkevalya and the Marutvatiya are contiguous (hymns) on the first day, verily (they serve) to obtain the world of heaven. 'They yoke their minds, they also yoke their thoughts',⁹ 'Forward sky and earth, increasing holy order, with the sacrifices',¹⁰ and 'Here, here in mind is your relationship, O heroes',¹¹ (the last) is (the hymn) to the R̥bhus; with it he restrains; on the first day are recited hymns containing (the word) 'yoked' as well as (the word) 'forward'; in that he uses as (the hymn) to the R̥bhus, 'Here, here is your,' it is a symbol of restraint, of preventing falling away. 'Like a skilled steed, he hath yoked himself to the pole' is (the hymn) to the All-gods,¹² containing (the word) 'yoked'; that which contains (the word) 'yoked' is a symbol of the first day. The last two (verses) of it he omits. (Now they ask) 'Shall these two prescribed be recited in the Āgnimāruta?' Kauṣītaki used to say 'He should recite (them), to avoid breaking up the hymn; the Rc is not exhausted by the litany nor by the supplementary repetition; it is by the vaṣaṭ call alone that it becomes exhausted on one day.' 'To Vaiṣvānara with broad radiance bards' is (the hymn) to Vaiṣvā- nara,¹³ containing (the word) 'forward'; that which contains (the word) 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. 'Forward to the horde of the Maruts, self-radiant' is (the hymn) to the Maruts,¹⁴ containing (the word) 'forward'; that which contains (the word) 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. 'Forward the strong, new, hymn to Agni' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas,¹⁵ containing (the word) 'forward'; that which contains (the word) 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. This world with the first day they obtain, the Gāyatrī metre, the Trivṛt Stoma, the Rathantara Sāman, the eastern quarter, the spring of seasons, the Vasus the gods, Agni, born of the gods, the overlord.

xxii. 2. The second day is the world of the atmosphere in its abode, Indra, the Trīṣṭubh, the Pañcadaśa Stoma, the Bṛhat Sāman, the basis by Tanva. It has the following symbols in its verses: the present tense with the god mentioned in the middle Pada—the present is what is before the eyes, but not tangible—(the word) 'deities', (the word) 'thunderbolt', (the word) 'slaying Vṛtra', (the word) 'strong', (the word) 'apart', (the words) 'stand', 'him', and 'thou'. 'Agni we choose as envoy' is the Ājya,¹ containing the word 'apart' in 'The Hotṛ of all knowledge'; the explanation of this has been given. It is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the morning pressing. So in the transposed form. Taking out that, 'For thou hast a glory of rule' is used in the conjunct form; the explanation of this has been given. The Praūga is by Gr̥tsamada;² the explanation of this has been given. 'O Indra, drink this Soma, O lord of the Soma' is the Marutvatīya,³ containing (the word) 'thunderbolt' in 'At the midday pressing, O thou with the thunderbolt in thy hand'; this is a symbol of this day. 'Thy nearest, farthest, help' is the Niskevalya,⁴ containing (the word) 'slaying Vṛtra' in 'With these thou hast helped us in slaying Vṛtra'; this is a symbol of this day. 'That desirable greatness of Savitr, the god' is (the hymn) to Savitr,⁵ containing 'Three times the atmosphere Savitr with his greatness'; this is openly the symbol of the atmosphere. 'They two, sky and earth, all weal producing' is (the hymn) to sky and earth,⁶ containing (the word) 'apart'; the explanation of this has been given. 'They have wrought the car well covered, skilled workers' is (the hymn) to the R̥bhus,⁷ containing (the word) 'strong' in 'They have wrought the two steeds, that bear Indra, strong in riches'; the explanation of this has been given. 'The might of the swift, strong, ruddy one' and 'To the strong host, majestic, pious' are (two hymns) containing (the word) 'strong'; the explanation of them has been given.⁹ 'The immortal, born of strength, doth penetrate' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas,¹⁰ containing (the word) 'apart' in 'What time he became a messenger of Vivasvant'; the explanation of this has been given. The last verse of it is 'Early and soon at the prayer may the bright one come'; verily thus he refers to the next day;¹¹ 'Verily thus they keep taking hold of the next day' Kauṣītaki used to say. The world of the atmosphere with the second day they obtain, the Triṣṭubh metre, the Pañcadaśa Stoma, the Bṛhat Sāman, the southern quarter, the summer of the seasons, the Maruts the gods, Indra, born of the gods, the overlord.

xxii. 3. The third day is yonder world in its abode, Varuṇa, the Jagatī, the Saptadaśa Stoma, the Vairūpa Sāman, the basis by Tanva; it has the following symbols in its verses: the past tense with the mention of the god in the last Pada—the past is what refers to what has happened—(the word) 'horse', (the word) 'cow', (the word) 'chariot', (the word) 'go', (the word) 'stand', (the word) 'end', the same ending, the lack of definite mention (of the deity), the same beginning. 'Yoke thou those best fit to invoke the gods' is the Ājya.¹ They say 'Seeing that the third day is the end, then why does the Ājya contain (the word) "yoke"?' 'By this day the gods went to the world of heaven; yoked thither they went; therefore (it contains "yoke")' should he reply. It contains (the word) 'chariot' in 'The steeds, O Agni, like a charioteer'; this is a symbol of this day. It is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the morning pressing. So in the transposed form. Taking out that, 'Thou, O Agni, the Vasus here' is used in the conjunct form.² The explanation of this has been given. The Praūga is in Uṣṇih verses by Atri;³ the third day is connected with the Jagatī; in that the Praūga is in Uṣṇih verses by Atri for the third day, thus the Jagatī enjoys the third pressing.

xxii. 4. 'Three friendships hath man's worship' is the Marutvatīya;¹ (the word) 'three' is a symbol of the third day. 'If a hundred skies, O Indra, were thine' is the strophe of the Vairūpa;² there is repetition in 'and a hundred earths also'; the third day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats (as it were); for hence whitherward should he go? 'O Indra, as many as thou' is the antistrophe;³ there is repetition in 'Day by day would I obey the mighty'; the third day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'O Indra, threefold protection' is the Pragātha of the Sāman,⁴ containing in 'threefold' (the word) 'three'; this is a symbol of the third day. 'I was the first lord of wealth' is (the hymn) to Indra;⁵ in 'I' and 'I' it has the same beginning; just as that which has the same ending, so that which has the same beginning is a symbol of the end. In the Triṣṭubh (hymn), 'He who is born the first, the wise,' he inserts a Nivid.⁶ That hymn is the body of Indra. 'Placing in it a Nivid, *Gr̥tsamada Bhārgava*⁷ went to the dear abode of Indra' (they say). He goes to the dear abode of Indra, he conquers the other world, who places a Nivid in this hymn. It contains a symbol of ending in the reference to what has been; 'He who in secret hath depressed the hostile colour' is about what has been as it were. It has the same ending; this is a second symbol of the end.

xxii. 5. 'Towards thee, O god Savitr' is the antistrophe,¹ containing the word 'towards'. They say 'In that the third day is the end, then why has the antistrophe (the word) "towards"?' 'By this day the gods went to the world of heaven; desiring towards it they went; therefore (it has "towards")' he should reply. 'Hitherward the god Savitr with the golden' and 'Rich in ghee, encompassing the worlds' are (two triplets²) containing (the word) 'ghee'; the explanation of these has been given. 'Born, without steed, without reins, worthy of praise' is (the hymn) to the R̥bhus;³ there is the word 'with three wheels' in 'The chariot of three wheels circlet round the atmosphere'; this is a symbol of the third day. 'Those who from afar would assume kinship' is (the hymn) to the All-gods;⁴ (it contains the word) 'from afar'; from afar is the end; the third day is the end; in the end he places the end. These hymns end in half-verses, some in Padas, some in half-Padas; this ends with a third of a Pada; this is a symbol of the third day. hymn) to Vaiçvānara,⁵ containing (the word) 'ghee' in 'Like pure ghee to Agni we accord'; the explanation of this has been given. 'Rich in showers, the Maruts, of daring might' is (the hymn) to the Maruts;⁶ in 'Rich in showers' there is repetition; the third day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'Thou O Agni, the first Aṅgiras, the Ṛṣi,' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas;⁷ it has the same beginning in 'thou' and 'thou'; just as that which has the same ending, so that which has the same beginning is a symbol of the end. Yonder world with the third day they obtain, the Jagatī metre, the Sapta-daça Stoma, the Vairūpa Sāman, the western quarter, the rains of the seasons, the Ādityas the gods, Varuṇa, born of the gods, the overlord.

xxii. 6. The third day is the end; the gods having gone to the end desired the fourth day; therefore it contains (the word) 'desire'; having sacrificed they found it; therefore it contains (the word) 'yoke'. They say 'Since the third day is the end, then why on the fourth day does he insert the sound o?' The fourth day is the abode of speech; the Virāj is food; the sound o is food; verily thus he places food in the sacrifice and in the sacrificers. Moreover by the third day is speech obtained; verily thus on the fourth day he expands it; this is as when one expands heated metal;¹ this (serves) to expand speech. It has the following symbols in its verses, (the word) 'ruling', (the word) 'self-ruling', (the word) 'Virāj', (the word) 'born', (the word) 'aid', (the word) 'delight', (the word) 'around', (the word) 'towards', (the word) 'up to'. 'With offerings for ourselves Agni' is the Ājya² by Vimada. By means of Vimada's hymn the gods confused³ the Asuras; in that (the hymn of) Vimada is recited both in the middle and in the recitations of the Hotrakas, from each limb the sacrificers expel in confusion evil. It contains (the word) 'born' in 'Agni brought to birth by Atharvan'; this is a symbol of this day.

xxii. 7. They make up ten Jagatī verses, for this set of three days has the Jagatī at the morning pressing. They are twenty Gāyatrīs, the Gāyatri bears the morning pressing; thus he departs not from the symbol of the morning pressing. So in the transposed form. Taking out that, 'Agni men with praise from the fire sticks' is used in the conjunct form.¹ The Ājya is in Virāj metre; the Prṣṭha is in Virāj; that is accordant.

xxii. 7. ¹ RV. vii. 1 (also cited in KB. xxv. 11; xxvii. 1); ÇÇS. x. 5. 2.

The Ājya is by Vasiṣṭha; the Prṣṭha is by Vasiṣṭha; that is accordant. It contains (the word) 'born' in 'By the movements of the hands they have made the famed one to be born'; this is a symbol of this day. The Praūga² is in Anuṣṭubh verses; the fourth day is connected with the Anuṣṭubh; verily thus he makes it to succeed with its own metre. With 'Thee with the sacrifices we invoke', which contains the word 'sacrifice', he begins the Marutvatiya;³ the sacrifice has to be taken up again on the fourth day; verily thus he takes up again the sacrifice. 'Hear our call, O Indra, harm us not' is the Marutvatiya.⁴ These Trīṣṭubh verses have a Virāj tinge; they are employed here, for they are endowed with the symbol of the day. 'O Indra, with the Maruts here drink the Soma' is (a triplet) in normal Trīṣṭubh⁵ and supports the pressing; these in normal Trīṣṭubh that support the pressing do not depart from the midday (pressing). Indra is connected with the Trīṣṭubh and Indra has his abode in the midday pressing; in that these in normal Trīṣṭubh which support the pressing do not depart from the midday (pressing) even with transposed metres, (it is because he thinks) 'Indra is connected with the Trīṣṭubh; let me not cause Indra to depart from his own abode.' 'When born the gods did adorn thee' contains (the word) 'born'; this is a symbol of this day. 'Him the cunning I invoke' is the Marutvatiya;⁶ it is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the midday pressing.

xxii. 8. Then (they ask) 'Should he utter the sound o here or here?' The sound o is intended for the strophe and the antistrophe and for (the verses) commencing litanies. That he should not trouble about; the strophe is the body, the antistrophe offspring, the Virāj food, the sound o food; verily he places food in the body and in offspring. 'The sound o as connected with the Anuṣṭubh should he utter' some say; the fourth day is connected with the Anuṣṭubh; verily thus he makes it successful with its own metre.¹ 'The sound o as connected with the Virāj should he utter' is the rule; the Virāj is food, the sound o food; verily thus he places food in the body and in offspring. At the middle Pada should he utter o; the first Pada is the body, the last offspring, the middle Pada the middle, in the middle of the body is food placed; it is as when one eats food, swallowing it piece by piece. 'Indra to the divine service' is the Pragātha of the Sāman,² by which Indra is attained; by it the gods attained all attainments; verily thus also the sacrificers by it attain all attainments. 'Where is Indra famed, in what to-day?' are the 'Where famed' verses;³ they are Virāj or Anuṣṭubh; they are employed here, for they are endowed with the symbol of the day. 'Of thee, the warrior, the bull, self-ruling' is in normal Triṣṭubh⁴ and supports the pressing; the explanation of this has been given; it contains in 'self-ruling' (the word) 'self-ruling'; containing 'self-ruling' is a symbol of this (day). 'Him of you, ever enduring' is the Niṣkevalya,⁵ containing (the word) 'hither' in 'In all speech outstretched hither'; that which contains (the word) 'hither' is a symbol of the fourth day as introductory, for the fourth day is a second introduction; it is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the midday pressing.

xxii. 9. 'The golden handed for aid' is the antistrophe,¹ containing (the word) 'aid'; it has (the word) 'aid' in 'for aid'; containing (the word) 'aid' is a symbol of this (day). 'Let the god Savitr with fair jewels come hither', 'Forward the sky and earth with sacrifices, with homage', 'Forward to the Ṛbhus like a messenger shall I speed my speech',² and 'Forward the bright, the divine, hymn' (are used); either 'hither' or 'forward' is a symbol of introduction; therefore on the fourth day the hymns are recited containing (the words) 'hither' and 'forward', for the fourth day is a second introduction. Verses of two Padas are recited; by having two feet one is able to ascend; this is a symbol of ascent; it is as if one having advanced should rest in the vicinity of the world of heaven. 'Praise of the ruling, the Asura' is (the hymn) to Vaiṣvānara³ containing (the word) 'ruling' in 'of the ruling'; containing (the word) 'ruling' is a symbol of this (day). 'Who are these men revealed together?' is (the hymn) to the Maruts; the explanation of this is that of the (hymn)⁴ 'Forward the bright.' 'For you I hail the glorious, the effulgent' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas;⁵ the explanation of this is that of the Marutvatiya. 'Let the strong go forward, the flames with might' are three additional verses⁶ in the conjunct form. 'Hither for aid we come to the brilliant, the dread' contains (the word) 'hither'; that which contains (the word) 'hither' is a symbol of this fourth day as introductory, for the fourth day is a second introduction. 'I praise him of valiant might like the bright one' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas;⁷ containing (the word)

xxiii. 1. The fifth day is cattle; the basis by Tanva is the Pañkti, the Pañkti is cattle, (they say). It has the following symbols in its verses: (the word) ‘bull’, (the word) ‘cow’, (the word) ‘milk’, (the word) ‘ghee’, (the words) ‘be drunk’, (the word) ‘wealth’, (the word) ‘strong’, having an addition. ‘This guest of yours, waking at dawn’, is the Ājya,¹ containing (the word) ‘wealth’ in ‘wealths’ in ‘Wealths, O son of strength, among mortals’; containing (the word) ‘wealth’ is a symbol of this (day); it has an addition; this is a symbol of the Pañkti; it is in Jagatī, for this set of three days has the morning pressing in Jagatī. So in the transposed form. Having taken out this, ‘Him I deem Agni who is bright’ is used in the conjunct form.² It is in Pañkti; the fifth day is the Pañkti; these are the fifth day. ‘To whom the cows go home’ (it contains); containing (the word) ‘cow’ is a symbol of this (day). are verses of six Padas; the year has six seasons; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. 'They are to be recited as Gāyatrī verses', Kauṣītaki used to say; the reciting as Gāyatrī makes full completion;⁶ in that with each set of eight syllables he says the Pranava, that is the Gāyatrī form. 'Indra with the Maruts, the bull, for joy' is in normal Triṣṭubh and supports the pressing.⁷ The explanation of this has been given. It contains (the word) 'bull' in 'The bull, for joy'; this is a symbol of this day. 'He by whom this' is the Marutvatiya;⁸ it is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the midday pressing.

xxiii. 2. The Mahānāmnīs¹ are the Prṣṭha; by the Mahānāmnīs Indra slew Vṛtra; him having slain Vṛtra the gods met as he went; before they had retreated away from him and stood in terror. Him Prajāpati asked, 'Hast thou been able to slay?' 'Yes, yes' he replied, without mention (of his name), for Prajāpati is he whose (name) is not mentioned; this is a symbol of Prajāpati. Him Agni asked, 'Hast thou been able to slay?' 'Yes, O Agni' he replied. Him his own greatness asked, 'Hast thou been able to slay?' Before it had retreated from him and stood in terror. 'Yes, O Indra' he replied. Him Pūṣan asked, 'Hast thou been able to slay?' 'Yes, O Pūṣan' he replied. Him the All-gods asked, 'Hast thou been able to slay?' 'Yes, O All-gods' he replied. These five Padas are recited as 'mortar'; it is the boundary of the Ṛc; they are the strong ones; by them Indra had strength to slay Vṛtra; in that by them he had strength to slay Vṛtra, therefore are they the strong ones, for they are strengths. 'To him athirst', 'Who is most wealthy, O wealthy one' and 'Him for you who injureth not' are three sets of three verses;² he makes as tenth the Bṛhatī³ 'To him, to him of the drink.' 'Yea, thou art the powerful' is, however, the rule,⁴ having the same utterance as the 'mortar' (verses); so it becomes equal with or even superior to the strophe. 'Whether, O Indra, among the tribes of Nahus' is the Pragātha of the Sāman;⁵ 'Or of the five folks' contains (the word) 'five'; this is a symbol of the fifth day. It contains (the words) 'be drunk' in 'Indra hath waxed to be drunk'; it is in Pañkti; the explanation of this has been given. 'Thou hast furthered our prayer in the overcoming of Vṛtra' are verses of six Padas;⁶ the explanation of them has been given. 'Thou hast become the Vaiṣvānara¹⁰; in 'The navel of the sacrifices, the seat of wealth' it contains (the word) 'wealth'; containing (the word) 'wealth' is a symbol of the (day). 'Hither the Rudras with Indra in unison' is (the hymn) to the Maruts,¹¹ containing (the word) 'cattle' in 'having cars and having heroes' in 'Having cows, having horses, having cars, and of good heroes'; containing (the word) 'cattle' is a symbol of this day. 'This guest of yours waking at dawn' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas¹²; the explanation of this has been given. Cattle with the fifth day they obtain, the Pañkti metre, the Triṇava Stoma, the Çākvara Sāman, the zenith¹³ quarter, the winter of seasons, the Maruts the gods, Rudra, born of the gods, the overlord.

xxiii. 4. The fifth day is cattle; the sixth day is man; Prajāpati is man, being before all this (universe). Prajāpati is beyond the normal metres; this is a symbol of Prajāpati. An Asura woman approached¹ Indra making muṣkas at every joint; Indra, desirous of subduing her, at every joint made çepas; Indra indeed is Parucchepa ('having in joints çepas'); all does Indra seek to conquer. With her he had union; with him was she angry² with the cunning of the Asuras; he saw these (verses) with repeated Padas; with them from every limb, from every joint, from all evil was he set free. In that the Parucchepa (text) is recited, in the middle and in the recitations of the Hotrakas, the sacrificers are set free from every limb, from every joint, from all evil. Placing first the normal offering verses, they use the (verses) of Parucchepa as offering verses; in that on this day they do not say vaṣaṭ with them, thereby are they left out; in that they do not omit³ them, (it is because they think) 'Let us not omit the unfailing part of the sacrifice, what is dear to the gods.' Having performed first the normal seasonal offering (verses), they use (verses) of Ḡṛtsamada as offering verses⁴; in that on this day they do not say vaṣaṭ with them, thereby are they left out; in that they do not omit them, (it is because they think) 'Let us not omit the unfailing part of the sacrifice, what is dear to the gods.' Thereby they become above the normal metre; thus with (verses) of seven Padas they perform the vaṣaṭ call. Now as to this Kauṣītaki used to say,⁵ 'The metres with the

Virāj as the eighth guard him who yonder gives heat. That concord they disturb who use (verses) over the normal metre as offering verses.

xxiii. 5. Therefore assuredly they should use (the verses) of the one-day rite as offering verses, to prevent disturbance of the path that leads to the gods.' As to this Anicin Mauna asked the Jābāla householders, having glided up to them when they were performing a sacrificial session, 'Have ye departed from the day, are ye Parucchepas?'¹ Then were they silent; then from the north half of the Sadas Citra Gauṣṛāyaṇi, or Gauṣṛa, made reply, 'We have not indeed left the day; we are not Parucchepas; in our litany the Parucchepa has already been added in the day² (rite); with (the verses) for the one-day (rite) have we sacrificed; therefore we have not departed from the day.' One after another should they say the offering verses; the sixth day is an abode of the gods; if on that day the Hotṛ alone should say vaṣaṭ, the Hotṛ would commingle the abode of the gods of the Adhvaryu and the householder.³ A race they run for the world of heaven by the sixth day; he who completes it without drawing in breath wins the world of heaven; but, if he should draw in breath, let him ever and again pushing forward⁴ try (to complete it).

xxiii. 6. 'He is born in the ordinance of Manu' is the Ājya,¹ with no deity mentioned by name in 'he'; Prajāpati is he (whose name is) not mentioned; this is a symbol of Prajāpati. They are beyond the normal metres, having seven Padas, and have repeated Padas; in that it is this day, they are thus. He should not draw in breath between the Pada and the repeated Pada; the Pada is the body, the repeated Pada the breaths; if one should say of him who breathes in at this point, 'He has separated the body from the breath; he will not live', so would it be. Therefore he should not draw in breath between the Pada and the repeated Pada. The Praūga is in a metre beyond the normal; the sixth day is connected with a metre beyond the normal; verily thus he makes it successful with its own metre. 'He first of the great' is the strophe of the Marutvatīya²; in 'he' no deity is mentioned by name; Prajāpati is he (whose name is) not mentioned; this is a symbol of Prajāpati. 'The chariot which thou, O Indra, for the

² na might be read as in BK. and as suggested by the obvious blunder castrenāhan in winning of the offering' is by Paruccheпа³; the explanation of this has been given. In 'He who with heroes winneth the light' there is a reference to the Maruts in 'with heroes'. 'He who strong with the strong in one dwelling' is in normal *Triṣṭubh*⁴ and supports the pressing; the explanation of this has been given. There is repetition in 'Strong with the strong'; the sixth day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'O Indra, generous, with the Maruts' is the *Marutvatiya*⁵; it is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the midday pressing.

xxiii. 7. 'Rich be ours in joint carouse', and 'Rich the praiser of the rich', thus¹ the Vāravantiya is imposed on the foundation of the Raivata. The Sāman is addressed to Agni, with verses to Indra; it makes a pairing, a symbol of generation. 'Praise naught else' is the Pragātha of the *Sāman*²; in 'O friends' in 'O friends, come not to harm' it is the symbol of all; the sixth day is the symbol of all; therefore in 'O friends' he refers to all. 'O Indra, come to us from afar' is by Paruccheпа³; the explanation of this has been given. (It contains) 'from afar'; from afar is the end; the sixth day is the end; he places the end in the end. 'The greatneses of this great one' is the normal Triṣṭubh support of the pressing⁴; the explanation of this has been given. There is repetition in 'The greatneses of this great one'; the sixth day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'With the bay steeds to our pressed (drink)' is the Niṣkevalya.⁵ There is repetition in 'Come, O lord of the draughts, to us with the bay steeds'; the sixth day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? It is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the midday pressing.

xxiii. 8. 'To the god Savitr in the bowls, the sage', with this (verse) in a metre beyond the normal he begins the *Vaiṣvadeva*¹; the sixth day is connected with a metre beyond the normal; the metre beyond the normal thus attains the third pressing. Moreover the sixth day is connected with Prajāpati; Prajāpati is beyond the normal metre; this is a symbol of Prajāpati. The antistrophe² contains (the word) 'towards'; the explanation of this has been given. 'Up this god Savitr for instigation' is (the hymn)

'This dread thing be of glad speech' is (the hymn) to the All-gods⁶, containing (the word) 'stand' in 'When making his parents, standing firm on liberality'; this is a symbol of the end; the sixth day is the end; having gone to the end, he stands still as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? Having left over the last two (verses), he throws in (the hymn) to Narācaisa,⁷ 'Those who through the sacrifice are adorned with the fee.' The hymn is the body, (the hymn) to Narācaisa is offspring and cattle; verily thus in the middle in the body he places both sets, offspring and cattle. 'The dark day and the bright day' is (the hymn) to Vaiṣvānara⁸; there is repetition in 'and the bright day'; the sixth day is the end; having gone to the end, he repeats as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'This praise to Jātavedas who doth deserve it' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas¹⁰; in that it has the same endings it is a symbol of the end. 'Let us not be harmed; let us not be harmed' at the end is a symbol of freedom from harm. the Viçvajit they conquered these four quarters; therefore it has four turns and three endings. The Abhijit (is explained). By the Abhijit the gods conquered; what was left unconquered clung on as it were; that they conquered by the Viçvajit; the Viçvajit is so called (because they said) 'All have we conquered.' The Abhijit and the Viçvajit are these two, Indra and Agni; the Abhijit is Agni, for Agni conquered all this (universe); the Viçvajit is Indra, for Indra conquered all this wholly. The Abhijit has both Sāmāns and all the Stomas; therefore both sets of hymns, those connected with the Br̥hat and the Rathantara, are recited. The two hymns,² 'Forward to the god, Agni' and 'What is best, that to Agni'³ are its Ājya; 'Forward' is a symbol of the Rathantara; 'aloud' in 'Sing aloud, O thou of wide radiance' is (a symbol) of the Br̥hat. The two Praūgas of Madhuchandas and Gr̥tsamada should he interweave; having recited the Puroruc to Vāyu, then (he should insert) two triplets to Vāyu; then, having recited the Puroruc to Indra and Vāyu, two triplets to Indra and Vāyu; the Puroruc, then the two triplets, the Puroruc and then the two triplets; thus should he interweave. This he should not regard; he makes the triplets of Madhuchandas first, those of Gr̥tsamada second. As to this they say 'Why should he interweave the two (Praūgas)? This he should not regard; the Praūga being that of Madhuchandas only, he should put on (the triplet) to the All-gods of Gr̥tsamada above (the triplet) to the All-gods of Madhuchandas⁴; there is one (hymn) with the Br̥hat character expressed.

xxiv. 2. 'O ye All-gods, come hither; hear this my call; sit on this strew¹. (The word) "strew" is a symbol of the Br̥hat.' Then (comes) (the triplet) to Sarasvatī of Madhuchandas². 'Let him conclude with the last verse of it; so let the morning pressing be in the one-day form' is the rule. The Abhijit is a one-day (rite); the one-day (rite) is a support; verily (it serves) for support. 'Thee like a car for aid' is the strophe of the Marutvatiya³; 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' is the antistrophe⁴; this is the normal one-day form; the explanation of it has been given. 'Thou hast been born dread for impetuous strength', having recited this of Gaurivīti⁵ first, he inserts a Nivid in the five-verse hymn of Br̥hatī verses,⁶ xxiv. 3. Svarbhānu, an Asura, pierced with¹ darkness the sun; the Atris were fain to smite away its darkness; they performed, before the Viṣuvant, this set of three days, with the Saptadaça Stoma. They smote away the darkness in front of it; that settled behind²; they performed the same three-day (rite) after the Viṣuvant; they smote away the darkness behind it. Those who perform, knowing thus, this three-day (rite) with the Saptadaça Stoma on both sides of the Visuvant, verily those sacrificers smite away evil from both worlds. They call them the Svarasāmans; by them the Atris rescued (apasṣṇvata) the sun from the darkness; in that they rescued, therefore are they Svarasāmans. This is declared in a R̥c, xxiv. 4. ‘The sun which Svarbhānu

The Asura pierced with darkness,
The Atris found it.
None other could do so.’

By this the Svarasāmans are mentioned. The Marutvatīyas have (the word) ‘who’; the Pragāthas of the Niṣkevalyas have (the word) ‘who’. Prajāpati is ‘Who’; the Svarasāmans are Prajāpati; they have Anuṣṭubh Nivids inserted. The Anuṣṭubh is the waters; the Svarasāmans are the waters, for all this (universe) is surrounded with the waters, for on both sides of yonder sun there are waters below and above. 'O god, the mortal with sacrifice hither' is the Ājya² of the first Svarasāman (day), containing the word 'hither' and connected with the Rathantara. 'Great strength in the beam' is (the Ājya³) of the second, (containing the word) 'great', and connected with the Br̥hat. 'O Agni, bring hither the most mighty' is (the Ājya) of the third, containing (the word) 'hither', and connected with the Rathantara.⁴ The Praūga of the first Svarasāman is by Madhuchandas, that of the second by Ḡṛtsamada, and that of the third in Uṣṇih verses by Atri; the explanation of these has been given. The strophe and antistrophe of the Marutvatiyas, the verses to Brahmanaspati, follow the model of the three-day (rite); the explanation of them has been given. 'Where is this hero who hath seen Indra'? is the Marutvatiya⁵ of the first Svarasāman, containing (the word) 'who' in 'where'. 'With what array, of one age, of one home?' is (the Marutvatiya⁶) of the second, containing (the word) 'who' in 'what': 'Let him sing the Sāman springing forth as of a bird' is (the Marutvatiya⁷) of the third, containing (the word) 'who' in 'work (ku-rma)' in 'Those works most welcome to him'; Prajāpati is 'Who'; the Svarasāmans are Prajāpati. 'When thou wast born, O unequalled one'; on this strophe⁸, which has a Br̥hatī as the third verse, some daily bring in the Svaras; if they do so, the strophe and antistrophe and the inserted verse are the same.⁹ 'What newest of praisers?' is the Pragātha¹⁰ containing (the word) 'who'; the explanation of this has been given.

xxiv. 6. Then the basis of the Rathantara (is recited). 'Which thou, O Indra, dost support' is a couple of verses,¹ to avoid isolation; (it is used, thinking) 'Let not that Br̥hatī have been recited by itself alone as it were'. 'O Indra, O generous one, to thee we have turned' is the normal Triṣṭubh² (triad) which supports the pressing; the explanation of this has been given. 'That most effectual for aid (power) of them' is the Niṣkevalya in Anuṣṭubhs,³ containing (the word) 'hither' in ⁴ 'O Indra, do thou hither bear that power,' and connected with the Rathantara. 'What hath not been wrought by him?' is the Pragātha containing (the word) 'who'; the explanation of this has been given.

xxiv. 7. Then the basis of the Brhat (is recited). 'They call thee, men, when (the juice) is pressed' is a couplet,¹ to avoid isolation; (it is used, thinking) 'Let not that Brhatī have been recited by itself alone as it were.' 'O Adhivaryu, O hero, to the mighty the pressed (juices)' is the normal Triṣṭubh² (triplet) which supports the pressing; the explanation of this has been given. 'The singers sing thee' is the Niṣkevalya³ in Anuṣṭubhs, containing (the word) 'up' in 'Up with a rod they have raised thee', and connected with the Brhat. 'These thee, O thou of much light' is the Pragātha,⁴ containing (the word) 'who (ka)' in lavarna in 'of pure hues (pāvaka-varṇāḥ)'; the explanation of this has been given.

xxiv. 8. Then the basis of the Rathantara (is recited), then that of the Brhat. 'Bounding as a wild elephant' is a couplet,¹ to avoid isolation; (it is used, thinking) 'Let not that Brhatī have been recited by itself alone as it were'. 'This bowl with the drink for Indra' is the normal Triṣṭubh² (triplet) which supports the pressing; the explanation of this has been given. 'Indra all have caused to grow' is the Niṣkevalya in Anuṣṭubhs,³ containing (the word) 'towards' in 'Towards thee we sing our praise'; this is a symbol of the Rathantara. They say ⁴ 'He should not place the Nivid in the Anuṣṭubh (hymns), he confuses the arrangement of metres at the midday (performance).' Having recited the Anuṣṭubhs first for the obtaining of desire, he inserts a Nivid in the Triṣṭubh (hymns); thus in due order is the Nivid inserted; it being inserted in due order places them in due order in all the worlds and in all desires. 'Hither thy car with every boon, O dread one'; (he inserts a Nivid) in (this hymn⁵), containing (the word) 'hither' and connected with the Rathantara on the first day. 'In thee from of old the songs have gone together, O Indra', (he inserts a Nivid) in (this hymn⁷), containing (the word) 'go' and being a symbol of the end on the third (day). chanters use the Br̥hat and the Rathantara in the Pavamānas, but, if the Pr̥ṣṭhas are the Br̥hat and the Rathantara, then the Sāman chanters use the Svaras in the Pavamānas. 'But the Pr̥ṣṭhas should be the Svaras only,' Kauṣītaki⁸ used to say; 'for they are the Svarasāmāns; by the Pr̥ṣṭhas the gods have touched the world of heaven; the Pr̥ṣṭhas are the Svaras, for the touching of the world of heaven.'

xxiv. 9. The strophes (used) are those of the Vaiṣvadeva (litanies) of the first three days of the Pr̥ṣṭha Śaḍaha in conjunct form. The third pressings with the antistrophes are the third pressings of the second three days. The Vaiṣvadeva (hymns) there are taken out and other crypto-Vaiṣvadevas,¹ without mention (of the deities), connected with Prajāpati, are inserted, 'This drink to you, O swift to wrath,' 'Him of old, aforetime, at all times, now,' and 'What vessel here of those that are pious?' in place of (the hymn) of Nābhānediṣṭha. There should, however, be used the open Vaiṣvadevas, 'Agni, Indra, Varuṇa, Mitra, Aryaman' on the first day,² containing (the word) 'who' in 'Having established (s-ka-bhitvi) the sky'; 'I hail the gods of great fame for security' on the second,³ containing (the word) 'who' in 'Light making (jyotiṣkṛtaḥ).' 'Dawn and night (uṣāsā naktā) the great ones, of fair form' on the third⁴ (day), containing (the word) 'who' in 'night'. Prajāpati is 'Who'; the Svarasāmāns are Prajāpati. They are made up as Agniṣṭomas or Ukthyas; 'As Agniṣṭomas' (is) Paṅgya's view; they become possessed of splendour who perform Agniṣṭomas. 'Let them be Ukthyas,' Kauṣītaki used to say. The Ukthya is a successful form of sacrifice, for it has fifteen Stotras, fifteen Ḍastras; they make thirty Stotras and Ḍastras; it makes up the Virāj; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (it serves) for the winning of the Virāj as prosperity and proper food.

conceived; thence was this sun born on the sixth month; therefore on the sixth month the performers of a session perform the Divākīrtiya. It goes north for six months, then for six reversed; therefore the performers go for six months forward, then for six months reversed. Without it are hunger and repeated death; they conquer hunger and repeated death who perform the Viṣuvant day. It has these symbols in its verses: (the word) 'sun', (the word) 'blaze', (the word) 'light', (the word) 'ornament', (the word) 'shine', (the word) 'delight'. 'From the ocean the wave rich in sweetness hath arisen' is the Ājya²; for from the ocean, from the waters he comes out. It contains (the word) 'sun' in 'Indra one, the sun one hath produced'; this is a symbol of this day. These (verses) recited together make up twenty-one Anuṣṭubhs; he who gives heat here is twenty-onefold; thus he makes it successful with its own symbol. The Praūga is in Triṣṭubh³; this is the middle of the days; the Triṣṭubh is the middle of metres. Thus he makes it successful with its own metre.

xxv. 2. 'Were not they who were made great with homage?' is (the triplet) to Vāyu,¹ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'They made bright the dawn with the sun'; this is a symbol of this day. The succeeding triplet is addressed to Indra and Vāyu,² 'So far as the power of the body, so far as the might', with the symbol (of the day) in 'So far as men with the eye may discern'. 'Up the eye of you two, O Varuṇa, fair of aspect' is (the triplet) to Indra and Varuṇa,³ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'The sun goeth extending of the pious one'; this is a symbol of this day. 'Hither, O Nāsatyas, with chariot rich in cattle' is (the triplet) to the Aṅvins⁴; the third (verse) contains (the word) 'blaze' in 'The god Savitr hath raised aloft the blaze'; this is a symbol of this day. 'Come hither to us, O impetuous god, with might' is (the triplet) to Indra,⁵ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Heroes for life for the gaining of the sun'⁶; this is a symbol of this day. 'Let the prayer go forward from the abode of holy order' is (the triplet) to the All-gods,⁷ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'The sun hath created the kine with his rays'; this is a symbol of this day. 'May Sarasvatī for us rejoicing' is (the triplet) to Sarasvatī,⁸ with the symbol in 'O happy one, thou hast unbound the doors of holy order.' This is the Praūga of Vasiṣṭha arranged in triads of Triṣṭubh verses, and containing (the word) 'sun'. Vasiṣṭha is Prajāpati; verily in Prajāpati they succeed in all their desires.

xxv. 3. They¹ say 'The morning pressing should not be in Triṣṭubh; he disturbs the beginning of the sacrifice from its appointed metre; let it be the one-day (form) only'. The one-day (rite) is light; he who here gives heat is light; verily thus they cause light to prosper with light. 'Forward to the god, to Agni' and 'Thou hast glory of rule', these two are the Ājya.² These (verses) recited together make up twenty-one Anuṣṭubhs; the explanation of these has been given. The Praūga is by Madhuchandas; the explanation of this has been given. 'Thee like a car for aid' is the strophe of the Marutvatiya³; 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' is the antistrophe⁴; this is the normal one-day form; the explanation of this has been given. 'With what array, of one age, of one home?' is the Marutvatiya,⁵ with the symbol (of this day) in 'brightness' in 'array' (ṣubhā). 'That ram that winneth the light I glorify' is in Jagatī,⁶ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Thou didst support the sun in the sky to see'; this is a symbol of this day. 'Thou hast been born dread for impetuous strength,' in this Triṣṭubh (hymn⁷) he inserts a Nivid. (The hymn⁸ has) the symbol (of this day) in 'Dispel the darkness, fill full our vision'. Two sets, Triṣṭubhs and Jagatīs, are recited, for the sun here gives heat, resting on the Triṣṭubh and the Jagatī; thus openly they obtain it.

xxv. 4. 'The Bṛhat should be the Prṣṭha of this day' some hold, saying 'He who here gives heat is connected with the Bṛhat; the Bṛhat gives heat; moreover, the Mahādivākīrtiya is not a Prṣṭha, the Bṛhat and Rathantara are openly Prṣṭhas; therefore the Bṛhat alone should be the Prṣṭha of this day.' If they should perform the Bṛhat on a Pragātha containing (the word) 'sun' and Pragāthas containing 'sun', (it is) with the symbol of this day.¹ 'Indra hath knowledge for the hearing of this' is the beginning of the litany,² containing (the word) 'sun' in 'He is the lively pathmaker for the sun'; this is the symbol of this day. 'The Mahādivākīrtiya alone should be the Prṣṭha of this day' is the rule. The Mahādivākīrtiya is openly a Sāman; thus with its own Sāman they make it successful. Now some perform it on Triṣṭubh verses³; he who here gives heat is connected with the Triṣṭubh; thus it with its own metre they make successful. 'Let it be performed on Br̥hatī verses' some say; he who here gives heat is connected with the Br̥hatī; thus with its own metre they make it successful. But the rule is 'Let it be performed on Jagatī verses'; he who here gives heat is connected with the Jagatī; thus with its own metre they make it successful.

xxv. 5. 'May the radiant one drink the great Soma-made mead' is the strophe triplet,¹ containing in 'All radiant, brilliant, great, the sun to see' (the words) 'apart (vi)', 'radiance', and 'sun'; this is a symbol of this day. 'The sun hath loosened apart his car in the middle of the sky' is the antistrophe,² containing (the words) 'apart' and 'sun'; the common metre is Jagatī, but the rule³ is (the triplet) to Sūrya, 'For all love thee, of one mind, one countenance', with the symbol of the sun in 'Long living may we see, O sun'. 'Assuredly thou art great, O sun' is the Pragātha of the Sāman,⁴ containing (the word) 'sun'; this is a symbol of this day. 'Who alone is to be invoked by mortals' is (a hymn⁷) in Triṣṭubh, with the symbol 'The divine atmosphere thou didst make to shine.' So if they make the Mahādivākīrtya the Pr̥stha, but, if they perform the Br̥hat on its own basis, having recited the extension of the Br̥hat, he recites the basis of the *Rathantara*⁸; 'Indra hath knowledge for the hearing of this' is the beginning of the litany,⁹ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'He is the lively pathmaker for the sun'; this is a symbol of this day.

xxv. 6. 'As the sky surpasseth the earth, O Indra, that which our foes' is (the hymn)¹ in Triṣṭubh, containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Indra to Kutsa in the winning of the sun'; this is a symbol of this day. If they do not (perform it) on its own basis, 'Turning as it were to the sun' is the strophe,² containing (the word) 'sun'; this is a symbol of this day. 'If, O Indra, a hundred skies were thine' is the antistrophe,³ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'a thousand suns'; this is the symbol of this day. 'Who most active, ever slayeth' is the Pragātha⁴ of the Sāman, containing (the word) 'sun' in 'In bodies, in the waters, the sun'; this is a symbol of this day. Then he recites the bases of the Brhat and the Rathantara. 'Indra hath knowledge for the hearing of this' is the beginning of the litany;⁵ the explanation of this has been given. 'Who alone is to be invoked by mortals' is (the hymn⁶) in Triṣṭubh; the explanation of this has been given. So now if they perform the Brhat on its own basis or on a different basis. If they perform without the two Sāmans, it is the same up to the beginning of the litany; he should take out the bases of the Brhat and the Rathantara. 'Praise him who hath might to overcome' is (the hymn⁷) in Triṣṭubh, with the symbol in 'Increase with praises the bull of mortals.' The next is the same. 'The ram, much invoked, worthy of praise' is (the hymn⁸) in Jagatī, containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Thou didst indeed mount the sun in heaven to see'; this is a symbol of this day. Both sets, Triṣṭubh and Jagatī, are recited; the sun here gives heat, resting established on the Triṣṭubh and the Jagatī; thus it openly they touch.

xxv. 7. 'I shall proclaim at the great assembly thy two bays', having recited nine verses of this (hymn¹) and having uttered the call, he inserts a Nivid. 'May the true one come hither, the generous, he of the Soma lees' has twenty-one verses,³ with the symbol (of this day) in 'What time at the dawn they made to shine the great light.' These make up twenty-five. 'To the all conquering, the booty conquering, the light conquering' is six Jagatī verses,⁴ with the symbol (of this day) in 'To Indra the Soma, to him worthy of sacrifice the delightful.' gives heat is connected with the Jagatī, the difficult mounting is the sacrificers; verily thus the sacrificers mount him. By Padas he mounts first; thus they obtain this world; by half verses for the second time; thus they obtain the world of the atmosphere; by three Padas for the third time; thus they obtain yonder world; the entrance is by performance as one unit; then by three Padas, by half verses, by Padas (he descends); thus he rests in this world, on a support immovable. This difficult mounting verse being recited together makes up seven. These are thirty-eight in all. 'For his full oblations', (these) are six (verses) in Jagatī,⁶ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Indra it waiteth on as the sun on the dawn'; this is a symbol of this day. These make up forty-four. 'The bird anointed by the craft of the Asura', (these) are three (verses⁷), with the symbol (of this day) in 'This radiant sun-like prayer'. These are forty-seven. With the concluding verse⁸ thrice repeated, 'Lead us to a wide space, wise one', with the symbol (of this day) in 'The heaven, the light, freedom from danger', they make up fifty. Those preceding are fifty-one; they make up a hundred and one verses; man has a hundred (years of life), a hundred forms, a hundred strengths, a hundred powers; the hundred and first verse over is the world of the sacrificer; thus here they make ready the sacrificers; thus here having made ready the sacrificers at the beginning, he propagates them with the Mahāvratā day. twenty-three. 'To the all-conquering', (these) are six verses.⁷ These make up twenty-nine. The 'difficult mounting' verses are seven. These make up thirty-six. 'Thou art alone the lord of wealth' is a Trīṣṭubh (hymn) of five verses,⁸ containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Thou didst destroy at the rising of the sun';⁹ this is a symbol of this day. These make up forty-one. 'This strong one, god speeded', (these) are three (verses),¹⁰ with the symbol (of this day) in 'As the sun with light, he hath stretched out the waters'. These make up forty-four. The bird (hymn¹¹) is three (verses); these make up forty-seven. 'Lead us to wide space, wise one', with this concluding verse thrice repeated, they make up fifty; the preceding are fifty-one. They make up a hundred and one verses; the explanation of these has been given.

xxv. 9. 'That of Savitṛ we choose' and 'To-day for us, O god Savitṛ' are the normal strophe and antistrophe¹ of the Vaiṣvadeva; the explanation of these two has been given. this is a symbol of this day. 'To him who sitteth on the altar, with a dear abode, of fair radiance' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas,⁹ with the symbol (of this day) in 'The light, the car, of bright hue destroying the darkness.' These are the hymns of the Āgnimāruta (Çastra). These are the hymns of this day. It is an Agniṣṭoma. The Agniṣṭoma is light; he who here gives heat is light; verily thus they make light successful with light; immortality they obtain who perform the Viṣuvant day.

xxv. 10. Before the setting of the sun should they seek to complete (the rite of) this day; the day has its morning litany, to be recited by day. They should seek to complete with this day including its morning litany and the offerings to the wives (with the gods) before the setting of the sun. 'Agni, I deem father, Agni friend', with this (verse¹) the Hotṛ begins the morning litany on this day, with the symbol of the 'rich waters' verse² in 'friend (āpim)'. It contains (the word) 'sun' in 'In the sky the bright, worthy of sacrifice, of the sun'; this is a symbol of this day. As to this Kauṣitaki used to say,³ 'The morning litany is Prajāpati, and is not connected with the darkness; verily in due order should he commence it; that is its prosperity; so in due order are offered the Upāṇḍu and the Antaryāma (cups); that is their prosperity.' The Āprī hymn⁴ is by Vasiṣṭha, containing (the word) 'sun' in 'Overspread thyself with the rays of the sun'; this is a symbol of this day. 'The Hotṛ for this day should be white, with red eyes' some say; with this day they seek to obtain him who yonder gives heat; this is as if one should approach a superior with a gift.⁵ But the rule is 'Just as it may happen to be'. With the Çastra alone should he seek to produce the symbol of this day.⁶ A victim to the sun should be offered (in addition) to the usual victim for the pressing. It is offered inaudibly; if a man should utter aloud (the recitation) for it, then if one were to say of him, 'He will become afflicted with skin disease, a leper'⁷ it would be so. Four victims only are offered inaudibly; that to the sun, that to Savitr, that to Prajāpati, and that whose divinity is speech; the others are offered aloud. Then they perform three Svarasāman (days) reversed; the explanation of these has been given.

xxv. 11. They obtain this thirteenth month in that they perform the Viçvajit; the thirteenth month is as great as the year; here verily the whole year is made up. Of it they say 'The six-day (rite) is the one-day (rite)', for whatever is done each day in the six-day (rite) that is done on the one-day (rite), the Viçvajit. Much and varied is done on the Viçvajit, in that all the Prṣṭhas, and all the various Stomas are together put in it. Its Prṣṭha is openly the Vairāja, the Rathantara at the midday Pavamāna, the Bṛhat at the third Pavamāna is performed, the Çākvara as the Maitrāvaruṇa's, the Vairūpa as the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin's, the Raivata as the Achāvāka's. They obtain this thirteenth supernumerary month, for that is thirteenth,* as they perform the Prṣṭhas; 'Agni men with praise from the fire sticks' is the Ājya¹ of this (day) in Virāj verses; the explanation of this has been given. The Praūga is by Madhuchandas; the explanation of this has been given. 'Thee like a car for aid' is the strophe of the Marutvatiya;² 'This drink, O bright one, is pressed' is the anti-strophe.³ This is the normal one-day form; the explanation of it has been given. 'With what array, of one age, of one home? is the Marutvatiya;⁴ the 'What array' hymn contains the word 'who'; the Viçvajit as Prajāpati is 'Who'.⁵ The strophe and antistrophe of the Vairāja are the strophe and antistrophe; in them he inserts a repeated o just as yonder in the fourth day (rite);⁶ for as it is in Virāj it is not the place to omit the repetition of o; then there is the inserted verse, then the Pragātha in which Indra is attained; then he recites the bases of the Bṛhat and the Rathantara. 'That was the best in the worlds' is the Niṣkevalya;⁷ the sacrifice is the best in the worlds; the Viçvajit as Prajāpati is the sacrifice. Then, if⁸ the third pressing of the sixth day is the third pressing, (it is because) the sixth day is connected with Prajāpati, the Viçvajit is Prajāpati. The strophe is from the one-day (rite); the Viçvajit is a one-day (rite); the one-day (rite) is a support; verily (it serves) for support. The antistrophe contains the word 'towards'; the explanation of this has been given.

xxv. 12. They say 'Why in the Viçvajit with all the Stomas as a one-day rite are the Çilpas² recited at the third pressing? Why (in it) as an Agniṣṭoma at the midday pressing?' The Çilpas are the lower breaths; the sacrifice is man; the morning pressing is the upper breaths; the mid-day is the body; the third pressing the lower; these are the Çilpas; therefore the Çilpas are performed at the third pressing, for this is their abode. Then why are the Çilpas recited at the midday pressing in the Viçvajit as an Agniṣṭoma in a year-long sacrificial session? The Prṣṭhas are the body; the Çilpas are the breaths; the breaths are not known without the body, nor without the breaths the body; assuredly the two are not severable. Therefore are the Çilpas recited at the midday pressing in the Viçvajit as an Agniṣṭoma, (for they think) 'Let me not separate the body from the breaths.' Moreover, the Viçvajit is Prajāpati; as Prajāpati the Viçvajit³ is all; therefore all the Prṣṭhas are performed, all the Çilpas; the Viçvajit as Prajāpati is all; with all he obtains all he who knows thus.

xxv. 13. In the Āgimāruta (Çastra) the Hotṛ having recited the Rudra verse, recites the Evayāmarut hymn¹ in Pañkti form; the sacrifice is five-fold; verily (it serves) to obtain the sacrifice. 'Let me not,' (he thinks), 'obstruct the Çilpa of the Achāvāka.' Moreover Rudra is the oldest and best of the gods, the Atichandas of metres, the Viçvajit of one-day rites. Thus he makes it successful with its own symbol. At three verses of it should he repeat o;² if he desire to repeat o he should do it at all. The repetition of o is food; the breaths are food; the Çilpas are the breaths; verily thus he places the breath in the breaths. Moreover by the Viçvajit Prajāpati propagated all offspring, and conquered all. Thus is it the Viçvajit. Now is he born who sacrifices with the Viçvajit; therefore does he repeat o. Stumbling³ as it were does he move as he seeks to walk for the first time. Thus him from the immortal metre he propagates to immortality. They obtain immortality who perform the Viçvajit.

xxv. 14. The Viçvajit of the year-long session is composed as an Agniṣṭoma with all the Stomas and all the Prṣṭhas; the Agniṣṭoma is a support; verily (it serves) for support. If the Viçvajit is a one-day (rite), or the middle day of a night session,¹ it should be an Atirātra. The Atirātra is the complete Viçvajit; half of the Viçvajit is performed by day, half by night. The (Viçvajit), which is performed apart from a case when all one's property is given or a session, is one which brings all ruin. It is a loss of all if a man gives all² without a Viçvajit. If there is a Viçvajit (he should give) all; if (he gives) all, it (should be) a Viçvajit. 'If a man does not give all, saying "Let me give all," he prepares for himself a pitfall,³ he comes to ruin,' he used to say. 'Or a thousand makes this up,' Kauṣītaki used to say, 'The thousand is all; the Viçvajit is all; by all may I obtain all,' (so thinking he gives a thousand).

xxv. 15. He should put round a calfskin; bare as it were becomes the body of him who gives all. (He puts round thinking) 'Cattle desire a calf; let cattle again desire me.' He should dwell in an Udumbara wood; the Udumbara is strength and proper food; (verily it serves) to obtain strength and proper food. He should dwell with a Naiṣāda; the Naiṣāda is the minimum of proper food; (verily it serves) to obtain the minimum of proper food. He should dwell with a Vaiçya; the Vaiçya prospers; (verily it serves) to obtain the proper food which is with a Vaiçya. He should dwell with a Kṣatriya; the Kṣatriya is the maximum of proper food; (verily it serves) to obtain the maximum of proper food. He should dwell with a Brahman of the same family, to obtain the proper food which is with a Brahman of the same family. For a year should he wander, lying on the ground, accepting only uncultivated (fruits),¹ not asking for food, clothed in what is given. With that he clothes himself. 'Having done this for twelve nights he may devote himself to another desire,' Kauṣītaki used to say, 'the year has twelve months, this is an image of the year.' The Ājya (Çastras) of the Hotrakas are addressed to Prajāpati, as having no deity mentioned. The strophes² of this day (of these priests) are 'Do ye two aid us to terrestrial,' 'They yoke the tawny ruddy one,' and 'Them they ever praise' or 'Praise him who with his light.' The strophes of the sixth day they should make the antistrophes; the sixth day is connected with Prajāpati; the other five are Prajāpati as the Viçvajit the litanies they conclude³ with the ending sets of verses; the ending verses are a support; verily (they serve) for support.

ADHYĀYA XXVI

xxvi. 1. The first month has thirty-two (days), the last thirty-two; the Anuṣṭubh has thirty-two syllables; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; thus with speech they advance, in speech they conclude. There are two months of twenty-eight days on both sides of the Viṣuvant (day); the Uṣṇih has twenty-eight syllables; the neck is connected with the Uṣṇih. Now the Viṣuvant is the head of the sacrifice; verily thus having produced a neck they fit the head upon it. They say 'Of which of the two sets of days is it (the head), of the previous or the subsequent?' 'Neither of the previous nor of the subsequent,' they say.¹ Of both sets of days is it (the head); both sets of days are its. They say 'How many sets of six days are in the year?' There are sixty six-day sets; thus the course of the year by six-day sets is unbroken. Those who yoke thus the days of the year, they attain those desires which are in the year. Those who yoke them otherwise than that, they attain not those desires which are in the year. Now some perform the months in the forward order only, and the days in the forward order, (saying) 'We are mounting the year in the forward direction in both ways.' 'The months alone should be reversed, not the days,' some (hold), saying 'The months are reversed in that this Prṣṭhya Śaḍaha comes round again from the back.' Others say 'The Trivṛt and the Trayastriṅga Stomas are characterized by being at a great distance; it is as if from a mountain peak one should fall into a pit;² that is a cleaving of the Stomas, therefore the days alone should be reversed, and not the months, to prevent cleaving of the Stomas.'³ xxvi. 2. Then (follows) the discussion of the Go and Āyus.¹ They should

² M has kartam and skandeva by haplogy.

³ stomakṛntatāyāi will hardly do (cf. KB. xxviii. 4), as the normal dative of purpose is practically essential: perhaps stomā or astomā (cf. AB. v. 16) should stand. The days are, of course, the individual days (ÇÇS. xiii. 19. 12); the proximity is caused by a Prṣṭhya being now placed in the beginning of the second set of the months. The first normal day of the Prṣṭhya has the Trivṛt and the sixth the Trayastriṅga; see ÇÇS. x. 2. 1; 7. 1. But ÇÇS. xiii. 19. 12 and

ĀÇS. xi. 7. 9 agree in inverting the days as well as the Śaḍahas; in xi. 7. 19, however, the two cases here given are mentioned.

xxvi. 2. ¹ The Go and Āyus days precede the last ten days of the last month of the Sattrā. They form also the second and third days of the normal Abhiplava Śaḍaha; see KB. xx. and xxi; ÇÇS. xi. 4. The order here is Āyus, then Go, hence vihṛte; see ÇÇS. xiii. 19. 16, which does not note the variant here in favour of the normal order as in ĀÇS. xi. 7. 11.

perform the Go and Āyus as inverted; the Go and Āyus are day and night; day and night are inverted towards each other; moreover the Go and Āyus are sky and earth; sky and earth are inverted towards each other; moreover the Go and Āyus are expiration and inspiration; expiration and inspiration, being inverted, find support in each other.² Some perform them in the forward order, saying 'The Go and Āyus should be performed in the forward direction; the Abhiplava Stomas are reversed, and the Prsthya Stomas in the ten-night (period).' They say 'The Go and Āyus are the second and the third day.'

xxvi. 3. Now¹ they discuss (this question), 'Supposing some one in carelessness makes a blunder in a Çastra or a recitation or if there is doubt, should one, thinking that the error has passed unnoticed², mentally considering the (place of) occurrence, having gone back and remedied the error, proceed immediately from the (place of) occurrence (of the error)?' Now Paiṅgya used to say 'Superfluous would be a Mantra repeated twice when not prescribed; therefore he should not proceed immediately.' So used Paiṅgya to say. Now Kauṣītaki used to say 'These rites in which the number of Mantras employed is limited have limited fruits. Those in which an unlimited number of Mantras is employed have unlimited fruits; the unlimited is mind; mind is Prajāpati, Prajāpati is the sacrifice; the sacrifice rejoices in the sacrifice itself as mind in mind; therefore should he proceed immediately.' So used Kauṣītaki to say.³ 'By the limited he conquers the limited, the unlimited by the unlimited; (it serves) for the winning of the unlimited; in that there is no flaw', so used Kauṣītaki to say. He should not offer a libation. So the sacrificer obtains the worlds of heaven, all desires, all attainments, and all immortality, and acquires the pre-eminence, rule, and overlordship of all creatures, for whom it is done thus.

xxvi. 4. 'Now if after the conclusion or after the Pranava or vaṣaṭ call of the invitatory and offering verses, (an error) is perceived, by that time the flaw has been passed over',¹ Prāgaḥi used to say. 'Therefore the priest in ² The Ānand. ed. has vikṛte and pratyatiṣṭhata.

¹ There is no real parallel in AB. v. 32-34 which deals with the Brahman's part as correcting errors (cf. ÇÇS. iii. 21), nor, what is more noteworthy, is there any parallel in ÇÇS. The exact sense of the passage is not certain as ānantaryātprāyogaḥ is not unambiguous and may have the sense of necessity rather than immediacy.

² abuddham may refer to the case of vicikitsā and be a subject; or it may be object—'passed unnoticed'.

³ LK and the Ānand. ed. insert Paiṅgyo 'tha ha smāha, which will not do.

xxvi. 4. ¹ This sense seems required to explain the Sadas should not call attention to a flaw passed over at this time', Paiṅgya used to say; 'he knocks into a pillar or falls into a pit or is put into one or perishes', he used to say. 'If the priest in the Sadas should call attention to a flaw passed over, there must not be repetition of what has been done,' Āruni used to say: 'There is loss of a secondary element,' said Çvetaketu.² 'Therefore the priest in the Sadas should not call attention to a flaw passed over,' Paiṅgya used to say. 'It is a tribulation to the sacrifice if the priest in the Sadas calls attention to a flaw passed over'. 'Therefore the priest in the Sadas should not call attention to a flaw passed over,' Paiṅgya used to say.³

xxvi. 5. Further he used to say¹ this. Daivodāsi Pratardana having gone to a sacrificial season of the Naimiṣīyas and having glided up asked a question on this point of doubt, 'If the priest in the Sadas should call attention to a flaw passed over or any one of the priests should note it, how would you remove the flaw?' They were silent; Alikayu Vācaspatha was their Brahman priest; he said 'I know that not; but will ask Jātūkarnya,² the aged teacher of those formerly.' Him he asked, 'If the performer himself should note a flaw passed over or another should call attention to it, how is that flaw to be made flawless? By repetition of the Mantra or by an oblation?' 'The Mantra should be recited again', Jātūkarnya said. Him Alikayu again asked, 'Should one recite in full the Çastra or recitation or Nigada or offering verse or whatever else it be?' 'So much as is erroneous only need be repeated, a verse, or half verse, or quarter verse, or word, or letter,' Jātūkarnya replied. But Kauṣītaki used to say,³ 'He should not repeat the Mantra, nor offer a libation; there is no flaw', for, whatever flaw the Hotṛs make in the sacrifice through inattention, all that Agni as divine Hotṛ makes flawless. This is declared in a Ṛc, xxvi. 6. 'If that in poverty of mind, with feeble intellect, the reason for neglecting the flaw, the view of Paiṅgya. The alternative is to take the statement of Prāgahi as laying down the problem only, bhavaratī thus going with budhyeta (which is of active sense). The comm. supplies prāyaçaitāhutiḥ.

² It is noteworthy that Çvetaketu appears in close contact with Jātūkarnya in ÇÇS. xvi. 29, 6, where his father and he are mentioned. guṇalopa is late.

¹ Presumably Paiṅgya's view is meant, as at the end. For the Sadasya cf. ÇÇS. v. 1. 8 with comm.; ĀGS. i. 23. 5; Weber, Ind. Stud. x. 144. The use of this priest is condemned in ÇB. xii. 4. 1. 19.

² Jātūkarnya appears in a similar light in ÇÇS. iii. 20. 19, and is mentioned in i. 2. 17; iii. 16. 14. He became Purohita of the Kāçyas, Videhas, and Kausalyas, xvi. 29. 5; he was envied by Çvetaketu. For Pratardana see Vedic Index, ii. 29, 30.

³ Cf. KB. xxvi. 2, where the correction is done, not merely manasā, as it seems, but also by actual repetition.

Men think not of the sacrifice,
Then Agni the Hotṛ skilled in the offering, well knowing,
Most skilled to offer, to the gods shall offer in due season.’¹

In that also, when the sacrifice is completed, he says ‘The All-knower hath offered the sacrifice,’² he says ‘The All-knower hath offered this sacrifice.’ In that he says ‘Having sat down before us,’ he says ‘Agni, as divine Hotṛ, having sat down before the human Hotṛ sacrifices.’ Verily with the second half verse or³ the first verse he utters a benediction.

xxvi. 7. On¹ the sixth day the gods obtained the Stomas and the months; having obtained these Stomas they compressed these same Stomas in couples, being the Stomas of the Prṣṭhya, for whence could they have obtained another Stoma? The Trivṛt and the Pañcadaṣa Stomas becoming the Caturvīṇṣa Stoma support the seventh day; the Saptadaṣa and the Triṇava Stomas, becoming the Catuṣcatvāriṇṣa Stoma, support the eighth day; the Ekaviṇṣa and the Trayastriṇṣa Stomas, becoming the Aṣṭācatvāriṇṣa Stoma, support the ninth day. Of them the first is measured by the Gāyatrī, the second by the Trīṣṭubh, the third by the Jagatī; in that they are measured by the metres, therefore are they Chandomas. The six Stotriyā verses which are over the Aṣṭācatvāriṇṣa Stoma, these they call the seasons; the seasons are six; by these the tenth day is performed.

xxvi. 8. The sixth day is the end; the seventh day is a repeated extension (of the rite); therefore on the seventh day are recited hymns containing the word ‘extend’, and with the symbols of the introductory (rite), for the seventh day is a second introduction. ‘Forward to the pure radiance do ye bear’ is the Ājya,¹ containing (the word) ‘forward’; that which contains (the word) ‘forward’ is a symbol of the first day. ‘Forward to you, the pure, are offered boldly’ is (the triplet) to Vāyu,² containing (the word) ‘forward’; that which contains ‘forward’ is a symbol of the first day. The next triplet is addressed to Mitra and Vāyu,³ ‘They perceiving with true mind’; it contains (the word) ‘yoke’ in ‘Yoked with their own insight they bear’; that which contains (the word) ‘yoke’ is a symbol of the first day. ‘Up the eye of you two, O Varuṇa, fair of aspect’ is (the triplet) to Mitra and Varuna⁴; containing (the word) 'extend' in 'The sun goeth, extending of the pious one'; that which contains (the word) 'extend' is a symbol of the seventh day. 'Hither, O Nāsatyas, with chariot rich in cattle'⁵, 'Come hither to us, O impetuous god, with might,'⁶ 'Forward to you in the sacrifices the pious have sung,'⁷ and 'Forward she hath come forth with fostering current'⁸ (are the other triplets); the symbols of the introductory (day) are (the words) 'hither' or 'forward'; therefore on the seventh day are recited hymns containing (the words) 'hither' and 'forward' with the symbols of the introductory (day), for the seventh day is a second introduction. They say 'Whatever metre may be used in the morning pressing, the recitation of it is by half verses, with the symbol of the Gāyatrī, and thus moreover with the symbol of the morning pressing.' But as to this Kauṣītaki used to say, 'The Triṣṭubh and Jagatī are not suitable to be recited⁹ by half verses; even if they be employed at the morning pressing, they are to be recited by Padas only.' So is the rule. The Prṣṭha is the Br̥hat and the Çastra is connected with the Rathantara; this is a pairing, a symbol of generation. The strophes and antistrophes of the Marutvatīyas and (the Pragāthas) to Brahmanaspati are in accord with the form of the third day (rite); the explanation of these has been given.

xxvi. 9. 'With what array, of one age, of one home?' is the Marutvatīya¹; that is called the 'prosperity hymn'. With it Indra and the Maruts came to an accord. The pre-eminence of him who knows thus men accept. It contains (the word) 'hither' in 'With what mind have they come hither, and whence?', and is connected with the Rathantara. 'That ran that winneth the light I glorify' is a Jagatī,² containing (the word) 'hither' in 'Hither Indra would I turn for aid with good offerings', and is connected with the Rathantara. They say, 'Seeing that the Rathantara is normally the Prṣṭha of the seventh day, then why is the Br̥hat performed daily?' These days have great Stomas; therefore daily is the Br̥hat performed, to confer equality of might on these days, to secure inequality of might of these Stomas.³ Having recited the extension of the Br̥hat he recites the basis of the Rathantara. 'Our father did not teach us any recitation⁴ of the basis; each stood alone', Kauṣītaki used to say, 'But whenever the Sāmans fall together on the same day then he should recite also the basis of the one or the other'.

'But, if they use the Rathantara of Kaṇva,⁵ then he should not recite also the basis, for the basis of other Prṣṭhas is not to be recited', Kauṣṭiki used to say. 'Praise him who hath might to overcome', and 'Towards this ram much invoked, worthy of praise' are hymns⁶ in Triṣṭubh and Jagatī, both containing (the word) 'towards'; this is a symbol of the Rathantara. Two hymns each are recited in the Nisṣkevalya and the Marutvatīya of the first Chandoma; the sacrificer has two feet; (they serve) for support. They make up four; the Chandomas are cattle; cattle are fourfold; moreover, they are four-footed; (they serve) for the obtaining of cattle.

'That desirable of Savitr' is (the triplet) to Savitr,¹ containing (the word) 'forward' in 'May he forward our prayers'; that which contains (the word) 'forward' is a symbol of the first day. 'extend' is a symbol of the seventh day. It is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the third pressing. These are the hymns of the Āgnimāruta. These are the hymns of this day. It is an Ukthya. It obtains what the first day obtains.

xxvi. 11. The first Chandoma is this world, the second the world of the atmosphere, the last yonder world; therefore on the middle day are recited hymns containing (the word) 'great', for the atmosphere is great. 'Moreover, they should contain (the word) "begun"; verily thus he refers to the next day, verily thus they keep taking hold of the next day', Kauṣītaki used to say. 'Agni for you the god, in unison with the flames' is the Ājya;¹ in 'When he hath stood out from the great enclosure' it contains (the word) 'great' and also contains (the idea) 'begun'. 'Were not they who were made great with homage?' is (the triplet) to Vāyu,² containing (the word) 'great'; that which contains (the words) 'made great' contains (the word) 'great', for this day contains (the word) 'great'. The following triplet³ is addressed to Indra and Vāyu, 'So far as the power of the body, so far as the might', containing (the idea) 'begun' in 'So far as men can discern with the eye.' 'To you two at the rising of the sun with hymns' is (the triplet) to Mitra and Varuṇa,⁴ containing (the word) 'great' in 'I invoke Mitra, Varuṇa of pure strength', and also (the idea) 'begun'. 'From her sister dawn night doth retreat' is (the triplet) to the Aṅvins,⁵ containing (the word) 'great' in 'With great guerdon in horses, in cows, let us invoke you', and also (the idea) 'begun'. 'This Soma hath been pressed for you, O Indra' is (the triplet) to Indra,⁶ containing (the idea) 'begun' in 'O Brahman, O hero, rejoicing in the making of prayer.' 'Let the Brahmins, the Aṅgirasas, come forward' is (the triplet) to the All-gods,⁷ containing the idea 'begun' in 'Let the noise of the cloudy one have knowledge.' It contains (the word) 'go' in 'We have gone'; this is a symbol of the end; the ninth day is the end; he returns as it were, having gone to the end, for hence whitherward should he go? 'How can a triplet make up the Aṣṭācatvāriṇṇa Stoma?' Kauṣītaki used to say. 'Me the strong, O Agni, of the Soma'² he should also recite; this contains a symbol of ending in its reference to what has taken place; 'We have brought forward the sacrifice' and 'From the sky they have learned'³ are regarding what has taken place as it were. 'Here however,⁴ the Stoma is not pervaded' Pañgya used to say, 'since by verses alone the Stoma cannot be pervaded'. 'O ye All-gods, come hither' is (the triplet) to the All-gods,⁵ containing (the word) 'go' in 'come hither'; this is a symbol of the end; the ninth day is the end; he returns as it were, having gone to the end, for hence whitherward should he go? It is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the third pressing. 'Present in the sky he shone' is to Vaiṣvānara;⁶ 'in the sky' is a symbol of yonder world. 'O Maruts, in whose dwelling' is (the hymn⁷) to the Maruts, containing (the word) 'dwell' in 'dwelling'; this is a symbol of the end; the ninth day is the end; having gone to the end, he dwells as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? 'Agni is the Hotr, the Purohita' is (the hymn) to Jātavedas,⁸ containing (the word) 'dwell' in 'The dwelling, O thou of pure radiance'; this is a symbol of the end; the ninth day is the end; having gone to the end, he dwells as it were, for hence whitherward should he go? It is in Gāyatrī, for this set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the third pressing. These are the hymns of the Āgnimāruta. These are the hymns of this day. It is an Ukthya. It obtains what the third day obtains. Daily in all the xxvii. 1. 'The tenth day' is that which is above in the sky' Kauṣītaki used to say; therefore it is what is not to be explained, for no one knows this clearly. 'Let me not explain ignorantly' (he thinks). The tenth day is a limited divine rite; it is the Anuṣṭubh: he who explains it makes a surplus; stumbling is liable to befall him who explains. As to this they say 'Let him explain; the sacrifice rejoices at the approach of a wise man, "What² is to become successful in me, that will he cause to be successful." If any person inadvertently makes an error then he who observes it should aside repeat the passage as a self study, or the householder or one of the priests should creep up, and he aside should recite the passage as a self study.³ If he does not think this proper, he should at once explain.⁴ The Anuṣṭubh is released on the tenth day; the Anuṣṭubh is speech; now speech having borne the burden becomes as it were the bearer of a dread thing.⁵

ADHYĀYA XXVII

² As cited by Ānartīya on ÇÇS. x. 12. 5 the reading is the more simple one yato 'samyādham, but it is very unlikely that this could have been changed into the reading of the text. The Ānand. ed. has 'yam me.

³ This is the sense as taken by Ānartīya on ÇÇS. l. c. M curiously inserts yas tam tatra brūyāt after adhīyāt.

⁴ The lack of a concluding iti as often renders uncertain the point at which the text of the view cited stops.

⁵ M has krūravaheva and this in view of tadohuṣi is clearly correct, though the comm. has krūraraheva. M has (vāg) or (tadohuṣi) in a correction. This Anuṣṭubh verse, despite its clear character and the particles, has escaped the vigilance of the edd. and of the Vedic Concordance. The words tad enām, for which M has the far simpler and probably certain tad etan (ignored by Lindner), appear to me to be prefixed to fit the verse, which seems to be a relic of old Indian Niti literature, in order to adopt the sense to the Anuṣṭubh which is the subject of the comparison. M has the excellent reading prasisṛkṣāmi. The verse is, of course, in very free Anuṣṭubh form and me 'sti may be read in d for the sake of the metre. M has puṇḍalyāyanam me 'stīti which is best taken as a cpd. (puṇḍalyāyanam) and not as hyper-sandhi. It is best to read astī and take iti as quoting the whole verse, and not as part of the verse. sāmpādāyati is read by M and Ānand., and is preferable to the plural in Lindner.

Therefore is it released, (as they think) 'Let us not consort with speech.' Now all the metres here he converts into the Anuṣṭubh; there is this (verse)

'Her I touch not as being a Çūdra;
Yet will I not let her go;
Nowhere else do I go;
To a courtesan is my approaching,' for on the tenth day here the Anuṣṭubh is sung around.

They say, 'He should not abandon the abode of the Anuṣṭubh; there should he recite Virāj verses; the Virāj and the Anuṣṭubh are the same metre, for not by one syllable is a metre made different, nor yet by two.' Of these two triplets there are six syllables over, and six of the strophe and antistrophe of the Agniṣṭoma Sāman; these twelve syllables the Hotṛ should make up in the morning litany. He need not trouble as to this; it is made up here. 'There is an Uṣṇih additional,' we hold,⁶ 'or a Gāyatrī; that he should make up at the morning litany.' He need not trouble about this; it is made up here.

xxvii. 2. 'O Agni, this to-day as a steed with praises' is the Ājya.¹ That being created for the tenth day he need not make up. He need not trouble as to this; it is made up here. The Praūga is by Madhuchandas; the explanation of this has been given. With an Atichandas (verse), 'In the three bowls the bull that mixed with barley, he of strong power,' he begins the Marutvatiya.² It made up amounts to sixty-four syllables; these make up two Anuṣṭubhs. 'Sing aloud to Indra' and 'Forward to Indra, the great', these two Pragāthas³ he recites along with the 'Water swellers' before the hymn⁴; so is it made up. 'Thou hast been born dread, for Lindner treats it as prose, and so also Aufrecht (ZDMG. xxxiv. 75, 76), who renders 'Deshalb will ich einerseits sie weder berühren, weil ich mich mit keinem (lärmenden) Çūdra-weibe befassen will; noch gehe ich zu einer ganz verschiedenen Form über, sonst würde man von mir sagen, ich gliche einer lockeren Dirne'. But this necessitates the reading of prasisakṣāṇi (prasaṅgenechāmī in comm.), ignores the metre, and takes the iti as part of the quotation. For yāmaki see Mahābhāṣya on Pāp. v. 3. 68; Kāçikā on v. 3. 77. The Ānand. ed. has vāhevābhīmṛṣe and yāmaka (so M). Cf. also Keith, JRAS. 1915, pp. 502, 503. Böhtlingk (BKSGW. Apr. 23, 1897), also ignoring the metre, reads yāmi kim, but this is impossible.

⁶ The mysterious and unusual menimāhe occurring here and recognized also by Ānartīya in his citation of the passage yields only this sense. The making up of the number of syllables of an Uṣṇih or Gāyatrī is given by Ānartīya as the result of three recitings, 12 + 6 + 6 = 24 = the Gāyatrī. If 2 Virāj triads replace two of Anuṣṭubh then there are clearly six extra syllables, Virāj = 33, and Anuṣṭubh = 32 syllables. M has udaiti, which is preferable.

impetuous strength' is the Marutvatiya⁵ of the one-day (rite); the one-day (rite) is a support; verily (it serves) for support. 'With what hath he come, the brilliant one?' and 'With what aid thou to us?', on the basis⁶ of the Vāmadevya is imposed the Rathantara. The Sāman is for Agni and is performed on Indra verses; this is a pairing, a symbol of generation. There are as many Uṣṇih triads as Pragāthas; one verse of two Padas forms the inserted verse, another the seventeenth of the hymn; this is made up. 'I shall proclaim the manly deeds of Indra' is the Niṣkevalya⁷ of the one-day (rite): the one-day (rite) is a support: the tenth day is a support; the two (verses of) two Padas are a metre on which to find support; verily (they serve) for support. 'To the god Savitr in the bowls the sage,' with this Atichandas verse he begins the Vaiṣvadeva:~ it made up amounts to sixty-four syllables; these make up two Anuṣṭubhs; the antistrophe contains (the word) 'towards'; the explanation of this has been given. Then, before the 'Prosperity to us' hymn,⁸ he recites the 'Forward the bright' hymn¹⁰; the one-day (rite) is a support: the tenth day is a support; (the verses) of two Padas are a metre on which to find support; verily (they serve) for support. The Agniṣṭoma Sāman as the Vāmadevya is performed on Virāj verses¹¹; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; (verily they serve) to obtain the Virāj as prosperity and proper food. Moreover the Vāmadevya is healing and medicine; verily thus at the end in the sacrifice are healing and medicine produced.

xxvii. 3. In that they perform the additional litany¹ of the conjunct (form), thereby they obtain the additional litany. Now this is the milking of the tenth day; they must make up the day so that there may be a thousand and fifteen Anuṣṭubhs; taking out fifteen, then of each hundred four he takes out; thus are fifty-five taken out. Then the rest make up thirty sets of thirty-two. Now this is the Anuṣṭubh of the Stomas and the syllables; the Gāyatrī has eight syllables; the Stoma is the twenty-fourfold; so the Anuṣṭubh of the Stoma and the syllables has thirty-two parts. Now there is the Anuṣṭubh of the Padas; there are six Padas in the Gāyatrī and Uṣṇih; three in the Virāj; these make nine; four in the Br̥hatī; these make thirteen; five in the Pañkti; these make eighteen; four in the Triṣṭubh; these make twenty-two; in the Jagatī and Atichandas eight; these make thirty; two in the verse of two Padas; these make thirty-two; so the Anuṣṭubh of the Padas becomes of thirty-two parts. Now there is the Anuṣṭubh of the gods²; eight Vasus, eleven Rudras, twelve Ādityas, Indra as the thirty-second; so the Anuṣṭubh of the deities becomes of thirty-two parts. Now the fifty-five taken out are forty-four Pañkti verses; the forty of these are the udder, the four over the teats; thus the Anuṣṭubh of the Stoma and the syllables with this udder and these teats pours over this body of Indra, the fast day; by reason of the pouring over³ of it the Chandomas increase both as regards Stomas and Çastras; he who knows it becomes composed thereof; he who knows thus before his life (is over) becomes master of this body of Indra, the fast day⁴; him this Anuṣṭubh of the Stoma and the syllables with this udder, these teats, with all flavours, all delights, all proper food, all immortality besprinkles, who recites the tenth day (rite) as thus made up. 'Therefore should he recite the tenth day (rite) as thus made up,' (they say).⁵ xxvii. 4. In that they perform the additional litany of the transposed¹ (form), verily thus they delight mind. That with all the sacrifices they recite, for this is the measure of mind. When the tenth day is over, before the offerings to the wives (with the gods), at this moment they creep forward, saying 'The wives are unworthy of sacrifice, for they are outside the altar.' But the rule is (that they do so) when the offerings to the wives have been completed. 'Here a little space is left over for rivals,' (thinking thus) they creep forward together and sing with the verses of the serpent queen;² the serpent queen is this (earth), for she is the queen of what creeps; the serpent queen is speech, for speech is the queen of what creeps; moreover, the serpent queen is the cow, for the cow is the queen of what creeps. 'The spotted bull hath come', this triplet³ he should not omit, to prevent the omission of the strophe. 'In us place manliness' (he says); manliness is food; verily thus he places food in the sacrifice and in

³ vyākṣareṇa is an extraordinary and impossible form; possibly abhikṣareṇa may be intended, but M has vikṣareṇa.

⁴ The Ānand. ed. has pratyam ahar twice and so M, which after the first abhikṣarati inserts sarveṇānnādyaena sarvai rasais sarvaiḥ kāmāis sarveṇāmṛtatvenābhikṣarati. It also has yaḍ u vai veda and sa ya evamīd asya^o (which is suggested by the reading of the Ānand. also) and at the end it omits sarvai rasaiḥ and inserts sarvaiḥ kāmāiḥ after annādyaena.

⁵ The composition of the number of verses is given by Ānartīya on ÇÇS. xi. 12 (ii. 63-79, ed. Hillebrandt).

¹ vyūlhasya is omitted in M and may be an interpolation. For the atiriktoktha of the samūḍha see ÇÇS. x. 13. 21-25.

² sārparājñi (rājñyarkṣu* by hyper sandhi; p. 71) is a curious form for sarparājñi, and may be a mere error; per contra sarparājñinām is used in ĀpÇS. xxi. 10. 5 of the verses. The verses are sārparājñi, as Ānartīya on ÇÇS. x. 13. 29 says. Cf. AB. v. 23. M has the short vowel of vāc.

³ RV. x. 189. 1-3; ÇÇS. x. 13. 26. Garbe, ĀpÇS. iii. 475, incorrectly identifies the ref. in ĀpÇS. xxi. 10. 5.

the sacrificers. 'O breath obtainer, that hear the call' (he says);⁴ the breath obtainer is Indra, for he having obtained the breath goes round seeking bodies. (Now the) Adhvaryu; he offers in the Gārhapatya two libations to Prajāpati, without mention (of the deity); the Gārhapatya is Prajāpati; the Stotra and Častra end with the two libations; the Stotra is completed; the Častra is completed; the discussion of the Brahman is completed. Moreover they may⁵ if they will offer a sacrifice, and take food. Here is Vena.⁶ These are obviously the bodies of Prajāpati; them let the Hotṛ recite.

xxvii. 5. 'Eater of food and mistress of food' (is one form¹); the eater of food is this (earth); the mistress of food yonder (sky). 'The fair and the beautiful' (is a second). the fair is the Soma; the beautiful is cattle. 'The unresting and the fearless' (is a third); the unresting is Vāyu, for he never rests; the fearless is death, for he has no fear. 'The unattained and the unattainable' (is a fourth); the unattained is this earth; the unattainable yonder sky. 'The unattacked and the unattackable' (is a fifth); the unattacked is Agni here; he unattackable yonder Āditya. 'That which has no prius and no rival': that which has no prius is the mind; that which has no rival the year. Now² he yonder who gives heat is yonder householder, for he is a lord of houses, his houses are the seasons: he is a lord and he is also a god from whom evil has been smitten away. The Adhvaryu runs northward; they close the doors of the Sadas and also of the shed.³

xxvii. 6. They¹ lay hold of the branch of Udumbara; the Udumbara is strength and proper food; (it serves) for the obtaining of strength and proper food. The Hotṛ should make his two hands the highest (thinking), ⁴ M inserts before vātāpe the words ātmānān pūrācā āha tāthā hānyātmanānavarītā bhavati. The verse is the last Pāda of a verse in ÇÇS. x. 17. 6, where vātāpe is read as here also in OoC and the Ānand. ed. but not in M; in MS. i. 9. 1 it occurs with vātāpayah 'fermenting' (of the Soma drink), and in TĀ. iii. 3. 1 with vātāpeh, which is apparently a genitive with haranaçrūtah. The preceding words are found in MS. l. c.; TĀ. iii. 1. 1; ÇÇS. x. 14. 6 in a different context. OoC and the Ānand. ed. have the absurd reading vātām ātmā (K has vācam).

⁵ M has the excellent reading ato ne erāpi which is much better than anye of the other MSS. and the Ānand. ed., and involves only a change of a letter. Ānartiya, on ÇÇS. x. 19. 1, has anye, and observes that the option of a sacrifice here is not accepted in the Sūtra. M has also anirukte samsthe.

⁶ The Vena hymn is RV. x. 123 (already cited in KB. viii. 5¹), but that it should occur here (M clearly has the same reading, after a lacuna) is strange and not very probable, nor is the form of citation usual. The comm. takes it as Vena is kama. AB. i. 20. 2 (cf. KB. xxviii. 9) has the same phrase in the sense 'The Vena (vital air) is here (in the navel)' which is intelligible with regard to bhukṣeyuh.

² This is the Brahmodya according to AB. v. 25. KB. omits all mention of the different Daçahotṛ, Caturhotṛ, Pañcahotṛ, Šaḍhotṛ, and Saptahotṛ recitations given in ÇÇS. x. 14-18, and referred to in ĀpÇS. xxi. 10. BÇS. xvi. 7 refers only to the Caturhotṛs.

³ The verses are at this juncture three; see ÇÇS. x. 21. 10. M has dvarau çālayāç ca. xxvii. 6. ¹ The ritual of this chapter and of the last sentence of the preceding chapter is given in ÇÇS. x. 21. Cf. AB. v. 24.

'Let me be the highest'; the highest does he become. In silence, with closed eyes, they sit until the Nakṣatras appear; speech do they make to grow strong in that they sit in silence, (thinking) 'Speech grown strong and poured upon may we obtain at the end.' Near the Mārjāliya, when the Nakṣatras (appear), they open their eyes; the Nakṣatras are light; verily thus they place light in themselves. They enter the two oblation holders by the western door; then the Adhvaryu approaching the pole of the northern oblation holder says 'Do thou sing the Prosperity of the Sacrificial Session'; he sings the 'Prosperity of the Sacrificial Session'; thus they obtain the prosperity of the sacrificial session. All perform the finale of the Sāman; the finale is a support; verily (it serves) for support. They creep beneath the axle of the northern oblation holder, muttering an Atichandas verse to Indra²; verily thus by the Atichandas verse the sacrificers smite away evil under the axle. 'We go round (them) to the north', Kauṣītaki used to say, 'following the path of the sacrifice, not being concealed from the Seven Ṛṣis.' Having taken up their places in front of the oblation holders they think of what they desire; whatever they desire 'Let this desire be fulfilled for us,' this desire for them is fulfilled; those who have many desires should mutter the three exclamations, bhūh, bhuvah, svah. Having gone out to the east and to the north they vie in invoking speech, (thinking) 'Let not speech be averted.' They release the speech of the Subrahmanyā³; the Subrahmanyā is the holy power; verily thus with the holy power do they utter speech. They go to the Āgnidhriya along with the king; this is as if men should conduct the king, or his vicegerent,⁴ when wearied to an abode; Soma the king they day by day, having taken down from the oblation holders, conduct to the Agnidh's altar; at the Āgnidhriya they settle down with the king.

xxvii. 7. In¹ that they perform the Daçarâtra in its conjunct form, verily (it serves) to obtain all desires. In that they perform it in its transposed form, verily (it serves) to obtain all the metres. In that they perform both the transposed and the conjunct forms, verily (it serves) to confer variety on the Daçarâtra. The conjunct form was alone in the beginning. The metres desired one another's place, (thinking) 'Let us all be first, all be in the middle, and all at the end.' Moreover thus he makes all the metres

² The verse is RV. i. 132. 6. The rite is one with many parallels; cf. Henry, La magie dans l'Inde, pp. 132, 133.

³ ÇÇS. x. 21. 17 has subrahmanyāpratikam abhivyaṅṛtya. See also Jaiminīya Çrauta Sūtra, iii. The A.B. v. 3 deals much more fully with the Subrahmanyā priest and formula.

⁴ According to BR. this term denotes any one having a claim to the rank; it occurs again in ÇÇS. xvii. 5. 3, 4; 15. 3.

sharers in all the pressings. The first set of three days has the Gāyatrī at the morning pressing, the Triṣṭubh at the midday, and the Jagatī at the third pressing. The second set of three days has the Jagatī at the morning pressing, the Gāyatrī at the midday, and the Triṣṭubh at the third pressing. The third set of three days has the Triṣṭubh at the morning pressing, the Jagatī at the midday, and the Gāyatrī at the third pressing. The tenth day has the Gāyatrī at the morning pressing; thus from the same metre to the same metre they proceed. Again in that they transform the tenth day into Anuṣṭubh verses, and this day is speech, and the Anuṣṭubh is speech, verily thus they establish speech in speech. Immortality they obtain who perform the tenth day (rite).

xxviii. 1. Prajāpati¹ created the sacrifice; with it when created the gods sacrificed; having sacrificed with it they obtained all desires. One half of it they deposited, namely the Praiṣas and the Nigadas. With the other (half of the) sacrifice the Ṛsis sacrificed: they observed² 'With an incomplete sacrifice are we sacrificing; we do not obtain all desires.' They toiled; they saw the Praiṣas and Nigadas. Having sacrificed with the sacrifice with the Praiṣas and Nigadas they obtained all desires, (thinking) 'The Praiṣas and the Nigadas are so much³ of the sacrifice as is not made up by the Ṛc verses. Thus with them shall we make up the whole.' These Praiṣas and Anupraiṣas⁴ Viṣvāmitra saw, and also the Praiṣas for the cake offering; then other Ṛsis (saw) others. As to this they say 'Why does the Maitrāvaruṇa alone give directions to all?' The deities ran a race regarding the Praiṣas; the race Mitra and Varuṇa won; therefore the Maitrāvaruṇa⁵ alone gives directions to all. He gives directions standing, (thinking) 'Standing is one strongest, standing also is one most easily heard; let me utter speech full of strength and resorting to the gods'.

¹ There is no precise parallel to this in the AB. With the views here given may be contrasted the statement quoted in Ānartīya's comm. on ÇS. viii. 15. 15 that all Nivids, Puruṣes, and Praiṣas are Viṣvāmitra's, and all other Mantras in Brāhmaṇas or Kalpas are Vāmadeva's. Cf. below, KB. xxviii. 8; RVKh. Anukramāṇī in Scheftelowitz, p. 131.

³ M's etāvate points to etāvanto as the correct reading; cf. in KB. xxii. 9 devajāte apparently for °jātau.

⁴ praiṣān only is read by M, but probably not correctly.

xxviii. 2. 'Leaning forward like one slightly bent should he recite; thus is Parjanya likely to rain' Kauṣītaki used to say. Now the Asuras and the Rakṣases used to impede¹ the oblations; then Vāmadeva saw the appropriate (verses²), 'Agni the Hotṛ at our sacrifice'; with them they led Agni round. Therefore these Rakṣases, the destructive, they smote away. He recites an appropriate (verse³), containing (the word) 'accept', 'Accept our most extending', (thinking) 'Let me utter speech appropriate and containing (the word) "accept" among the gods.' 'Set this sacrifice for us among the immortals', with these (verses⁴) Viṣvāmitra makes acceptable the drops. These are their invitatory verses, these their offering verses; therefore are they appropriate. A verse of Viṣvāmitra's he recites as the invitatory verse⁵ for the Sviṣṭakṛt offering in (the sacrifice of) the cake; the explanation of this has been given. Verses of Viṣvāmitra's he recites in each pressing as invitatory verses for the cakes; Viṣvāmitra saw these Praiṣas for the cakes; (verily they serve) for correspondence. Two appropriate verses of Madhuchandas⁶ he recites as invitatory verses for the first of those for two deities; Madhuchandas saw these Praiṣas for these two deities; (verily they serve) for correspondence. A verse by Gṛtsamada⁷ and a verse by Medhātithi⁸ he recites, being appropriate, for the second two. Verses by Medhātithi⁹ he recites at the morning pressing for (the goblets) being filled; Medhātithi at the morning pressing proclaimed the Soma to Indra; these (verses) contain (the words) 'hither' and 'bay steeds' with the symbols of the invitatory verses; they are addressed to Indra, for the sacrificial rite is Indra's; they are Gāyatrī verses; the morning pressing is in Gāyatrī. Nine verses he recites; nine goblets do they fill.

xxviii. 3. Six¹ some repeat at the morning pressing for (the goblets) being filled; (six the Maitrāvaruṇa) himself, the Achāvāka the seventh; seven each at the second and third pressings, saying 'Seven seated eastwards perform the vaṣaṭ call.' As to this they say 'According to the hymn should he recite, for these are the invitatory verses of the Hotṛ, for these goblets they fill up goblet by goblet as the Hotṛ's; therefore should he recite according to the hymn.' Then the Hotrakas sacrifice together; the explanation of this has been given. The Maitrāvaruṇa uses (a verse) to Mitra and Varuṇa,² 'Mitra we hail,' to secure that the beginning of the sacrifice shall be provided with its own deity. 'Indra thee as a bull we', (this verse) to Indra³ the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin (uses), for the sacrificial rite is connected with Indra. 'O Maruts in whose dwelling', (this verse) to the Maruts⁴ the Potr (uses); when the Maruts purified Indra, then Indra gave them a share in the Soma drinking; therefore is it (a verse) addressed to the Maruts that the Potr uses as offering verse at the first and at the last. 'O Agni bring hither the wives', (this verse⁵) which contains (the words) 'O Agni, with the wives' and (the word) 'Tvaṣṭṛ', the Neṣṭṛ uses at the first and at the last; Agni is the one of the gods who is connected with (the words) 'with the wives', the Neṣṭṛ is the one of the priests (so connected); therefore it is (a verse) which contains (the words) 'Agni with the wives' and (the word) 'Tvaṣṭṛ' that the Neṣṭṛ uses as offering verse at the first and at the last. 'To him whose food is the ox, whose food the cow', (this verse) to Agni⁶ is used by the Agnīdh; he kindles the fires; therefore the Agnīdh uses (this verse) to Agni as offering verse at the first and at the last. They repeat the second vasat, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. Then comes the sacrificial food, then the bowl of the Hotṛ; the explanation of this has been given.

xxviii. 4. When Nābhānediṣṭha Mānava sought an invitation from the Aṅgirasas, he saw this Hotṛ function of the Achāvāka; he came when the sacrificial food had been invoked: therefore one does not select him.¹ He came from this eastern intermediate region; therefore seated in this region the Achāvāka awaits his invitation. They say 'Why do they keep a fragment of the cake for the Achāvāka?' Alikayū Vācaspatha was the Brahman at the consecration and Upasads of the Naimiṣiyas; he performed the Achāvāka's function when the pressing had been done. They said 'We have hitherto kept the Brahman's portion for him; for whom shall we keep it?' Then said they 'For him do ye keep it.' They kept it for ² RV. i. 23. 4; ÇQS. vii. 4. 6. The phrase anavarādhyai offers great difficulty of interpretation (cf. anavarādhyā in xxv. 15), and seems an error for anavarādhyai. The Hotṛakas' performance is the so-called Prasthita libations. yajanti has, of course, the precise sense of 'say the offering verses'.

³ RV. iii. 40. 1; ÇQS. vii. 4. 7.

⁴ RV. i. 86. 1 (already cited in KB. xxvi. 17); ÇQS. vii. 4. 8.

⁵ RV. i. 22. 9; ÇQS. vii. 4. 9. The sense of agnipātṛnivatāyā must be thus, that is, as in MW., a verse containing the words agne patnī, the compound adj. being a natural device to get over the difficulty of saying 'containing Agni and patnī'. M has the variant Tvaṣṭā vai, which is clearly bad.

⁶ RV. viii. 43. 11; ÇQS. vii. 4. 10.

him. This is the Brahman's portion. Moreover the other goblets share in the sacrificial food; therefore they keep for the Achāvāka the fragment of the cake, to prevent the goblet having none of the sacrificial food.²

xxviii. 5. Then the Adhvaryu says to him 'O Achāvāka, say what thou hast to say'; verily thus he says to him 'O Achāvāka, expect an invitation.' 'Hither Agni for help for you', (these verses) to Agni he recites; the morning pressing is connected with Agni; they are Anuṣṭubh verses; the Anuṣṭubh is the Gāyatrī; the metre of Agni is the Gāyatrī. They are three; Agni is threefold, coals, flame, and smoke. At the third saying with the Praṇava of the last verse, he unites the Nigada,¹ 'O sacrificer, O Hotṛ, O Adhvaryu, O Agnīdh, O Brahman, O Potṛ, O Neṣṭṛ, and thou also, O Upavakṛ.' The Upavakṛ is the Praçāṣṭṛ; it is said in a Rç,² 'The Upavakṛ of men.' 'Be forcible with force, strong with strength' (he says); 'Force as food, strength as food with food do ye unite; in effect, he says to them. 'To you may the kin, may those that are not kin yield (he says); 'Whatever is kin, and whatever is not kin, may that yield to you,' verily thus he says to them. This is declared in a Rç,³ xxviii. 6. 'Kin or no kin, crush the foes.' 'The rivals beaten down in the way' (he says); 'Your rivals are destroyed in battle', verily thus he says to them. 'Conquer the attacking, conquer with the attacking'¹ (he says); the attacking is an army; 'With an army an army conquer,' verily thus he says to them. 'May Indra hear, may Agni hearken to you' (he says); 'Let Indra hear you, let Agni hear', verily thus he utters this benediction. 'Standing forth, do ye proclaim the Soma to Indra and Agni, and do ye, O Brahmins, invite² us who are Brahmins,' verily thus he requires an invitation from all. 'This Brahman here, or Achāvāka, desires an invitation', the Adhvaryu says, 'O Hotṛ, do thou invite him.' Him the Hotṛ invites, for he is the chief sharer of them; 'Whomever his chief invites, he indeed is invited' Kausītaki used to say.

xxviii. 7. 'To him athirst¹' the Achāvāka recites for (the goblet) being ² The sense of aparīḍatāyai is clear, and while parīḍatāyai would be simpler, the sense of pari as 'apart from' is possible.

¹ See ÇÇS. vii. 6. 1 seq. The Mantra is printed in ÇÇS. vii. 6. 3 as iṣeṣayadhvam: and so in the Vedic Concordance, and this is, if taken from iṣayate as a denominative, correct, as iṣaiṣayadhvam would be necessary from √iṣ as causative; an instr. iṣā is more probable than iṣe as first element, but it is possible that iṣe ṣayadhvam misunderstood as two words may explain the sayate, go, of Dhātupāṭha, xiv. 8. Probably therefore iṣeṣ^o should be read with ūrjorj^o in place of Lindner's ūrjo 'rjayadhvam', which is also found in the Ānand. ed. In b read jihatām.

xxviii. 6. ¹ Though ÇÇS. vii. 6. 3 also has abhīvaryāh, it is a vox nihili and abhīvaryā is actually found in ĀÇS. v. 7. 3, which has jayata for the rare jeṣatha.

filled; these are four; all this (universe) is fourfold; verily (it serves) to obtain all this (universe). They are Anuṣṭubh verses, for reciting together. The last is a Br̥hatī; the Br̥hatī is prosperity; verily thus at the last he finds support in prosperity. 'Come with those that move at dawn,' with (this verse²) to Indra and Agni he offers, for his litany is addressed to Indra and Agni. It is in Gāyatrī: the morning pressing is in Gāyatrī. He says the second vaṣat, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. 'Without taking in breath should they say the offering verses at the morning pressing,' Pāṇḍya used to say, (thinking) 'Swiftly shall we give the oblation to the gods.' 'By half verses' Kauṣītaki (used to say). The half verse is the joint of the metres; verily thus by joints they give the oblation to the gods.³

xxviii. 8. Then¹ comes the consideration of the Praiṣas for the season (sacrifices). Kaṇva it was who saw the Praiṣas for the seasonal (sacrifices); and Medhātithi the offering verses²; Medhātithi is a descendant of Kaṇva. With this the two smote away³ evil. He who desires 'May I smite away death, the evil,' should sacrifice with these.

xxviii. 9. The¹ sacrifice is a man; the Ājya is his speech; speech is one only; therefore he recites the Ājya with one deity only. The Praṭga is the breaths; the breaths are many; therefore many deities are celebrated at the Praṭga. The Maitrāvaruṇa and the Achāvāka are the two arms; these are twofold; therefore they recite (verses) for two deities at the morning pressing. The Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin is the middle as this navel suture²; therefore the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin at the morning pressing recites (verses) to one deity. The midday (pressing) is the body; it is one only; therefore at the midday the Hotrā reciters recite (verses) to one deity; and the Hotr himself the Niṣkevalya. The Maitrāvaruṇa and the Achāvāka are the two thighs; these are twofold; therefore they recite at the third pressing (verses) to one deity. The Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin is the middle as this organ of generation; therefrom two forms arise, female and male; therefore the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin at the third pressing recites (verses) to two deities. The Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin recites most (verses); the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin is the body; therefore this middle of the body is the thickest.

‘hither’, this is a symbol of the first day. The strophes of the Maitrāvaruṇa and the Achāvāka are by Viçvāmitra,¹ the two nine-versed conclusions by Vasiṣṭha²; verily thus they two make the two ends alike. Having recited the strophes, they make as the antistrophes the strophes of the next day, to secure the form of the Abhīna, for the continuity of the Abhīna; verily thus they make day conformable to day; day indeed is conformable to day. They say ‘Why is the Stotra followed in recitation? Why do they recite beyond the Stoma?’ That is not indeed sung which is not followed in recitation; that Stoma goes not to the gods which is not recited beyond;³ therefore is the Stotra followed in recitation; therefore do they recite beyond the Stoma. The Çastras have four calls; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fourfold; moreover they are four-footed; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. The offering verses of the litanies are from the one-day (rite); the one-day (rite) is a support; verily (it serves) for support. They say the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

ADHYĀYA XXIX

xxix. 1. When the gods at Sarvacaru performed the sacrifice, Arbuda Kādraveya came up to them at the midday (pressing) and said to them, ‘One Hotr’s office is not being performed for you, that of the Grāvastut; let me perform it for you, do ye invite me.’ They said ‘So be it’; they invited him; he saw these appropriate (verses) of the Grāvastut, namely, ‘Let them call forth; let us call forth,’ when they call forth,² for they call forth indeed; then when (they say) ‘mightily mightily’ (the verse containing ‘mightily’ is used), ‘They speak out mightily with the strong exhilarating (drink)’; ‘Set free the thought of him that hath pressed’ (is the verse) when they set free.³ They are fourteen; the fingers are ten, the pressing stones are four; they make up this (number). They are Jagatī verses; the stones are connected with the Jagatī. In that he concludes with a Trīṣṭubh,⁴ thereby at the midday (pressing) is the Trīṣṭubh secured. He praises, standing; the stones stand as it were. He praised wearing a turban, and with eyes tied up: therefore now also wearing a turban (the priest) praises the stones. Moreover they say 'The eye came'⁵; it was a serpent; thus did poison come to the priests; he used these (verses) connected with (Soma) the purifying,⁶ and repelling poison, in praise; in that he uses these (verses) connected with (Soma) the purifying and repelling poison, verily (it serves) for the healing of the sacrifice and the curing of the sacrificers.'⁷ xxix. 2. When the Pavamāna has been sung, they proceed with the pot of milk, for this is the time for it; moreover (it serves) to secure the sap of the pressing. Then they proceed with the sacrifice of five oblations; the explanation of this has been given. (Verses) by Vasiṣṭha¹ he repeats for (the goblets) being filled at the midday (pressing): Vasiṣṭha it was who proclaimed the Soma to Indra at the midday. They contain (the words) 'hither' and 'bay steeds', with the symbols of the invitatory verses. They are Trīṣṭubh verses to Indra, for the midday pressing is connected with Indra and the Trīṣṭubh. Ten he recites; ten goblets do they fill here. Then the Hotrakas sacrifice together; the explanation of this has been given. Trīṣṭubh verses to Indra they use as offering verses for the Prasthitas at the midday (pressing), for the midday pressing is connected with Indra and the Trīṣṭubh. They say the second vasat, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. Then comes the sacrificial food, then the goblet of the Hotr; the explanation of this has been given; when the Dakṣiṇā offerings have been made,² the sacrificial fees are taken; the explanation of these has been given. He recites (a verse) by Viṣvāmitra³ as the invitatory verse for the cup for the Maruts; the explanation of this has been given.

xxix. 3. The¹ Prṣṭha for the Maitrāvaruṇa is the Vāmadevya; the Vāmadevya is healing and medicine; verily thus are healing and medicine produced in the sacrifice. That of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin is the Naudhasa; that has a finale; the finale is a support; verily (it serves) for support. That of the Achāvāka is the Kāleya; that they perform as the Aida on Br̥hatī verses; the sacrificial food is cattle; the Br̥hatī is cattle; cattle are connected with the Br̥hatī; verily (it serves) to obtain cattle. They recite the Pragāthas of the Sāman; thus they depart not from the Hotr's rule. The beginnings of the litanies of the Maitrāvaruṇa and Achāvāka are of five verses, the conclusions are of eleven verses; verily thus they make the two ends alike. The Maitrāvaruṇa recites (verses) by Viçvāmītra² and Vāmadeva,³ for his conclusion is by Vāmadeva. The Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin recites (verses) by Viçvāmītra⁴ and Vasiṣṭha,⁵ for his conclusion is by Vasiṣṭha. The Achāvāka recites (verses) by Bharadvāja⁶ and Viçvāmītra,⁷ for his conclusion is by Viçvāmītra. They recite (verses) by four Ṛṣis; up to four (degrees) are pairing, union, propagation; (they serve) for generation.⁸ The beginnings of the litanies of the Maitrāvaruṇa and Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin are by Viçvāmītra, and so is the conclusion of the Achāvāka; Viçvāmītra is speech; verily thus with speech on all sides they extend the sacrifice. This is the explanation of the introductory and concluding rites and of the one day form.

xxix. 4. Day by day the Prṣṭha for the Maitrāvaruṇa is the Vāmadevya; the Vāmadevya is healing and medicine; verily thus are healing and medicine day by day produced in the sacrifice. Then day by day they recite these Pragāthas containing (the word) 'who'; Prajāpati is Who; verily thus day by day they continue finding support in Prajāpati. Moreover they continue employing the varied hymns, the Ahinas (by name), unappeased; verily they continue to appease them day by day with the Pragāthas¹ containing (the word) 'who'. Then these regular Triṣṭubh verses are recited day by day as the strophes of the litanies; the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus day by day they continue finding support in might and strength. '(Drive) all our enemies away, O Indra,' the Maitrāvaruṇa² (recites) this verse by Sukirti, containing (the word) 'drive away', for the driving away of the evil. By the same Ṛṣis as are the two hymns are the two beginnings of the litanies of the other two. 'Those yoked with prayer I yoke with prayer' and 'Lead us to a wide space, wise one' are the beginnings³ of the litanies, containing (the words) 'prayer' and 'wide'; verily thus day and day they continue finding support in the prayer and in the wide goer.

xxix. 5. Then the Çilpas¹ are recited in the middle three days, for the middle (set of) three days contains the Çilpas. Virāj² verses and verses by Vimada (are used) on the first day, for the fourth day is connected with the Virāj. Pañkti and great Pañkti³ verses (are used) on the fifth day, for the fifth day is connected with the Pañkti. Atichandas⁴ verses (are used) on the sixth day, for the sixth day is connected with the Atichandas. Moreover that which is performed without the Brhatī is not a Prṣṭha; the Prṣṭhas here fall away from the Brhatī: verily thus day by day they continue finding support in the Çilpas. Moreover the middle (set of) three days is the atmosphere; the atmosphere is without base or support; verily thus day by day they continue finding support in the Çilpas. They are triplets; the Çilpa is threefold, dancing, music, and singing. Verily thus day by day they continue finding support in them. 'Praise nought else' and 'Let us not fear, let us not be troubled' is the Prṣṭha for the Maitravaruna⁵ on the tenth day by Medhātithi, for his Prṣṭha is not performed on Brhatī verses before the tenth day; prosperity is solitary; the Brhatī is prosperity; verily thus at the end he finds support in prosperity. Having recited (verses) of two Padas,⁶ they recite (the hymn) of the one day (rite); the one day (rite) is a support: the tenth day is a support: (the verses) of two Padas are the metre in which support can be found; verily (they serve) for support.

xxix. 6. The Naudhasa is (the Prṣṭha) for the Brāhmaṇācchāsin; the explanation of this has been given. In Gāyatri¹ verses they give the lead for the Brāhmaṇācchāsin on the sixth day with the symbol of the Raivata, of the day, to secure the form of the Ahinas, for the continuity of the Ahinas, (thinking) 'Undiminished (ahīnān) we secure all desires,' for here is nothing taken away. 'Prayers they have offered up through seeking glory' is the conclusion² day by day; the 'Prayers up' hymn is the seasons; verily thus day by day they continue finding support in the seasons. They are six (verses); the seasons are six; verily thus day by day they continue finding support in the seasons.

xxix. 7. The Kāleya is (the Prṣṭha) for the Achāvāka; the explanation of this has been given. In (verses) of six Padas¹ they give the lead to the Achāvāka on the sixth day, with the symbol of the sixth day. 'Having with thought, like a carpenter, a hymn' is the conclusion² day by day; the

That (hymn) has no (deity) mentioned; Prajāpati is he (whose name is) not mentioned; verily thus they continue day by day finding support in Prajāpati. There is one (verse) alone³ with (the deity) expressed; Prajāpati is one alone; verily thus they continue day by day finding support in Prajāpati. Of them the following are unchanged, the Maitrāvaruṇa's Prṣṭha, and the conclusions of the other two; verily thus they continue day by day finding support in them.

xxix. 8. It is of ten verses¹; these breaths are ten; verily thus he places these breaths in the sacrifice and in the sacrificers; the midday (performances) of the Hotrakas consist of two hymns, to counterpoise the Hotṛ's two litanies. Moreover, the Hotṛ is the year, the Hotrakas the seasons; in that the seasons being united in couples are called summer, the rains, and winter, therefore the midday (performances) of the Hotrakas consist of two hymns. Moreover, the Hotṛ is the body, the Hotrakas the limbs; in that the limbs are twofold, therefore the midday (performances) of the Hotrakas consist of two hymns. Having recited at the morning pressings the over recitation of the Stomas, they recite the Ahīna² hymns at the midday (pressings) on the Caturvinṣa, Abhijit, Viṣuvant, Viṣvajit and Mahāvrata days, for these days³ are not deficient. Having recited the Ahīna hymns (on these days) those of the one day (rite) they recite. These days are turned away and not returning; in that having recited the Ahīna hymns, they recite those of the one day (rite), and the one day (rite) is a support, verily (they serve) for support. Five hymns each time the Maitrāvaruṇa recites in all the Chandomas⁴; the Chandomas are cattle; cattle are fivefold; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. Four each the Brāhmaṇacchānsin and the Achāvāka; the Chandomas are cattle; cattle are fourfold and also four-footed; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. The Častras have five calls; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fivefold; verily (they serve) to win cattle. The offering verses of the litanies are from the one day (rite); the one day (rite) is a support; verily (they serve) for support. They say the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

ADHYĀYA XXX

xxx. 1. The morning pressing is the Vasus', the midday pressing the Rudras', the third pressing the Ādityas'. In that he begins the third pressing with the Āditya cup, verily thus he begins with its own deity. Moreover, the third pressing is a pressing which has the sap sucked out; the Āditya cup is a cup rich in sap; verily thereby he makes the third pressing rich in sap. He recites a Trīṣṭubh as invitatory verse for the Āditya cup; the explanation of this has been given. Then, when the Pavamāna has been sung, they proceed with the animal victim, for this is the time for it; moreover (it serves) to confer sap on the pressing. Then they proceed with the sacrifice of five oblations; the explanation of this has been given. He recites (verses) by Vāmadeva¹ at the third pressing for (the goblets) being filled, for Vāmadeva it was who proclaimed the Soma to Indra at the third pressing. They contain (the words) 'hither' and 'bay steed', with the symbol of the invitatory verses; they are Trīṣṭubhs addressed to Indra and the Ṛbhū; verily thus he makes Indra a half-sharer in the pressing. Nine he recites; ten goblets do they fill here, but the concluding is as the introductory rite. The Hotrakas sacrifice together; the explanation of this has been given. The offering verses² are Jagatī verses, containing (the words) 'draught', 'be drunk', and 'drunk', for the third pressing is connected with the Jagatī; they contain (the word) 'be drunk', for the third pressing contains (the word) 'be drunk'. They say a second vaṣaṭ for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. Then comes the sacrificial food,³ then the Hotr's goblet; the explanation of this has been given. Then they offer the cakes (for the Pitṛs) at the third pressing; the explanation of these has been given. Then they proceed with the cup for Savitr⁴; the explanation of this has been given. He recites one Trīṣṭubh as invitatory verse for the cup for Savitr; the explanation of this has been given. Again in that between the two litanies the Agnidh says the offering verses for the cup for the wives,⁵ thereby the two reach the Hotr.

⁴ ÇÇS. viii. 3. 2 gives the Trīṣṭubh as RV. iv. 54. i, which is given in the Anukramaṇī as Jagatī. This precedes the Vaiçvadeva Çastra.

⁵ I. e. between the Vaiçvadeva and the Agnimāruta Çastras; see Caland and Henry, L'Agnistoma, p. 366.

xxx. 2. The litanies of the Ukthya are addressed to Indra and Agni; the explanation of these has been given. These to Indra in Jagatī they recite day by day¹; the Jagatī is cattle; cattle are connected with the Jagatī; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. 'These should be unchanged' some state, saying 'These are the supporters of the pressing.' But the rule is 'They should be varied,' for one day, then another, they approach. (Recitations) to Varuṇa, to Brhaspati, and to Viṣṇu they recite; their metre is the Jagatī; Indra's the Triṣṭubh; in that the metres are inverted, it is to secure the characteristic of the deities. (Recitations²) to Indra and Varuṇa, to Indra and Brhaspati, to Indra and Viṣṇu they recite; verily with these they accompany the cups, for so are the cups drawn.

xxx. 3. 'Holder of the people, the generous, worthy of praise' the Maitrāvaruṇa¹ (says); the explanation of this has been given. The conclusion² is by Vasiṣṭha day by day; Vasiṣṭha saw the third pressing for the Maitrāvaruṇa's function; therefore day by day the conclusion is by Vasiṣṭha. In Kakubh verses they give the lead to the Maitrāvaruṇa³ on the third day; thereby he falls into the power of the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin. On the fourth day they give the lead to each in his own metre; verily thus each in his own metre they continue finding support. In Gāyatrī verses⁴ they give the lead to the Maitrāvaruṇa, in Uṣṇih verses to the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin, in Anuṣṭubh verses to the Achāvāka, to secure a progressive increase. So their metres increase with four syllables each. In Pañkti verses⁵ they give the lead to the Maitrāvaruṇa on the fifth day, for the fifth day is connected with the Pañkti; in (verses) of two Padas⁶ they give the lead on the sixth day, for the sixth day is connected with (verses) of two Padas. Moreover they perform the Sāmans, Gūrda, Bhadrā, Udvaṇcaputra;⁷ moreover the Ṣilpas are accompanied by (verses) of two feet; therefore here the Ṣilpas are recited, (thinking) 'Let us not depart from the Ṣilpas.'

xxx. 4. With the Nābhānediṣṭha¹ the Hotṛ sprinkles seed; it he hands to the Maitrāvaruṇa; it he develops with the Vālakhilyās; these Vālakhilyās he recites as divided; by Padas the first two hymns he divides; verily thus by joints he gathers him together; by half verses the second two; man consists of two portions; verily thus he unites them; verse by verse the third two hymns; verily thus he gathers him whole; he should invert in the Nārāṇsa²; therefore foetuses are born inverted.

xxx. 5. In the Tārksya¹ he mounts the difficult mounting; Tārksya is Vāyu; Vāyu is breath verily thus he places breath in him; him he hands over to the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin. Him he receives in the womb of the Sukirti (hymn²); for him born he recites in Pañkti form with repetition of o the Vṛṣākapi³ (hymn); the repetition of o is food; verily thus born he finds support in proper food. Then he recites the Kuntāpa⁴ according to the metres, for the obtaining of all desires; viz. the Nārāṇsis,⁵ the Raibhis,⁶ the Kāravās,⁷ the Indragāthās,⁸ the Bhūtechads,⁹ the Parikṣit verses,¹⁰ and the prattle of Etaṇa.¹¹ Etaṇa, the sage, saw¹² the life of the sacrifice. He said to his sons 'My boys, I have seen the life of the sacrifice; that I shall prattle forth; think me not mad.' They said 'Be it so.' Then he prattled¹³ it forth; his eldest son, creeping up, stopped his mouth, (saying) 'Our father has become mad.' To him he said 'Be gone; fie on thee, O fool; I make¹⁴ thine offspring the worst; hadst thou not, O fool, stopped¹⁵ my mouth, I had made the cow of a hundred (years of) life, and man of a thousand.' Therefore the descendants of Etaṇa being the Ājaneyas are the worst of the Bhrgus, for they are under curse by a father, their own deity, their own Prajāpati.¹⁶

xxx. 6. (The verses) of the Ādityas and Aṅgīrasas¹ he recites next. The Ādityas and the Aṅgīrasas were at variance, 'We shall go first to the world of heaven' (said) the Āditya; 'we' the Aṅgirasas. The Aṅgirasas sent to the Ādityas (saying) 'Ours is the pressing day to-morrow; do ye cause us to sacrifice.' Agni was their envoy; the Ādityas said 'Ours is the pressing day to-day; and thou art² the Hotr for us here, Brhaspati the Brahman, Ayāsyā the Udgātṛ, Ghora Aṅgirasā the Ādhvaryu.' Them they rejected; him they desired to please with these (verses); thus they repeat these (verses). They brought a white horse as sacrificial fee,³ that one which here gives heat; therefore the Ādityas went to heaven; he goes to heaven who knows thus.

xxx. 7. He recites the orderings of the quarters¹; the quarters are in order for him. He recites the man-ordering (verses)²; men are in order for him. He says the riddles,³ the Pratirādhas,⁴ the Ativādā,⁵ the Āhanasyās,⁶ all forms of speech. Therefore a man speaks all forms of speech, but other animals one only. They are eight; by them the gods attained all attainments; so verily also the sacrificers by them attain all attainments. 'The Kaprth, O men, the Kaprth extend,' and 'What time forward ye came' are two (verses⁷); thus they become perfect⁸. They make up ten; the Virāj consists of sets of ten; the Virāj is prosperity and proper food; verily (they serve) to obtain the Virāj as prosperity and proper food.

xxx. 8. He recites the Dadhikrā (verse¹); the Dadhikrā (verse) is speech; verily thus he places speech in him; he recites (the verses) to Soma the purifying²; (the verses) to Soma the purifying are a filter; verily thus he purifies him. Him he hands over to the Achāvāka; him he with the RVKh. v. 16), no doubt the last two in error, and some add the seventh verse, probably because they thought that 22 contained the seven (4 and 8) verses of ÇÇS. xii. 21. 3. In AB. vi. 33 the number six is probably meant as is accepted by Sāyana. Per contra Ānartiya ignores the whole of 22 and regards as the Pravalhikā AV. xx. 134, which in AB. is the Ājijñāsenyās (RVKh. v. 17); the confusion seems to have arisen from the omission of that special category. The statement of the Vedic Concordance that Pravalhikā applies to AV. xx. 134 is erroneous, as is Scheftelowitz's view, ZDMG. lix. 425.

Evayāmarut (hymn³) makes to move when born; he repeats o: stumbling as it were one moves when first desirous to walk; verily thus from the immortal metre he propagates him for immortality; they obtain immortality who perform the sixth day (rite). Having recited the strophe and antistrophe, he recites the Vālahilyās; the strophe and antistrophe are the body, the Vālahilyās the breaths; these breaths are not separated (from the body). They say 'Why are they (called) Vālahilyās?' That which is not in contact in two fields,⁴ they call Khila; these breaths are a hair (vāla) in breadth and are not separated; therefore are they Vālahilyās.

xxx. 9. 'In the Tārksya he mounts the difficult mounting,' it has been said.¹ In Gāyatrī verses they give the lead for the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin on the second day, thereby he falls into the power of the Maitrāvaruṇa. 'Forward to the most generous, the great, horn of great wealth' is a six verse (hymn²), twice as great as that of the Maitrāvaruṇa. The conclusion day by day is by Kṛṣṇa³; Kṛṣṇa Āṅgīrasa saw this third pressing for the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin's office; therefore day by day the conclusion is by Kṛṣṇa. In Anuṣṭubhs they give the lead for the Achāvāka on the third day; thereby he falls into the power of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin. The 'season mother' (hymn⁴) has thirteen verses: it is twice as great as that of the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin and there is one verse over. The conclusion day by day is by Bharadvāja⁵; Bharadvāja saw this third pressing for the Achāvāka's office; therefore day by day the conclusion is by Bharadvāja. The Achāvāka alternates the two Viṣṇu (hymns⁶), the conclusions the other two. The Maitrāvaruṇa and the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin have two conclusions; the Achāvāka has one conclusion. In that the Achāvāka has an unchanging conclusion, the Achāvāka is a support; verily (it serves) for support.

xxx. 10. Thirty-six (verses) the Maitrāvaruṇa recites at the Caturviṅṣa,¹ forty the Brāhmaṇacchaṁsin, and forty-four the Achāvāka. These are a hundred and twenty. A hundred and twenty are the days of the season; thus he obtains the season, with the season the year and the desires that are in the year. Five hymns the Maitrāvaruṇa recites on all the Chandoma days; the Chandomas are cattle; cattle are fivefold; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. Four hymns the Brāhmaṇacchaṇsin² recites in the first Chandoma; the Chandomas are cattle; cattle are fourfold, and also fourfooted; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. Five hymns the Achāvāka³ recites in the first Chandoma; the Chandomas are cattle; cattle are fivefold; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. Six (they recite) in the second and third; the year has six seasons; verily (they serve) to obtain the year. The Castras have four calls; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fourfold, and also fourfooted; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. On the sixth day that of the Maitrāvaruṇa has five calls; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fivefold; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. The offering verses of the litanies are from the one day (rite); the one day (rite) is a support; verily (they serve) for support. They say the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations.

xxx. 11. Five metres they recite at night, Anuṣṭubh, Gāyatrī, Uṣṇih, Triṣṭubh and Jagatī; these are the metres of night. The night has five calls, and so the additional litany of the Vājapeya. 'The night goes beyond the Uktha';¹ verily thus from metre to metre they call' Kauṣītaki used to say, to prevent sameness. In that he uses a Triṣṭubh containing the word 'over the night' as invitatory verse for the Aṇvin litany² cup, (it is because) the Praiṣa contains (the word) 'over the night', for the Somas are left over the night. Moreover, the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus might and strength he places in the sacrificer. The additional litanies of the Āptoryāma have four calls; the litanies are cattle; cattle are fourfold, and also fourfooted; verily (they serve) to obtain cattle. They use as concluding verses (verses) to the lord of the field, (thinking) 'The field is this earth; in it undepressed shall we find support at the end'; verily thus in it undepressed do they find support at the end. In that the offering verses are Triṣṭubhs containing (the word) 'over the night', (it is) because the Somas are left over the night. Moreover, the Triṣṭubh is might and strength; verily thus might and strength he places in the sacrificer. They say the second vaṣaṭ, for the healing of the libations, for the support of the libations. They then proceed with (the cup) for the yoker of the bays; the

¹ The sense must be as indicated, but atigraha is first found here in it. Ukthasya as read in the edd. with the MSS. is probably thus to be taken of the number of calls, five against four. It is not sufficient to assume the sense to be that the night has an extra Uktha, for in point of fact the night rite (i. e. the Atirātra) adds 12, while the Vājapeya adds one to the Soḍaṇin. For āhvayante the Anand. ed. has āhūyante: the sense remains the same. chandasaṣ chandaśa is ambiguous, and may mean from metre to metre, i. e. as bridging over the separation, or simply from each metre, but the former (chandase) is seemingly better.

explanation of this has been given. He recites a Triṣṭubh as invitatory verse for (the cup) for the yoker of the bays³; the explanation of this has been given. In that he recites an invitatory verse⁴ for the Atipraisa, (it is because) without strength is the Praisa which has no invitatory verse. Moreover there are invitatory verses in the case of (the cups) for two deities, and in the case of all the Prasthitas; therefore he recites an invitatory verse for it. 'In that he recites an Atipraisa, verily thus he refers to the next day, verily thus they keep taking hold of the next day' Kausītaki used to say.⁵

HARVARD ORIENTAL SERIES

Founded in 1891 by CHARLES ROCKWELL LANMAN and HENRY CLARKE WARREN.

Edited, with the coöperation of various scholars, by CHARLES ROCKWELL LANMAN, A.B. and LL.D. (Yale), LL.D. (Aberdeen), Professor of Sanskrit (since 1880: Wales Professor since 1903) at Harvard University (founded, 1636);

Member of the American Philosophical Society (founded, 1727); Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences (1780); President (1890) of the American Philological Association (1869); President (1908, 1920) of the American Oriental Society (1842);

Honorary Fellow of the Asiatic Society of Bengal (Calcutta, 1784); Honorary Member of the Société Asiatique (Paris, 1822), the Royal Asiatic Society (London, 1823), and the Deutsche Morgenländische Gesellschaft (Leipzig, 1845);

Honorary Member of the North-China Branch of the Royal Asiatic Society (Shanghai), the Finnish-Ugrian Society (Helsingfors), the India Society (London); Honorary Correspondent of the Archæological Department of the Government of India; Foreign Member of the Bohemian Society of Sciences (Prague, 1759); Member of the Colonial Society of Massachusetts; Corresponding Member of the Academy of Sciences of the Institute of Bologna (1712), of the Society of Sciences at Göttingen (1751), of the Russian Academy of Sciences (Petrograd, 1725), and of the Académie des Inscriptions et Belles-Lettres (1663) of the Institute of France.

Published by the Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Massachusetts, U.S. of America. The home office of the Press is at Randall Hall, Cambridge. The Agent of the Press in Great Britain is Humphrey Milford, Oxford University Press, Amen Corner, London, E.C., England.

Direct application for books of this Series may be made, with remittance, to the Harvard University Press at Cambridge, Massachusetts. The volumes will then be sent by mail or parcel-post direct to the buyer.

The list-prices are subject to a trade-discount. No extra charge is made for postage. This list is here revised up to date of December, 1920. Prices of previous revisions are cancelled.

Descriptive List. A bound volume, containing a list of the volumes of this Series, and a brief Memorial of HENRY CLARKE WARREN, joint-founder, will be sent free upon application to the Harvard University Press, Cambridge, Massachusetts.—The list tells the general nature and contents of each work of the Series, and the uses which that work is designed to serve. The List gives also extracts from critical notices of those works, taken from various periodicals of high standing.

Externals of the volumes. The books of this Series are all printed on paper of a quality and tensile strength very far above the average. They are all bound durably in full buckram. The edges are cut, but the margins are ample; and the tops are gilded, not for ornament, but to make cleaning easy. The backs are properly lettered. No work is issued until it is complete. Volume 10 is royal quarto (32 cm.); volumes 7 and 8 are super-royal octavo (28 cm.); the rest are royal octavo (26 cm.).

Volume 1. Jātaka-Mālā. Stories of Buddha's former incarnations. By Ārya Āura. Critically edited in the original Sanskrit (Nāgarī letters) by HENDRIK KERN, Professor in the University of Leiden, Netherlands. 1891. Second issue, 1914. Pages, 270. Royal 8°. Price, $3. (Translation by Speyer, London, 1895, Frowde.)

Volume 2. Sāṅkhya-Pravachana-Bhāṣya, or Commentary (Bhāṣya) on the Exposition (Pravachana) of the Sāṅkhya philosophy. By Vijñāna-Bhikṣu. Edited in Sanskrit (Roman letters) by RICHARD GARBE, Professor in the University of Tübingen, Germany. 1895. Pages, 210. Royal 8°. Price, $3. (Translated by Garbe, Leipzig, 1889, Brockhaus.)

Volume 3. Buddhism in Translations. Passages selected from the Buddhist sacred books, and translated from the original Pāli into English, by HENRY CLARKE WARREN, late of Cambridge, Massachusetts. 1896. Sixth issue, 1915. Pages, 540. Royal 8°. Price $1.20. (In accordance with the author's wish, the original price was set extremely low, at $1.20. In spite of economic conditions now prevailing, the original price has been maintained unaltered.)

The first chapter gives the picturesque and touching Buddha-legend; the last treats of the monastic order; the other three give the fundamental doctrines of Buddhism. Warren's material is drawn straight from the fountain-head. It is this fact that gives his book an abiding importance and value. It has been widely circulated in America and Europe and the Orient. Nearly half of the work is included in The Harvard Classics, of which over a quarter of a million sets have been sold. A memorial of Henry Warren as a scholar is appended to the Descriptive List mentioned above.

Volume 4. Karpūra-Mañjarī. A drama by the Indian poet Rājasekhara (900 A. D.). Critically edited in the original Prākṛit (Nāgarī letters), with a glossarial index and an essay on the life and writings of the poet, by STEN KONOW, Professor of Indie Philology at the University of Christiania, Norway, and Epigraphist to the Government of India. And translated into English with introduction and notes, by C. R. LANMAN. 1901. Pages, 318. Royal 8°. Price, $3.

Volumes 5 and 6. Brhad-Devatā (attributed to Āunaka), a summary of the deities and myths of the Rig-Veda. Critically edited in the original Sanskrit (Nāgarī letters), with an introduction and seven appendices (volume 5), and translated into English with critical and illustrative notes (volume 6), by Professor ARTHUR ANTHONY MACDONELL, University of Oxford. 1904. Pages, 234 + 350 = 584. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, $6.

Volumes 7 and 8. Atharva-Veda. Translated, with a critical and exegetical commentary, by WILLIAM DWIGHT WHITNEY, late Professor of Sanskrit in Yale University, Editor-in-Chief of The Century Dictionary, an Encyclopedic Lexicon of the English Language.—Revised and brought nearer to completion and edited by C. R. LANMAN. 1905. Pages, 1212. Super-royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, $10.

The work includes critical notes on the text, with various readings of European and Hindu mss.; readings of the Kashmirian version; notices of corresponding passages in the other Vedas, with report of variants; data of the scholiasts as to authorship and divinity and metre of each stanza; extracts from the ancillary literature concerning ritual and exegesis; literal translation; elaborate critical and historical introduction.

HARVARD ORIENTAL SERIES

Volume 9. The Little Clay Cart (Mṛc-chakatika). A Hindu drama attributed to King Āṇḍraka. Translated from the original Sanskrit and Prakṛits into English prose and verse by ARTHUR WILLIAM RYDER, Instructor in Sanskrit in Harvard University. 1905. Pages, 207. Royal 8°. Price, $2.

A Hindu masterpiece, reproduced with truth and literary finish. 'The champagne has been decanted, and has not lost its fizz.' Noble typography, magnificent paper, dignified binding. Most volumes of the Series are for technical study. This one, like Warren's Buddhism, is for the 'general reader', for whom it might often be happily chosen as a gift-book.

Volume 10. Vedic Concordance: being an alphabetic index to every line of every stanza of the published Vedic literature and to the liturgical formulas thereof, that is, an index (in Roman letters) to the Vedic mantras, together with an account of their variations in the different Vedic books. By Professor MAURICE BLOOMFIELD, Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. 1906. Pages, 1102. Royal 4°. Price, $15.

The Concordance enables us to find with ease: 1. where a given mantra occurs, if it occur but once; 2. if more than once, in what places; and 3. if with variants, what those variants are. Being in one volume, it is thus the most convenient register of Vedic variants available. It is also by far the most comprehensive. It covers such great texts as the Rīg-Veda and Atharva-Veda exhaustively (these two alone require about 50,000 entries); and, exhaustively or selectively, it covers over 100 other texts. The book was printed, not from electrotype plates, but from type, and in an edition of 1000 copies, now half exhausted. The cost in money and labour was so great that the prospect of a new edition is very remote. For many decades it will maintain its value, an enduring monument to the industry and learning and resolute will of Professor Bloomfield.

Volume 11. The Pañcha-tantra: a collection of ancient Hindu tales, in the recension (called Pañchākhyānaka, and dated 1199 A.D.) of the Jaina monk, Pūrṇabhadra, critically edited in the original Sanskrit (in Nāgarī letters: and, for the sake of beginners, with word-division) by Dr. JOHANNES HERTEL, Professor am königlichen Realgymnasium, Doebern, Saxony. 1908. Pages, 344. Royal 8°. Volumes 11 and 12 and 13 are not sold separately. Price for the three, $4.

Volume 12. The Pañchatantra-text of Pūrṇabhadra: critical introduction and list of variants. By Dr. HERTEL. 1912. Pages, 246. Royal 8°. Price, see above.

Volume 13. The Pañchatantra-text of Pūrṇabhadra, and its relation to texts of allied recensions, as shown in Parallel Specimens. By Professor HERTEL. 1912. Pages, 10: and 19 sheets, mounted on guards and issued in atlas-form. Royal 8°. Price, see above.

Volume 14. The Pañchatantra: a collection of ancient Hindu tales, in its oldest recension, the Kashmirian, entitled Tantrākhyāyika. The original Sanskrit text (in Nāgarī letters), editio minor, reprinted from the critical editio major which was made for the Königliche Gesellschaft der Wissenschaften zu Göttingen, by Professor HERTEL. 1915. Pages, 160. Royal 8°. Price, $2.

The Pañchatantra. For two thousand years and more, the tales of the Pañchatantra have instructed and delighted the Hindus. It was the Pañchatantra that formed the basis of the studies of the immortal pioneer in the field of comparative literature, Theodor Benfey. From the Pañchatantra, through translations of translations, have come some of the most notable books of mediæval Europe, such as the Directorium (1270) of John of Capua, the Buch der Beispiele (1483), and so on, down to that gem of racy Tudor English, the translation (1570) of Doni by Sir Thomas North (reprinted by J. Jacobs, London, 1888).—The Hindus have a way of emboxing a second story into the first, a third into the second, and even a fourth into the third. The result is confusing. These emboxments are here shown in an ingenious and self-explaining way, by putting into the margin vertical wavy lines, single or double or triple, as the case may be. Thus the continuation of an interrupted story is found at a glance.

Volume 15. Bhāravi's poem Kirātārjuniya or Arjuna's combat with the Kirāta. Translated from the original Sanskrit into German and explained by CARL CAPPELLER, Professor at the University of Jena. 1912. Pages, 231. Royal 8°. Price, $2.

The subject-matter is taken from the Mahā-Bhārata. The Kirāta or mountaineer is the god Shiva in disguise. A valuable introduction and various other useful additions are given.

Volume 16. The Çakuntalā, a Hindu drama by Kālidāsa: the Bengālī recension critically edited in the original Sanskrit and Prākritis by RICHARD PISCHEL, late Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Berlin.

The masterpiece of the literature of India. Pischel died in 1908. Under many difficulties, the book (all except a couple of sheets) was beautifully printed by Kohlhammer of Stuttgart. Then came the world-conflagration. We may yet hope to complete and issue the book.

Volume 17. The Yoga-system of Patañjali, or the ancient Hindu doctrine of concentration of mind: embracing the Mnemonic Rules (Yoga-sūtras) of Patañjali, the Comment (Bhāṣya) attributed to Vyāsa, and the Explanation (Tattva-vāigrahī) of Vāchaspati-Miśra: translated from the original Sanskrit by JAMES HAUGHTON WOODS, Professor of Philosophy at Harvard University. 1914. Pages, 422. Royal 8°. Price $4.

The Comment is the oldest systematic exposition of Yoga-doctrine, written in Sanskrit, that we possess. Although the book consists of three separate works, these are so distinguished, one from another, by differences of type and other devices, that the general impression is one of admirable clearness.

Volumes 18 and 19. The Veda of the Black Yajus School, entitled Tāittiriya Samhitā. Translated from the original Sanskrit prose and verse, with a running commentary. By ARTHUR BERRIEDALE KEITH, D.C.L. (Oxford), of the Inner Temple, Barrister-at-law, and of His Majesty's Colonial Office, sometime Acting Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Oxford, Author of 'Responsible Government in the Dominions'. Volume 18, kāṇḍas I-III; volume 19, kāṇḍas IV-VII. 1914. Pages, 464 + 374 = 838. Royal 8°. Price, $7. Not sold separately.

This work, in spite of its large extent, is notable for its well-rounded completeness. The entire text is translated. The commentary runs pari passu with the version, and is presented with the utmost typographical perspicuity. An elaborate introduction is given, treating of the relation of this text to kindred texts, its contents, language style, and date ('about 600 B. C.'), and the religious ritual of ancient India.

Volumes 20 and 24. Rig-Veda Repetitions. The repeated verses and distichs and stanzas of the Rig-Veda in systematic presentation and with critical discussion. By Professor MAURICE BLOOMFIELD, of the Johns Hopkins University, Baltimore. Volume 20 contains Part 1: The repeated passages of the Rig-Veda, systematically presented in the order of the Rig-Veda. Volume 24 contains Part 2: Comments and classifications from metrical and lexical and grammatical points of view, and from the point of view of the themes and divinities of the repeated passages. 1916. Pages, 508+206=714. Royal 8°. Price, $5. Not sold separately.

This work is the first of three natural sequels to Bloomfield's great Vedic Concordance: 1. The Rig-Veda Repetitions; 2. The Reverse Concordance; 3. The Vedic Variants. A draft of the second has been actually prepared by Bloomfield. And he and Edgerton have in hand the first draft of the third, a systematic presentation and critical discussion of the variant readings of the Vedic texts. The aim of this work on the Repetitions is to help us to understand the oldest religious document of Indo-European antiquity.

Volumes 21 and 22 and 23. Rāma's Later History, or Uttara-Rāma-Charita, an ancient Hindu drama by Bhavabhūti. Critically edited in the original Sanskrit and Prākṛit, with an introduction and English translation and notes and variants, &c. By SHRIPAD KRISHNA BELVALKAR, Graduate Student of Harvard University. (Now, 1920, Professor of Sanskrit at Deccan College, Poona, India.)

Dr. Belvalkar, when returning to India in 1914 from his studies at Harvard, shipped his manuscript-collations and other papers and his books by the German freighter, Fangturm. In August, 1914, the Fangturm was interned at the port of Palma, Balearic Islands. In 1919, she was released. In May, 1920, Dr. Belvalkar recovered his papers.

Volume 21 was issued in 1915, complete.

Of volume 22, the first 92 pages, containing the text of the whole play, have been in print since January, 1915, awaiting for over five and one half years the recovery of the material for the rest of the book.

Of volume 23, the material included collation-sheets giving the readings of manuscripts from widely-separated parts of India, from Nepal to Madras, from Calcutta to Bombay. In spite of the generous assistance of His Majesty's Secretary of State for India in Council, the work of getting the loan of these mss. was so great that it seemed best not to try to do it again, but to await the release of the Fangturm.—There is hope now that volumes 22 and 23 may be issued.

Volume 21. Rāma's Later History, &c. Part 1. Introduction and translation. (Prefixed is a convenient synoptic analysis of the play. The introduction treats of Bhavabhūti's life and date and works, and includes a summary of the Rāma-story as given by the Rāmāyaṇa. Lanman adds an essay entitled 'A method for citing Sanskrit dramas.' The method is very simple and practical.) 1915. Royal 8°. Pages, 190. Price, $2.

Volume 22. Rāma's Later History, &c. Part 2. The text, with index, glossaries, &c. (This was printed at Bombay, with the exquisitely beautiful type, newly cast for this work, of Jāvaji's Nirṇaya Sāgara Press, and upon paper made at Oxford for this edition. Each Prākṛit speech is followed by the Sanskrit version in immediate sequence.) See above.

Volume 23. Rāma's Later History, &c. Part 3. Explanatory and critical epilogue. (Critical account of the Manuscripts. Running expository comment. The variant readings of the mss. The typographical 'make-up' of Comment and Variants into pages is such that they go pari passu. These epilegomena close with an essay on the two text-traditions of the play, a time-analysis, a note on the Hindu stage, &c.) See above.

Volume 24. Rig-Veda Repetitions. Parts 2 and 3. By Professor BLOOMFIELD. Described above, with volume 20.

Volume 25. Rig-Veda Brāhmaṇas: The Aitareya and Kauṣītaki Brāhmaṇas of the Rig-Veda. Translated from the original Sanskrit. By ARTHUR BERRIEDALE KEITH, D.C.L., D. Litt., of the Inner Temple. Barrister-at-law, Regius Professor of Sanskrit and Comparative Philology at the University of Edinburgh. 1920. Pages, 567. Royal 8°. Price, $5.

The Vedic literature falls into three clearly sundered groups: the Vedic hymns or Mantras; the Brāhmaṇas, 'the priestlies' or 'priestly (discourses)'; and the Sūtras. Keith thinks that the Aitareya is not later than 600 B.C. The plan of the work is like that of volumes 18-19: elaborate introduction; translation; running comment on the same page. The skill of the priestly story-tellers is at its best in the splendid legend of Ṣaṇahcepa (threatened sacrifice of son by father: cf. Isaac, Iphigeneia, Phrixos). Despite the pseudo-profundity and puerility of the Brāhmaṇas, they are of genuine significance to the student of Hindu antiquity, social and religious. And they are in fact the oldest Indo-European prose extant.

Volumes 26 and 27. Vikrama's Adventures, or The Thirty-two Tales of the Throne. A collection of stories about King Vikrama, as told by the Thirty-two Statuettes that supported his throne. Edited in four different recensions of the Sanskrit original (Vikrama-charita or Siṅhāsanaadvātriṅśakai and translated into English with an introduction, by FRANKLIN EDGERTON, Assistant Professor of Sanskrit at the University of Pennsylvania. Nearly ready.

Vikrama's Adventures is one of the most famous story-books of mediæval India. Vikrama is a kind of Hindu King Arthur, an example for real kings. Edgerton hopes that his work may prove suggestive as a model for students of comparative literature. The text of each of the four recensions is printed in horizontally parallel sections, so that each page contains those parts which correspond to each other in substance. And the translation is treated in like manner. Comparisons are thus facilitated to a degree never before attained in a work of this kind.

From all this, Edgerton reconstructs, with some detail, and with reasonable certainty, the original work from which the current versions are derived. This he presents in the form of a Composite Outline, the concrete solution of a problem in literary genetics.

Volumes 28 and 29 and 30. Buddhist Legends. Translated from the original Pāli text of the Dhamma-pada Commentary, by EUGENE WATSON BURLINGAME, Fellow of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences, sometime Harrison Fellow for Research at the University of Pennsylvania and Johnston Scholar in Sanskrit at the Johns Hopkins University and Lecturer on Pāli at Yale University. 1921. Pages, 362+370+378=1110. Royal 8°. Not sold separately. Price, $15.

Dhamma-pada, or Way of Righteousness, is the name of one of the canonical books of the Buddhist Sacred Scriptures. It consists of 423 stanzas. These are reputed to be the very words of the Buddha himself. The Dhamma-pada Commentary, composed by an unknown author in Ceylon about 450 A. D., purports to tell the circumstances under which Buddha uttered each one of these stanzas. In telling them, it narrates 299 stories or legends. These stories are the preponderating element of the Commentary, and it is these which are here translated.

In style and substance the tales resemble those of the famous Jātaka Book, the Buddhist Acta Sanctorum, a counterpart of the Legends of the Christian Saints. And they present many parallels to well-known stories of mediæval literature, Oriental and European. For comparative study of such parallels (a most inviting task), Doctor Burlingame's Synopses, clear and brief, will prove a very great convenience. His vigorous diction suggests familiarity with such 'wells of English undefyled' as the Bible and the Book of Common Prayer. The work gives a vivid picture of the everyday life of the ancient Buddhists—monks, nuns, lay disciples. It is thus, incidentally, an admirable preparative for the study of the more difficult Buddhist books in the original. As especially attractive stories may be cited: Lean Gotamī seeks mustard-seed to cure her dead child; Murder of Great Moggallāna; Buddha falsely accused by Chinchā; the Hell-pot. A critical and historical introduction is prefixed. At the end is an intelligent index.
